NEWS ODDITIES AND BRIEFS

DETECTIVE HAS HUNCH AND HE TESTS IT

Windsor, Ont., Aug. 3 (CP)—When the Maroon fruit store here was robbed on two successive Sunday nights, Detective John Mahoney of the Windsor City police had a hunch it might happen again. Last night he hid in the store and arrested Joseph Dragonier, 17, Windsor, as he entered the shop through a rear window. Dragonier, who police say has confessed to the other two robberies, is held on a breaking and entering charge.

GROUNDHOG IS PART-TIME PET

Galt, Ont., Aug. 2 (CP)—Three-year-old Jean Sims, Galt, has a part-time pet. A tame groundhog "Chuck" raised from a pup by Jean's parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Sims, sleeps through the winter like his wilder kinsmen, and is only active during this part of the year. At present, out of hibernation, his appetite is extreme, and he is able to eat "for hours."

BLIND GIRL'S GUIDE NOT ALLOWED ENTRY

London, Aug. 2 (AP)—Blind Hazel Hurst, 22, of Oneonta, New York refused to enter England when the dog of American Merchant docked here yesterday, because officials said they would quarantine the German Shepherd dog she uses as a guide. "I am ready to go back to America if I can't take my dog ashore," said Miss Hurst. Friends undertook to get the Ministry of Agriculture to waive the customary regulations for dogs, who must undergo quarantine until it is apparent they are healthy animals.

NOW OGOPOGO IS BACK AGAIN

Kelowna, B.C., Aug. 3 (CP)—Ogopogo, famed sea monster of the Okanagan, has been seen again.

Len Leathley, Charles Kirby and Pete King claim they saw several long black oily-looking coils bobbing in the choppy waters of Okanagan Lake over the last week end and are "sure" it was the serpent.

Why the Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

Ocean travel August is about as good as July for crossing the North Atlantic Ocean. Storms are few and few in number— the north temperate zone. Occasionally storms of tropical origin in the first their way north to the travel lanes and scatter gales are met.

Near the West Indies hurricanes are, on the average, more intent than July or month, but even at that the average is only one a year for August. These tropical cyclones, or hurricanes, are the only storms that reach high winds over the ocean this time of the year.

THE WEATHER

Toronto, Aug. 3—(CP)—The weather has been warm from Ontario eastward to the Maritimes with thunderstorms occurring in many districts and scattered thundershowers have also occurred in Alberta, while in Manitoba and Saskatchewan it has been generally fair and decidedly warm in southern districts. Disturbances of moderate intensity are centred over eastern Quebec and the Mackenzie Valley and a shallow depression covers South Dakota.

Lake Superior—Moderate to fresh winds; mostly cloudy tonight and Wednesday with local thunderstorms; not much change in temperature.

Manitoba and Saskatchewan—Partly cloudy and warm today and Wednesday with local thunder storms.

Alberta—Partly cloudy and moderately warm today and Wednesday; probably scattered showers.

Border Fighting Unlikely to Lead to Flare-up

SOVIET TROOPS BEGIN ATTACK UPON FRONTIER

Tokyo Communique Reports Serious Situation on Manchoukuan Border

PLANES USED

Tanks And Artillery Reported Wheeled Into Action

By J. F. SANDERSAN

London, Aug. 2 (CP)—Russian-Japanese fighting for disputed territory on the Manchoukuoan frontier is regarded in official circles here as a border incident which is unlikely to lead to a full flare-up.

Tokyo, Aug. 2 (AP)—The Japanese government announced today its forces had repulsed a large-scale, two-edged attack by Soviet troops in disputed areas on the Siberian-Manchoukuoan frontier.

Claim Villages Bombed.

A later communique charged the Russians repeatedly were bombing Korean villages in the vicinity of Changkufeng, focal point since July 15 of Soviet-Japanese conflict.

Tanks, heavy artillery and aircraft were thrown into action this morning by the Russians, the war office announced, to clear the way for infantry attacks from the north and south against the Changkufeng hill region.

Tokyo, Aug. 2 (AP)—Unflinching determination to repel vigorously any attack on Soviet territory characterized Moscow's reaction today to heavy fighting between Soviet and Japanese troops in the Lake Chanchi Siberian border district.

Not To Be Lured In.

At the same time newspapers and utterances in Soviet circles indicated equal determination that Russia intends not to allow itself to be lured into a large-scale conflict in the Far East which might play into the hands of Fascist powers.

CIVIC HOLIDAY FATALITIES HIGH

Canadian Total of 53 is Staggering But Ontario Has 4 Deaths

(By The Canadian Press)

A long week-end of fine weather Monday as Civic Holiday—left a staggering toll of dead and injured, according to reports, a recapitulation of fatalities early today showed at least 53 persons dead, 29 after automobile accident, 20 by drowning, and 14 in other mishaps.

In spite of the greater week-end toll of the year for all Canada, Ontario, usually reports persons and usually leader in the fatality list, showed only four fatalities reported Monday.

Ontario's total for the year is 328.

With Toronto's traffic in a complete gear due to the invasion of 100,000 war veterans for the Canadian Corps Reunion, only one fatality was reported on the highway. Two-year-old Sidney Huggins was killed when he ran in front of a truck. The metropolitan authorities succeeded in preserving their lives although many were said to have had all within minor injuries.

Every province except little Prince Edward Island contributed to the death toll. Quebec led with 12 including two persons who died of poisoning after a rubbing alcohol debauch; Ontario reported 20 deaths, 16 of them on Saturday and Sunday.

Chesterville School Bell Rings, Brings Back Old - Time Scholars

Among the nearly 100 alumni were elder and Mrs. Morley Munroe, Montreal; Mrs. A. Pollock, Winnipeg; Rev. and Mrs. R. E. Newman, Belleville, Ont., Sister Mary Raymond, Kingston, Ont., and Miss Maude Hummel, Toronto.

It was a unique part of the "old home week" celebrations taking place here.

'I'm Aldavik Mail Man' Says J. P. Bickell, Posting Letters

Vancouver, August 2—(CP)—One of the first things J. P. Bickell did after landing in Vancouver Friday from Carcross, Y. T., was to look for a mail box and deposit a half-dozen letters, including one official looking envelope with the stamp of looking envelop with the stamp of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police upon it.

"I'm the Aldavik mail man", he explained with a grin. While in the northern outpost with Premier Hepburn of Ontario and Bernard E Smith, of New York, he had agreed to carry back the mail for some of the inhabitants. His action earned considerable time in delivery.

KINGSTON SCENE OF FESTIVITIES AT CENTENNIAL

Prime Minister King Opens Restored Fort Henry

SERVES PEACE CAUSE

Kingston, Ont., Aug. 3—(CP)—After a busy day at Kingston's 100th anniversary of its municipal incorporation, Prime Minister Mackenzie King left for Trenton where he today was scheduled to inspect the air service activities.

Before a great audience in the recently restored Fort Henry, Mr. Mackenzie King yesterday declared the Fort open to the public as an historic site to further serve the cause of peace. The old Fort has been restored by the Canadian Legion; the reconstructed Fort would be a welcome to visits from other lands.

Twelve Cannons Presented

The Prime Minister, was the guest of honor last night at a dinner in which many former Mayors of Kingston were present. He has been presented in the afternoon with a miniature golden cannon and in expressing his appreciation last night he said "It was the last thing I would have expected to be presented with but it illustrates the changes which have come over parts of Canada in the last 100 years, I shall treasure it as a symbol of peace."

Similar cannons were presented to Labor Minister Rogers, Kingston's other member of parliament, Senator R. M. Smith, Ontario Deputy Minister of Highways, a Kingstonian.

Former Mayor H. C. Nickle was chairman at the dinner in place of Mayor Stewart. "Perhaps the restoration of Fort Henry is the greatest of Canadians," he said, "but it was money well spent. It gave relief to many who otherwise would have been on relief. We wish to express our appreciation to the Prime Minister for the money his government has spent in Kingston."

Amid laughter, he added "If his government will continue to spend money in Kingston, we will continue to express our appreciation."

In a jocular mood, Mr. King replied that he thought the best expression of his appreciation in the last election was reported to him by a supporter as Mr. Rogers.

The Prime Minister took occasion to express the appreciation of Canadians Highway Minister McQuesten, while absent, had been responsible for the lack of co-operation between certain governments, the co-operation which had been so necessary in the Ontario Ministry in giving the people historical sites was an indication of what could be accomplished. He also paid tribute to the late Premier Sir Hon. Colin Campbell, Ontario Minister of Public Works.

Meet the Kinsmen

In this issue the Belleville Kinsmen Club tell all about their racing venture, the SOAP BOX DERBY first introduced in the United States under direction of the Chevrolet Motor Division, General Motors. The Soap Box Derby leaped into instant favor in the United States and drew entries from all parts of the globe. Akron, Ohio, was made the headquarters of the sport and there local, All-American and World Soap Box Derby Championships were decided.

Belleville Kinsmen Club, a service club devoted to the welfare of children, especially in promoting Better Sight, was the first to see the possibilities in the Soap Box Derby in helping youth to be self-reliant, courageous and prideful of achievement and introduced the sport to Canada. As the result of two successful local derbies and a visit to Akron, Ohio, to try for the World's Championship, Belleville Kinsmen Club was awarded the honour of staging the All-Canadian Soap Box Derby, under direction of the Chevrolet Division of General Motors— hence the event of August 4.

The winner of the All-Canadian Soap Box Derby at Belleville Thursday, August 4, will be taken to Akron, Ohio, all expenses paid, to compete for World Championship honors and a room full of prizes, including a four-year college course, all expenses paid.

Remember Derby Hill, North Front Street, Belleville, Thursday, August 4, 6.15 p.m.

PUT GRAND PIANO IN STREET CAR

Final Fling of 1938 Reunion Includes Many Incidents

Toronto, Aug. 3 (CP)—They hoisted a grand piano into a street car and burned another on a corner. They sent a motor-boat puttputting down Yonge Street—aboard an automobile trailer—and started bonfires at downtown intersections. They shot corn on the cob forward and played Crown and Anchor in the gutter.

It was the final fling of the great 1938 reunion of the Canadian Corps that fought in France in the Great War, a spontaneous celebration that started early last night and continued until long past dawn. One-hundred-thousand former soldiers were evacuating a city they had held for four days.

10,000 Participate

An estimated 10,000 veterans (the remnants of the 100,000 who got together "20 years after", participated in the last night of fun. It started when a red-headed exinfantryman—and a real soldier man's coat and hat—the means by which the garments were obtained were undisclosed—and paralyzed traffic on busy Yonge Street.

Then veterans by the thousands turned out to say "G'long" to each other. They appeared determined to make the great reunion memorable and so enthusiastic that Toronto police took forget for a time their troubles to come. Impromptu bands and quartets sprang up on every corner. Beer bottles were bobbed openly in the streets.

Piano Tossed On Bonfire

Those who were content to "call it a night" and lay down to slumber in the middle of car tracks were aroused quickly by the clatter of approaching street cars. Many a street car had its trolley pole pulled off the power lines and no dense was the crowd in several sections rerouting of cars was necessary.

The highlight of the evening came when a crowd trundled a piano along a street, built a street car and edged the big instrument into the side through the back doors. Another piano was tossed atop a big bonfire at the corner of Queen and Yonge and the blaze was terrific.

PACT REVISION WITH BULGARIA

Nation is Now Free to Arm And Hungary May be Allowed

London, Aug. 3—Bulgaria's old enemies, the allied powers of the Great War, today chorused approval of Balkan action freeing Bulgaria from post-war treaty restrictions on armaments and armies.

At the same time there appeared to be no bar to simultaneous action by Hungary, the only nation still nominally bound by the restrictions imposed by the victorious allies.

Bulgaria's wartime central powers—Germany and Turkey—already have thrown off rearmament bonds.

In the past, the Balkan Entente —Greece, Turkey, Rumania and Jugoslavia—gave Bulgaria equality in maintaining her army, navy and air force, and at the same time established a non-aggression agreement among the participating nations.

Rearmament Existed

The move was regarded as regularizing what Bulgaria's rearmament, which long has existed in fact.

Informed British sources said the Government warmly welcomed any understanding between nations which would minimize the chances of war. French sources echoed the sentiment.

Informed observers in Italy believed Bulgaria was assured an Italian benefactor, while Italy would work for similar freedom for Hungary. The Treaty of Trianon stripped Hungary of arms, as did the Neuilly Treaty, nullified by the Balkan Entente action, for Bulgaria.

3 VETERANS DIE, TWO IN CRASH

Crippled Veteran Dies Suddenly After Tour of 'French Village'

Toronto, Aug. 2 (CP)—Casualties were heavy as 100,000 members of the Canadian Corps gathered in Toronto—three dead, more than 200 injured in some 70 automobile and other accidents and more than 40 collapses.

Owen J. Callen and J. Fraser were killed in a car crash Saturday night in which two other war veterans were injured seriously. The third death occurred Sunday when T. C. Adams, a crippled veteran of the Fourth Battalion, died suddenly after a tour of the French Village.

2,000 Attend Military Mass

Two thousand attended the Military Mass held at Varsity Stadium, Sunday morning as commemoration of the Canadian Corps Re-Union. Bishop Couturier of Alexandria was celebrant of the Mass and the special preacher for the occasion was Rt. Rev. J. P. Nicholson, V.G.

Rt. Rev. J. P. Nicholson of Belleville, Vicar-General of Kingston Archdiocese, declared the spirit of unity that obtained between Catholics and Protestants in the trenches "should be an example to every Canadian," and that "the great lesson of discipline and comradeship learned there should never be forgotten in Canada".

Hitting at subversive isms, he declared that Canada would never submit to "the red scourge of Russia" or to Nazi-ism and fascism, for she was a country "whose freedom has been sanctified by the sacrifices of the Canadian Corps."

LORD RUNCIMAN ON MISSION TO CZECHOSLOVAKIA

Will Act As Mediator Not as Arbitrator Over Sudetenland

STAFF TAKES PLANE

By J. F. SANDERSON

London, Aug. 2 (CP) — Viscount Runciman left today for Praha on a mission demanding all the tact and diplomacy for which he has shipping magnate is noted. If successful in mediating Czechoslovakia's tangled Sudeten Germany problem may well contribute a lasting chapter to Great Britain's efforts to restore peace.

The former cabinet minister goes as an unofficial mediator, not as an arbitrator. He does not represent the British government and takes no prepared British plan to restore peace to the troubled Czech country.

But if Lord Runciman evolves a plan which appeals to the British government as a fair and reasonable solution, it might form the basis of an official British suggestion.

The private trip was accompanied by Lady Runciman. His staff left by air for Praha. It was learned that Lord Runciman took the longer journey by way of Paris where he expects to see French government leaders.

Four Kittens Abandoned In Wooden Box

Left abandoned in a wooden box on the street, four live kittens were given into the custody of City Poundkeeper Tom Thorne over the week-end. A collie dog which had been left abandoned on city streets by outsiders, was also taken into custody. The kittens and stray collie were today disposed of by Mr. Thorne, after it had been clearly established the animals were homeless and undesired.

93rd Chemical Element Found, Is Heavier Than Uranium

Paris, Aug. 3—(AP)—The noted physicist, Jean Perrin, informed the Academy of Science today it was hoped for. Further laboratory experiments are being made, he said, with regarded by many as one of the leading physicists in the world, established a reputation at 27 when he attracted the attention of scientists by a thesis dealing with cathode and x-rays.

There are 92 known chemical elements, the scientists explained, substances of which all matter is composed. They range from Hydrogen, the lightest, to Uranium, the heaviest. All except two have been isolated in pure form.

Scientists have held frequently that there may not be more than 92 elements anywhere in creation. Anything heavier, it has been suggested, would not be the elements held together.

To date no element other than the 92 known on earth has been found in any of the stars.

Reviews Military Tactics Of Well-Trained Corps, Inspects Establishment

Prime Minister Evidently Deeply Impressed by Inspection of Base

FIRST OFFICIAL VISIT

Several Monoplanes Take to Air After Inspection of Buildings

Entering the city unobtrusively and without advance notice at dawn over the Canadian National Railway lines in his green-colored private coach which remained at the north station siding during the morning Prime Minister, the Right. Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, paid his first official visit to the Royal Canadian Air Force base near Trenton at nine-thirty o'clock this morning.

The Prime Minister had as his only aide-de-camp, Air Commodore G. M. Croil, of the Royal Canadian Air Force, Ottawa, who accompanied him to Belleville from Kingston where yesterday the Prime Minister officiated at the opening of the newly restored Fort Henry.

He was expected to leave for Ottawa shortly after twelve noon noon in his coach which will be part of the International Limited, "No. 14".

Guard of Honor

Drawn up at the entrance to the hangar ground, trimly-dressed guard of honor of the Air Force base greeted the arrival of the Prime Minister who was accompanied to the base by Mr. C. A. Cameron, K.C., M.P. of this city and Commodore Croil by motor. Following his inspection of the guard of honor, the Prime Minister took his station at the head of the parade grounds, where under the waving flags and Royal insignia of the Air Force, he reviewed all the military manoeuvres executed by the hundreds of well trained members of the force, with snap and precision.

Congratulates Wing Commander

Beyond his quiet congratulations to the wing commander and his trained corps conveyed to Wing Commander A. E. Godfrey, the Prime Minister made no comment. He did not address the assembled parade.

VETERANS STRESS CANADIAN UNITY

Heetic, Inspiring Reunion of Canadian Corps Closes

Toronto, Aug. 2 (CP)—Mademoiselle from Armentieres is dead and the troubles are pretty well packed up in the old kit bag. The boys of the old brigade put away their medals and colored berets today after the Canadian Corps reunion staggered to a roaring finish in the early hours of the morning.

After three days of happy camaraderie, mingled with a note of seriousness at times over the religious service Sunday, the men who sought to recreate the hectic excitement of wartime looked back on the reunion as just a memory. But they'll spend the next months telling the folks back home how the boys of the Canadian Corps captured staid Toronto and tied the city in knots.

National Unity.

In serious deliberations, the veterans stressed national unity. At Sunday's church parade heard their beloved war-time padre, Archdeacon F. G. Scott of Quebec, plead for unity. Its necessity was emphasized in resolutions passed Saturday night. Other resolutions pledged allegiance to the king and that the corps would remain intact.

The corps set up a living memorial yesterday with dedication of a grave of trees in Coronation Park, near the eastern entrance to the Exhibition grounds. There are more than two acres of ground, a grove of maple bore on each tree a plaque containing names of corps units.

Sir William Mulock, retired Chief Justice of Ontario, gave a signal and the plaques were unveiled simultaneously. He told the veterans their pledge to the service of the nation and maintenance of democracy would set an example to those who foolishly preached the doctrines of Communism and dictatorship.

The veterans also moved to make the Corps Association nationwide.

MOTORIST SUFFERS BURNS

Campbellford Ont., Aug. 2 (CP)—Fred Pettifer, 22, suffered severe burns and a cut back last night when it was found he was driving left the highway and hit a tree, overturning the car into flames. The accident occurred near Myersburg. Pettifer was taken home here after treatment at a farmhouse near the scene of the accident.

POST-HOLIDAY MARKET LARGE

Today's post-holiday produce market resulted in a large display of farm market goods and saw eager housewives seeking to replenish their pantry shelves following a lengthy holiday week-end. No variation in the prices of market farm produce was noted from previous quotations, however. Green corn sold at 15c the dozen ears, tomatoes bringing 10 cents the berry box measure, fresh plums sold at 25 cents the basket and peaches at 50 cents with luscious, cherries being offered at 35 cents the six quart basket measure. A goodly offering of seasonable vegetables, such as carrots, beets, onions, potatoes, cauliflower and peppers saw no change in price from Saturday. A few floral displays added color and beauty to the market place.

BARLOW PICNIC AT IRWIN'S ISLAND

The Barlow family re-union was a gala event at Irwin Island, Deseronto, yesterday, when about 80 serenty guests from Chicago, Toronto, Acton, Madoc, Napanee, Belleville and surrounding district assembled for a holiday outing. The party arrived at eight o'clock in the morning and remained until after seven at night. Baseball and quoits were enjoyed and a picnic lunch and tea arranged for the younger children. Delicious picnic meals were a great attraction of the day. The ladies of the party enjoyed a visit, discussing events of the past, and since the last reunion. Mr. John Barlow was the oldest representative of the Barlow family present and thinks he can play baseball and pitch quoits as well as any of his younger relatives.

CIACO SOCIAL CLUB HOLIDAYS

Tweed Park, Stoco Lake is Scene of Enjoyable Picnic

The Ciaco Social and Athletic Club Corbyville, held another very successful annual picnic on Monday, August 1st, 1938.

Notwithstanding the inclement weather which prevailed during the Tweed Park, Stoco Lake, and were well repaid by a beautiful sunny afternoon. The management of Corby's Distillers Limited very kindly co-operated with the Club by providing adequate transportation with their buses and trucks. The sports were started immediately the last bus reached the lake. The sports, transportation, lunch, raising and refreshment committees are to be congratulated, everything running smoothly and to schedule. Four baseball games were played during the afternoon namely: Girls' 16 and under, boys' 16 years and under. Ladies' softball, and men's softball.

Mrs. Ed Cherry kindly assisted the Club by printing their silk badges free of charge. Red for the members, white for the President and gold for the committees.

Bats and balls were given to all the younger children, soft drinks and ice cream was supplied them all the afternoon and a plentiful supply of kisses were handed to the little tots and scrambled amongst the older children.

The committee responsible for the success of the picnic are as follows: Mr. Wilfred Laporte, Manager of the Corby's Distillers Limited, Mr. J. V. Boyle, Assistant Manager, Mr. Bob Wyre, President of the Ciaco Club Mr. Bill Johns, Vice President, and Mr. Harry Lennox, Secretary-Treasurer; Mr. Geo. Drummond, Chairman of the Sports Committee, Mr. C. J. Downey, Chairman of Refreshment Committee, Mr. Wm. Tripling, Chairman of the Transportation Committee, assisted by the following ladies and gentlemen: Misses Jean Miles, Jenny Badgley, Edith Carmichael, Mrs. Bob Woods and Mrs. Louis Renouf, and Messrs. Jim Donovan, Al Dreyer, Louis Renouf, Geo. McDonald, Wm. McCaffrey, Ralph Plumpton, Gerald Starkey, Vincent Foster and Dave Bradford.

In connection with the sports, the races nine times around the bat, for men, and over the ground bat for women caused endless amusement to the spectators, by their antics in trying to keep their balance after going around the bat. The youngest contestant for nine times around the bat, namely, Teddy Boyle, was only beaten by one second after which the four winner and trying the second time, the winner's time was 25 seconds and Teddy's time 26 seconds, which is considered good for even an expert.

The following is a list of the outstanding events:

SAMUEL P. DODDS DIES AT PICTON

Inquest Opens Into Death of Cherry Valley Farmer

Picton, Aug. 3 (Special)—An inquest was called this morning to inquire into the death of Samuel P. Dodds, Sr., Cherry Valley, who died in Prince Edward County Hospital early today. Mr. Dodds had been a patient at the hospital for the past month following injuries received when he was in collision with a car driven, it is said, by Harry Pelton, Cherry Valley, on July 2.

Mr. Dodds was a prominent resident of Cherry Valley. He was in his 67th year, and was a native of England coming to Canada thirty-one years ago. He resided at Bloomfield, Cressy, and East Lake and for the past twenty years in Cherry Valley where he was highly respected throughout the community. For seven years Mr. Dodds was secretary of Athol Township, Ontario, and was a member of the Anglican Church.

Engaged in the pursuit of agriculture, Mr. Dodds was well known for the breeding of Holstein cattle.

He leaves to mourn his loss four sons, Sam, Woodrow, Brian, Picton R.R. 3, Philip, Picton, Ross at home; four daughters, Mrs. Marjorie, Toronto, Mrs. D. Wesley Smart, Penetanguishene, Miss Mildred, Picton, and Miss Josie at home. One son, Jack, was killed in action. Two sisters in England and one in Trenton, N.J., also survive.

The funeral will take place on Thursday afternoon in Cherry Valley Church with interment in the Cherry Valley Cemetery. The Rev. O. R. Flindall will officiate, assisted by Rev. A. J. Anderson of Milford.

POLICE COURT

John Murphy, Nova Scotia transient who was convicted of attempting to break and enter the premises of Gordon Robertson's store when he appeared before Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., last week, was today sentenced to two years' imprisonment in the common jail when he appeared for sentence.

Chief Kidd introduced Murphy's list of criminal convictions, which were numerous and carried several aliases, he said. He had twice been convicted of armed robbery, chief Kidd informed the court. "That puts me in a tough spot. I'll just be getting out in the fall when it's hard to get," complained Murphy after sentence was imposed.

Kenneth Hollins, 20, of this city, was also given a two months' term in the common jail after being convicted of breaking and entering the home of Clifford Reid, Thurlow Township. "This man went through a window in Mr. Reid's home on Sunday afternoon and stole a watch during the family's absence," stated Provincial Constable Don Carruthers who investigated.

It was Hollins' first offence, he pleaded, before sentence was passed. Hollins elected summary trial and pleaded guilty upon his initial appearance in court.

A resident of Tyendinaga Township enriched the court's coffers to the extent of $16.35 after pleading guilty to a charge of intoxication.

With no crown prosecutor present in the court, Chief Kidd presented all indictments before the court.

BUYS COTTAGE AT SHARBOT LAKE

After years as a summer visitor at Brule lake, near Pierna, Rt. Rev. John Lyons, Bishop of the diocese of Ontario and formerly of Prescott, has sold his cottage there and purchased another at Sharbot Lake.

CAR ENTERS DITCH

L. E. McLean of Belleville, suffered several broken ribs, a lacerated arm and minor injuries, when his automobile, caused by a broken steering gear, went out of control on West Main Street at Morrisburg and crashed into a ditch, says Provincial Constable Times. The car was badly damaged. The injured man was attended by Dr. C. A. Louden and left Thursday evening for his home in Belleville. Provincial Constable Carruthers investigated.

HEAVIEST MOTOR TRAFFIC OF YEAR SEEN IN DISTRICT

Absence of Major Motor Crashes Despite Intensity of Vacationists

The season's heaviest motor traffic was reported by motorcycle patrolmen throughout the Belleville area, as a steady stream of motorists and vacationists passed through the city over the week-end holiday. Although several minor accidents were reported, no major motor crashes were reported by traffic officers today.

After being struck by a Globe and Mail delivery truck on Dundas street, Belleville on Highway No. 2 early Monday morning, Miss Ida Sharpe, daughter of Mr. M. Brown, Sidney Township, had to be destroyed. Elmer Blakely, Toronto, driver of the truck was transferred Motorcycle Patrolman Caldwell to the scene of the accident. At the time 62nd some 25 cows had been released from a field and were being driven across the road. Miss Sharpe, one of the animals was injured as the truck skidded into the herd. No charges were preferred against the driver, Constable Caldwell indicated today.

In the city several minor accidents were reported, however. A truck driven southerly on Pinnacle street by William Monsour of this city collided with the rear of a motor car driven out of Campbell street by Cyril Hamilton, 77 Dundas street. The force of the impact knocked Mr. Hamilton over the south-east boulevard of the intersection. Helen Bateman, daughter of Mr. Bateman, in the automobile, sustained an injury to the head. A charge of operating a motor vehicle with defective brakes was preferred by Traffic Officer Doug Ellis against Monsour, following investigations.

Two out-of-town cars collided near the city tourist camp on Dundas street Sunday, only fender damage resulting. The vehicles proceeded upon their journey following reporting of incident to police. Another similar accident was reported on Front street, but the damage was slight in both cases.

"The DOCTOR" by MARY ROBERTS RINEHART

He looked at his watch. Characteristically Katie had not given the time of the call, and it was well after midnight. But suddenly he wanted to hear Beverly's voice; wanted it so much that it shook him. He picked up the receiver and made the call, to hear her voice at once and to fancy it rather unsteady, as was his own.

"Hello," he said. "I'm sorry to be so late. Is anything wrong?"

"Wrong? No. I thought—I wanted to say 'Happy New Year.' That's all."

"The same to you, my dear, and many of them," he said soberly.

"And good luck tomorrow!"

"How can I help it after this?"

It was not much. Certainly not much to cherish through the years, but he went upstairs that night with a feeling of renewed strength and a deep contentment; as though he no longer stood alone, as though indeed she had put a sword in his hand with which to conquer whatever lay ahead. He was never to forget it.

CHAPTER XVIII

Chris was still calm the next morning. Her nervous tremor had gone from his hands and he shaved and dressed with unusual care. Katie, in the lower hall, saw him coming down and inspected him critically.

"What is it A party?"

"You could call it that. I go on duty at the hospital today."

"And what might that mean?"

"All sorts of things you wouldn't like, my child. Two or three operations, for one thing."

"And you're going to do them?"

"I am indeed," he told her solemnly.

"Then Heaven help the victims!" she said, and slammed out the front door.

But he had other things than Katie to think of that morning. To the eye he might have been any young businessman walking briskly through the bracing winter air on his way to an office somewhere or other. To himself, however, he was taking the first step toward a larger and fuller life. He not only felt sure but of gratified ambition; of going on and up, taking some time in Europe, being called in consultation, reading papers before the medical society.

His grandson had been his thought that he was shocked when, a block or so from the hospital, he found himself with a bad attack of nerves. His heart was beating wildly, his hands were damp with sweat. He stopped and steadied himself.

"Good Lord," he thought, "I'm scared. Scared as a kid."

He looked at his hands, which were shaking, and felt that his nerves were uncertain under him. He was even slightly nauseated. He sighted a cigarette and went on, but the tobacco sickened him still more, and at last he threw it away.

"It must be stage fright!" he thought disgustedly. "Sick. Sick to my stomach. I'd look fine, losing my breakfast. What's the matter with me anyhow?"

He straightened and walked on, but he did not entirely recover from his fright until he reached the hospital. Then suddenly he was himself again. It was he who was back home, and the hospital reached out and welcomed him. In the office when he checked in, was his name, here on the board.

The first operation had been scheduled for ten o'clock, and it was also there. He quickly found Williams in the hall waiting for him, and they went up together in the elevator. Williams, watching him, wondered if he had any nerves.

He had, it seemed, three cases that morning, and Williams launched into explanation as Chris scrubbed up and got into his coat. Chris listened and nodded. It seemed amazing to him that he had been afraid of this thing. It was his work. It was to be his life work. He drew a deep breath and threw out his chest.

The operating room was waiting, spotless and gleaming. It looked like a stage set with the nurses scattered here and here and Chris the star actor making his entrance. For a moment all movement ceased as all faces turned toward him. Then Miss Clarke, the head nurse, moved forward, quiet and competent.

"We're ready, Doctor, and we're all delighted to have you back."

He glanced around him. For a time now each year this was to be his kingdom. His word would be law, and these subjects of his in blue and white or in white would rush to obey it. But he knew, too, that he was in their hands, as they were in his. They were friendly, these interns and nurses, but where once they had been indulgent, now they would be watchful and critical. It was a closed world, protecting its own, and the staff men did not entirely belong. They came and went, the overlords of this alien world, but they belonged outside beyond its walls. There was this knowledge in his eyes when they met Miss Clarke's, and she colored faintly under his quizzical gaze.

"That's very kind of you," he said. "I'll try not to throw things. All right, Williams."

The table was wheeled in, the anesthetist bending over it as it came. To the accompaniment of clinks and fresh linen was now added that of ether. The action on the stage accelerated, the characters moved swiftly for a moment. Then, as suddenly as it began, it ended. The movement froze about Chris, about the table, and about his first operation case as a member of the staff. He lifted his heavy head and looked down. Everything was there. Everybody was ready. He reached out his hand in its rubber glove, and Williams handed him a scalpel.

On a March night toward the end of his first term of service at the hospital Chris sat at the desk in his back office and over a pipe reviewed his situation.

Around him the house was quiet. It exuded the odor of the Walters family, and a faint and faintly musty smell of mold from the uncemented cellar below. The problems of the Walters family had not changed. It was what it had been, unsatisfactory and expensive. He had discovered the telephone as a means of communication and now spent long periods on it. He would call up his office to find the line busy, bang up the receiver, wait and call again.

Once she was talking to a boy and he was cut in on the line. Here was a new Katie, coquettish and slightly affected, and he listened to her grimly.

"I don't see how you can say that. I thought I looked terribly, terribly, listen, Jack, I'm busy at a meeting. You can come around if you like. I'll have the front office."

He read the riot act to her when she got home that day, but in the end he compromised. She could use the waiting room after office hours in the evening. All it was to be tidy and aired before he came in. In no way did she was living up to the agreement, but the room had about it now a consistent aroma of cheap perfume and cheaper cigarettes. Nevertheless he was relieved. Better for her to see boys of her own age than to cherish any silly romantic dream about himself. Well, that was over, thank God.

He would have been shocked had any one told him that night that it was far from over, so far as Katie was concerned. She was growing up. Even he could see that. And she was always somewhere underfoot.

But she amused him at times. He treated her as he would treat a child, usually with the facetious cheerfulness she loathed.

"Still pouting, Katie? You'll spoil your mouth, you know."

"It's my mouth, isn't it?"

"Other people have to look at it."

It was like a battle between them, lighthearted on his part, but on hers a deadly seriousness to her. Alternately she hated and adored him.

But at the first opportunity she would be back in the empty office now, touching his old pipe, his office coat, his pen. She would follow this by reading his case records in their filing box, and glance through his books for pictures; for she was intensely and insatiably curious. Chris, coming on, would find things out of place and surmise what had happened, but he felt helpless; and that night, sitting there alone, he dismissed the whole Walters family with a shrug. Good or bad, he had them to feed and shelter and even to clothe. He had them. They could not have him.

Professionally he was doing better than most. He had his city job and the hospital work. He was even solvent, although he had been obliged to sacrifice the sail he needed to buy Katie a winter coat. He grinned at that memory, for a day or so later he had seen Katie in her new finery on the street accompanied by an apparently infatuated youth, and had bought himself a new duck necktie immediately afterward as a sheer act of self-assertion.

And he was doing well at the hospital. Nothing startling, but substantially well. He had learned a lot and had kept his head and his temper—except for that one time when, about to close an abdomen, the sponge count had been verified, and only his quick eye had discovered the corner of a bit of gauze before it was too late. He had stiffened and looked at the nurse who had made the count.

"Sure of that, are you?"

"Yes, doctor."

"Then you're a fool and a dangerous one at that."

He had pulled out the gauze after that, and there was no further attack of hysterical crying in the hall. He was still shaking with anger while he finished his work, but later on he had interceded for her with Miss Simpson.

"She'll be safer now than she ever was before," he said. "And I lost my temper. I'm sorry about that."

"Better your temper than a patient," said Miss Nettie dryly.

He loved his work. He had the hands of the born surgeon, both gentle and strong. And although he was unconscious of it, the dramatic side of the business appealed to him. When at last he rode up in the elevator past the silent floors to the operating room, the sense of being a part of the drama of sheer survival was strong in him. But going home through the night or the gray early morning, weary but content, the exaltation would die; and as he neared the house, he would become once again merely an everyday young man, worrying about coal for the furnace or the rent, and with a feeling that the curtain had rung down on something rather magnificent and had left him somewhere outside in the dark.

That was the professional side of his life. What about the other?

Somewhere, somewhere, the brief intimacy between Beverly Lewis and himself had been lost. For one thing, he had been horribly busy; and for another, it was the season and she was popular. He had seen her, of course. Once or twice he had gone to the house in response to a call or a note, but she was never alone. He would go in, very stiff and straight in his old clothes, to the sound of talk and laughter and the cheerful tinkle of ice in glasses. But although she was glad to see him and showed it, even his youth and his good looks could not entirely offset the fact that he was a worker among the drones.

"What? No liquor? Not sick, are you?"

"Working hours," he would say with his disarming smile. "I do my hard drinking at night."

Then Miss Nettie. He towered over their stiffness and frivolity like a young giant, but when they found out what he was, they affected to find it slightly humorous.

"A doctor! You don't look like one."

"Why not?"

"Well, where's the good old beard or whatever it is?"

"Give me time, can't you?"

He was indulgent, like some big mastiff with puppies playing about him, but he was not entirely comfortable among them. It was not only that they disliked illness and therefore his profession, or even that laughing at a thing the mind does not comprehend is one method of overcoming a sense of inferiority. It was because they had nothing in common with him, or thought so; as if he belonged to a class apart, he thought resentfully. As if he never had played a game of golf, or football at college; as if, indeed, having become a doctor, he had in some strange way become less a man.

Looking back later on, all that he was to see was that he had not been entirely fair to them or to himself; and that the real gulf lay, not in their failure to recognize that medicine was a science—they respected science—but between their frivolity and his own lifeand-death obligation to society.

Girls and young women drinking tea or sherry, men with highballs in their hands, some one banging a piano, abstracted couples in corners or on the stairs, and a tall nothing-to-say youth called Jerry Ames hanging over Beverly as if she belonged to him—that was his memory of those afternoons at the Lewis house.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Ready to go

The liver should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas blocks up your stomach. You get constipated. Harmful poisons from the decaying food are bad enough, and the world looks positively punk.

A mere bowel movement doesn't always get at the cause. You need something that works on the liver as well. It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills for just these troubles. Gentle but thorough. Insist on Carter's Little Liver Pills, 25¢ and 75¢ at all druggists. Ask for them by name! Stubbornly refuse anything else. 254

KINGSTON'S CENTENNIAL

Kingston is en fete, marking the centennial of its incorporation.

A worthy story its pageant tells in ten scenes of the life of the city which has grown out of the settlement of the earliest days in this province. The history goes back in 1673 when there was a fort named Cataraqui and it was not long before it was changed to Fort Frontenac, in honor of the great pioneer to whom Canada owes so much. In is day this fort became the strongest fortress in Canada and played a large part in the war which finally yielded Canada to England. In 1758 the place was destroyed and rebuilded under the name of Kingston. For three years 1841-1844 it was the capital of Canada.

Kingston bears the marks of its noble ancestry and possesses in a unique degree an individuality with its old time fortress which was built many years ago to hold back the enemy and reopened yesterday by Prime Minister Mackenzie King, its military college, its seat of learning, its hospitals, its shipping, its stone buildings of native limestone which is the city a unique air among cities of Canada. The city, however is also modern with industry.

No more picturesque city to be found in Ontario than Kingston, rich in its past and with a guarantee of permanency for the future.

IN NEW YORK PULPITS

War and betting and gambling are two forces rampant in the world today which threaten morality, said Rev. David C. Mitchell of Glasgow, Scotland, preaching on Sunday in New York.

"Those countries engaged today in horrible invasions have seemingly set upon the throne some pre-Christian god like Mars," he declared.

"Far too many people," he continued, turning to the second condition, "are taking liberty with other people's money. What kind of God do these people worship? Certainly not the God of Jesus Christ. It isn't any Christian God certainly. Rather is it a goddess by the name Caprice, or Lady Luck.

"Were the people following these false gods to turn toward Jesus and trust their lives to Him, a vast improvement in public morality could come about."

The quest of man for a key to the baffling experience called life is more ancient than any recorded history, the Rev. Dr. Russell J. Clinchy of Washington said yesterday in a sermon at the Broadway Congregational Tabernacle Church, Broadway at Fifty-sixth Street.

"Since the time of the cave-man," Dr. Clinchy said, "ages have come and gone; we have grown more wise with experience and more intelligent with increasing knowledge. But so few of us have grown more understanding about the issues of life and how to meet them.

"Through all the generations man has had one particular belief and hope, that in some way that which he has called religion has some peculiar ability to enable him to face the reality of life. This has come to us, I think, because the things we want of life have so much to do with the things of the spirit.

"We are not puzzled by the problem of how to make the earth yield its fruits or how to construct the engines which our fertile minds imagine. We are baffled by the seeming inability to form a kind, gracious and human common life; to form a civilization of culture as against a civilization of power. To find a fitting plan for dis ordered lives such as ours, man must turn toward religion to seek the answer to this eternal quest.

"Christianity enables us to face life with a realization of the warmth of the love of God. There is so much that is true in these words. The trouble, I think, is that this reality of the love of God will not stop the farmer from plowing his fields, or the scientists and engineers at their work.

"The love of God will not carry us to the skies on flowery beds of roses. And it will not decide whether the A. F. of L. or the C. I. O. contains the whole truth. It will not tell us whether neutrality or collective action will keep the world from war. All these things are life, and life still has to be hammered out on the eternal anvils of human destiny.

"But what it will do is of far more importance. It will tear the fear and loneliness out of the heart of man and give him poise of soul and peace of mind. In the sight of that smile of God's love he will go out to do God's will without fear."

Wealth is a weak anchor, and glory cannot support a man; this is the law of God, that virtue only is firm, and cannot be shaken by a tempest.—Pythagoras.

GIVE THE FARMER A BREAK is the title of an editorial in the current Liberty magazine, which briefly and concisely states the importance of agriculture to prosperity. The writer calls it "Foolish fiction that Canada's prosperity is a by-product of factory rather than field . . . it is high time we awakened to the fact that industry is not the nation's biggest business. Industry is but a pigmy on our economic horizon when compared with that business colossus known as Agriculture. We hope for permanent prosperity while this six-billion dollar corporation lags in the doldrums? . . . This business giant, year by year, produces three times the revenue of our mining industry: ten times the output of our automobile industry; and three times the production of our mighty steel industry. No other form of business is capable of creating and diffusing more real wealth among so many of our people." The writer contends that governmental encouragement at present concerned mainly with factory industry should be directed to the primary springs of prosperity, Agriculture. "Higher prices for farm produce is the answer—higher prices that would percolate back through every stratum of society via the retail counters of the nation . . . Any program of recovery that neglects Canada's biggest business—Agriculture—is as futile as the process of CUTTING A PATIENT'S THROAT WHILE GIVING HIM A BLOOD TRANSFUSION."

"PUMP PRIMING" is the term applied to Uncle Sam's prescription for prosperity. To start the wheels of industry whirring and give employment to the greatest number of people possible Uncle Sam, personated by President Roosevelt, proposes to spend over three billion dollars in a manner which the government hopes will give the best results economically and politically, for general election year is coming closer over there and cannot be postponed at the whim of the government as here. Highlights of recent government spending included:

An order for ten million dollars worth of men's and boy's clothing to give not only to WPA workers but to any person who can prove need. (Workers Progress Administration). This idea was sold to the administration by the president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers. Some sale, eh, what?

Public Works Projects will be carried on at an expense of over one billion dollars.

New rural electrification projects will cost over eleven million dollars.

Seventy-eight million dollars has already been loaned to industries and ten million to banks from February 20 to July 6, while 2,500 more loans are pending totalling ninety-four million dollars.

Seventy nine million dollars will be used to buy surpluses of oranges, peaches, vegetables, flour, cereal, etc., to feed two million families.

Works Progress Administration, one of the many departments of Government spending, added 60,000 employees to its pay roll in one week. In all this department keeps an average of about three million employees on the payroll.

WE ARE CREATURES OF HABIT as has been aptly said by some wise man, and there is no truer sign of habit than the practise of folks crowding together—wherever there is a crowd there is irrisistible attraction for most folks to form part of that crowd and see what it is all about. One wise hombre, a friend of early and more reckless days used to say: Keep away from a crowd. When you see folks running one way it's a good plan to run the other, said he, going on to say that he had seen people so cursed with curiosity that they burst right into a street gun battle and absorbed enough lead to kill their curiosity for ever.

THE MAIN TROUBLE

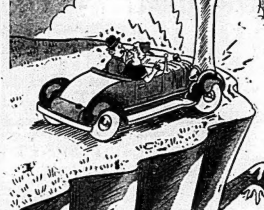
It was the eve of their wedding and she was looking rather sad.

"What's troubling you, dear?" the prospective bridegroom asked.



"Why, John," she sighed, "I'm wondering where we are going to live after the honeymoon!"

"Gosh—is that all?" he replied. "Pooh! that's nothing. What's bothering me is how am I going to pay the minister.

Monarchist Hopes Dashed In Spain

Hendaye, France, Aug. 3.—(CP-Havas)—Francisco Franco, leader of Spain's insurgent forces, on whom Alfonso Carlists, monarchist foe of the insurgent armies on land and sea, has been counting as a friend with powers previously held exclusively by Spanish Royalty, Monarchist circles said this correspondent.

Conferring of this rank on General Franco was believed to have dashed any hopes of a restoration in Spain of the house which once again victory in the long-drawn-out civil war.

The decree by which Franco became Captain-General was issued by the Vice-Presidency of the insurgent Council July 17.

No Spaniard in modern times—with the exception of the Kings of Spain—has been at the same time Captain-General of the army and the navy. In giving this rank to General Franco the insurgent government apparently wished to make it clear he is Protector of State, and has scored him semi-royal prerogatives.

Observers point out Franco's new rank also removes another anomaly in the positions occupied among the insurgent leaders. Actually General Jose Varela, leader of insurgent forces in Castille, was the highest ranking General, holding a higher military status than Franco. In the Spanish army top privileges went automatically to the military leader awarded the Laurel Cross of San Fernando. Varela has not only two such crosses but also the military medal. This has given him all along a higher rank than the Generalissimo of the insurgent forces in the military hierachy of insurgent Spain.

Watching for Symptoms of Infantile Paralysis

It is during the latter part of Summer and early Autumn that parents now watch their children closely as this is the time of year when most cases of infantile paralysis (poliomyelitis) occur. While few patients are permanently paralyzed to the extent that they cannot walk, nevertheless the number crippled is still too large.

It was formerly believed that youngsters over 10 years of age were not likely to contract infantile paralysis but reports of many recent cases show that perhaps one in five cases are over ten years of age.

The virus or small organism enters by way of the lining of the nose and travels along the nerves until it reaches the spinal cord "where it produces its most marked effects". Some physicians still believe that the organism enters by way of the stomach because most cases occur in the months (summer and autumn) when youngsters are outdoors and not herded together as they are during the months of cold weather.

The zinc sulphate spray used so extensively last year was unfortunately not as effective in preventing the disease as had been hoped, despite the fact that it was effective in preventing the disease in animals.

The early symptoms of infantile paralysis—fever, headache, vomiting, loss of appetite, head cold—can be found in the early stages of many diseases of childhood, but parents have now learned to watch their youngsters very closely because of their great fear of this ailment, poliomyelitis.

"There is probably nothing more necessary in the treatment of poliomyelitis than absolute rest in bed. The average patient is nearly always better by the end of the week following the discovery that the condition is really poliomyelitis."

"Without the stiffening of the neck and back the chance of paralysis is slight." Should paralysis occur the physician may call in an orthopedic surgeon who applies splints to prevent deformities and later gives exercises to prevent wasting of the muscles.

It is fine thing, when the above suspicious symptoms occur during the infantile paralysis season, is immediately to put in bed, and send for the physician who makes the diagnosis. Observation over a close investigation of the symptoms.

Little Benny's Note Book

Saturday afternoon I was taking a walk with pop for his health, and I said, O, pop, look at the big crowd of people in front of the movie, do you think it's a fire, pop?

It's a fine that burns more intensely than the fire of sixteen, it's the fire of ambition, pop said, and I said, O, pop, how do you mean? I mean it looks to me like a horde of autograph hunters, in whom the fire burns even brighter than in the microbe hunter.

With just that, we came up to the crowd around a they were holding little notebooks and pencils, most of them being ladies with anxious expressions, and pop said to one of them, Excuse me, can you tell me what particular celebrity humanity is in the offing?

Celebrity nonsensicated you? the lady said Being a little lady with glasses trying to look around the lady in front of her, and pop said, I mean, who's the big attraction?

O, Barclay Buston is making a personal appearance, the little lady said, Barclay Buston who comes, he comes, he comes, sh! said..

Pop said, saying it on account of everybody else starting to say it too, and all of a sudden we had ladies pushing all around us with us in the middle, and pop said, Let me out, ladies, nobody wants our autograph, I'm just Willyum P. Potts and this is Benny my son, we're nobody.

Oh yuh, who's paying any attention to you? some lady said, and pop said, You are, take that little book out of my hand and give it back.

With just then we got loose and quick as I got on going, we made, O, pop, we're not even going to Barclay Buston in person, and pop saying, Maybe it's our lucky day after all.

French Swimmer Collapses During Long Swim

Paul Chotteau, French concert violinist and long distance swimmer, is pictured as attendants helped him into the convoy boat after he collapsed in the water while nearing the end of his completed 56-mile swim from Santa Barbara Island to Venice, Calif. It was estimated that the game swimmer had covered more than 70 miles in his attempt to negotiate the treacherous channel. Tricky ocean currents, schools of sharks and kelp beds force him to detour many miles.

ADAMS FAMILY HOLDS REUNION

Many Members Gather at Crescent Beach, Oak Lake

The Adams family held their annual reunion on July 26th, at Crescent Beach, Oak Lake. Showers in the morning prevented a few from coming but over fifty gathered for dinner while many more came for the evening meal. The result of the business meeting left the same officers in charge of the arrangements for another year. Interesting letters, conveying greetings to the clan, were read from some of the members living at a distance; among them being one from Mrs. Clyde Cunningham, Michigan, also one from Will Adams, McLaughlin, Alta. There was some discussion about a place of meeting for next year but nothing definite was decided upon.

Races, pitching horseshoes, a ball game and water sports filled in the time during the afternoon. Results of races:

Girls, under 8—Joan Martin.

Boys and Girls, 8 to 9—Donald Martin; Douglas Reid; Harry Martin.

Boys, 9 to 12—Donald Sills; Donald Adams; Roy Harrison.

Girls, over 12—Helen Sills; Marjorie McTaggart; Ada Bateman.

Kicking the Shoe—Donald Sills; Olivia Wilson.

Cardboard Race—Albert Martin and Marjorie McTaggart.

Coat Race—Harry Coulter and Mrs. O. Adams.

Magazine Pays Honor to Head Of Local Corporation

In the Garage Operator Magazine appears a reference to Arthur Young, vice-president and general manager of the Stewart-Warner-Alemite Corporation of Canada, Limited, in succession to the late W. J. Rowsome, who held the position for many years. The magazine says in part:

"Born in Belleville, Arthur Young —known to his wide circle of friends and acquaintances as Art—grew up with the Stewart-Warner-Alemite Corporation of Canada, Limited, having been associated with the firm since its inception.

"Mr. Young joined the original Canadian Company, Alemite Products, of Canada, shortly after the war. He has seen the Canadian branch advance steadily to its present influential position in the manufacturing world. When Stewart-Warner Corporation took over Alemite and later began the manufacture of radios, in Belleville, under the name Stewart-Warner-Alemite Corporation of Canada, Ltd., Mr. Young stepped up to the position of plant superintendent, and then that of general manager. Thus he has been the introduction into Canada of Alemite Products, Stewart-Warner Radios, Lassiter Casters (1921), the South-Wind Car Heater (1937), and many other Stewart-Warner-Alemite lines.

"This lifelong experience with the company has stood Mr. Young in good stead with friends in the trade know well his intimate first hand knowledge of the manufacture of Stewart-Warner products.

"Art" has always been a sportsman. Though no longer a participant in some of the more strenuous games, he still finds time to further the sporting interests of Belleville. Of whom he is a great friend and leader.

"His appointment brings him the congratulations and well wishes of all in the trade."

BRITISH GENERAL'S MEMORY RECALLED IN PAGEANTRY

Johnstown, N.Y., July 30—(AP)—This Mohawk Valley community turned back the Calendar 200 years today to pay homage to the scarlet-coated British general who gave it its name.

On the where Sir William Johnson "recited his manor house two centuries ago to found a new world village, present day residents of Johnstown turned to pageantry to depict ancestral dress and lives of pioneer ancestors.

More than 5000 persons were cast in a portrayal of Sir William's council with the Indians before his death in 1774

TOO OLD AT FIFTY?

There are far too many men and women in the forties and fifties who think they're "beyond" enjoying work or play. What a mistake! Just when you're old enough to know how to enjoy yourself, in the prime of your business and general usefulness make you feel "too old to fit"?

Take a look at wealthier people. Do they give in to age? Not on your life! They try to keep themselves in the pink of condition, defeated old age; bodies young, minds alert.

How do they manage it? Many by taking the same tonic you can buy if cash's afford to go to Spas, you'll say. Not so much so. Results from thousands of Spa waters can come to you! The combination of Sodium Phosphate, Potassium and Lithium in Fynnon Salt gives you practically the same in that which wealthy people go miles to get from Spa waters. # Proper Clothes Give Child Confident Air

Young Girl Needs Occasional New Frock To Give Her Poise, Says Lisa

(By LISA GRENFELLE)

AUNT LULU couldn't understand why Mother spent so much money on Fannie's clothes.

"After all, Louise she child's only 16. Why at her age I only had—"

"Yes, I remember," Mother broke in, "and were you happy?"

"Well, no. But I think sometimes at that age, a girl—well, hasn't found herself."

"You weren't happy." Mother went on bluntly, "because you never had anything new and smart to wear. And, in consequence, you felt self-conscious and ashamed. You knew people were laughing at you. Now be honest, Lulu; am I right, or am I right?"

Lulu confessed. "It was pretty awful. But I suppose Grandma was right, in a way. It does seem extravagant to spend a lot of money on young girls' clothes, before they know how to take care of them."

"Extravagant if it makes a girl happy and popular, gives her confidence?"

"But won't you teach Fannie to overvalue clothes?"

"They can't be overvalued in a way, is her age, I think. Besides, did going without proper clothes make us value them the less? I should say not. I don't think you, who didn't have them who ever will have clothes."

Was Ashamed

"I suppose there is something in that," Aunt Lulu admitted, "and I do feel I'd have been more popular if I hadn't felt so ashamed of my clothes."

"More popular then, and more confident now. I don't think you'd ever gotten over the shame of some of those experiences, Lulu. That's what's at the bottom of that furtive look of yours."

"Maybe. And that's the reason you're still self-conscious at a party and never feel your dress looks right?"

"Of course. For the want of a few smart frocks at 16, we're both handicapped, Lulu, for life. I'm not going to let that happen to Fran-zee—and if we're not careful to-day, it will."

All of that doesn't mean that you should spoil Janie by giving her every new dress her little heart desires. But she does have to have the very best, or the most expensive, or something new for every party.

Give Confidence

"It means only, I think, that Janie should not be forced to wear an unbecoming or outmoded dress; that she should be dressed becomingly and smartly so that she need not feel ashamed, conspicuous or even self-conscious; that, so she looks will feel comfortable and at ease.

Clothes are of no real importance, of course, but they're important. And it is now that the child's self-confidence is established, if at all. Now, or usually never. Anything that helps to establish that confidence, even if it seems like sacrifice, is—"

"Fine, shame, self-consciousness makes a child self-centered, shove her inward, put her on the defensive. At 16 and unfortunate habits are formed that are later hard to break.

In themselves a few smart frocks are nothing. But as a tool to help Janie, not only to immediate happiness and popularity, but to a sense of confidence, they are invaluable.

Gay Jacket Smart for Races

Betty Davis

By LISBETH

VERY SMART for the races is a solid color skirt and a jacket or coat of contrasting color.

Betty Davis illustrates the statement with a skirt of dark tweed and a little flowered jacket, collarless, with short sleeves and a band of material matching the skirt around the neck and down the front.

Notice her handbag which she wears hanging from her shoulder, bagpack fashion. Her beret is very good style, too, and matches her pullover gloves in color.

Poems That Live

EQUINOCTIAL

The sun of life has crossed the line
The summer-shine of heightened light
Faded and failed, till, where I stand,
'Tis equal day and equal night.

One after one, as dwindling hours,
Youth's early hopes have dropped away,
And soon may barely leave the glow,
That coldly scores a winter's day.

I am not young; I am not old;
The flush of morn, the sunset calm,
Pailing and deepening, each to each,
Meet midway with a solemn charm.

One side I see the summer fields,
Not yet divorced of all their green,
While westerly, along the hills,
Flame the first tints of frosty sheen.

Ah, middle-point, where cloud and storm
Make battle-ground of this my life!
Where, even-matched, the night and day
Wage round me their September strife!

I bow to the threatening gale:
I know when that is overpast,
Among the ripened harvest days,
An Indian Summer comes at last!

—Adeline D T. Whitney.

FRIENDSHIP

A ruddy drop of manly blood
The surging sea outweighs,
The world uncertain comes and goes;
The lover rooted stays.
I fancied he was fled,
And, after many a year,
Glowed unchanged kindliness.
Like daily sunrise there.
My careful heart was free again,
O friend, my bosom said,
Through thee alone the sky is arched,
Through thee the rose is red;
All things through thee take nobler form,
And look beyond the earth,
The mill-round of our fate appears
A sun-path in thy worth.
Me, too, thy nobleness has taught
To master my despair
The fountains of my hidden life
Are through thy friendship fair.
—Ralph Waldo Emerson.

Weddings

SHANNON—LOWERY

At Bridge Street United Church parsonage, Rev. Dr. Semple officiating, the marriage took place on Tuesday, July 19th., of Ralph Bernard Shannon and Hilda Pearl Lowery, both of Bloomfield.

YOUNG—GRESSWELL

The wedding of Gordon Leslie Young and Mary Theresa Gresswell both of Toronto, took place at Bridge Street United Church parsonage on Saturday, July 30th., Rev. Dr. Semple officiating.

QUINN—McNULTY

Corpus Christi Church, Toronto, was the scene of a wedding on same day morning at 9 o'clock, when Miss Mary Elizabeth McNulty, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph McNulty formerly of Belleville, was married to Mr. Anthony Patrick Quinn, Tweed, son of Mrs. Quinn and the late Patrick Quinn of Newtonhamilton, Armagh, Ireland. Rev. S. McGrath officiated and Mr. H. McNamara played the wedding music. The soloist was Mr. John Brennan. Nuptial high mass decorated the church for the occasion.

The bride given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of white satin and lace, with tulle veil held with a coronet of pearls and clusters of orange blossom. She carried a sheaf of white lilies and her only attendant was Miss Norma Miss Louise Estelle O'Leary, Tweed, wearing a gown of white net over taffeta, with pink picture hat, and carrying white roses. Mr. Thomas Quinn, New York, was best man of the bridegroom. was groomsman. And the ushers Mr. Tracey Quinn, Tweed, and Mr. Joseph McNulty, brother of the bride.

A wedding breakfast for the immediate relatives was held at Mother Park Hotel. The bride's mother, wore navy blue in navy blue with navy accessories, welcomed the guests. Following the trip to Quinn, Tweed, sister-in-law of the bridegroom, in a gown of black lace. On their return from the honeymoon trip, Mr. Quinn and his bride will live in Toronto. For travelling the bride wore a tailored black and white suit, with matching accessories.

MOTT—BELLYOU

An interesting wedding took place on Saturday afternoon at three o'clock, when Trenton Memorial Church, Trenton, when Mary Beatrice, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Norman J. Bellyou, Trenton became the bride of Mr. Haroud Frederick Mott, son of Mrs. Mott and the late Percy Mott of this city. The ceremony was performed by Rev. J. A. Ross.

Tall standards of gladioli and delphiniums were effectively used in the decoration of the church. Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a lovely gown of white suede lace over satin, made in princess lines with long train and jacket of silk net in finger length. Her veil fell from a lace halo, and she carried a bouquet of roses and lilies of the valley.

Miss Lorna Bellyou, sister of the bride and Miss Inez Bonter were bridesmaids and wore turquoise blue taffeta gowns with matching picture bonnet, shoulder length veils and Colonial bouquets of pink roses and sweet peas. Miss Margaret Bonnalton, cousin of the bride, was flower girl in pink taffeta with bonnet of blue flowers, and carried a bouquet of roses and sweet peas.

Mr. Burton Sallsbury, of Belleville, groomsman and the ushers were Mr. Everett Bellyou, brother of the bride and Mr. Arthur J. Clare of Belleville.

Mrs. Howard Langdon presided at the organ and played music during the signing of the register. After the ceremony a reception was held at the bride's home. Mrs. Bellyou wearing navy sheer in redwood with navy accessories, and Mrs. Mott in black crepe with leghorn hat and corsage of sweet peas, receiving with the bride's couple.

Mr. and Mrs. Mott, left on a wedding trip through the Eastern States, the bride travelling in a navy crepe dress with classic effect, trimmed with gold and navy accessories. Upon their return they will reside on Queen Street, Belleville.

CHICK—SHORTT

Masses of gladioli, phlox and hydrangeas made a beautiful background for the marriage at Tabernacle United Church on Monday afternoon of Evelyn Eleanor, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph E. Shortt, and Mr. Ford J. Chick, son of Mrs. Bertha Chick and the late Mr. Chick of Shelburne, Ontario. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Dr. Semple, pastor of Bridge Street United Church.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was a charming picture in her gown of white suede lace over taffeta, fashioned in princess style, with short train and long sleeved bolero jacket. Her tulle veil was caught in orange blossoms. She carried a shower bouquet of Butterfly roses and lilies of the valley, centred with orchids.

Mrs. W. Carey Foster of Detroit, sister of the bride, was matron of honor and wore aquamarine lace over taffeta with pink hat, shoes and cire mittens. Her bouquet was of pink cornflowers and roses.

Mr. Chas. Shortt of Ottawa, was groomsman and ice ushers were Dr. Chas. D. Shortt of Hornepayne, and Mr. E. Tennant of Brockville.

Wedding music was played by Mr. Carey Foster of Detroit, and Mrs. Edward Shortt of Peterborough was soloist.

A reception followed at the home of the bride's parents, which was decorated with gladioli and sweet peas. Mrs. Shortt, mother of the bride, wearing navy blue figured chiffon over taffeta, with white hat and shoulder bouquet of red roses, and Mrs. Chick, mother of the groom, gowned in black chiffon over printed crepe, and shoulder bouquet of red roses, received with the bridal couple.

Mr. and Mrs. Chick, left on a motor trip to Montreal, Quebec and eastern points, the bride travelling in a frock of navy blue and white net over taffeta, with white hat, shoes and accessories. Upon their return they will reside in Belleville.

Out of town guests were Mrs. Chick, Mr. and Mrs. J. Nesbitt of Ottawa, Mrs. Chick, Beth and Keith, Mrs. O. E. Wyatt, Mrs. Foster, Ronald and Isabel of Detroit, Miss Jean Wheeler, and also, Edward Shortt, Betsy Ann and Peggy Lou of Peterborough, Dr. Chas. Shortt, Hornepayne, Mr. and Mrs. A. Shortt and son, Frank, Miss A. Roberts, Miss A. Shortt, Mr. W. Godson, Mr. and Mrs. G. Poole, Miss Gladys, and Dorothy, Mrs. Wilson, Mr. and Mrs. H. Ellis, Mrs. J. S. Speir, Miss Helen Speir, all of Toronto, Mrs. L. Willis, Miss Gwen Westfall, Woodbridge, Mrs. T. Johnson, Kitchener.

MOREAU—ETHIER

A quiet wedding was solemnized at the rectory of St. Michael's Church on Friday evening at 8.30 between Irene, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Ethier and Lorne, son of Mrs. C. Moreau and the late E. Moreau. The young couple were attended by Patricia and Arnold Ethier.

The bride wore navy and white sheer, with white accessories, while her sister wore black and white sheer with white accessories. The young couple will reside in Belleville.

STYLE WHIMSIES

A "must" from an autumn style angle is the crisscross sash enfolding the bodice and encircling the waistline. It is nice for introducing color into the dark dress and for emphasizing a fitted line to suit a wearer's figure.

Theatres

AT THE BELLE

"The Toy Wife"

Academy Award winner Luise Rainer again proves her unqualified right to the title in a memorable picture of the Creole aristocracy of Old New Orleans, "The Toy Wife," on the Belle screen.

To her "Anna Held" and "O-Lan" the star now adds a third gem of characterization as "Frou-Frou" Brigard, frivolous and irresponsible younger daughter of a Louisana French planter, and ranged right alongside her in artistry and Melvyn Douglas as her husband, Robert Young as the gambler with whom she elopes, and Barbara O'Neill as her elder sister who sacrifices her own love for Douglas.

Other excellent performances are by H. B. Warner as her father, Alma Kruger, Walter Kingsford, Leonard Penn and the four-year-old Alan Perl whose remarkable impersonation of Miss Rainer's son him the role of her child. Worthy of mention, also, is the work of the negro performers, particularly that of Libby Taylor, Theresa Harris, Clinton Rosemond and Clarence Muse.

Richard Thorpe, who won world-wide critical acclaim for his direction of "Night Must Fall," has turned in a finely conceived picture of one of the most colorful and romantic periods in American history.

Edgar Wallace Story

"Murder on Diamond Row," a film based on one of Edgar Wallace's best known plays, is the compelling feature attraction.

Edmund Lowe is the star, and he is supported by an outstanding cast headed by Wendy Barrie, Jean Shaw, Tamari Desni, and Robert Newton.

The story is a mystery crime thriller of the best Wallace tradition. It deals with a sinister character in the underworld known as the Spider. He is such a menace that the entire forces of Scotland Yard are directed toward affecting his arrest. But it is left to Lowe, the detective disgrace, to bring about his capture, which he does in a thrilling climax.

Supporting the pagaantry marks Royal visit of King George and Queen Mary to France that, makes history; crossing the channel from Dover to Boulogne, their Majesties are received with great pomp and ceremony.

England's 49,429 public constables now have an average beat of 811 acres with 654 inhabitants.

AT THE McCARTHY

"The Hurricane"

Samuel Goldwyn's long-awaited film version of "The Hurricane" the famous novel from the typewriters of Charles Nordhoff and James Norman Hall, who wrote "Mutiny On The Bounty" opened its engagement at the McCarthy Theatre yesterday and proved well worth waiting for.

The high point of the picture is, of course, the amazing spectacle which gives the story its climax and its name, but the film does not depend upon this alone for its effectiveness. It has power romance, a picturesque setting, powerful drama—in fact, every element of great motion picture entertainment.

"The Hurricane" introduces an important new star in Jon Hall, the handsome young man of the magnificent physique, whom Goldwyn selected over leading Hollywood names to play Terangi, the native hero of the story.

Dorothy Lamour, who made her screen debut a year or so ago as the native heroine of "The Jungle Princess," appears opposite Jon as the South Sea belle, Marama and also scores a triumph in a difficult role.

Goldwyn has given the film a great cast including Mary Astor, C. Aubrey Smith, Thomas Mitchell, Raymond Massey, John Carradine and Jerome Cowan. All turn in uniformly excellent performances and John Ford more than justifies the producer's faith in entrusting him with the direction of this important production.

The story, which is set on the low island of Manuhura, 600 miles from Tahiti, opens with the wedding of the native lovers. Terangi and Marama. Their every day happiness ends abruptly when Terangi, returning to Tahiti with the schooner of which he is first mate, is insulted by a white man, and strikes him in self-defence. The man has influence, so Terangi is imprisoned. Yearning to see Marama he attempts to escape, but is apprehended and his sentence extended. In the shadowy five years he makes several unsuccessful attempts and in his final break accidentally wounds a guard.

Terangi finds his way to his native island, but cannot remain there because of the attitude of the stay-at-home French administrator. DeLasage played by Raymond Massey. He takes refuge on a neighboring island where he is reunited with his bride and sees his little daughter. While the search for him is at its height, the great hurricane begins to blow. Unmindful of his own safety, Terangi goes to Manuhura to warn the inhabitants and plays a heroic role in the great catastrophe. Although most of the inhabitants of the island are lost, Terangi is ableto save his wife and child and the sympathetic Madame De Lasge, beautifully played by Miss Mary Astor who intercedes with her husband to close his eyes to Terangi's escape to freedom and a new life. C. Aubrey Smith, as usual, gives a splendid performance as the priest, Father Paul, and Thomas Mitchell is excellent in the role of Dr. Kersaint. John Carradine and Jerome Cowan also score as the warden and the schooner captain respectively.

"The Hurricane" offers you a magnificent entertainment with an unforgettable climax, Monday's audiences at both the matinee and evening performances felt it rated cheers—and this reviewer's opinion is ringing also will add yours when you see this great picture. It is one of the best to ever play in the City of Belleville, since the beginning of motion picture theatres here.

Two excellent short featurettes precede "The Hurricane" presentation each performance and are most enjoyable and add an ideal variety to one's enjoyment of the show.

John Hall and Dorothy Lamour featured stars in the Samuel Goldwyn smash hit "The Hurricane" now playing at the McCarthy theatre.

The Stars Say—

For Wednesday, August 3

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

ACCORDING TO the lunar aspects, this will be a day of upheaval. It is not particularly a favorable one for employment, and it probably will result in a change of environment. It has something to do with feminine influence and the best be handled with strategy and tact rather than direct methods.

If This Is Your Birthday—

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate change and upheaval that may lead to an advantage if handled with tact and diplomacy. Feminine influence may come to the rescue.

A child born on this day may be unsettled and nervous. It may succeed away from its present environments and it may be crafty and shrewd.

A shortage of native labor is handicapping mining in South Africa.

It's Back to the Farm for Charlie

It's been many a long year since the fellow ABOVE has been pitching hay at this time of year. The hay may have needed more pitching, but someone else had to do it, because for more than 20 years he was playing ball all summer. Of course, by now you've recognized Charlie Grimm, deposed manager of Chicago Cubs, who hustled back to his farm after the appointment of Gabby Hartnett to succeed him in control of Phil Wrigley's team. Charlie didn't stay on the farm, however, and for the rest of the season will announce the Cubs' games over the radio.

Sep Plain, of course, is handling the reins, and the sulky he's mounted on tips the scales at about 90 pounds in contrast to the modern affair weighing between 20 and 30 pounds.

Indians Face Tough Opposition This Week, Meeting Red Sox, Yanks After Losing to Senators

Vitt's Charges Face Season's Most Severe Test Commencing Today

GROVE JOINS SOX

Over in National Loop Giants And Cubs Clash in Important Series

(By Hugh S. Fullerton, Jr.)

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Since early this season, one of the big questions, if not the biggest, concerning the American League race had to do with the staying qualities of Cleveland Indians, the team that always had crackups before.

"Would the Indians have it in the clutch?" the fans asked. So far Oscar Vitt and his men have picked up their share of the chips, but there's another of those important occasions known as "the clutch" at hand.

The Indians, now by 7-1/2 games behind the league leading New York Yankees as a result of yesterday's 10-inning 11-8 defeat by Washington, face their toughest rivals in the next seven games in their home park. The Yanks and the Chicago Sox who trail the tribe by only three games open a four-game series at Cleveland today and after them the Yanks move in for three games.

If Cleveland can walk off with a goodly share of these games the tribe has a fine chance to take the lead. For after these clubs, the Indians tackle the sad-sack teams as St. Louis and Detroit for a while and those tough waterways will be fighting it out among themselves.

Tigers Halted

Detroit Tigers were threatening for a while to become dangerous, winning eight games in a row to climb to fourth place. But they were checked abruptly by the Athletics in yesterday's only other game going down 4-0 and returning to fifth place, a half game behind Washington.

To show how tough things may be for the Indians, Boston has summoned Lefty Grove and Johnny Marcum, star pitchers who were left behind to nurse sore arms, to rejoin the Club and prepare for action.

The Indians defeat yesterday did not to be taken as a real sign of weakness, however, for Cleveland had won five straight before it came along.

Moreover, Bobby Feller couldn't hold the 5-1 lead his mates handed him, although he whiffed six Johnny Sullivan also blew a lead in the eighth and ninth and when he yielded another tally on hits by Chief Hogsett and Buddy Lewis, Willis Hudlin replaced him. Hudlin put another runner on base on an error and Cassie Bluege doubled to bring them home.

Lee Ross and Edgar Smith of the A's combined to blank Detroit with nine hits while Detroit got six hits and drove in three Philadelphia runs.

Giants-Cubs Clash

The National League also comes in for its share of action in the next few days when New York Giants and Chicago Cubs, second and third, respectively, and only 2-1/2 games apart, tangle in a three-game series. The Giants made a last minute effort to plug the biggest gap in their lineup yesterday when they bought Chalmer (Bill) Cissell, veteran record sacker, from Baltimore. A smart fielder and a fair hitter, they hope he'll fill Burgess Whitehead's shoes, Lou Chiozza and Alex Kampouris, who tried unsuccessfully, both are on the jury list.

TORONTO WINS TWO FROM CHIEFS

Fortify Hold by Winning Holiday Tilts 7-5 And 6-2

RELIEF HURLER WINS

Earl Welton Caldwell of Toronto Maple Leafs won't set any league records for games won this year and his name will be missing from the lists of strikeout artists but just the same Earl Welton is a mighty handy fellow to have around as he demonstrated yesterday.

The Leafs consolidated their grip on fifth place, which they consider a jumping off spot for the first division, by beating Syracuse Chiefs 7-5 and 6-5, Caldwell hurled 2 2-3 innings of relief in the two games, getting credit for the second win and halting a Syracuse rally in the first.

The double bill supplied most of the day's action. Newark steamrollered Montreal 17-1 and Jersey Giants shaded Buffalo Bisons 8-6. Rochester's night game with Baltimore was postponed because of rain.

The Leafs were bowling along behind a 6-2 lead in the seventh of the opener when trouble developed and starting pitcher John Berly was whisked from the mound. Caldwell came in, halted the rally at three runs and blanked the Chiefs the next two innings. In the nightcap, when the Chiefs began to hit in the fourth Earl was called to stopped the rally. The Leafs put on a four-run splurge in their half of the inning to win the game for Caldwell—something he richly deserved.

The Bears piled up 23 hits in walloping the hapless Royals. Buddy Rosar smacked out a three-run homer, a double and two singles and Mike Ryba hit a circuit drive for the league's batting title, banged out a double and three singles.

The Jersey Giants clouted Ken Ash and Bucky Jacobs for seven runs in the first inning and coasted home on this lead. Tommy Johnny Rubbell halted a Bisons' rally in the seventh.

Ten of Kingston Ponies Reinstated by O.B.A.

Cliff Bennett of This City Held Up For Further Investigation

TO PLAY SOFTBALL

Hamilton, Ont., Aug. 2. (CP)—Secretary William J. Snyder of the Ontario Baseball Association announced today that 10 members of the Kingston Senior Club, suspended recently for using ineligible players, had been reinstated. Snyder said the reinstatement takes effect Aug. 6.

Those reinstated were: Bernard White, James Webber, Stanley M. Scrutton, John Sykes, Vincent McCauley, Robert V. Elliott, Albert Corkery, James Boon, Leslie J. Bowman and John McIlwrea.

Snyder said applications for reinstatement from Roy Wilson, Anthony Paszkowski, H. A. Hanford, Clifford J. Gennett, and Pollar were left over until the next executive meeting.

Seven of the reinstated players also play softball in the Kingston Amateur Association, and a restatement followed a recent meeting in Toronto of the Ontario Amateur Softball Association which upheld the suspension of the latter. The O.A.S.A., however, suggested to President Ernie Simpson of the K.A.S.A. that all the suspended Kingston players apply immediately for reinstatement and promised to lend its aid in gaining such a measure.

The three-team playoffs in the Kingston Softball Intermediate League, which were to have started last, Monday, were held up by President Simpson while application was made. Four reinstated players play for one team in the playoffs, while three are on another club.

At the time of the Toronto meeting Wally Elmer, manager of the Kingston Senior Baseball team in the Inland Baseball Association, said it was possible that if enough players were given back their playing status the team might re-enter competition. The other team in the Inland, Picton, is for section are Peterborough, Petes and Oshawa G-Men.

Seek Entry to C. O. B. L.

Kingston, Ont., Aug. 2 (CP)—Question of return of the Kingston Ponies to the Central Ontario Baseball League has been raised here today, despite reinstatement of 10 suspended Kingston players by Ontario A. A. U. of Canada. Club said they would probably meet today to decide further options. It was pointed out, however, that there are a number of Kingston players who have not been reinstated, and the Ponies at the moment have no pitchers, certificates for Paszkowski, and Pollar still being held up, and the third pitcher of the Ponies left the club at the season. Jamieson, is now with the Kingston Intermediates.

Good Infield, Exceptional Pitching Hold Pirates Up

Gus Suhr, Lloyd Waner, Only Batters Over the .300 Mark—Rookie Johnny Rizzo, Bright Spot Following Inexplicable Slump of Paul Waner

By WALTER L. JOHNS
Central Press Canadian Sports Writer

Pitching, the best in the league is the "why" of the amazing victory streak of the Pittsburgh Pirates, latest "favorite" in the National league pennant race.

Five right-handers are pitching ball, three of whom are ranked among the first five in the loop.

Add to the brilliant hurling of the right-handers the infield work of Lee Handley, Pep Young, Arky Vaughn and Gus Suhr and the Pirate advance is readily understood.

Big Mace Brown, the relief hurler turned victory-maker, heads the parade of successful Pittsburgh stalwarts, his fast ball and curve accounting for 13 victories against three defeats up to July 25.

It took Brown a long time to get into the big leagues and been pitching baseball for nine years—but he has finally reached his stride and is the ace of the package of the year.

Brown's work in the All-Star game at Cincinnati only confirmed what he was making the fans believe by his record—that he really had something up that big right arm. Striking out Foxx, Greenberg, home-run hitter, with the bases full isn't a soft touch any afternoon in the year.

CY BLANTON
Hitting His Old Stride

Brown, 28 years old, won seven games while losing two last year, but he took part in 50. He has won all his games in relief roles this year.

Klinger is Star

Darrell Elijah (Cy) Blanton, the Waurika, Okla., boy wonder 1935, hasn't been up to his old self, but his victory record is heavy compared to his losses on the mound.

The veteran Bill Swift, his seventh year with the Pirates, is pitching as good as in other seasons. So is Jim Tobin, Oakland, Cal., youngster who won six against three losses last year. Swift and Tobin have accounted for more than a dozen Pirate victories, much needed and appreciated.

The Pirates' outstanding hurling star may turn out to be the Vander Meer of the Pirates. He is Bob Klinger, a rookie.

Klinger pasted Sacramento and first tried out by the Cardinals in 1933, is a veteran of four years of baseball experience and is a first cousin of Charlie Hollacher, gridiron and baseball star of the Chicago Cubs years ago. Bob's record with the Sacramento club last year was 19 wins against 11 losses. He comes from Allentown, Mo.

Suhr Leads Hitters

To give you some idea of how their pitching has kept them in the race let it be said that the Pirate bats have hit fewer home runs than any other club in the circuit and five teams have scored more runs than they have.

Only two players are batting above .300, the veteran Gus Suhr, first baseman who is hitting the best in his career, and Lloyd Waner, who has been hitting slightly above .300.

While the play of Johnny Rizzo, rookie outfielder flirting—with the .300 mark, has given the Pirates

MACE BROWN
Ace Relief Hurler

many a happy moment, the smazing downfall of Paul Waner with the stick nullifies most of the joy. Paul never has hit below .300 in 15 years with the Pirates, but this season has been down around .260. However, he's climbing.

Rizzo, previously a rookie with the Reds and Cardinals, finished second to Enos Slaughter, now with the Yankees, for the American association batting crown last year. Rizzo and Slaughter came up from Columbus.

The Pirate infielders have completely hidden their talents to stamp many an opponents' rally with a fast double play, the Pittsburgh club currently leading the loop in double play killings.

Several Pirates' pitchers hold up. Manager Pie Traynor may lead his club into another pennant, the first in 11 years.

Golf Facts

Planning Your Shots

Planning your shots according to the plan is a practice seldom followed by most golfers. The beneficial planning are too numerous to and obvious to dwell upon. The same can be said for sticking to any modest plan. I feel that some good may be done through giving my attention to the most common errors have for not making plans or sticking to them.

The advantages of playing a game where you concentrate on playing strokes are beneficial. It means that you are playing well within your capabilities most of the day. To the average player such a procedure is looked upon as being unduly cautious, and seemingly prefers to attempt wonder shots that will spoil a perfectly good round by the poor. In attempting to do the impossible you fall down miserably.

It is better to pocket your pride and save strokes.

Spell of Confidence

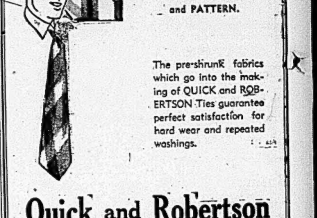
The fact that Ralph Guldahl has been in a sort of hypnotic state was largely due to his lack of control. What they did question was the length of time he would remain in such a condition.

Denny Shute gave us the answer to this recently when he won the open champion in a 36-hole challenge match. After losing, Guldahl is reported to have explained his defeat as due to the shortness of Shute's drives. This is where Shute strikes me as rather strange, for I seem to remember that the U. S. national title holder appeared to be liking for short courses where he could play most of the game from a drive and a pitch, that he attributed much of his victory in the British Open to the shortness of the holes at Denver.



Needless to say he means by these expressions one thing is obvious, namely, that the spell he enjoyed during the big tournament and the tournaments immediately before and after has been broken. Guldahl has been temporarily under a spell found him decidedly conscious of the fact that he could beat the field and it kept him glued to the ball by going to win no matter what he might be against him.

It's a grand feeling in golf, and when you have it on the course you are bound to do your best. But, if something happens to jar you loose from it you are far from being invincible.

In one of the heaviest blows of the year, Harry Semark's Alaska won the class "A" punt rolling honors at Deseronto yesterday, leading Duke Smith and Maurice Callaghan from the barrier to the wire. The tip is out—the Alaska will be hard to beat from here in. Why? Well it seems Harry moved his spar forward some 16 feet towards the bow of the Alaska and therein lies the secret of yesterday's success. Duke Smith's Joka finished third with the After Five and benefited neither one could overhaul the Alaska in the heavy going. The respective skippers had from one to five reefs in their sails yesterday. Prior to the race, as Harry Semark's boy, the Alaska on the Joka swung around and knocked a small girl into the water. Maurice Callaghan diving into the aqua guns to effect a timely rescue. The Joka was no heavy yesterday that it forced some of the lighter craft into shelter. Joka's punishment in the race was one of the host of the current season, which makes Harry Semark happy about the whole thing. The Alaska was skippered by the veteran Cap Smith.

Inclement weather again took its toll in the Bay of Quinte loop of the bowling league, when the Kingston game being rained out. Every holiday date scheduled by the "Orfuns" this season has seen old Jupiter Pluvius intervene, apparently Orfuns had two strikes on them before the season opened. As the Quinte loop winners must be prepared for O.B.A. play-offs by Aug. 15th, the clubs with postponed games will have to complete their league schedule this week in order to commence the loop play-offs early next week. Belleville has two more games, one at Napanee on Wednesday and the other at Kingston, which was rained out yesterday. The game will be played on Friday in connection with the Kingston Centennial. The Picton-Wilton game which was rained out, leaving three postponed and two its games left to be played before the play-offs can get under way, unless Napanee lost their two remaining games this week, which would eliminate the Gibbardville team from any possible play-off berth.

Hurling six bit ball Ken "Jake" Biddle bested the House of David bewhiskered nine under the sunlight at Oshawa on Saturday. The "motor city" nine clubbed two whispered hurlers for 14 hits, including home runs by Tommy Foley and Buzz Bennett. Apparently in the daylight the hurling twins are no better than our district setup. Biddle blanked the bearded Yanks 11-0.

The local disciples of Izaak Walton enjoyed their inning over the week end. Anglers returned home with well-filled bags in their favourite diversion. Fred Croft showed us a 10 pound pickerel he caught in West Lake, while Jerry Lynch reported his season's best catch of bass and lunge out at Moira Lake. Further north local fishermen reported better luck. A few anglers exceedingly lucky wash-er, we unfortunates were forced to content ourselves with the fish we ran away from.

According to the latest reports competition will be the keenest in the history of the Kinsmen Club's "Soap Box Derby" on Thursday evening. Two years ago "Kid Kar" Cleo Colling, our loving brother (?), limned this affair in the "Derby" business in Canada, little realizing at that time that he would develop into a Dominionwide event. Already entries from outside centres have been received for Thursday's big event on North Front Street. Indications are that a remote chance that the All-Canadian "soap box" derby at Belleville will be broadcast over the Canadian Broadcasting system.

For broadcasting uncomplimentary remarks relative to the negro race, Jake Powell of the New York Yankees, was sentenced to a ten day suspension over the week end. Powell's remarks were made in Chicago's Lands. The incident occurred in the Yankees' dug-out in Chicago when Powell was asked to speak over the 'mike' and is said to have made some very uncomplimentary remarks regarding the colored race. The suspension of the baseball resulted in Manager Joe McCarthy having to ask for special police protection for the Yankees, as Comiskey Park in Chicago is situated within the negro belt. Owner Jake Rupert was none to happy about the whole thing, as the Yankee Stadium borders the negro belt right in New York's Harlem.

Hank Greenberg, Detroit's belting initial sacker poled out his 37th circuit blow over the week end and is in the best position to break Ruth's record of 1927 when the Bambino knocked 60 homers, a record that still stands. Jack Doyle, the New York betting maestro, is still laying 7 to 10 that Greenberg will not better Ruth's '27 home run record, however.

When people begin to talk of the Belleville Fair—it's usually baseball players' time on our hands. Tonight the softballers move out into the arduous venue of their pet time on our hands. Tonight the softballers move out into the arduous venue of their pet time on the play-offs in Harry Knott's loop swing into action with Corby versus National Grocers at Coleman Flats and the baseball kids facing the league acid test down at Point Anne versus Frank Sedore's "comminoes."

Tommy Carruthers won the best net score of 141, in the Eastern Ontario golf championships at Kingston yesterday and was tied with third position in the championship round, which was won by Frank Corrigan of Ottawa. Other golfers who competed were Harry Ridley, Jack Marsh.

HODGE PODGE: The Pirates remained five games out in front of the Giants over the holiday, but the Buccaneers are somewhat like the Indians last yesterday and their question now seems to be—"can the Indians stand up under the heavy going" . . . Tommy Farr really means business about defending his British Empire title against Maurice Strickland at Toronto next month . . . Next on the program is Labour Day, Armistice and along comes Christmas—by the way have you got your coal supply in yet? . . . don't "now" until you see the whites of it.

WALL STREET

New York, Aug. 2 (AP)—The stock market stepped over on the rallying side today and pivotal issues chalked up gains of fractions to two or more points.

Mild profit taking shaded best quotations near the final hour. The opening was slightly lower, but forward leanings were in evidence soon afterward. Transfers were about 800,000 shares.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Aug. 2—(CP)—Except for a heavy trade in Preston East Dome, the Toronto exchange market lacked features in the early hours and prices developed only minor changes. Industrials and base metals were slightly higher at noon while the golds were a bit lower and the western oils unchanged.

Preston traded about 135,000 shares up till mid-day and at early afternoon the price was holding a gain of 6 cents at 1.74 against an early top price of 1.79. Pamour, Pickle Crow, Wright-Hargreaves and Read-Authier worked higher.

Noranda, Sudbury Basin and Waite-Amulet posted gains and Nickel and Ventnor lost ground. The action in the base metals and silvers was quite mixed while golds and Brown were strongly spots in the western oil group and Home weakened slightly.

In the industrials the steels and papers posted gains and the foods and senior oils were firm.

Livestock

Toronto, Aug. 2.—(CP)—Cattle trade was dull on the Toronto livestock market today with only a small proportion of the offerings sold by early afternoon. A few best butchers heifers already prices but sales on other grades were too few to establish prices. Calves and sheep were steady but lambs were 25 cents lower. No hog price was set by midsession but packers were bidding 50 cents below last week's close. Cattle holdover from last week was 300 head.

Receipts reported by the Dominion Livestock Branch: Cattle 3,250; Calves 1,540; Hogs 2,230; sheep and lambs 1,250.

Fresh cattle receipts included 360 from the west. Good butchers sold in small lots at 46.25 to $8.50 with a few up to $8.75. Fed calves were about steady at $7 to $8.50 cwt., a few lots of light stockers went from $6.15 to $6.50.

Choice veal calves traded at $8 to $8.50 with the bulk of calf sales from $6 to $8. A few common calves ranged from $4.25 to $4.75.

Previous prices on off-truck bacon hogs was $11.

Good ewes and wether lambs moved at $9.50 while heavy lambs sold between $7 and $8.50. Bucks were generally at $1 discount. Sheep brought $2 to $4 cwt.

Although the day's events were somewhat hampered by the rains it did not effect the evening's activities as a concert, dancing, fireworks and other events held in the district.

In the evening at Deseronto a large crowd attended the exhibition softball game between the local Deseronto creamery team and a team composed of all-stars picked out of the District. The ball playing creamery team were somewhat augmented by the all-stars and defeated them by the score of 17-14 in a nine inning tussle. Hawley started on the mound for the all stars and due to his poor control was relieved by Bonnell about the time he was replaced by Donnie Clause who subdued the creamery sluggers. Roger Green started on the mound for the creamery team and although he was hit hard the route for the losers. Fielders caused considerable excitement throughout the game by making catches that looked impossible and catches the feature catch being made by Jackson in left field for the losers.

Meets Groups

During the review, the Prime Minister was the target for several camera enthusiasts who crowded uncomfortably close to obtain excellent candid camera snaps. He appeared unmindful of the latter, although Air Force officers were busy at times clearing them away to a respectable distance.

Turning from the reviewing post he joined briefly with the small groups who awaited to meet him. To all he gave a cordial handshake and smile, chatting briefly with those whom he recognized. At one time, wishing to join another group he turned from the cementwalk of the Administration Building, found his way blocked by a fence and, vaulted lightly over the flowers and received some introductions.

No Plans Aloft

No planes of the base were aloft during the review, their pilots probably making up part of the spectator crowd of all members of the unit. Following the inspection regular routine was taken up by the various companies, and shortly after the inspection of the buildings was made several yellow monoplanes were in the air engaged in intricate acrobatics.

The Prime Minister, in company with Air Commodore C. Croil, and C. A. Cunningham, D.S.O., M.P. landed in his private car at the North Station at noon, just prior to leaving on the International Limited for Ottawa.

The visit to the Air Force, was made through the circumstance of the being at close proximity, while in Kingston, it was stated.

REVIEWS

On hand as part of the welcoming committee were Mayor Jamieson Bone, R. D. Arnott, K.C., M.P.P., and others of Belleville, and Mayor Cory Councillor Le-Fleur and representatives of Trenton, Numbers of leading Conservatives and Liberals and officials from Belleville, Trenton and through the district were also an hand to tender their respects, and afterward meet the Prime Minister following his complete inspection of the Air Force unit and the various buildings of the base xnich he visited thoroughly. Scores of tourist and camera enthusiasts were on up part of the large civilian gathering on the arrival of the distinguished guest.

During the inspection the unit with clanking concrete mixer continued to grind out its product for work being carried on at one side of the parade grounds.

Walks Through Ranks of Troops.

Dressed in a light grey suit, with tan shoes, and topped by the familiar peat-grey Homburg hat, and carrying a malacca cane, the Prime Minister sauntered slowly through the ranks of the Corps, pausing for a moment or two now and then as some particular medal on a tunic or a face above it attracted attention. He chatted easily with the officers, his smile ever present. Standing at the base of the tall flag pole which surrounds the flags flapped in the fresh breeze, he took the march past ,nstead. Now and then he turned to his side-de-camp with a remark, apparently one of commendation for the precision of the manoeuvres of the officers and men of the unit. At the conclusion of the military manoeuvres he paused for a short while to receive the introductions of many local and district public men and their families and several Dominion Governments representatives present. Then, in company with Mr. Cameron, Air Commodore Croil and officers of the Air Force he paid a lengthy visit to the various buildings, inspecting them inside and out.

Obituary

LATE H. M. WOOD

West Huntingdon (Special)—Residents of Huntingdon Township were shocked on Sunday afternoon when they learned of the sudden passing of one of the most widely known and highly respected citizens of Huntingdon Township in the person of Hector M. Wood.

The late Mr. Wood, it was thought, was enjoying good health and on Sunday morning was performing his usual duties about the farm when shortly before noon he was seized with a sudden heart attack and death ensued. He was a quickly summoned, Mr. Wood passing away before two hours' illness. The late Mr. Wood was the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Hector Wood and was born 59 years ago on the farm on which he died. In religion he was a devoted member of the White Lake United Church and took an active part in the various organizations of his beloved church. At the time of his death he was recording steward of the Ivanhoe circuit, Sunday School Superintendent of the White Lake church and was also Secretary-Treasurer of the O.R. B.C. of Centre Hastings.

He was a Past President of the Centre Hastings O.R.B.C. and Past Master of the Huntingdon Township Sunday School Association. He took a keen interest in every good work of his community.

In his chosen profession of farming he was a leader. In his church he was a leader. His place will be hard to fill. In politics he was a staunch Liberal. Left to mourn his loss and sorrowing in the loyalty of a host of friends is extended are his widow, formerly Miss Hannah Chambers, three sons, Elmer and Herbert at home, Gordon, principal of a public school near Whitby, Ont., six daughters, Mrs. Harold Chambers, of Oak Hills, Manitoba, Annie, Ruby, Lillan, Barbara and Helen at home, and one sister, Mrs. Robert Downey of White Lake.

The funeral service is being held this afternoon at White Lake Church.

Tot Learns Impatience Very Early

Too Patient Mother Rewards Child for His Tantrums

By GARRY C. MYERS, PH. D.

Head Department Parent Education, Cleveland College, Western Reserve University.

YOU KNOW the very impatient adult who, when he wants you to do some little thing for him, expects, you to do it for him immediately, no matter how you may be inconvenienced. Maybe you have to live with such a person. Now a very impatient child didn't become so all at once; his training in impatience probably began in early childhood. Any child can learn it from a parent who rewards him richly for impatience. And it is often the most patient mother who has the most impatient child.

Here is a sample from a mother's letter:

"The kiddies both wake up at six and I immediately make a fire and nurse the baby. The boy takes a notion, for instance, for some more medicine on the finger he cut the day before. I very pleasantly say, 'Okay, just as soon as Mommie is through feeding the baby, Mommie will put some medicine on your finger.' Well, he immediately starts crying and repeating, 'I want more medicine. I want more medicine.' When I get tired of hearing that, I say again, 'Pretty soon, Mommee almost through.' His answer is (and he's crying harder than ever now), 'No I don't want medicine. He says that several times, and finally gets tired, I guess, so he starts on, 'I want to get dressed.' Of course I say, 'In just a few minutes.' The same thing again—he cries harder than ever and says, 'I won't get dressed.' And so it goes—nearly every morning the same thing, only of course he thinks of different things he wants, etc."

Tries Too Hard to Oblige

What a patient mother! She tries too hard to oblige this kid. If I wish she merely had said, and just once, "As soon as I have finished feeding the baby," that a few minutes," is always vague to a child, to anybody, indeed. Often it is well to set a time limit. The young child and show him just where the hand must be before his needs or wishes will be supplied.

Once I was in a home where a boy of five showed a similar impatience. I was puzzled to understand why the child persisted, but finally concluded that he sometimes "got his mother's goat", and more often the father. Just an occasional such reward, will suffice to encourage the impatient child to persist. When he screamed like a maniac, in one instance, and his mother gave him a sound spanking, he proved patient and good natured for hours afterwards.

Saved Babies

Says the New Jersey state department of agriculture: "It is a quarter of a century since New York City adopted compulsory milk pasteurization, and since the same period deaths of babies from cholera infantum were reduced from 3,398 to 186 annually.

Assorted Canapes, Tomato Juice Refresh

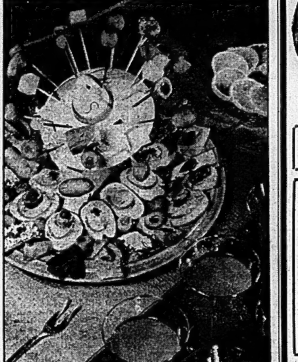
By LILIAN CAMPBELL

ASSORTED canapes and ice cold tomato juice, or any other fruit juice, served before the dinner or luncheon has a very definite appeal, especially during hot weather.



Canapes may be made like little open sandwiches with plain or toasted bread. They may be very simply made or very elaborate, as you have the time and the skill. Pimento stuffed olives are very useful to "dress up" your canapes. In fact, a very simple canape may consist merely of a small, thin slice of bread, buttered and spread with deviled ham or tongue, with a circle of stuffed olives in the middle of it.

Smoked fish canapes are very good, too, and to make them you cut stale bread in one-fourth inch slices, remove the crusts and cut in oblongs four by three inches. Saute in olive oil until delicately browned, then arrange on each, lengthwise, alternate pieces of thinly sliced smoked salmon and smoked herring, using two of each. This recipe is taken from Fannie Merritt Farmer's recipes.

Butterfly Canape

Here is a good one also from Fannie Farmer; it is called Butterfly canape! Arrange on serving plate two small, crisp heart of lettuce leaves, representing wings. Where leaves meet, put one tablespoon thin slices of celery, cut crosswise and moistened with mayonnaise dressing. On each side of celery put three-fourths tablespoon Norwegian sardines separated into flakes. Sprinkle sardines with chopped whites of hard-boiled egg, having outer edge of sardine uncovered. Sprinkle celery with yolks of hard-boiled eggs (forced through strainer) and put a one-half inch band of mayonnaise through length of centre. Arrange at intervals narrow cross bands of paprika and sprinkle ends with finely chopped parsley. This seems very complicated to read it, but really it isn't.

Sardine fingers are made by draining the oil from a can of smoked Norwegian sardines and sprinkling them with lemon juice. Let stand while you toast finger length strips of bread. Spread toast with butter, cream,d with minced parsley or chives. Arrange a sardine on each and garnish with tiny pearl onions or capers.

Recipes for Scones and Shortbread Come From Scotland Via Hollywood

By MRS. MARY MORTON

Menu Hint
Cold Meat Plate

Hot Scones or Shortbread
Sweet Corn
Sliced Peaches Cheese
Coffee or Tea, Iced, or Other
Cold Drink

I'm still reminiscing about the hot breads that were served to me in the south. I came hom, filled with enthusiasm for all sorts of hot breads, and while rummaging through my files, came upon these two recipes which were sent me as real Scottish recipes from Alec Craig and Frieda Inescourt, who had featured roles in a movie picture and who exchanged confidences over the hot breads of their respective youths. The scone recipe is said to have been sent to Mr. Craig by his mother in Scotland and the shortbread from Miss Inescourt, who comes from an old Scotch family.

Today's Recipes

SCONES — Two cups flour, one-half teaspoon baking soda, one-half teaspoon cream of tartar, one-half teaspoon baking powder, sour milk or clabber, two teaspoons sugar, one scant teaspoon salt, one heaping teaspoon shortening, one egg. Mix dry ingredients together. Rub in shortening. Add beaten egg and a little milk—enough to make a workable consistency. Mix with a knife. Handle as little as possible. Roll out on floured board, cut with biscuit cutter and bake on a medium hot greased griddle.

SHORTBREAD — Two-thirds cup shortening, one-half cup sugar, (confectioners), two egg yolks, two cups flour, one-half teaspoon baking powder. Cream butter and add a little sugar at a time. Mix well and add eggs. Add flour and baking powder. Roll out one-fourth inch thick in shape as desired. Prick with two forks, place on a baking sheet and bake in moderate oven (360 degrees F.) for 20 minutes.

ICED COFFEE — Prepare coffee double strength and while still hot pour over crushed ice to cool. Sugar, syrup and cream should be served as accompaniments to this beverage. Frozen coffee cubes are used in place of chipped ice, make the coffee for both the cubes and the beverage in the same manner as you would for every meal, using the usual proportions of water and coffee.

MINT JULIP — One cup lemon juice, one bunch fresh mint, one and one-half cups sugar, one-half cup water, three pints ginger ale. Add mint leaves, sugar and water to lemon juice. Let stand 30 minutes. Pour over a large piece of ice and add ginger ale. Garnish each serving with a sprig of fresh mint dusted with powdered sugar.

FACTS AND FANCIES

Old Fashioned Lemonade

Four lemons, two cups sugar, one-half cup water. Cut lemons in thin slices, place in a bowl, and cover with sugar. Let stand overnight until all juice is extracted. Add water. Let stand one hour. Allow one or two tablespoons of the strained lemon juice to each serving. Pour into glass filled with shaved ice and fill with water. Garnish with maraschino cherry and slice of lemon.

Precautionary Wash

A precautionary measure to prevent poisoning by poison ivy is recommended by the United States department of agriculture. It is a wash of ingredients that any druggist can put up.

The formula is a mixture of five parts of ferric chloride with ninety-five parts of glycerine and water in equal amounts.

Before going out, wash the exposed parts of the body with the solution and let it dry on. If you are wearing very sheer stockings, it is a good idea, too, just by way of added precaution, to put some of the solution on your legs before putting on your hose, in case you brush against the poison ivy in walking.

MEN LOVE GIRLS WITH PEP

If you are peppy and full of fun, men will love you. Are you full of pep?

Are you nervous, restless and tired, men won't be interested. Men don't like "quiet" girls. When they go to parties they want girls along who are full of pep.

For three generations one woman has told another how to go "smiling through." Many a woman has found new pep restored. It helps relieve functional nervousness, due to the discomforts from the functional disorders which women suffer.

SUSPECT LACK OF VITAMINS, SUNSHINE IF NAILS ARE BRITTLE

By JULIET SHELBY

Central Press Writer on Beauty

PERHAPS your nails just aren't up to scratch. Perhaps they are in spite of the care you give them. They may be discolored under your polish. There are many ills that your nails are heir to, including spottiness, ridges, clouded cuticle and just general listlessness.

Have you been blaming the nail enamel for the role for those things? Well, don't, for many other important factors contribute to your general health—proper diet, good digestion, adequate exercise and sufficient sunshine may be lacking.

This department has been looking into these matters, and will give you the reason for these ailments in semi-technical terms.

Authorities in the field of dermatology agree that over or subaddity in the system may make its impression on your nails in transverse ridges, brittleness of structure, and is due to nervousness, poor digestion, depression, need of dental attention, lack of good circulation an unhealthy scalp, insufficient sunshine or exercise.

When nails are abnormal or subnormal, they are lusterless, longitudinally ridged, so thin that they seem to consist of only one layer of cells, or of several cells layers that separate at the tip. When you are nervous, depressed or have had a fever, are strained (or sometimes channeled) from tip to nail-bed.

Weiar Down Nails

If you have to immerse your hands in water a great deal, such as dishwashing, laundering your favorite undies, or spending too much time in the water when you go bathing, this, too, has a tendency to dry up the natural oils that keep your nails normal and in good condition, and they are apt to become thin, brittle and discolored.

Mary Astor
Hands always look lovely

If you have any tendency toward seborrhoeal dermatitis, the technical name for dandruff, be big and scratch your head unconsciously when you are reading or thinking, your nails are apt to become infected and very painful.

There are congenital nail defects that accompany individual cases. Sometimes the nails are found in superficial thinning, so that the nails curl up on the ends in spoon fashion. A former nerve injury will also cause this condition.

Nails show various evidences of departure from normal consequent to nutritional disturbances in the root. This may cause the nails to thicken, become ridged, furrowed, pigmented or splotched. When lesions of the matrix or nail-root occur they are so deep-seated that local applications do not reach the trouble with any thoroughness.

Chronic disorders of any kind are notoriously reflected in the nails. Metabolic derangements produce brittleness of nails. So you see there are lots of different causes which may be the reason you are having trouble with your nails.

Mineral Foods Necessary

As to diet, you need foods rich in calcium—milk, cheese particularly cottage cheese, butter, oranges, lemons, limes, radishes, strawberries, chards — are some of them. Milk is also known as the foremost protective food, and as an excellent source of necessary nutritional value in proteins. This calcium group of foods contain Vitamin D, which provides invaluable protection against unhealthy nails.

Mineral foods are also essential to nail health. This means that you should eat plenty of leafy green vegetables, spinach for its iron content, lettuce, watercress, asparagus and raw foods such as carrots, cabbage, celery, chicory, romaine as these contain the necessary amine, as these contain the needed Vitamin G. To these you may add such raw foods as apples, bananas and all the citrus fruits.

Physician Pulls Weed For Tests

He Proves Hay Fever Is Produced by the Ragweed

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

IN THE LATE summer of this year, my neighbors in Cambridge, Mass., thought that old Dr. Morrill Wyman had gone somewhat daft. He is all very well to pull up weeds from your own garden, but why go into the vacant lots to make a collection of them?

But Dr. Wyman had a purpose in view and probably suffered — although he does not record this — for his jocularity with a severe attack of hay fever. He had been a victim of the malady for many years. And during a long part of that time he had been trying to discover the cause of it. He had done many other things, too: he had a distinguished career as professor of medicine at Harvard Medical school, and had invented a method of drawing fluid off the chest in pleurisy.

But I am inclined to think that his work in hay fever was his masterpiece. He had a very personal interest in it. No only he had hay fever himself but also his father, two brothers, a sister and a son have been at the same period at home. Eight others subject to hay fever who did not sniff the plant, remained free.

The ragweed origin of American hay fever was proved by this experiment. Dr. Wyman published his classic book, "Autumnal Catarrh", in 1872.

Plant Caused It

It certainly looked as if a plant caused it in some way — the fact that the whole family was free from symptoms in the White mountains where there was an entirely different flora of plants from those in Cambridge. But Dr. Wyman decided to identify the exact plant had failed. Finally he fell on ragweed as a cause. It was ragweed he was gathering in his yard and the nearby vacant lots. His experiment at planned was simplicity itself. He sniffed the ragweed plants up in paper so that the pollen could spread, then he took the parcel up to the White mountains. He waited until his attack, consequent on descent up to Cambridge, had subsided. Then in the presence of his son, he opened the package and they both sniffed at the plants. Both were immediately seized with sneezing and itching of the eyes, nose and throat, with a limpid discharge. The attack of hay fever lasted until the following afternoon. A brother, Professor Jeffries Wyman, also subject to hay fever, but who did not snuff the plant, remained free from hay fever.

A perfect experiment — two certain reactions and one control. It was repeated at a neighboring hotel where eight people sniffed the plant, and all but one were attacked with catarrh as they would have been at the same period at home. Eight others subject to hay fever who did not sniff the plant, remained free.

The ragweed origin of American hay fever was proved by this experiment. Dr. Wyman published his classic book, "Autumnal Catarrh", in 1872.

In a very short time this plague will descend on us and lay several millions of Americans low. They must begin to prepare by (1) planning a vacation, (2) taking inning a vacation, (2) taking inoculations, (3) preparing a pollen-free air-conditioned room, or (4) just making up their minds to stand it.

Wales has a drive for better cooking at vacation resorts.

Ancient Babylon was proud of having a "road glistening with asphalt".

KINSMEN SOAP BOX DERBY, BELLEVILLE, AUGUST 4th

KINSMEN EYE CLINIC HELPS CHILDREN TO BETTER SIGHT

The President's Message

Cleo B. Colling, President

In presenting this Kinsmen Edition of The Ontario Intelligencer to the public we do so with pardonable pride in that a great deal of the work of preparation has been done by members of the Belleville Kinsmen Club. We wish to thank the management of the Ontario Intelligencer for such splendid co-operation in placing the Soap Box Derby before the public in such splendid fashion, explaining so vividly the reasons behind the effort in the desire to assist boys to find themselves and develop initiative courage and craftsmanship.

We also wish to extend hearty thanks to the business men of Belleville who so loyally and generously supported our effort and helped to make it possible.

Our principal object, providing better sight for children threatened with partial or total blindness, has won the approval of the public accompanied by financial support in all undertakings of the Belleville Kinsmen Club.

In presenting the Canadian Soap Box Derby to the public we do so with pride in the belief that it will be beneficial in many ways, not only by instilling a spirit of achievement in the minds of the boys participating, but in the friendly contact with our friends in the United States and other countries through the medium of these contests. We hope that a Canadian boy will win the World's Championship and all the splendid prizes including the four-year college course with all expenses paid, but win or lose it is the game that counts—play up and play the game.

Thanks to everybody—cooperating to make this Soap Box Derby a success, and hoping that the Belleville Kinsmen Club will go on to greater efforts in contributing to the making of better citizens of Belleville.

Cleo Colling, President.

VALUABLE PRIZES OFFERED FOR BEST UPHOLSTERED CAR

when the driver is in his s[illegible]stery job, in the opinion of the local judges, presents the best example of workmanship and originality in interior trim and finish. A large silver trophy is awarded annually at the national finals to the city champion driving the best upholstered car.

Many prizes are furnished by the sponsors and interested people in the Soap Box Derby races to reward speed, skill, safety and other qualities. One handsome award which should not be overlooked by the boy who plans to compete in his local race is the handsome prize for the best upholstered car, offered by the Collins & Aikman Corporation, suppliers of the mohair - velvet upholstery used in Chevrolet cars.

A fine pen and pencil set which will serve its owner throughout many years will go to the boy whose upholstering is the best.

General Rules Apply

The general rules applying to the Derby competition hold good in connection with this prize as well. Specifically, all upholstery work must be done by the boy himself, as is the case with other work on his car. The boy may, of course,

Who Are the Belleville Kinsmen? A Little Bit of Club History

This week will see the culmination and realization of the dreams of the members of the energetic Kinsmen Club, when entries for the 1938 Canadian Soap-Box Championships roll down the grand track in search of titular honors.

On the sidelines a proud club will view the results of two years of strenuous effort. For the rolling wheels of the diminutive drivers will not only carry with them the hopes of youthful Canada for the honor of representing their country at the International events, but also the hopes of the members of the Kinsmen Club of Belleville, that the whirling wheels will echo a financial symphony each year that will be productive of sufficient funds with which they can carry on their humane work among the underprivileged children of the city.

Plans are now complete for this summer classic of the sportways. The various committees of the club have rendered yeoman service in the carrying out of the various duties allotted them. President Cleo Colling, is inordinately proud of the work and efforts of his fellow clubmen and is highly optimistic of the response of the general public that he feels sure will be exemplified in the attendance of a record-breaking crowd on Derby Hill on Thursday night.

Five members of the club have occupied the presidential chair since its inception five years ago. All have been able executives and have carried high the banners of Kinsmenship in this city. These include Messrs William [illegible]d, Keith Scott, Carl Sills, Norman Garbutt and the present prexy, Cleo B. Colling.

PENITENT DAD BOWS!

By JAMES SCHLEMMER
Sports Editor, — Akron Beacon—Journal

Listen, Son: I am saying this to you as you lie asleep with your arms folded across your chest and your hair rumpled down over your forehead. I have stolen into your room alone. Just a few minutes ago, as I sat reading my paper in the library, a hot, stifling wave of remorse swept over me. I could not resist it. Guiltily I came to your bedside.

These are the things I was thinking, son; I had been cross to you.

I scolded you this morning when I found you had neglected yesterday to mow the lawn as I had asked. You said you were busy on your Soap Box Derby racer and didn't get around to it mowing.

I took you to task for having paint on your clothes and oil on the basement steps. I called out angrily when you said you had broken a couple of teeth out of my saw. At breakfast I found fault, too. You didn't eat your cereal and you drew designs on the table cloth. And when I jumped on you for that, and you said you had just had a new idea for brakes for that Soap Box car, I said: "Drat that cussed Soap Box contraption, you're getting to be too big a boy for such tomfoolery."

And as you started for the basement when I reached for my hat and made to start for the office, I burned up, and said: "Son, I'll skin you alive if I come home tonight and find you haven't attended to your chores."

Then it began all over again in the late afternoon. As I came up the hill road I had to jump out of the way to keep from being hit as you sped past me in that racing device.

I humiliated you in front of your boy friends by making you march ahead of me back to the house, scolding you all the time because you had worn the toes off your shoes. And when you said you had done that because your brakes weren't adjusted properly, I exploded, and said something about having a system of my own that would soon break you of your disobedience. Imagine that, son, from a father!

Do you remember later when I was reading in the library, how you came in softly, timidly, with a sort of hurt, hunted look in your eyes? When I glanced up from my paper, impatient at the interruption, you hesitated at the door.

"What do you want?" I snapped. You said nothing, but ran across, in one tempestuous plunge, and threw your arms around my neck and kissed me again and again, and your arms tightened with an affection that God had set blooming in your heart and which even neglect and coldness could not wither.

"And you said: "Dad, I DO wish you would see what is the matter with the brakes I have made for my Soap Box Derby car. The race is only two weeks away and I do want to try for that free college education which is the first prize."

And then you were gone, pattering up the stairs to bed.

Well, son, it was shortly afterwards that my paper slipped from my hands and a terrible sickening fear came over me. Suddenly I saw myself as I really was, in all my horrible selfishness, and I felt sick at heart.

What has habit been doing to me? The habit of complaining, of finding fault, of reprimanding—all of these were my rewards to you for being a typical American boy.

It was not that I loved you—it was that I expected so much of youth. I was measuring you by the yardstick of my own years and forgetting that when I was your age I, too, was building racing cars out of soap boxes and nail kegs and two-by-fours, every time I could get my hands on some old wheels.

I sat there for quite a while, son, just thinking. And the tears started to come to my eyes and run down across my cheeks. I didn't want your mother to see me like that, son, so I made as if to look up the rear of the house, but I went straight to the basement.

You spilled quite a lot of paint, son, and you left my best tools lying around sort of careless like. The oil had spread over a lot of the basement floor, too, but somehow, I didn't care about any of that this time.

My eyes went straight to that sign you had daubed out with that left-over trimming paint and which read: "Hands Off, Dad—The boy must build his own car".

Tomorrow, my son, your daddy shall buy the choicest seats at the finish line for the Soap Box Derby. And on that great day your mother and I shall be right there, son, to cheer you to the echo in your great race.

If you win, I know that the adoration of the thousands of fans at the hill, the wide acclaim that will be yours on the radio and in the public press, will leave you unspoiled.

If you lose, I know your first act will be to congratulate the winner and say to him: "That's swell, buddy, you've built a faster car than I have."

But believe me, son, I am your servant until your racing car is just as strong and as safe and as fast as you can possibly make it—and forever after. Count on me for whatever advice and suggestions I am able to provide.

I kiss your fingers again . . . and as I steal quietly from your bedroom to my own, I thank the God who looks over you for the Soap Box Derby. It has brought a derelict father face to face with the realization that he has neglected until now the most priceless heritage of all.

RACER SHOULD BE HEAVY AS RULES PERMIT

Every Soap Box Derby entrant knows the importance of the ratio between his car's weight and his own because the combined weight must not exceed 250 pounds. The builder must consider the question of weight throughout the time he is building his car. It is a mistake, however, to think of weight only in terms of a top limit which must not be exceeded. It is usually better to work on the basis of the relation between his car's weight and his own.

A study of the information on this point collected at last year's national finals at Akron, Ohio, brings out some significant facts. In the cases of the boys who finished in first, second and third places, it was found that the car weighed more than the driver. On the basis of these facts it appears that, all other things being equal, the ideal combination is that of a light boy and a heavy car.

Theory Supported by Fact

This theory is supported by evidence compiled by Toledo Scales engineers on all weights recorded at the national finals. Most of the heats at the finals were won by entrants driving the heavier cars. The boys who were heavier themselves, which made the cars proportionately lighter, finished first in about one-third of the heats.

Taking the case of the 14 competitors who lasted through to the rounds before the semi-finals, it is found that they averaged 99 pounds in weight. The evidence in favor of the heavy car is quite conclusive.

Plan Before Building

A good approach to the problem is for a boy to determine his own weight accurately before he even starts to build his car. He should take into consideration any facts, such as recent illness, that might have effect on his weight. When he is sure of average weight he should subtract his weight from 250 pounds. This gives the maximum weight of his car. He should then try to build all of that weight into his car. The best way to be sure he is keeping within the specified limit is to keep in touch with his local official weighmaster, A Toledo Scale man. This official will gladly provide the certified weighing service which is used throughout the country by the Soap Box Derby.

Remember that all weight must be an integral, built-in part of the car. Loading the car, after it is built, with loose or concealed weight, will result in disqualification by the inspection committee. Builders will do well to regard weight as an addition to strength, and will use materials for frames, braces, axles, etc., that are heavy enough to bring the weight to the desired mark without necessitating the addition of extra "ballast" in the form of sand, cement, etc.

TROPHIES AND RACE PHOTOGRAPHS

Official photographs and trophies won by George Wilson, 1937 Canadian Soap Box Derby champion displayed in the windows of the Lattimer Drug Store, Front Street, are attracting the attention of large numbers of interested citizens.

The immensity of the annual unique sports event is easily seen in the official photographs of the course at Akron, Ohio, that show the hundred thousand spectators, cars innumerable and other features. Crash helmets, trophies, and other up an interesting window colorful paraphernalia make display.

Soap Box Derbys Are Recognized by Government

Michigan Prepares Special License Plates For Michigan Contestants in Soap Box Derby Contests at Akron, Ohio

Thus is the Soap Box Derby given official recognition by the State in which the ides originated. And officials of Belleville's Soap Box Derby who have put this newest sport on the map of Canada are positive that in time different sections of this country will emulate the plan adopted by Michigan, marking by distinctive lettering, their own particular champions.

It's a new sport, a clean, thrilling and competitive sport in which the youth of the country are compelled to play the game and win through their own ability. There's a freshness and individuality to this game of motorless racing down steep hills under rules which guard the safety of those who compete. It's not just four wheels and a soap box in which the youth of the country will ride down Derby Hill in this city on the late afternoon of Thursday, August 4th, but a creation of their own design. Upon their skill of construction, the ideas they have put into their own particular racer will depend the winner.

Cowboys and Indians Get a Kick Out of Soap Box Derby

Rapid City, South Dakota, Puts on Soap Box Derby to Delight of Tenderfoot And Sourdough —Western Kiddies Bask in Spotlight

The Soap Box Derby is greatest amateur racing event in the world . . . whether it is held before 100,000 persons at Derby Downs in Akron, 50,000 persons in Madison Square Garden Bowl; 25,000 persons along the Lincoln highway where it passes through Massillon, or 10,000 persons drawn from many miles to Derby Downs on Rockerville Hill in Rapid City, S. D.

In most every locality size of the crowds attending the Soap Box Derby competitions is limited only by the accommodations. In some of the western cities the limit is fixed by the population of the communities.

After every person living in the territory is lined along the Derby course there just isn't any chance to increase the crowd.

Such is the case at Rapid City where 13-year-old George Trotman, in a golden speedster, flashed across the finish line the winner before 10,000 wildly cheering spectators, the largest crowd in Rapid City's history.

Indian wigwams along the course, cowboys on horseback looking on from the starting line, ranchers and city folk pulling together for the same common cause of glorifying the American boy!

This morning's first mail brought 121 new registrations. If there are any or many more mail deliveries like that, the Akron races will be the largest in the nation so far as size of field is concerned!

It has to be larger than ever before, for in no city among the 110 in the nation where Soap Box Derby races are being held, do fields show less than 30 per cent increase over any previous year, and in many cities the fields are doubled in size.

The Soap Box Derby is a coaster wagon race for boys between the ages of nine and fifteen. Chevrolet maintains supervision over the broad general program, and leading newspapers co-operate by holding local races and sending local winners to the National Finals.

An estimated crowd of 130,000 spectators watched the 1937 Finals of the All-American Soap Box Derby at Akron, Ohio, last August 18th.

Champion Meets Champion

When Bobby Ballard, 12-year-old White Plains, N. Y., boy, carried off the National and International Titles at the 1937 Soap Box Derby Finals, he had a chance to discuss his feelings with Wilbur Shaw (in white helmet), winner of the 1937 500-Mile Indianapolis Speedway Classic. Harry Hartz, former A.A.A. National Champion, and official starter at the Derby Finals, introduced the reigning kings of the speedway.

RULES and REGULATIONS

The "All-Canadian Soap Box Derby" of 1938 will be conducted under the rules and regulations of the International Soap Box Derby with world's championship finals in Akron, Ohio, the Canadian championships to be decided on "Derby Hill" Belleville, on August 4th.

The rules and regulations are strict and to the letter, as the sport is strictly for boys and all contesting machines are the creations and assembly of the owner and driver. The rules of the International race vary considerably from those of the previous 'Kid Kar Derbies' staged under the sponsorship of the Belleville Kinsmen Club, under whose auspices the "All- Canadian" derby is being staged in Belleville August 4th.

For instance, the wheels, bearings, tires, axles, steering device and steering posts are the only items that may be used in ready-made form. Any of these parts may be purchased. No welding, brazing or soldering of any type will be permitted on any competing car, while cars showing evidence of adult construction will be immediately disqualified. Advice from adults for construction is permissible, however. No car may cost over ten dollars nor may the use of automobile parts be employed in its construction.

WHEELS — TIRES: No car may have wheels more than 12 inches in diameter (including tires) and all wheels must be equipped with solid rubber tires at the Akron race. No car shall have a wheelbase of less than 40 inches, while the over-all length of the car shall not exceed 72 inches and the over-all width of 42 inches. The combined weight of the car and driver shall not exceed 250 pounds and the body frame of the vehicle shall be constructed of wood.

The car must not be loaded with loose or concealed weight such as lead, sand, iron, bricks, cement, water, etc., all weight in the car must be part of the vehicle and built into it. Hardware such as pulleys, turn-buckles, hinges, nails, screws and bolts are standard equipment, however. The steering device must be securely and rigidly fastened in its proper position to assist in avoiding accidents.

All cars must be equipped with a brake capable of stopping the car with safety, drag and wheel brakes being suggested. No glass will be permitted on any car, while drivers will not be permitted to wear any type of goggles while racing.

All races will be run on a heat elimination basis, the heat winners to advance into the quarter and semi-final races until the finals are reached. All cars must undergo official inspection of the race committee, whose decision is final as to the eligibility of the car being entered in competition.

The winner of the "All-Canadian" Soap Box Derby is eligible to race in the world's championship International event at Akron, Ohio on August 14th, with all expenses defrayed by the Belleville Kinsmen Club, sponsors of the Soap Box Derby in Belleville.

In the International event at Akron, however, all cars must make a test run over the speedy Akron course prior to the world's championships in order to test each car's durability.

The boys who are competing in the "All-Canadian Soap Box Derby" in Belleville on August 4th., are expressing the finest traditions of our civilization. They are pitting their individual ability and ambition against the best that field has to offer. With these thoughts in mind and knowing the Kinsmen Club's worthy Eye Clinic work, to which finances are afforded through such enterprises, a capacity crowd is urged for this unique event of today's youth.

Because our northern winter is the South African summer, that country selected its 1938 Soap Box Derby champion in January. He is 11-year-old Leslie Friday, of East London, and he carried off the honors in the fourth running of the South African event at Port Elizabeth, S. A. Thousands witnessed the exciting races in which boys from all parts of South Africa competed. Interest was heightened by the fact that Paul Wege, brother of Dan Wege, the 1937 South African champion, was among the finalists favored to win the title.

'Derby Downs,' at Akron, Ohio, scene of th enational and International Soap Box Derby Finals, is a concrete ribbon, 1800 feet long and 30 feet wide. The actual racing distance is 1200 feet long, of eight per cent grade, with lanes ten feet wide, one for each of the three cars competing in each heat.

No detail of design or construction of a Soap Box Derby race is more important than weight distribution. Tests made with various types of coaster-wagon racers show that the ideal is to have each of the four wheels support the same weight when the driver is in his seat.

Question Box for Boys In the Soap Box Derby

Numerous are the questions being received by the Soap Box Derby editor these days as numerous boys in this territory rush completion of their racers for the Kinsmen Club Soap Box Derby at Derby Hill Thursday, Aug. 4th. Here are some of them . . . and the answers.

Q—May I have a professional painter paint my racer?

A—No. But a professional sign painter may paint the name or advertisement of the sponsor of the car on it.

Q—Do I have to use flexible wire cable for my steering?

A—Any safe steering device other than the cable-controlled type may be used but it must abide by the provisions of Rule 1, to wit: cut down automobile steering assemblies will not be permitted.

Q—I have built double action drag brakes, operating from two foot pedals and have practiced so that I can put on both brakes at the same time. Is this all right?

A—No. No matter what type of brake is used, it must be operated by a single brake handle or a single foot pedal.

Q—My boy has to remove the steering wheel from his car in order to get into the racer. What kind of a locking device is best for him to use to lock the wheel back onto the shaft?

A—The removable steering wheel will not pass the inspection staff. The hub of the wheel must be securely and rigidly fastened to the shaft upon which it is mounted. The solution is to cut out part of the rim of the steering wheel, between two of the three spokes, in order to provide room for the boy's legs. Regardless of interpretation of the official rule, this rule against removable wheel will be adhered to locally. There is a constant chance that the boy would fail to lock his removable wheel onto the shaft and that it would come off while he is in progress down the hill.

WEAR GLASSES

Q—There is a rule which says drivers will not be permitted to wear goggles or sun glasses during a race. My boy is very near-sighted. He has been furnished glasses by the Red Pepper fund and is ordered to wear them at all times. I think he would be in more danger without his glasses than with them. What will he do?

A—He will wear his glasses. These are not goggles or sun glasses. As protection to boys who wear glasses and do not wish to drive without them, the Kinsmen Soap Box Derby management will provide the use of cages such as are worn by basketball players to protect their glasses. However, it is necessary that this matter be brought to the attention of registration officials at the time the boy presents his car for inspection.

Q—My boy is 9 years old and a little inclined to the stubborn side. I cautioned him to build a heavier car but he preferred to work with a light one, using the very sound argument that it was easier for him to cut out the parts. Now, however he wants to add weight to the racer, having read that the winning loads are approximately 250 pounds. How can he do it?

A—Only by rebuilding the car. All weight in the car must be a part of the car and built into it. The car cannot be loaded with loose or concealed weight such as sand, lead, bricks, cement, water, etc.

Q—I have given my nephew a $6.50 wheel assembly for his Soap Box Derby Racer. Is he permitted to spend $10 for other parts of his car?

No. He is permitted to spend $3.50 for other parts of his car. The $10 limit in car cost refers to the retail price of material used in construction and not necessarily to what the boy paid for his various parts.

SPECIFICATIONS

Q—I have been told that if a derby car doesn't quite measure up to specifications it will be approved, providing the mistake was innocently made. Is this correct?

A—It is not correct. One of the big things to be gained from the Soap Box Derby is the importance of living up to rules. A car that is too long or too wide or too high, too heavy, or improperly constructed so far as materials are concerned, will not pass the inspectors without alterations by the builder. The only tolerance permitted under any condition is on wheels. There is one make of wheels on the market which goes slightly over the 12-inch maximum permitted by rules, due to the fact a heavier wire was used inside the tire than originally was planned. Inspectors will be notified to pass any wheel up to 12 1-4 inches.

Q—Do I have to build a material may be anything from crepe to calico, veneer to velvet. It should, however have no rough edges likely to tear clothing or injure the driver in any way.

Q—I built my racer as soon as school was out when I weighed 111 pounds. Now I weigh 118 pounds and I may weigh 120 pounds by the time the Kinsmen race is held. My car weighs 135 pounds. Will the little bit of extra weight pass the inspection.

A—No. There are but two things for you to do. Either lighten the car or take off a few pounds of your own. Of the two, lightening the car is the easier and safer. You should, however, have figured on your personal growth and gain in weight when building the car. Maybe by going back to work on the car, to make it lighter, you will shed some of your own rapidly acquired poundage while so engaged.

BAREFOOT BOY

Q—I can't get into my racer with my shoes on, and I can't put my shoes on after I am in, although there is plenty of room for them in the car. Will it be all right for me to race with my bunnies, or bedroom sneakers on?

A—Yes. But don't go barefooted. The sun on Aug. 4 blazes down on the asphalt surface atop Derby Hill and on the surface of the racing strip. Your feet would be quite uncomfortable without some protection.

Q—May I use half axles on my Soap Box Derby racer?

A—There is no rule against it. However, if half axles are used they must be mounted on lumber at least as heavy as two by fours. Ordinary half, three-quarter or inch boards are not strong enough to prevent sag when half axles are used.

Bobby Ballard, White Plains, N.Y., set a new speed record in winning the 1937 Soap Box Derby title at Akron, Ohio, last August. The 12-year-old driver set a new course record of 28.86 sec. for the 1200-ft. race at the average speed of 28.348 m.p.h.

Every Driver Wears a Helmet Like This

Safety is of paramount importance in Soap Box Derby Races, so all drivers wear these solid steel crash helmets for adequate protection. They are supplied to drivers free. The helmet becomes the permanent possession of the boy and is a valued souvenir of this colorful event.

A—You do not. But you will have to satisfy the inspectors that you have protection against falling off the skeletonized racer.

Q—Does my Soap Box Derby racer have to be upholstered and if so, with what kind of material? body on my Soap Box Derby racer?

A—It does not have to be upholstered. However, there will be a prize given for the best upholstered car. The

The Ontario Intelligencer

Daily voice of the busy life of Belleville, and recorder of the deeds, doings and local history generally of this city, wishes to congratulate the officers and members of the Belleville Kinsmen Club for their helpful interest and activities in behalf of the Betterment of Belleville, particularly in the efforts of the Club in behalf of children with eyesight defects, some in danger of going blind. Helping children to better sight is a noble work and worthy of hearty commendation — that these children should have to face life's battle with such a handicap as defective eyesight when it is possible to remove that handicap with expert treatment is unthinkable. The slogan of Better Sight means Better Citizenship and the Belleville Kinsmen Club is making a valuable contribution to the Betterment of Belleville.

Congratulations are also due the Kinsmen for their interest in juvenile sport which has produced the Soap Box Derby contests which give every boy a chance to compete for valuable prizes, to exercise inventive genius in the building of his own speed vehicle, encouraging initiative, courage and confidence and skill. The Soap Box Derby is more than appears on the surface and its development year by year will be watched with interest by all as a worthy adjunct in the training of youth for Better Citizenship.

That the Belleville Kinsmen may flourish and grow great in good works is the wish of THE ONTARIO INTELLIGENCER.

Free Wheeling to the Finish Line

Champion of the World

Robert Ballard, 12-year-old White Plains, N.Y., boy, receiving the trophy from Felix Doran, Jr., Chevrolet assistant general sales manager, after winning the 1937 National Soap Box Derby championship. Young Ballard also won the International trophy as well as a four-year college scholarship, the grand prize in the All-American event.

This young hopeful is displaying the seas of medals which will be awarded to the First, Second and Third Place Winners in Class "A" and Class "B" of the Belleville Soap Box Derby. Each driver will also receive one of the special steel driver's helmets worn by the boy above. The Belleville Champion will also receive a gold wristwatch, engraved with the Derby Emblem, and pictured above, during the National Finals at Akron, Ohio.

Derby racers should have a roomy cockpit, offering the driver freedom of movement in controlling the car and a position commanding full vision of the course. A strong steering assembly is necessary and drivers may add to their own comfort by sneatly upholstering the driver's seat.

The World's Champion

Bobby Ballard, 12-year-old White Plains, N.Y., boy, is proud of his Soap Box Derby Trophies, and well he might be, for the Trophies represent several years of Derby competition climaxed by winning the World's Title in last year's National and International Finals. Bobby set the track record at Akron, Ohio, in 1937 when he walked off with a four-year college scholarship, the National, International and Speed Trophies, a diamond-set gold medal, gold wristwatch, and the acclaim of one of the largest crowds that ever attended a sporting event.

Champions Tune Up Cars Here

The service pits at the Soap Box Derby Finals are the busiest spots on the hill. Here champions make last-minute adjustments and repairs and "tune up" their racers before each heat. Assistance is cheerfully given by expert mechanics and the pits are provided with all the necessary euipment to keep the cars in first-class condition.

Sturdy racers of simple design prove worthy contestants against any field. The young engineer (right) has found the building of his racer an easy task, with its straight lines, rectangular framework, and squared corners. The entire framework is of wood. The screen covering the front of the car is easy to form and will later be covered with fabric or other material, to give the car good lines. This type of racer is easy to balance and, with proper alignment of wheels, will prove a safe and speedy entry.

obtain advice from qualified experts, but the actual work must be done by the boy himself.

The first question, naturally, is where to go to obtain materials. A few places that might be listed are:

1. Material from a discarded davenport or chair.

2. Inexpensive remnants from the drapery section of a department store or an upholsterer's shop.

3. Wholesale auto supply or repair shop.

However, Chevrolet dealers do not carry supplies of upholstery material and should not be regarded as a possible source for it.

Since any amount spent for upholstery materials must be included in the maximum $10.00 allowance, it is of course essential that economy rule any selection. It is not necessary to obtain luxurious materials but they should be neat and clean, with no stains or faded spots. If the material finally selected does have stains, here are some general directions by which they may be removed:

Helpful Instructions Given

Use a neutral soap and clean cloths at all times. When cleaning upholstery be sure to change to a clean section of cloth as soon as the one being used shows signs of dirt.

The use of hot water is be avoided unless absolutely necessary. If the stain is very hard to remove, hot water may help but use only a little of it at a time and wipe it off quickly.

Do not use gasoline except in an open place with plenty of ventilation and, of course, never be in the vicinity of fire of any kind. Do not use colored gasoline and that which contains lead (high compression gas). Carbon tetrachloride is a good solvent to use in removing chewing gum, grease and oil. In removing grease spots, start well outside the spot and work in toward it. This lessens the danger of unsightly rings.

After neat and clean material is obtained, study the outline and shape of the seat that has been built into the racer. It is usually helpful to make a paper pattern to size and cut the material to this pattern. This helps to prevent waste and spoilage. Be sure the finished appearance does show lumps or loose padding. If padding is used, see that it is inserted smoothly and tightly. Leave no sharp edges or corners and see that all seams and edges are neatly turned and finished.

More than 100,000 boys build Soap Box Derby racers each year and compete in the local eliminations for the right to represent their respective cities in the National Finals, "the greatest amateur racing event in the world."

The 1938 All-American Soap Box Derby Finals will be held at Akron, Ohio, on August 14. This will be the fifth annual running of this colorful, juvenile event and will attract champions from over 100 cities in this country.

The 1937 Soap Box Derby Finals rank fourth from the standpoint of number of spectators. The Dempsey-Tunney fight, the Notre Dame-U.S.C. football game, and the Indianapolis Speedway races are the three sporting events that have enjoyed greater attendance.

Kinsmen—Ontario Intelligencer Soap Box Derby 1938

Five Years Ago the Kinsmen Club Was Organized—All Young Men

Five years ago a group of young business and professional men of the city met in solemn conclave in a building on Front Street. They were addressed by a youthful stranger from Ottawa, who in concise phrases pointed out the work that could be done in this city and district under the banners of the Kinsmen Club of Canada.

Earnestly he spoke, enthusiastically he defined and explained the fine service this work being done in other cities by representatives of this club. The great field of social service was open, he said especially in the children's department. Practically all phases of child work was being covered in Canada by branches of this great service organization, perhaps the youngest in Canada but one that was increasing in membership and work by leaps and bounds.

Attentively the young business and professional men listened, as the speaker told in glowing terms of the work a branch of this organization could do in this city. Children were in need of special services. There were a great many openings for work of alleviation of child-suffering and conditions.

They talked it over in open discussion. They spoke in small groups. Then unanimously, as it were, the Belleville branch of the Kinsmen Club was born.

They formed a membership group, and a few days later applied for and received a charter. Entering enthusiastically into the spirit of the club, it was not long before this handful of Kinsmen pioneers in this city had gathered about them a splendid group of representative young men who measured to the full, the requirements demanded by the regulations of the parent body.

They sprang into immediate action. Each member was assigned to an important task in the furtherance of the work of the club and in membership. Selecting as their service work the alleviation, treatment and assistance in every way possible, of underprivileged children of the city, whose parents through no fault of their own, were unable to supply them with specialists treatment, glasses and in some cases operations, the young club leaped into immediate action.

They broadcast their activities. They set about the formation of plans to raise the necessary funds to start their important work. From this time on, their position in the service life of the city has been a high one. They have performed admirable service in the cause of humanity. Each succeeding year has seen great strides made in their particular phase of service work, one that since its inception, has filled a much-needed want in the lives of the underprivileged children of the city.

And behind this splendid movement has been throughout the five years of the club's existence in Belleville, the splendid generosity of an appreciative citizenry. Without the fine cooperation of the business, professional, industrial men of the city, not to mention the merchants and manufacturers and the fine work done by the club would not have been possible.

But the Kinsmen Club has not resorted to charity for funds with which to carry on its work. In the early days many schemes and plans were entertained with which to raise the much-needed finances for the service work. Within the last few years, however, the Club have relied mainly on an Annual Motor Show and Fashion Parade. Again the fine cooperation of the merchants and business men of the city asserted itself when the first attempt in this form of entertainment met with unprecedented success. In fact so enthusiastic was the reception given the first Motor Show by an appreciative public that since that date is has become an annual institution in Kinsmen Club activities.

But as the need for further finances became necessary with the increasing number of child-cases brought to the attention of chairman of the Eye Clini Committee, further fields were sought in an effort to raise more money. And to the President of the club, Mr. Cleo B. Colling, goes the honor and glory of inaugurating the first Kid-Kar Derby ever held in Canada, an event that has not only grown in popularity with the sport-loving public by leaps and bounds since its birth here two years ago but has been the direct result of advertising this city in the far-flung corners of the North American Continent.

Five thousand people, some of them curious, a lot of them proud parents who attended solely to see Billy or Tommy or Johnny perform in his new-fangled vehicular contraption, and a lot of them loyal to the principals of the club and in sympathy with its aim, thronged the track on North Front Street, now popularly known as "Derby Hill," two years ago to see the first Kid-Kar Derby ever run in Canada.

It was a nervous "gang" of Kinsmen who awaited the day that would see the inauguration of their race. But it was only a matter of seconds for the large enthusiastic crowd that attended the first race that first established forever its popularity with the public of this city and district.

Again last year a splendid turnout viewed the Derby Hill Classic as an increased number of entries drove their nondescript vehicles down the track in search of honors. The climax came when the winner, George Wilson, Chatham St. received an invitation to compete at Canadian championships held in Danforth Toronto. George not only attended the meet but defeated the cream of the Queen City drivers to annex the Canadian title and the right to represent his native city and country at the famous World's Championship Soap-Box Derby at Akron, Ohio.

Here before a cheering crowd that numbered nearly one hundred thousand people, the diminutive Canadian champion finished third to the American and Hawaiian titlists. Again the name of Belleville was advertised over the continents through the medium of this unique sports event.

This year the honor of holding the Canadian Championships has been awarded to the city of the origin of the Canadian Soap-Box Derby.

BOBBY BALLARD 1936 CHAMPION WILL BE THERE

Boy From White Plains Who Won 1936 Championship Will Watch This Year's Derby From Official Box.

Akron, Ohio, August 1 — Bobby Ballard, 1937 All-American and International Soap Box Derby champion, from White Plains, N.Y., is coming back to Akron for the All-American event this year . . . but not as a racing participant.

Herbert Muensch of St. Louis, 1936 All-American and International champion; Maurice Bale of Anderson, Ind., 1935 All-American champion and Robert Turner of Muncie, Ind., 1934 All-American champion, are also coming back.

They are being brought to Akron to play important parts in an elaborate pageantry which will precede the annual competition to determine the 1938 All-American and International champion or champions.

This pageantry, featured by a series of gigantic floats depicting the virtues as exemplified by Benjamin Franklin, Abraham Lincoln, George Washington, Christopher Columbus, Charles Lindbergh, Babe Ruth and others, is certain to add more color and glamor to the big show on Aug. 14 than it has ever had before.

Ballard is proud of the trophies he won here last year. The best one was the four-year college education, all expenses paid.

Meeting was to be held in Akron today to put together the big prize list for the Beacon Journal Soap Box Derby at Derby Downs on Sunday, Aug. 14. This list is expected to be ready for announcement late this week.

In the meantime boys from all parts of the Beacon Journal territory are continuing to register for the big event. Thirty-four more official entry blanks were received by the Derby editor today, bringing the total to the 300 mark.

WINNER WILL WEAR UNIFORM MADE TO ORDER

The members of the Belleville Kinsmen Club, accompanying Canada's Champion Kid Kar Derbyist and entry into the International Soap Box Derby to be held in Akron, Ohio on August 14, will be decked out in a Belleville product. The Deacon Sportwear are making special cream jackets with elaborate silk embroidery crests embodying the emblem or the local Kinsmen Club.

These energetic members of the Club along with their fellow members have made a name for Belleville as well as doing a most worthy service work for the children in our community.

They will be accompanying Canada's outstanding driver in this International Classic. The declared winner of the All-Canadian race to be held in Belleville on the 4th of August will be presented with the newest and most efficiently designed racing suit manufactured by Deacon Sportwear. This suit will be made from cream material elaborately embroidered and showing the local Kinsmen Club crest and the name of the sponsors. It will be symbolic of the Fan - American stream lining of his car. It will assure him of cool comfort, windproof, showerproof, and afford him that protection which is so necessary in these trying high speed events.

The National Finals—Young America's Biggest Thrill

COPYRIGHT, DETROIT NEWS AIRPHOTO

More than 120,000 enthusiastic spectators watched the National Finals of the Soap Box Derby on Akron's ideal course last August. Here 123local champions matched their skill against one another in the greatest amateur racing event in the world. As guests of the Chevrolet Motor Division, these boys had a thrilling time. From the tune-up of their cars for the trial runs, to the grand champions' banquet that climaxed the affair, they had the time of their lives. This aerial view shows Derby Downs before the start of the 1937 Finals.

Although the Soap Box Derby which the Belleville Kinsmen and the Daily Ontario Intelligencer are sponsoring has been the inspiration for articles, editorials and cartoons and even advertising billboards from coast to coast in the United States, latterly to be taken with the same enthusiasm in Canada, it remained for the State of Michigan, automotive centre of the world, to give the Derby its first official recognition.

So seriously is it taken in that State that Leon D. Case, Secretary of State, announced this week that his department was preparing special licence plates for presentation to the champion in each of the five Michigan cities sending entrants to the finals at Akron, August 14th. Each of these plates will bear the large numeral "1" and the initial or initials of the city it represents.

BOB BALLARD HOLDS DERBY SPEED RECORD

A trim little powered-by-gravity hand-built racer that cost $9.82, a firm grip on the steering wheel, a clear eye and an abundance of pluck and grit brought both fame and fortune to 12-year-old Bobby Ballard of White Plains, N. Y., in Akron, Sunday, August 15, 1937, when he won both the All-American and the International Soap Box Derbies and set a new course record of 28.86 sec. for the 1200-ft. race, or 28.348 m.p.h.

For Bobby a four-year college scholarship in any recognized state college or university is assured through the Chevrolet Motor Division of General Motors Corporation, in cooperation with 120 of the nation's leading newspapers. As first place winner in the national event, participated in by 124 city winners from all over the United States, Bobby will, some six years hence, enroll in the University of Minnesota, by virtue of his splendid showing in the national event. The northern school is Bobby's own selection.

In addition to the scholarship, Bobby also was awarded the first-place national silver trophy, the classically designed M. E. Coyle award, A diamond-set gold medal also was part of the prize list for Bobby. As a special award for the national champion whose speedy little racer dominated the juvenile classic throughout, the twelve-year-old youth received the Indianapolis Speedway trophy for the fastest heat of the day.

SCOTT'S SCRAP BOOK

By R. J. SCOTT

Out of Cash

By LILLIAN HIESTON

This going it alone and earning one's living isn't always what it's cracked up to be. There's been many a time in my life when I'd been mighty thankful for a good man who would foot the bills and be glad to find me in his kitchen with a hot supper ready when he came home at night. Now, let's take stock of what I had. My room rent was paid for three days more and four times something wouldn't make more than two-thirty of ready cash. The date was July 1. There was the newspaper to prove it. I'd read the ads and see what's what.

Wanted — Expert stenographer; a knowledge of French essential.

Nothing doing.

"Wanted—Trained hospital nurse to take care of twins; best of references required." Still less my job.

"Wanted—At once, waitress, no experience necessary. Apply at once Excellent Cafe, Beach Point, Revere." That's the ticket.

Instantly I array myself, and take the boat to the narrow gauge, it's an 0f hour. And the proprietor welcomes me.

"Dinner and lunch with the help; a black dress and white apron, dollar a day and your tips. Be here at 11 tomorrow."

He put out his hand as if to clinch me under the chin, thought better of it, and turned on his heel.

"So that's that," I murmured, as I strolled along the beach and watched the bathers.

I paid ten cents for a bite of lunch and returned to Boston. I invested sparingly in enough black cambric for a slip and found a white apron for a quarter in a 5&10 cent gain basement. I went home and sewed up the slip and put a bit of white at the neck.

The next day, ahead of time, I departed for the shore. My room was paid for till the day after the event, so I left my things there, the few there were. I just had a valise with me, but I had a trunk in the storage warehouse.

Arrived at the Excellent cafe I was told to eat in the back room. I went and found there a motley assembly of women and roughed girls.

I ate a potato and a slice of bread and said I was ready for work. It was early, but a fat man and a young girl had just come in, and I was told to get their order. The man ordered to suit himself, a big planked steak with fixings, coffee and ice cream. It was an expensive order, and I enjoyed the prospect of a big tip.

They ate the bread before the steak came, so I brought them more, and more butter.

Finally I carried in the heavy platter, and the fat man asked if they had to catch and kill the animal first to get the steak. They wanted extra cream for their coffee and more bread.

This time the proprietor caught me with a hurried whisper:

"Charge 'em extra; no double orders here for the same price."

The couple talked a long time and then got up to go. The man counted over his change twice and reluctantly handed me a dime.

Other customers came and went and the long day dragged along. My own supper was worse than the dinner, which was saying something. At 9 o'clock the proprietor came to me and said:

"Here's your dollar and you needn't come again. I'm not paying if all my waitresses were like you. Haven't you sense enough to know that you must give a customer as little as possible?"

I think I never was so tired in my life, and I went and sat on the beach right down on the sand and cried. I had made 70 cents in tips and worked 10 hours, allowing half an hour for two horrible sips. It was very warm. A man came along and walked by me twice. Finally he sat down beside me and said:

"Crying don't help it any, kid. I saw you in the hash joint and wondered why you were trying a job that didn't suit your style. Hadn't you sense to know by the very looks of the other girls why they didn't like you? I ate there today and I watched you half an hour, and I said to myself: That's a home girl, the marrying kind, not like the bunch in that joint. Say, I liked your looks and meant to go again and get to know you."

I was just that tired and discouraged that I cared more than ever. Before I realized what was coming he had his arm around me and was wiping my tears away with his handkerchief.

"There, there, child. Life's just like a play at the theatre. Make fun of it. Laugh at it. Don't let it down you. Come in now, to a restaurant I know and get some decent food. I'll get you right up."

Well, I went and he took care of me, was never for a moment familiar, and I let him take me home to my boarding house We made a date for the next day, and that next day he got a special license and we were married and went to his little bungalow at the Point of Pines.

A Real Life Drama With Kinsmen Actors

BY A "KINSMAN"

SCENE 1

The curtain rises on the living room of a poor family residing on the outskirts of Belleville. In a corner a gaunt-faced woman sits dejectedly in a decrepit rocking-chair. Near-despair is written on the once-attractive face. She gazes about her, at the poverty-stricken appearance of the room. A little boy, his clothes ragged but clean, sits on a chair nearby. He rubs his eyes incessantly. "Mummy" he cries, "my eyes hurt me." "Alright, dear" she replies. "I will bathe them for you." She takes the boy to a corner where on a rickety stand is placed a pan of water. She shakes some powder in it. The door opens and her husband walks in. He is a young upright man, with sturdy shoulders that now droop with weariness and apparent despair.

"It's no use, Mary, I have tried everywhere to get a job, but no luck. The employment office had nothing, farmers do not want married men, and even the occasional odd job is conspicuous by its absence," he says. Mary—"I know you have tried, John, but we mustn't give up hope, surely something will turn up soon. It must."

John—"I doubt it. Things do not turn up for people like us. However I will keep on trying, but it's the relief office for us if some kind of a job does not present itself soon."

Mary, walking over to where he stands, "John, dear, we must do something soon for Billy's eyes. I'm afraid they are gradually getting worse. They itch and burn and even though I bathe them often the relief doesn't seem to last long."

John, sits down heavily in a chair, places his head in cupped hands, "I know that, and I think the only thing for him is glasses, but what are we going to use for money?"

Mary, places her hand on his shoulder—"I took him to a doctor yesterday and he advised a thorough examination by an optician, for he says, that his headache and general nervous condition is a result of the condition of his eyes".

The boy whimpers in the corner, Mary and John exchange glances. Billy walks slowly to his father, climbs in his lap and buries his head on his shoulder. A hush falls over the room.

It is Monday night. In the lobby of the Queen's Hotel a laughing group of young business and professional men await the call to their fortnightly banquet. Light badinage is exchanged as they converse across the broad lobby. A few minutes later the president of the Belleville Kinsmen Club calls members to order. They have dined well, and are ready for the business session of the meeting. Routine work is discussed. Future activities of the club are aired for approval. Community singing rings through the well-appointed dining room. Then a young professional man rises to his feet. He is a prominent young physician of the city, and popular among his fellow-members of the club. His face wears a serious look. He speaks.

"As chairman of your Service Committee, I beg leave to report that a larger than usual number of eye-patients have been cared for during the past six months. In a number of cases eyeglasses have been furnished to a large number of deserving cases, children whose parents cannot afford to pay for treatment, let alone glasses that are vitally necessary if the sight of these children is to be saved."

"Gentlemen," he continues, "I hope you realize what splendid work you are doing among these under-privileged children of our city and district. It would surprise the general public if we were to publish what work is being done by our club along these lines. And the number of cases are increasing. In fact, during the past three months they have reached the proportion where every cent this club has allotted to me for this purpose has been utilized. I must add that this money has been used in the proper manner, and only the most deserving cases have benefited by it. But so far not one single child has been turned down. Last month two serious cases were brought to my notice and these children will have to be sent to Toronto to a specialist before glasses can be given them. I now ask you for a further appropriation of funds to be used in this work."

The President—"Gentlemen you have heard the report. What is your wish."

A member—"How much money have we in the treasury?"

President—"I think a little over three hundred dollars."

Member, rising to his feet—"I move that three hundred dollars be transferred to the Eye Clinic Committee chairman for furtherance of his work.

Two members rise. "I second the motion" they say in unison. The motion passes unanimously.

SCENE 3

Same as scene 1—A neighbor dashes into the room. John and Mary look up in surprise: "What's wrong?" they query. The neighbor, breathlessly—"I think I have got good news for you. A friend of ours who works downtown was telling us last night of reading in the paper about this Kinsmen Club and the work they do. Do you know "excitedly", I think they will do something for Billy if you tell them how you are fixed and all about his eyes." John—"What do you mean?" Mary jumps to her feet, new hope in her eyes.

Neighbor—"Well, the paper report says how the club sends a doctor to look at children's eyes, especially if their parents can't afford to pay a regular doctor, and listen to this, they even supply glasses if the child needs them."

Mary—"Are you sure of this?"

Neighbor—"Yes, that is what was in the paper, and a friend says it is true.

TWO DAYS LATER

A knock at the door startles Mary. She opens it to see a young man, case in hand. "I am a doctor, and member of the Kinsmen Club, I understand you have a child here who is suffering with eye-trouble," he says. Mary—"Yes, that is right. But we cannot afford to have special treatment for him?"

The Doctor—"Do not worry about that. Bring your son to my office tomorrow afternoon for examination. If he needs special treatment, the Kinsmen Club will defray all expenses, and also provide glasses or an operation if needed."

Mary, tearfully—"Thank you so much, and may God bless you and the members of your club."

SCENE 4 SOMETIME LATER

Members of the Kinsmen Club are meeting at an emergency session. The president is speaking.

"Gentlemen, as you may be aware, the consistent drain on our finances due to the increased number of children being cared for by the Club's Eye Clinic, has depleted the club coffers to an alarmingly low figure. Something must be done, because this work must not be allowed to stop. With your cooperation, and the public of this city and district that has always been generous in response to worthy causes, we intend to sponsor a Kid-Kar Derby that will not only provide an incentive for the mechanically-minded youth of Belleville, but will also carry an appeal to the sports-minded, and other residents. Later we will sponsor an entry for the Canadian championships with the winner representing his native country at the world title events being held in Akron, Ohio." (Note. This became an actual reality as the events of the past few weeks have proved.)

"We cannnot let the kiddies of Belleville down. This work must go on. We will appeal to the public knowing full well that we will as in the past, get their fullest cooperation. Now gentlemen it is up to you. Go out and work, not for yourselves, but for those children who otherwise would be forced to go through life with the serious impediment of defective eyesight, or who knows, blindness." Curtain.

NEWS ODDITIES AND BRIEFS

MAGISTRATE GIVES DOLLAR TO EACH MAN

Philadelphia, Aug. 3 (AP)—Explaining the odds were against him, Magistrate Charles W. McBride gave a dollar to each of four men "to cheer them up after they had been held by accident three hours longer than necessary to answer charges of drunkenness. They were:

"LITTLE AUSTRIA" IN AUSTRALIAN ALPS?

Sydney, Australia, Aug. 3 (CP-Reuter)—Creation of a "Little Austria" in the Australian Alps has been suggested by H. J. Lambie, Director of the New South Wales government tourist bureau.

There are 2,000 miles of skiable snow on the Kosciusko Massif, in south-eastern Australia, and Lambie proposes that a new Alpine province, peopled by Austrians would cater for winter sports, should be founded there.

ONLY FLAG RECEIVED AT COLONY OFFICE

Johannesburg, South Africa, Aug. 3 (CP-Reuter)—The first and only specimen of southern Rhodesia's flag in the world has been received at the colony's publicity office here.

The flag is intended for use abroad and is not used in the colony where the Union Jack is flown on all occasions.

The National Emblem is blue flag with the Union Jack in the corner. On the blue ground appears the lion "couchant"—a green shield bearing at the top a lion rampant between two chistles—and a pickaxe in gold is shown below.

CHARGE FAIR CO-OPERATE IN THEFT OF FABRICS

Windsor, Ont., Aug. 3 (CP)—Two Windsor youths charged with co-operating in stealing Sunday newspapers will face trial Monday, Police say Gregory Loretto, 16, employed by a Windsor news company, threw papers from the back of a truck to Edward Andrews, 17. Loretto was charged with theft of the papers, Andrews with receiving stolen goods. They appeared in court yesterday and were remanded.

Why the Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

Sail-boating in August! August as a whole is a poor month for those sailors who like to show their keels, because of all the months of the year, August has the lightest winds. This is because lightest winds (calms) are where there are so few well-defined colours (low pressure areas) and anticyclones (high pressure areas) passing over the country. These make great differences in pressure which makes wind. A difference of pressure of only one-half an inch in the mercury column between places 600 miles apart is sufficient to cause high winds.

THE WEATHER

Toronto, Aug. (CP)—Showers or thunderstorms have occurred in many parts of Eastern Canada, in Manitoba, Southeastern Saskatchewan and the Peace River District. The weather has been warm from Manitoba eastward to the Maritimes and decidedly warm in Southern Ontario, but comparatively cool in Alberta and Saskatchewan. Low pressure covers the Northwest Territories and the Rainy River district and pressure is also low over Labrador, but relatively high over the Rocky Mountain states and the southeast portion of the continent.

Lake winds remain southerly to westerly winds; mostly fair and warm with local thunderstorms Thursday.; fresh westerly winds partly cloudy and a little cooler Thursday; fresh westerly winds.

Manitoba—Partly cloudy and not so warm today and Friday; probably light scattered showers.

Pinkish Rust, New Color, Called Corraline, for Winter Wear

Paris, Aug. 3—(AP)— Pinkish rust, a new colour named corraline and sponsored by Patau, was shown in the winter style displays.

Also featured were greens in bottle and olive shades. Braid rings gave a military touch to black suits and fur coats.

Much fur was employed on velveteen, marine and ermine-dotted coats and suits. There were many front-draped skirts with bloused backs, and some had bishop sleeves and peplum skirts. Enamelled flower clips were favored as jewelry.

Many day skirts were circular-flared. Some very tight evening skirts were shown, but full skirts also shared attention.

Lelong showed striking full-skirted evening dresses in emerald lace, pink tulle and white moire. Much velvet was used for day wear in wine reds and duck greens.

ALASKA AIR BASE FOR U.S. FORCES IS ENVISIONED

Asst. Secretary For War Johnson Will Study Road Through Canada

2,200-MILE ROAD

Washington, Aug. 3—(AP)— An aerial trip to Alaska by Louis Johnson, assistant United States Secretary of War, provided a hint today the administration was considering development of a great army air base in the far north.

Johnson said he would leave about Aug. 15 to inspect army posts and projects in Alaska, and at the same time would study the feasibility of both the base and of a projected all-weather road from the United States northwest through Canada to Alaska.

Such a highway, in addition to its obvious touristic, would prove vital in rushing men and munitions to Alaska in time of war. Such a project has been favored strongly by Premier Pattullo of British Columbia.

Decries Sectionalism in Interview at Goldbridge, Thrusday

FALLS BRIDGE ISSUE

Goldbridge, B.C., Aug. 3—(CP)—Premier Mitchell Hepburn of Ontario was en route to Vancouver by motor-car today, leaving behind him here a plea for handling of Canadian problems on a national basis rather than on the basis of sectional interest.

In an interview last night, the Premier claimed "a group of western Senators" and House of Commons members had brought about a delay in the construction of the Falls bridge here at Niagara Falls, withdrawal of plans for expenditure of 15,000-horsepower of electrical energy and had attempted to hold up construction of an international bridge at Sarnia, Ont.

Mercury Climbs Up But No Prostrations

While the mercury hovering at an official highest mark of 85 degrees and the humidity extremely dense no reports of heat prostrations were received by the Bellville General Hospital today. Belleville physicians also stated no serious cases of overcome by heat existing the stage of prostration had been reported. With the Wednesday half-holiday, available to many citizens, Front Street was devoid of heavy vehicular traffic at an early hour this afternoon as sweltering folks sought more comfortable to the various beaches and country shade havens in an effort to effect relief from the oppressive hot spell that has enveloped Ontario for many days. Victoria Park, the Belleville Beaches, Roseomore and even Zwick's Island were over-crowded as early hours this afternoon, filled with sweltering citizens seeking along the cool breezes of the Bay of Quinte

UNDER ARREST

After a stiff flat battle with police, Oscar Campbell, ABOVE, alleged murderer and bank robber, along with four alleged members of the Campbell gang were arrested, at their hideout in a summer cottage near Missouri on Kara, Ont. Campbell is wanted in Montreal for the alleged murder of a companion in crime and in addition is suspected of numerous armed robberies. Police are now searching for his brother, Melville.

TROOPS RETURN FROM BARRIEFIELD

Arriving in Belleville via a Canadian National special troop train members of the Hastings and Prince Edward and Midland Regiments, arrived in the city at noon today after spending ten days under canvas at the annual training Barriefield Camp near Kingston. At the Belleville C.N.R. depot the special train was split into two sections, one continuing to Picton, the headquarters of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment while the other section continued to Bowmanville for basing members of the Midland Regiment. The local troops were met at the station by three large buses and transported to their home via bus.

Hail Falls 3 Inches Deep, Causes Loss, Chickens Killed, Crops Hailed Out

Regina, Aug. 3—(CP)— Hail which piled up three inches deep on level land battered crops in a wide territory south of Melville to north of the Canadian Pacific Railway main line yesterday causing damage running into thousands of dollars.

Loss in the Neudorf district was put by farmers at close to $100,000, where crops and gardens were hailed out and chickens killed.

But one same storm which brought hail in one district reaped heavy showers in a wide central area extending from west of Regina to Wolseley and as far south as Weyburn, and as far north as Southey.

Though neighboring farms were struck by the hail storm the farm of Hon. J. G. Gardiner, Federal Minister of Agriculture, at Lemberg, escaped damage as much as could be ascertained last night.

At Neudorf hail piled up three inches deep on the level in a storm which swept an area seven miles wide from Lemberg to Kirsay and south of Melville.

Fifty farmers in the Neudorf district had part or all of their crop and garden hailed out.

On the farm of Fred Mohr 65 chickens were killed by the stones and telephone lines in some areas were put out of order.

RUSSIA DECLARES CONSEQUENCES MAY BE SERIOUS

Warns She is Responsible if Further Hostilities Take Place

DEFENCE OF TERRITORY

Moscow Declares Japan is Aggressor on Soviet Territory

By The Canadian Press

Russia sought today to place on Japan's shoulders responsibility for further conflict along the Siberian border as hostilities were carried into the fifth day.

Reporting fighting had ceased at 10 a.m., the Japanese claimed the Russian forces had retreated 1,500 yards, Moscow, naming Japan the aggressor, declared the enemy had been "subjected to artillery fire and air bombing" while crossing "into Soviet territory."

The Russian communique warned of "serious consequences" if the "provocations" continue.

Denial Bridge Attacked

Reports Russian planes had bombed Japanese Korea, including a bridge near Seoul, the capital, were denied both in Moscow and Tokyo. The Japanese government ordered a partial "black-out" for Tokyo, Yokohama and all of central, western and southern Japan as an air raid precaution. It will be effective nightly until further notice.

The Japanese government sent its second protest in 24 hours to Moscow and announced it hoped to localize the trouble and settle it by diplomatic steps.

Peaceful Settlement Sought

Moscow, Aug. 3—(AP)—A Russian communique asserted today that "serious consequences" would be unavoidable if Japanese "provocations" continued on the Siberian frontier, but, nevertheless, there were apparent indications of Moscow's wish to reach a peaceful settlement.

Official quarters discouraged any predictions of a major war, and one newspaper which reliably reflects official opinion recalled that the Soviet government already had indicated a willingness to negotiate a new demarcation of the frontier with Japanese-advised Manchoukuo and Japanese forces.

Soviet workers, however, in strongly phrased resolutions demanded resistance to aggression. Pravda, the Communist newspaper, printed two pages of them today, with an editorial that "if war is imposed on us by the rapacious Fascist wolves, the whole Soviet people will rise as one man in defence of the fatherland."

At a garden party given at Paris in honor of the visit of King George and Queen Elizabeth, this splendid picture was snapped of the King and the president of France, Albert Lebrun. That the occasion was a happy one is attested by the broad smiles. The feathered hat that protecting itself into the left side of the picture, rests on the head of Queen Elizabeth.

FOREIGN JEWS ARE BARRED FROM ITALIAN SCHOOLS

Foreign Hebrew Students With Those in Italy Under Ban

NO CITIZENSHIP BAR

47,000 Jews Who Are Italian Citizens Not Affected

Rome, Aug. 3—(AP)—The government announced today all foreign Hebrew students, including those residing in Italy, to all Italian schools of all grades is prohibited."

Program of Efficiency

At the same time it announced a new program to increase the efficiency of the Italian armed forces. A communique said:

"At recent meetings held by Il Duce with the Minister of Finance and the Chief of General Staff of War and Air a further program to increase the efficiency of our armed forces was concluded."

It gave no other details.

"The ban on Jewish students presumably does not apply to the 47,000 Jews who are Italian citizens.

The Fascist race doctrine issued July 14 by a group of Fascist professors proclaimed Italians were an aryan race and denied Jews are members of "the Italian race."

There has been no move, however, to exclude them from Italian citizenship.

Huge Turtle Keeps Firemen Studying Nature

Firemen of No. 1 fire hall have turned naturalist lately in an attempt to study and classify a huge snapping turtle of nearly wash tub size which always finds a haven in appearance in the shallow water of the river at the rear of the building.

Giving the appearance of a relic of prehistoric days, the ponderous turtle, which is equipped with a huge fin down the centre of its mossy-green shell on the back of almost keel-like proportions, is a fearless protuberance is evidently a malformation of the shell and gives the slow-moving creature a peculiarly interesting appearance from a zoological viewpoint. Its huge beak appears strong enough to crush the foot of any full grown man.

Scotland Yard Fakes Tourist, 'Con' Men Rush in, are Caught

London, Aug. 3—(CP)—A fake Tyrolese tourist has put the fear of the law into London's "share-pushers" who sell worthless stocks to visiting yokels.

Scotland Yard dressed its most German-looking detective in a good carloon German costume, including Tyrolean hat and spectacles it then sent him with a fist full of guide books to see the sights.

Confidence men, seeing a man who appeared to be a wealthy dolt as well as a foreigner who might have language trouble, made for him with keen expectations—only to be "conned" themselves and arrested.

STREETS PADDED TO PREVENT GIRL MAKING JUMP

17 Year Emily Arkwell Causes Anxious Moments

SEIZED FROM WINDOW

London, Aug. 3 — (AP)— Emily Arkwell, 17, gave policemen and firemen some anxious moments today as she emulated John Ward's spectacular New York suicide, and defied attempts to rescue her from a ledge 50 feet above the ground.

Clad only in a nightgown, the girl—an inmate of the East Croydon Moral Welfare Home, climbed from her room to the ledge and threatened to jump if anyone went near her.

As a crowd gathered, firemen worked to prevent a jump. They threw a lungeing net and padded the street with mattresses and pillows collected from nearby houses.

Extension Ladder

Two extension ladders were run up to the ledge as the girl, clinging to the ivy-clad wall and shivering in the cold dawn breeze, again threatened to jump. The crowd missed a heart-beat several times as the girl swayed and almost fell.

But unlike the young New Yorker who plunged to his death from a 17-storey ledge, the rescue attempts had a happy climax. While the girl's attention was distracted from below, watchers reached out a window and seized her wrists.

CLING TO PUNT AS IT OVERTURNS

Cherry Valley Men Hang Grimly to Boat as it Drifts Ashore

Picton, Ont., Aug. 3—(CP)—Carman Weldon and Lloyd Bulpitt, Cherry Valley, had a thrilling ride on a small borrowed punt for more than two hours yesterday after the craft overturned in East Lake. The small boat, a flat-bottomed craft,

The men, who were fishing, were thrown into the lake when a huge wave swamped their craft. They removed their shoes and part of their clothing and then climbed on to the thwarts and hung grimly on while the boat drifted shoreward.

F. Davey Diamond Elected Deputy Grand Master

John Smith, N.B., Aug. 3.—(CP)—Reginald V. Harris, Halifax, was re-elected Supreme Grand Master of the Supreme Grand Council of Canada and the United Orders of the Temple and Malta today at the 35th Assembly of Canadian Knights Templar.

F. Davey Diamond, Belleville, Ontario, was elected Deputy Grand Master.

'Genuine' Missing Link is Found In Sterkfontein Caves in Transvaal

Pretoria, South Africa, Aug. 3—(CP-Reuters)—"Australopithecus Transvaalensis," the species whose remains were recently discovered by Dr. Robert Broom in Sterkfontein caves, is the genuine "missing link" in the opinion of Professor W. K. Gregory, American anatomist, who has come to South Africa to study it.

"The expression 'missing link' is not accurate one today, because Dr. Broom has found it—it is no longer missing," said Professor Gregory.

"I can definitely say this form of australopithecus combines intermediate features previously known in both apes and men.

"It may turn out to be a complete man on the one hand and complete ape on the other. Still, it is a combination of features which we have in the past ordinarily associated with two distinct types."

GOLD SCRAMBLE HALTED TODAY ON LONDON MART

Financial Interests Are Inclined to Credit it to Rearming

'WILD RUMORS'

By EDWIN JOHNSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, Aug. 3—(CP Cable)—Sudden scramble for gold was temporarily halted in the London market this morning when the Bank of England threw in heavy offerings to sell the dollar at $4.85½ to the pound, the highest quotation reached since last April. Yesterday's closing rate was $4.87.

The Bank's action came after gold had reached 142 shillings half penny, also the best quotation in several months, and had a prompt steadying influence.

Financial interests professed to be mystified by the latest demand for the dollar and for gold, but generally were inclined to attribute it to continental gold hoarders and a crop of "wild rumors." The rumors in circulation were:

Rearmament Explanation

The powers adhering to the tripartite monetary agreement are planning general currency devaluation in terms of gold as a means of financing international trade.

Reports the sterling-dollar rate will be allowed to find its level at the old par value of $4.86 2-3 to the pound; and possibilities of an open rupture between Russia and Japan over the present frontier dispute.

Other factors contributing to firmness of the dollar included increased demand for Unite States stocks on this side and improved commercial demand for the dollar.

Commenting on the latest market activity, the financial editor of the News Chronicle, says "the dollar-sterling-dollar triangle offers a vista of interesting developments."

TWO KILLED

Two U. S. navy fliers were killed and a third escaped injury when their torpedo airplane crashed into San Diego Bay, front L.A. and escaped injury by making a parachute jump of a few hundred yards. Navy men are pictured here surveying the wreckage of the airplane.

FEAR OF RUSSIA SEEMS TO GROW AMONG JAPANESE

Street Lights Almost Entirely Out Under Ruling

DARKENED NIGHT

Total Black-Out Possible Under Authority of Local Police

Tokyo, Aug. 3 (CP-Havas)—Anti-aircraft defence headquarters today ordered a total "black-out" for Tokyo, Yokohama, and all of central, western and southern Japan, nightly until further notice.

All outside lights were ordered extinguished with the exception of lights on vehicles and at police stations.

Street lighting will be almost entirely eliminated and 100 per cent black-out may be ordered in the discretion of all local police authorities.

Nodthwest Japan Is Exempt

Only northwest Japan was exempted from black-out orders.

The fear Russian bombers might appear out of the western mists under the air raid precaution is not to be growing.

There was a report this morning that Soviet airplanes bombed a Japanese island deep in Korean territory, but this was not confirmed. Korean army headquarters at Seoul reported no raids.

FATAL CRASH NEAR BRIGHTON

S. E. Davidson of Foothill, Passenger in Car, Dies Instantly

S. E. Davidson, Foothill Ont., was instantly killed and his daughter Miss Dr. O. Myers and Mrs. Jack Stuart, also of Foothill, sustained injuries when the automobile in which they were riding collided head-on with a large westbound truck, one and one half miles Brighton, late yesterday afternoon. Mrs. Myers and her son were taken to the Belleville General Hospital where it was later disclosed Mrs. Myers had sustained a broken nose while Stuart Myers, her son, had received a fractured right arm.

The impact into the death of S. E. Davidson, aged 72 years, occurred before Coroner Dr. H. G. Fundle at Brighton last night and following identification by Dr. Myers, of Foothill, son-in-law of the deceased, adjourned.

It is said by County Constable Robinson of Brighton, that the large truck driven westerly by Herbert Barkader, Colbeck Ave., Toronto, had veered suddenly to the left in order to avoid striking a dog, but had nearly back towards his own side of the highway when the latter bound motor car, said by police to have been driven by Mrs. Myers, collided with the truck.

The automobile was a total wreck while the truck, which turned completely over in the centre of the pavement, was badly damaged, although the driver escaped without serious injury, however.

Drs. Forrester and Stobie are in attendance to the two injured persons in the hospital, who were attended at the scene of the accident by Dr. Clark of Brighton.

Motorcycle Patrolman Sam Irvine of Belleville, investigated.

CROP DAMAGE NOT SO HEAVY

Crop damage in this section, reported heavy following last week's pounding rain storms and high winds which flattened standing grain crops through a wide area, is not as severe as at first believed, according to reports from outlying districts. Though much of the grain was flattened and muddied in the fields by the heavy rains, owners report it straightening again and will be fit to cut if given suitable weather for the next few days.

City and District News

July Customs Collections Up

Better business conditions in this section during the month of July this year over the same month one year ago are indicated by customs receipts collected during the month at the local port. During July just ended collections reached a high total of $89,500.84, while during the month of July one year ago, collections totalled $48,100.84.

Building Permits Total $6,100

With a total of $6,100.00 involved in new construction, the month of July just ended was officially entered in city hall records as a "fair" building month. During the month permits were issued by the office of the building inspector to W. H. James, 394 Dufferin Ave., for construction of a new home at an estimated cost of $5,000; Mr. Spink, 386 Dufferin, for construction of a verandah, at $200; W. E. Faulkner, double garage at $500; Clinton McBride, 43 Holloway, dwelling, $1,800, and Knox Presbyterian Church, boiler room and coal bunkers, $600.

MANY TOURISTS VISIT STORES

Economic Signs Good if Tourists Are Criterion

"Tourists passing through the city in their heaviest numbers of the season at present are constituting a large majority of shoppers in local stores. It was estimated today by the owner of one downtown store, and the proprietor of a popular lunch room who reports business this year considerably in excess of one year ago. Many of the customers who have been stopping over in Belleville are taking their second and third trip through Belleville, finding this overland Ontario loop one of the most delightful of a summer vacation trip.

"There seems no sign of a depression where most of my customers come from judging by the bank visits they are carrying, and from which they are spending freely," stated the proprietor.

TRAILER DAYS PAST, PRESENT

Arthur L. Baragar of Syracuse Speaks of Experiences

Comparing the pioneer days of motor travel by travel by car to the modern equipment and facilities of that great industry today, Arthur L. Baragar, of Syracuse, N.Y., spoke to the Belleville Kiwanis relating his experiences with the cabin trailer trip completed in 1922, in comparison with conditions today.

"In 1922 there were no facilities to accommodate the cabin trailer tourists, but today all over the continent, where thousands not only travel by cabin trailer, but many make their homes, the tourist camps and cabin trailer parks alone are catering to this floating population and realizing a handsome profit for their efforts. Every enterprising city today has modern facilities and conveniences to offer the cabin trailer visitors," pointed out Mr. Baragar as he later told of his pioneer trip across the north western States into California and return to Florida in a cabin trailer trail in 1932, six years ago when the now-popular mode of travel is so extensively used and accepted. Mr. Baragar was introduced to the Kiwanis Club by Past President Ed Logan and thanked on behalf of the club by Ralph Harris and also President Bob Boynton.

Kiwanian Geo. Griffin, secretary of the Belleville Kiwanis Club, made his report after attending the Pacific coast Kiwanis convention held in San Francisco, Cal. this year. During his three weeks trip to the Pacific coast Mr. Griffin visited Jasper Park, Vancouver, Victoria, Los Angeles, the movie colony at Hollywood and the Grand Canyon and Chicago while enroute home.

The booster of the day was Kiwanian Joe Imrak, proprietor of the Belleville Laundry Company, who tendered "coffin nails", in the matter of cigarettes, he said, to the lucky prize winners of the day, who were Ed Logan and Bruce Lattimer.

ENTERPRISE STORE ROBBED OF $400

Fenwick Bros'. Safe Blown Early Tuesday Morning

Safe robbers, who made entrance through a rear window, blew open the safe in the general store of Lloyd Fenwick Bros. at Enterprise, early Tuesday morning and stole $400.00 in cash. Provincial Police were informed yesterday.

Investigations by Sergeant Harry Thompson and Constable Don Carruthers of the Ontario Provincial Police last night revealed the robbers had blown open the safe by igniting a charge of gun powder placed in a container near the safe door handle. Although the discharge aroused villagers and the owners of the general store, who resides near by, no attempt was made to ascertain the cause of the explosion was made, villagers have contended, when believed the noise to be a motor backfiring.

The explosion occurred about 1.30 a.m. Tuesday, but the robbery was not discovered until the Fenwick Bros., proprietors of the general store at Enterprise, found the door had been blown off its hinges and upon opening for business on Tuesday. Provincial Police today revealed the job was one of the cleanest seen in these parts in years. "It was undoubtedly the work of professional safe-blowers," reported Sergeant Thompson.

Obituary

LATE MRS. JOHN LAIRD

Queenboro, Aug. 3—The funeral of the late Mrs. John Laird which was held at St. Mary's Anglican Church on Monday afternoon was well attended by friends and relatives. The service was conducted by the Rector Rev. W. O. Hope Swayne, of Tweed, assisted by Rev. Redding of Bannockburn.

The bearers were Messrs. Henry and James Rousebom, Harry and Murray Declair, Will and Orval Clark.

Interment was made in Greenwood cemetery.

'Soap Box' Entries Officially Weighed

Direct from headquarters of the Toledo Scales Company in Toronto, J. E. Anderson, Canadian scales engineer, and Mr. A. Mead, company mechanical serviceman, arrived at the all-Canadian "soap box derby" headquarters this afternoon equipped with a new modern Toledo scale, to be used in the official weighing of all cars entered in tomorrow's "soap box derby".

The weighing of the racing cars will take place at 162 Front street this afternoon and tomorrow morning, rules and regulations calling for no car entered to weigh more than 160 pounds, including the weight of the driver thereof. All day "soap box" officials could be seen lugging measuring the length and breadth of the entries' cars, many of which have been found not constructed to regulation scale and have been ordered either withdrawn or remodelled before noon tomorrow.

AFTER THE TORRENTS COMES TIDAL WAVE

The Deluge, Aug. 3 (CP) —Whom torrential rains soaked this district, Port Burwell campers on the shore of Lake Erie was a bed time, but the worst was to follow. A mighty tidal wave came in from Lake Erie, and and swamped camping grounds. Many were trapped on the beach, and when the water receded, were left buried to their soles in sand.

Day Before Soap Box Derby Finds Busy Scene Enacted As Entries are Checked Over

Tiny Duplicates of Automobile Racers Reflect Infinite Care, Ingenuity

STREAMLINE USED

Construction of Cars Interesting Process Both From Views of Engineering

Kinsmen Derby headquarters became an official entity this morning at 160 Front Street, a temporary vacant business establishment, next The Daily Ontario Intelligencer office, which building had no disapproval on the score of Soap Box Derby officials, as they set their young hopeful builders and intended racers.

Members of the Kinsmen Club entrusted with the arrangements for the all-Canadian championship race sat six o'clock on Thursday afternoon, (Daylight Saving Time) at the task of bringing some semblance of order out of the necessary chaos attendant upon such official matters as weighing in and cracking the small whip when racing masquerades.

"Checking of Specifications

Prominent in the work were Chairman Wm. Hurst and Elmer LaBarr who were assisted in the close checking of specifications by Mr. Lorne McDougall, president of the local Y's men's club and Orland Pinkston of the local Rotary Club. Also assisting were Mr. Jack Mc-Veigh of the Kiwanis Club and H. M. Carty of General Motors, Oshawa. Two representatives of the Canadian Toledo Scale Company, Toronto took over the work of officially weighing in the machines.

To Dr. Ralph L. Bird, President Cleo Colling, Don Roe and other members of the Executive of the Club a large share of the work which will be continued through this afternoon until all entries have been weighed, checked and either given the necessary approval or placed in the "dud" class.

Those Which Do Not Pass

What to do with the machines which do not pass the necessary specifications became a problem for members of the Club this morning. Not all machines received the necessary permit through, some based in the building of the racer. These were placed on one end of the large room until an examination could be made and advice given by those in charge of the race.

"The best thing we can do with these is to pass 'em by," said Chairman Wm. Hurst and Elmer LaBarr which suggestion met the approval of President Cleo and other members.

It was tentatively decided to hold the special race for the machines which do not qualify for the regular races and put up a suitable cash prize of ten dollars in payment for the gallant efforts of their racers.

Construction Interesting

Tiny duplicates of the regulation automobile racers, the soap box cars, the majority, reflect the great care and infinite pains in their manufacture expended by their owners. Of nearly all shapes and designs, for the most part builders have adhered to the principles of streamlining, and many of the better machines showed that builders followed the plans for the construction of the racers which were given in several issues of The Daily Ontario Intelligencer.

But there were other machines in which young hopefuls sat and radiated their pride while swathing their turn for checking which did not conform outwardly to the accepted stream line principles, even though their mechanical specifications were found to be correct under the judges' gauges and rules. Machine, which reflected the ideas of Jacob's coat and were as square in design as the proverbial soap box for which the Club derives its name. "They'll go just as fast as these fancy ones", plaied one budding builder whose modest unsquared front box-back creation was guaranteed to win fame of the kiddie car.

"We're well satisfied with arrangements and Belleville should have a real race, one of the best ever held in Canada", stated President Cleo Colling during a temporary pause. "Everything is set for tomorrow night, and by this afternoon the last arrangements will have been completed."

It was a busy, hectic day of last minute finals which will culminate tomorrow afternoon in the biggest day for Belleville juveniles.

FORMER RADIO AMATEURS TO BE AT THE CAPITOL

Galaxy of Singers, Dancers and Entertainers on The Stage

Featuring Canada's future radio and stage stars of tomorrow a complete program by former amateur radio artists, who have gained prominence on various Dominion wide amateur radio broadcast contests wherein they won honors, will make another of those outstanding stage and screen presentations at the Capitol Theatre stage commencing this evening and continuing with three performances daily until Friday.

These youthful former amateurs are still struggling for recognition in the radio and stage world high in the home of some day attaining the zenith of their aspirations—Hollywood, where singers, dancers, musicians and impersonators of high ability and talent have been heard on various Canadian radio broadcasts many of whom today are making their professional mark in the chosen profession. These artists always command a large gallery in Belleville, where local talent is appreciated and accepted.

Included on the stage program commencing at the Capitol Theatre this evening are such recognized radio amateurs as Charlie Sullivan, Canada's outstanding radio baritone; the personality girl songstress Helen Vassair who has endeared her to many hearts of local theatre-goers with his presentation of the unforgettable "Rosalie"; Helen Vassair petit damsel whose slaying of seven songs has endeared her to many over the other waves; there will be Blanche Harris, who recently joins, and every night there rallies to the uttermost, the grave significance of a New Year's Eve; you know though bitter experience that how the gunners in field gray have their ranges, that the first shell must surely descend squarely upon them. The hill on which they kneel was under observation from enemy eyes. And to linger there a moment longer was to invite death or wounds. Close at hand was a deep trench in which these soldiers could find comparative safety, but the shadow of death which loomed above them. But not a man stirred from his knees. And in the natural. He who denies this proposition has read the history of humanity in vain. In vain will Marxism—the red scourge of Russia, the sworn enemy of God and, the soul attempt to infect this country with its deadly poison. We behold its workings in the destruction wrought in Spain, where the so-called Loyalist government the puppet state of Moscow has dyed its hands red with the blood of the religious, in vain, will Hitlerism with its worship of the state and its attempted enslavement of the religion of both Protestant and Catholic, seek a foothold here. In vain will Fascism, claiming for Caesar's but also the things that are God's strike root in this land. No! neither the red banner of the Hammer and the Sickle nor the Swastika nor the Fasces will ever float over this Canadian nation, which has been dedicated to Christian freedom by the immortal sacrifice of the Canadian Corps. And on the trumpet of Remembrance sounds down the years, may generations to come renew their homage and gratitude to those whose achievements carried the name and fame of Canada to the four corners of the earth. "If I forget thee O Jerusalem—let my right hand be forgotten."

'Heart of Nation Cherishes In Perpetual Remembrance Scroll of Her Sons Who Died'

Rt. Rev. Monsignor J. F. Nicholson Delivers Impressive Address to 7,000 Ex-Service Men Who Attended Military Mass at Canadian Corps Reunion—Reference to a Memorable Mass Held at Canal du Hem—Canada is a Land of Free Men Cherishing Democracy And a Christian Land.

Rt. Rev. J. F. Nicholson, V.G., Mass. M.C., in addressing seven thousand ex-service men who attended the Military Mass celebrated on Sunday morning by Bishop Peirie Couturier of Alexandria in Varsity Stadium in connection with the Canadian Corps Re-Union took as his text:—"If I forget thee, O Jerusalem, let my right hand be forgotten." From the 136th Psalm, 5th verse.

"The heart of a nation," the speaker said, "has ever cherished in perpetual remembrance the glorious scroll of its chosen sons who have died for justice and liberty. The divine beauty of sacrifice sanctified by religion is ever enshrined in our memory. Genius has consecrated its efforts to perpetuate the memorial to the brave.

"Catholic soldiers of the Canadian Corps. You have gathered under the vault of Heaven as you did so often in bygone days, under other skies, to assist at the holy sacrifice of the Mass and renew a renewal of that sacrifice of Calvary, for Christ, the son of God, died for our salvation. We have prayed for the living and for the dead. We look back through the arches of the years, and as I speak we seem to keep vigil, for each with his our thoughts of other days and of those near and dear to us who have loved long since and lost awhile. Yet somehow the past ever seems present this morning and we behold in the misty vista of the years the old battalion swing past; rank after rank the Canadian Corps pass by triumphant and unconquerable. We hear echoes of once familiar voices the eyes that shone like stars and glow, the cheerful hearts now broken" and we relive the days of yesterday in memories unto the end.

"Those days of yesterday are dead by the Angel of Peace spread his wings in benediction over a war torn world. Our thoughts go over-seas to the silent bivouac of the dead, now deep by the banks of the Somme, in Belgian fields, on the slopes of Passchendaele or Kemmel, or in the meadows of Cambrai. Their resting place is Canadian soil hallowed by the sacrifice of Canadian blood.

"Monuments may rise and tablets be set up to them in their own land but on far-off shores there is a Canadian Corner where the name or chisel has traced; it is engraved in the hearts of men; in the memory of God.

"The speaker referred to the sacrifices made by those forth from their country's call, some in youth, some in vigorous manhood. And then he said: "Many a mother's heart dearest they entered the grim unknown and left it for the gloom of Calvary comes the dawn of resurrection and the priest said "I am the Resurrection and the life." "This morning as the solemn words of the holy sacrifice of the Mass were uttered by the bishop of Alexandria, one thought in the memory of another Field Mass, celebrated on a day of Gods by a hillside by the banks of the Canal du Hem. A group of Canadian soldiers are kneeling about a vested priest, who stands before a rude altar, lashed to the limber of an ammunition boxes. The opening words of the Mass are being recited and in the stillness of the morning broken only by the roar of a shell which explodes nearby on the right. The messenger of destruction is rapidly followed by another which bursts on the left. In quick succession the third and fourth shell crashes behind and a fourth roars overhead to shake the very air. That altar and these worshippers have been "bracketed" by enemy guns, and every gun there rallies to the uttermost, the grave significance of a New Year's Eve; you know though bitter experience that how the gunners in field gray have their ranges, that the first shell must surely descend squarely upon them. The hill on which they knel was under observation from enemy eyes. And to linger there a moment longer was to invite death or wounds. Close at hand was a deep trench in which these soldiers could find comparative safety, but the shadow of death which loomed above them. But not a man stirred from his knees. And in

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Ravin' to go

The liver should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You get constipated. Poisons get into the body, and you feel sour, sunk and the world looks punk.

A mere bowel movement doesn't always get at the cause. You need something that works on the liver, too. Ask for Dr. Caldwell's Carter's Little Liver Pills to get those two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up". Harmless and gentle, they make the bile flow freely. They do the work of calomel but have no calomel or mercury in them. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name. Refuse anything else. 12c.

THE ONTARIO INTELLIGENCER

THE DAILY ONTARIO INTELLIGENCER is published every afternoon (Sunday and holidays excepted) at The Ontario Intelligencer Building.

FEWER FATALITIES SO FAR

It is indicated in a preliminary report of the Ontario Department of Highways that there appears to be a growing consciousness of the necessity for safe driving. The first seven months of this year showed 126 fewer fatalities than in the same period of last year or 265 this year to 391 last year.

July 1937 was known as "black July" for its 101 deaths, the worst on record.

Ontario Civic Holiday weekend motor fatalities were low as compared with the figures in some of the other provinces.

It is to be hoped that this indication in Ontario reports does mean that the driving public is thinking very much of safe driving. One would not want it to be a mere chance or even to think it is a mere chance that there are fewer deaths.

There has just come from the Department an article "Dead Men Do Tell Tales". Here the dread story is told in these words, which try to make the reader-driver or pedestrian of the roads and highways realize the horror of an accident.

"Their lips are motionless, their voices stilled, but dead men—and women and children—do tell tales. Especially when death has come suddenly and brutally in an automobile accident.

"Lifeless, mangled bodies, crushed under the wheels of a motor car, strewn about in a tangled mess of crumpled metal and shattered glass, tell grim, horrible tales.

"They tell tales of needless death—death that was the result of carelessness, neglect, thoughtlessness or inconsideration, for those human weaknesses are responsible every time traffic on city streets or country highways claims another life.

"Few people seem to listen to the tales the dead tell, however. Perhaps it is because of the horror which must necessarily accompany their tales, but more often than not it is because the ego in most people places them above their fellow men.

"'It couldn't happen to me,' they think, whether they say it or not.

"But couldn't it? Shove that ego into the background for a while and do some serious thinking. Then you may realize that you can be killed as easily as anyone else and that you also can kill. Of course, it isn't a pleasant thought, but it is true.

"Death has no special preferences, when it comes to taking life in automobile accidents. Just give it a chance to strike—lapse into carelessness for a moment, overlook or defy some traffic regulation, or selfishly ignore some driver's or pedestrian's rights—and it will. And it will strike before you realize what is happening, suddenly and cruelly.

"If you want to have a normal span of life, if you don't want to become a killer, drive and walk with care, courtesy and common sense.

"Take heed of the tales that dead men do tell."

Well may a city like Hamilton take pride in that in Civic Holiday weekend traffic, there was not a fatality and only one minor case of injury. Days and weeks and months and years without an accident are hard to accomplish, strive as will a large number of drivers never to be in the classification of the person who causes an accident. Chief Constable Goodman of Hamilton expresses the attitude of the people everywhere—"We cannot be too grateful to all the citizens who cooperated in keeping this city free of tragic occurrences. The record is the more praiseworthy in view of the heavy traffic that flowed on our streets during the three days."

SHAW AGAIN WRITES

The present day world is held up to the penetrating glance and the wit of George Bernard Shaw. Now it is the play 'Geneva' with leading men of the age, Mussolini who appears as Signor Bombardone in a toga and the imperial purple of Rome, Adolf Hitler as Herr Battler, garbed as Lohengrin and General Franco, known as "Franco" dressed in a white uniform.

Some of the critics have not taken to it, but it still possesses barbs of wit such as these:

Battler, in his testimony, tells an exiled Jew that his race has been excluded just as were the Chinese from Australia.

Among the witticisms are: "Some of the greatest men have hated the human race; even God would have destroyed it but for Noah."

"The powers have behaved as if the League of Nations did not exist to further their own ends."

"Foreigner is a word not used in Geneva, but aforeigner still is a foreigner."

Shaw has attacked through the medium of his keen wit and satire many of the problems of the life through which he has passed until he is now eighty-two years old, an age when nearly every man has ceased to work and the vast majority to have lived.

HANGMAN ARTHUR ELLIS, WHO DIED IN OBCURE POVERTY recently in Montreal, was a small sized Englishman, and like most hangmen, very voluble when he had someone to talk to. In an interview with a newspaperman in North Bay, prior to a hanging engagement, Ellis said his profession was as respectable as any. More respectable, said he, than the Judge who sentences the man to hang. The Judge is the man who kills the condemned, not the hangman, said Ellis, the hangman merely carries out the orders of the court. In North Bay there were three hangings in eighteen months, at the time of the building of the Temiskaming and Northern Ontario Railway, followed by the Cobalt mining boom. Ellis officiated at one of these, an old man who gave his name as Holmes another, and the first one was disposed of by Radcliffe, for some years the official, or unofficial, hangman of Canada. The next hanging in North Bay was that of an Italian. Radcliffe refused to officiate at this because it is said that he had received numerous written warnings that he would die if he did. He didn't, old man Holmes doing the job. On that occasion a rumor spread prior to the date of execution that the Italians of North Bay were plotting to make a jail break and rescue the condemned man—consequently execution morning found the jail and court house protected by a large force of special constables armed with rifles. While the jail was surrounded by Italians, and telegraph poles and trees nearby thick with them there was no hostile demonstration and the decree of the court was carried out as arranged. North Bay, then the judicial seat for a vast district which stretched from Hudson Bay to south of Callandar, and from Fort William nearly to Ottawa, had six murder trials in eighteen months, with three hangings.

HOLLYWOOD COLUMNISTS DO NOT TAKE KINDLY to the opinion expressed by the editor of the Trenton Courier Advocate that visiting columnists in that city of makebelieve see only what they are permitted to see, as is evidenced by the following letter from Farley Faulkner, son of Hon. Dr. Faulkner, ex-Minister of Health for Ontario. Farley is doing a Hollywood column, titled "Hello, Neighbor," which he syndicates to Canadian newspapers. Sez Farley, in a letter addressed to his editor, dated 1153 North Sycamore Avenue, Hollywood, California, Thursday, July 28, 1938: Much to my amazement I opened a letter from Toronto this morning and a clipping from the 'Sidelights' column fell on the floor. I say amazement because my name was mentioned . . and for the first time by an editorial writer. When the Courier Advocate says "He will only write what he is permitted to see, and that may not be very much," when referring to my friend, Roly Young's Hollywood assignment, it gives a decidedly wrong impression in its inference that writers who might bite are muzzled in Hollywood. First let me explain that most Hollywood Correspondents are reasonably well behaved and almost invariably sans teeth, even before coming here. Secondly, no good reporter writes about what someone else shows him—even a reporter sans teeth still has his eyes, and most important of all his 'nose for news'. I doubt very much if there is any more scandal here than in other cities the same size in North America. People have a habit of being people, whoever and wherever they happen to be. I prefer to write about the good I see, but I am neither muzzled, nor sans teeth — just trying to believe in people, that's all.

The Brown Manufacturing Company shipped a large 3600 pound friction wheel to Trenton last night for use in Gilmour's big mill. The company is also making 36 dump cars for the contractors doing the double track work for the G.T.R.

Mr. J. E. Flesewelling, editor of the Ontario, will sever his connection with that paper shortly to take the position of assistant manager and editor of the Canadian Lumberman at Peterboro.

How We Interfere With Our Mental Health

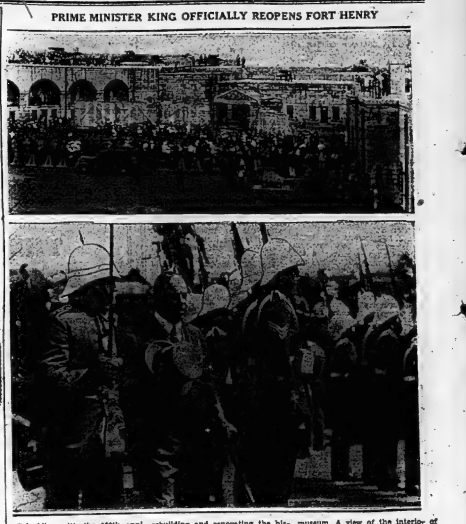
At the present time it is estimated that out of every 250 persons in the United States one is a patient in a mental institution. This rate would likely be the same for Canada. While this would mean about a half million mental patients certainly a large number who are affected by mental and emotional disturbances but still go about their work in the home, the office, the factory, or elsewhere. In fact, Dr. Ira V. Hiscock, in Yale Journal of Biology and Medicine, says that the total number of these mild or less serious cases (not confined in mental institutions) would outnumber those confined in these institutions.



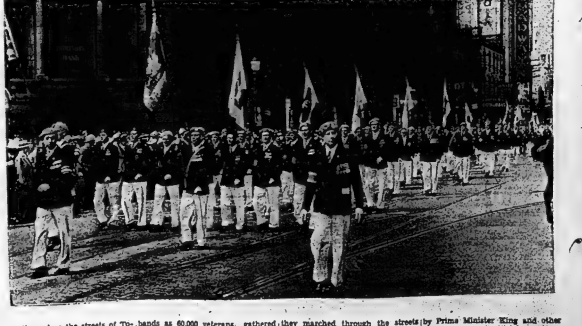
"Among the physical illnesses, the 'common cold' causes more disability than any other condition. So, in the mental field, the sum of the petty fears and doubts and prejudices, the innumerable subconscious emotional disturbances which prevent everyone of us from reacting normally to the everyday or real facts of life—these things handicap our society far more than does the financial burden of caring for the violently insane and the feeble minded. In family life, industry, in politics, in international affairs, these things—petty fears, doubts, prejudices, emotional disturbances—are real obstacles to fruitful living."

The only real difference then between ourselves—so-called normal human beings—and the inmates of mental institutions is that we secure to get along just a little better with our fellow men than do these inmates and are able to earn a living.

We should therefore take a fair and square look at ourselves and see our petty fears doubts, prejudices, selfishness, suspicions, in their true light; see how they interfere with our social, mental and physical progress or health and with our own health and happiness and the health and happiness of others.

This look into ourselves would not only decrease the number of patients now entering mental institutions every year, but would make this world the place it was meant to be for human beings.

PRIME MINISTER KING OFFICIALLY REOPENS FORT HENRY



Coinciding with the 100th anniversary of the incorporation of Kingston, old Fort Henry was officially reopened by Prime Minister King, after two years were spent in rebuilding and renovating the historic fortress which was built more than a century ago. Overlooking the St. Lawrence river the fort will now be open to the public as a fortmuseum. A view of the interiov of the rebuilt fortress is shown, top, during the dedication ceremonies, while Prime Minister King is pictured, bottom, as he inspected the guard of honor.

HENRY FORD GETS A MEDAL FROM DER FUEHRER

Fritz Heiler, German consul-general at Detroit, shakes hands with Henry Ford, motor magnate, while Karl Kapp, German consul at Cleveland, pins on the aged manufacturer's breast the grand cross of the order of the German eagle, the highest decoration Hitler can bestow. The head of the Nazi Reich awarded the decoration to Ford on the latter's 75th birthday in recognition of his services to the automobile industry.

CANADIAN CORPS REUNION WINDS UP IN A BLAZE OF GLORY

For three days the streets of Toronto resounded to tramping feet and the stirring notes of military bands as 60,000 veterans gathered for the Canadian Corps Reunion. The veterans are shown here as they marched through the streets following a drumhead service at Riverdale Park which was attended by Prime Minister King and other high government officials.

They'll Do It Every Time :- By Jimmy Hatlo

"The DOCTOR" by MARY ROBERTS RINEHART

CHAPTER XIX.

Then one night he was to go there alone, and Beverly had promised him a quiet evening; and of all things at once, he had fallen asleep on a street car and wakened at the end of the line, miles out of town.

He telephoned as soon as he could, but she was angry and had showed it.

"What in the world happened? Where are you?"

"I don't know exactly."

"You don't know?"

"Only approximately. You see, I was on a hurrying home for a divine evening with you. Then I shut my eyes for a minute—only a minute—and when I opened them again, I was here. The magic carpet. No fear."

"You went to sleep?" she said incredulously. "That's not very flattering to me, is it? Of course if you think it's funny—"

"Funny My dear girl, I'm laughing for fear I'll weep."

She had laughed too, at that, but he knew her pride and she had not repeated the invitation....

After all, what was he to her but to that group around her, but something between a butcher and a glorified midwife? Young Ames grinning at him.

"How's the baby business these days?"

"Still paying dividends."

"By Jove, you fellows have a cinch. You get us coming and going. Even nature works for you!"

"We have to help her a bit now and then."

"Better change your mind and have a drink."

"I have some calls to make. I'll take ice instead."

And even that, his inability to drink during working hours, marking him off, setting him aside.

Not coherent thinking, all this. It was a series of pictures in his mind: of Beverly, cool and lovely, trying to marshal her disorderly hordes; of occasional glimpses of her mother; and even one encounter with Staunton Lewis in the hall, and his own sudden rigidity when he remembered Jake.

"Pretty noisy crowd, Doctor."

"They seem to like it," said Chris dryly, and passed on.

Oh, for God's sake, stop it, he thought. She's not for me, nor I for her. But his mindcrent on automatically. It was not that he would take the high road while he took the low. It was the question of two lives with different objectives, not to be reconciled. Every woman, Beverly or any other, would demand time, claim the right to love and her own romance. And what could he offer her? A tired man, irritable at times, worn with the burden of other people's troubles—a man who battled all day for power over sickness and death and dared to abdicate only at night when at last he slept.

He remembered one of the interneships before laying down his law after the fashion of all interns.

"My doctors make rotten husbands."

"The hell we do. Who told you that?"

"Well, look at it. A man who is really set on getting somewhere in medicine or surgery can have only one job and that's it. He can't be a balance. Either he's a good husband or he's a good doctor. He can't be both."

W. N. U.

The room was cold, and after damning the furnace Chris went over and put on a fire. It did not soothe him to find that the light in the cellar had been left burning, or that the coal in the corner was getting low again. Nobody had taken on the ashes, and after a momentary hesitation he took off his coat and did that also But the contrast between the recent memories of the Lewis house and his present occupation set him to grinning.

His pen down the ashes and, standing on the porch, proceeded to dust himself as well as he could. Outlined against the soft snow in the yard was the shed where Hennery had pursued his cattle experiments, and he stood gazing at it and thinking of the legacy Henry had left him.

He stared at the shed more closely. Certainly it had an unusual aspect. The next moment Caesar growled, and a figure detached itself from the shadows and a familiar voice spoke.

"Hello, Doc," he said. "Family still here?"

It was Dick. A different Dick, hatlily dressed, but looking up at him with shifty eyes and his old impudent grin. "I've been throwing pebbles at the window up there but the old man sleeps pretty sound."

"The old man's dead, Dick."

"Dead! When'd that happen? Soon after you left?"

It was characteristic of Dick to express no grief, nor to feel any. He looked thoughtful for a moment and then came up the steps. "Might as well see Mother. She still here?"

"She is still here."

He looked relieved at that and stepped past Chris into the kitchen.

"Same old smell," he commented briefly. "I'd know kitchens blindfold, with my eyes shut. Well, I'll go up, Doc. Night. I suppose my old room's still there?"

Sudden anger flared in Chris. He blocked the way to the back stairs with his body and confronted Dick with his hands in his pockets, a cigarette drooping from one corner of his mouth.

"The room is there, but you're not going to it. Get that, and get it now."

"Aw say, Doc—"

"You can see your mother and sister, and then you're getting out. I'll support them, but I won't support you!"

"Who asked you to?"

"That's fine! And that's all there is to it. If I find you sleeping in that room, I'll drop you out the window. That goes for tonight and all the other nights."

He left Dick and went back to his cellar stairs. Then he moved forward, pulling out the hairpin as he went, and climbed rather heavily up the stairs.

Dick did not stay. Chris, failing into a heavy sleep after an hour or two of waiting, wakened in the morning to find that Dick had gone and that his own pockets had been neatly rifled of all the cash he possessed.

He went down to breakfast in a fury of indignation. But Lily Waters met every attempt at storming, as up to the very end she was to defeat him. She was overflowing with happiness. Her faded eyes shone, and she had even tried to make herself neat. She beamed on him as he brought in his coffee.

"Wasn't it wonderful, Doctor? And he looked so well. Did you notice that suit he had on?"

"Very good suit. Better than mine! Is he working?"

"He has been. He's a good boy, Doctor. He even lent me a little money. And he says there will be more when it came time."

Chris smiled grimly. "Did he tell you to tell me that?"

"Well, he did. He said—"

But Chris was laughing. The impudence of Dick's farewell was pure and pared of the whole domestic situation. He laughed helplessly and almost hysterically until even Lily became suspicious.

"I don't see what's funny, Doctor."

"I'm sorry. I'm not laughing about Dick. Heaven forbid that I should laugh about Dick. He's been laughing matter."

He sobered, but she was still puzzled when she left the room. And Chris knew then that he could never tell her the truth. She had been little to the fussy what was left. Yet later on he was to wonder whether he should not have done so after all. If he might not have saved her her final humiliation by so doing, perhaps even her life.

For all his apparent gaiety, the spring opened rather cheerlessly in the house on the hill. Beverly watching her mother, found her languid and rather withdrawn and suspected that she was sleeping badly.

Minly Lewis would get up, bathe slowly, dress meticulously. She had lost weight and her tailored dresses hung loose on her; and her pallor was so marked that she first thought a box of rouge and kept it carefully hidden. Now, when she sat in front of her dressing table, she rubbed in a little of the color, smoothing it carefully with the well-kept hands and then examining herself in a strong light. She could deceive Staunton, but she was afraid of Beverly's young eyes.

How long she could keep the thing unacquired, she did not know. She had made her decision carefully. There had been no hasty action. But even you admit that it is rather late, and I am willing to go on as long as possible. Maybe you find that hard to understand, but a woman might, I think. The standard for perfection can be a terrible thing."

She had smiled faintly. "A chance for life, and not a good one. No. Doctor, I am not telling my husband."

Plainfield

Plainfield — Mr. Frank D. Hicks returned home on Friday after an absence of three weeks during which time he visited friends in Toronto, and enjoyed a trip to Atlantic City.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Garrison and Franklin have moved into the home formerly owned and occupied by the late Mrs. Ella Tummon.

Mrs. Iona King left for her home in Toronto on Saturday after some time with her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. James Gilbert, Lake.

Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Hall, baby John and Mrs. Fred Hall spent Friday as guest of friends at Lime Lake.

Mr. and Mrs. Addison Hall and two children, of Toronto are spending a short time the guests of friends here and in Prince Edward County.

A severe storm last week-end disrupted the Hydro service at the Central Telephone office, in Latta, and at the United Church. It also flattened a lot of the grain and many farmers are having great difficulty with their cutting.

Mr. and Mrs. Mac Cronkwright and family intend moving into the house recently vacated by Mr. and Mrs. Frank Garrison.

The many friends of Mrs. Clifford Ketcheson will be glad to learn that she is gradually improving in health.

Mrs. Maggie Hodgens, of Belleville, spent the week-end with friends here and attended service in the United Church on Sunday evening.

Miss Norma Hubel, of Toronto, spent the week-end and holiday with her aunt, Mrs. Peter Hubel.

The service in the United Church next Sunday evening is to take the form of a song service using hymns composed by Fanny Crosby. The address will consist of a short biographical sketch of the hymn writer's life.

Mr. and Mrs. Norman Hall and family spent Sunday with Mr. Robert A. Hall.

The congregation in the United Church on Sunday evening was smaller than usual due to the intense heat.

One of the freaks of last Thursday's electrical storm was witnessed by Mr. Billa Ketcheson, of the ninth of Thurlow, who, while he was pumping water and his family were near the house, saw lightning strike a large maple tree a few yards away immediately across the road. Upon examination it was discovered that the lightning had entered the tree at a crotch where five large branches join, had proceeded down the centre for eight or ten feet coming out at a large knot hole in the side of the trunk. Some pieces of bark and splinters of wood which had been torn from the tree both at the point of entry and of exit, were found lying at the point where the lightning escaped.

Mr. William Marshall has been exhibiting a piece of slate flooring six inches square, a product of the slate mine two miles north of Madoc which was given him as a souvenir one day recently when he visited the mine. Mr. Marshall states that the slate in the Madoc mine is particularly hard and of extra quality. He describes the excavation as about seventy-five feet deep and several hundred feet across.

The many acquaintances of Mr. Hector Wood, of Belle Lake, who dropped dead on Sunday at his home near Verona, extend to his relatives in this community their deepest sympathy. Mr. Wood was known by all who were privileged to have met him, as a man of sterling qualities and fine Christian spirit. He was seldom absent from the meetings of the Belleville Presbytery of the United Church and took a very active interest in temperance work, having presided at the Ontario Temperance Federation for the County of Hastings at that time or his death.

While watering a young pure bred jersey bull in the performance of his duties on the farm of Mr. B. Collins, in play the frisky animal struck Oscar Moore, fifteen, on Monday morning, in the back side near two of his horns. Three stitches were required to close the wound. While suffering considerable pain from his shock, he is making a speedy recovery.

Miss Mary Goodfellow spent the week-end with friends in Belleville.

Miss James Parks, of Napanee, is holidaying with his aunt and uncle Mr. and Mrs. Ervin E. Denyes.

The first meeting in this section was done on Monday for Mr. Hector Wood.

Mr. and Mrs. John Rollins attended the Rollins Reunion held at Sherlea, Oak Lake on Monday and report a large attendance and a good time.

Mr. Charles Sargent was the guest on Monday evening of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Outwater.

The members of L. O. L. No. 179 held their August meeting in the hall on Monday evening.

"CANADA'S NEW GAS" to them The New BLUE SUNOCO to you...and it gave better performance than 30 competing gasolines, including 13 premium priced fuels

PROVED IN TESTS BY 1069 MOTORISTS IN 6 CITIES

Before we offered the New Blue Sunoco to you, we employed the services of Might Directories, Ltd., Canada's well-known research bureau, who asked more than a thousand motorists in Quebec, Montreal, Toronto, Ottawa, Hamilton and London to test a motor fuel known to them only as" Canada's New Gasoline."

86% REPORT BETTER PERFORMANCE!

More than eight out of every ten of the motorists who tested this "mystery" gasoline reported that it improved the performance of their cars. These motorists had been using a total of 30 gasolines, including 13 premium priced fuels.

TEST IT IN YOUR OWN CAR AGAINST ANY GASOLINE AT ANY PRICE . . . AND BE CONVINCED!

GASOLINE USED IN TESTS CERTIFIED TO BE THE NEW, IMPROVED BLUE SUNOCO

Except for the blue color, which has nothing to do with performance and which had been omitted to prevent identification, laboratory analysis proved this motor fuel was the New, Improved Blue Sunoco in every respect.

NOW ON SALE AT ALL BLUE SUNOCO PUMPS

You, too, can make the same test these motorists made—just wait until your car's tank is almost empty, then fill up with a tankful of the New Blue Sunoco—it is now on sale at every Sunoco pump—and it sells at regular gas prices!

TEST IT IN YOUR OWN CAR AGAINST ANY GASOLINE AT ANY PRICE . . . AND BE CONVINCED!

The New and Improved BLUE SUNOCO MOTOR FUEL AT REGULAR GAS PRICE

MIGHT DIRECTORIES, LIMITED TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN:
Sealed drums of a motor fuel were shipped to us by the Canada Oil Company, Limited, for a road test. Chosen to conduct the test were 1,069 motorists in Montreal, Toronto, Hamilton and Ottawa, who had previously indicated the brand of gasoline they were using at the time.
Later, our representatives called upon these motorists and supplied their cars with the motor fuel in the sealed drums. Each motorist was then asked to make a comparison between the gasoline he had been using and the one supplied.
This Study was conducted during May, 1938.

Sun Oil Company, Limited, Toronto, Ont.
Gentlemen:—
We have pleasure in advising you that our representative was present when the [illegible] of gasoline received was broken. Each Montreal, Toronto, Hamilton and Ottawa motorist was then supplied with the gasoline in the sealed drums by our representative. Each motorist was then asked to make a comparison between the New Blue Sunoco and the gasoline he had been using. Our findings are attached hereto. We have no connection with the Canada Oil Company, Limited, or with the Sun Oil Company, Limited, and we have no interest in the outcome of the test. We are not certified public accountants, but we have checked the figures carefully and believe them to be correct.
Yours very truly,

ENO KEEPS YOU COOL

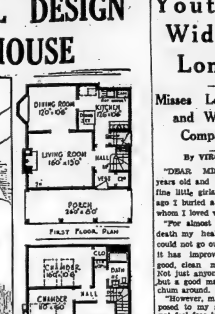
If this hot weather leaves you limp and exhausted, it's a sure sign of an overheated body. The natural thing to do is to take an effective alkalizing corrective like Eno's "Fruit Salt," which gently removes sluggish wastes which overheat the body, neutralizes excess acid and cools you through and through.

Eno contains no sugar, nothing harsh or harmful and forms no habit. During the hot weather drink Eno morning, noon and night, or whenever you feel the need for a refreshing alkalizing drink. In pleasant "Fruit Salt" tang drives thirst away instantly; right away you feel clean and cool deep down inside.



Eno is the original alkalizing corrective and for years and years Eno in water has been the favourite refreshment among white residents in the sizzling tropics. It's a natural way to keep cool!

A PENNSYLVANIA COLONIAL DESIGN USED FOR SIX-ROOM HOUSE

Frame house of Pennsylvania colon ial architecture, available also in stone

Design, 211-A. Courtesy National Plan Service, Inc., Chicago

By Central Press

THE DESIGN of this pleasant six-room house is of Pennsylvania colonial origin. It is in frame construction, but there is a certain stability in this type of architecture that does not depend wholly upon the materials used.

The large porch across the entire front of the house is a pleasant feature which will be appreciated by many. The entrance vestibule has a closet for wraps and contains the stairway, which also leads to the kitchen. There is a dining set in one corner of the latter room. A large living room with fireplace, and dining room which contains a bay window, complete the layout of this floor.

Above are three bedrooms, hall, closets and bathroom.

Size of the main building of this house is 26 feet by 24 feet; size over all, 29 by 34 feet. The house contains 17,000 cubic feet; porch, 1,200 cubic feet; total, 18,200 cubic feet.

Century of S. S. 8 Rawdon Is Celebrated at Wellmans

Many From Far And Near Attend And Take Part In Ceremonies

PULPIT DEDICATED

Centennial Celebration

Rawdon — Folks from far and near gathered in Wellmans on Saturday and early Sunday morning to celebrate the one hundredth anniversary of school section No. 8, of Rawdon Township. Three services were held on Sunday and all were well attended. At 4 o'clock a basket picnic was had formerly worshipped in Wellmans United Church gathered to again worship and pay tribute to the pioneers of the district.

Mrs. John Heagle presided at the piano and Rev. J. E. Beckel, pastor of Rawdon Circuit, was charge of the service. The Church was filled with the words of "Holy, Holy, Holy" and O. God Our Help." Rev. F. G. Joblin, of Scugog, a former pastor, offered prayer.

Old Choir Sings

At this juncture "an old choir", composed of the following persons: Mrs. H. C. Martin, Mr. Ernest White, of Stirling, Mrs. Frank Jeffs Mrs. John Reid, Mount Pleasant, Mrs. John Farrell, Mrs. S. Gummer Mrs. Thomas McCaughey, Miss Stirling, Mrs. Ernest Sarles, Salem, and Mrs. Burrell Fanning, Mrs. and Mrs. Roland Reid, Mrs. B. O. Johnson, Mr. George Donald, Miss Emma Mrs. Israel Clancy, Mrs. Walter Dracup, Mrs. Butler Rupert, Mrs. Gregory Watson and Mrs. Malcolm Tolten, filled the choir loft and rendered "My God the Spring of all My Joys." These people then occupied side pews while the regular choir of Wellman's United Church quietly took their places. Rev. W. E. Honey, of Myrtle, read the Psalms, and Rev. W. H. Clarke, a former pastor, read the morning prayer.

Mrs. John Heagle sang "O How Lovely Are Thy Dwellings", with Mrs. Carl Clarke as accompanist.

Welcome Is Extended

Rev. J. E. Beckel welcomed the guests and said in part. "From far and near, friends, school-mates, and fellow christians have returned for this happy reunion. In the name of the officials and members of this church, in the name of the trustees of the public school, in the name of your neighbours and friends of this day and other days, we bid you welcome, we hope you will have a happy time renewing acquaintances and that your presence here today will help both you folks and ourselves. We heartily welcome you and may God bless us all during our sojourn together."

Rev. Beckel especially welcomed the four brother ministers who graced the platform and assisted with all three services—Namely Rev. J. O. Totten, Hornby; Rev. W. E. Honey, Myrtle; Rev. F. L. Joblin, Scugog; Rev. W. H. Clarke, Deseronto.

Letters of regret were read from Rev. J. A. MacMillan, of Burnbrae Presbyterian Church, from Rev. Canon G. W. Swayne of St. Marks Anglican Church, Bonarlaw, from Rev. J. G. McKee, B.A., B.D., of Wellington, whose father once taught in the Wellman School.

Greetings Are Read

Rev. Henry C. Hoover of The First Congregational Church, Berwyn, Ill., sent a "Kindly Greeting" to my old school mates on the occasion of the re-union of Wellman's school. Though some of us may have wandered far from our native town and country, I shall never forget, but will always hold in affection 'Wellmans' where as a boy, I drove the milk wagon, went to church and attended the public school for a season. May the reunion at Wellmans promote good fellowship, strengthen home ties and in the attendant religious services, cement many hearts to the Great Teacher, Saviour and Friend."

Scholar of 68 Years of Age

Rev. J. S. Watson, Winnipeg, Manitoba, who attended school at Wellmans about sixty years ago, also sent a letter. "The founders of Wellmans community were industrious, frugal and God-fearing. They believed in the home, in education and in religion, so a school and church soon took steps in the midst and have continued to serve succeeding generations. It is good to remember the rock from which we were hewn. We of 'Wellmans' are much in an inheritance of pure blood, simple living and a worthy example, all of which is basis for good citizenship. Wellmans has an abundant success crown the efforts of Wellmans Centennial Committee to stir up the folk of past and present by way of remembrance.

The morning offering amounting to eighteen dollars and was dedicated by his service. All joined in "Bless Be the Tie That Binds."

Dedication Service

In the Dedication Service J. E. Beckel said in part: "Everywhere there will find memorials erected by friends in memory of their loved ones. It was a happy idea that the relatives of four fine Christian brothers decided to keep their memory green by erecting in this church this beautiful pulpit and to the memory of the four Sons: George Snarr, John Snarr and Fred Snarr we this day dedicate this pulpit and Bible and Book Rest and His Kingdom. As the gospel of Jesus Christ is preached from this desk Sunday by Sunday may men, women and children, hear believe, repent, and live. May these four brothers, though dead, ever speak to us in the proclamation of the gospel of good news from this pulpit erected in their memory.

On the bronze plaque was inscribed the following: In memory of T. W. Snarr, G. A. Snarr, W. J. Snarr and F. C. Snarr, 1932.

Rev. J. O. Totten, of Hornby, gave the morning message and the choir rendered Awakening Chorus. The morning service closed with the Benediction of "Lead on O King Eternal."

Beautiful bouquets of summer flowers were arranged around the church and pretty vases of flowers were banked around the pulpit which all added to this exceptional fine service

At the noon hour several enjoyed picnic lunches on the school grounds.

Afternoon Memorial

At 2 p.m. Stirling band under the leadership of Mr. Maurice Bell led the procession from the school house to the United Church cemetery and the ten ministers followed the band. A raised platform to form a rostrum, draped with the Union Jack, was centred in the shade of the trees and here a solemn memorial service was held.

The band rendered, "Unto the Hills," and all joined in "Rock of Ages." Rev. W. E. Honey offered prayer and the band contributed, "Whispering Hope". Rev. J. O. Totten read the lesson and the band gave, "Magnita." The vast assembly sang, "Jesus Lover of My Soul," and Rev. J. E. Beckel spoke of the service which was to commence the memory of those buried in the cemetery and also those who attended school at Wellmans and were buried elsewhere. He then read the list of all persons buried in Wellmans United Church cemetery, also names of former school pupils buried in the Anglican cemetery nearby, in Burnbrae Presbyterian cemetery, in the United States, at Saskatchewan, Regina and Brandon.

In memory of these Mr. John Heagle, chairman of the Committee of Board of Trustees, placed a wreath at the cenotaph.

Tribute Is Given

Rev. Fred C. Joblin, of Scugog, a beloved former pastor gave the afternoon message.

He said the reading of these names drew up a great flood of memories in the hearts of those assembled which are most precious.

He paid tribute to those who have passed on during the one hundred years and especially did he remember those who have gone into Higher Service since his pastorate here.

He paid special tribute to those who in days gone by, were responsible for beautifying this "God's Acre," that those who are resting from their labors might be laid in lovely surroundings.

He wondered if the folks of this generation really appreciated what had been done by their pioneer mothers, fathers, brothers and sisters, who were in many years gone by, and who were loyal to Wellmans Church, and who helped the work of God. Today we as a group of people remember the hardships which these pioneers endured and we commemorate their deeds.

The dying soldiers on Flanders Fields said they could not rest if we as a people were disloyal or untrue for which they died and so today the parents must carry on keeping up the standards of honesty and faith marked by our forefathers in order that their memory today may be kept safe from all harm.

The afternoon service closed with "Abide With Me," and a selection by the band.

Evening Service

At 7.30 p.m. another service was held in the church with many visitors in attendance. After the renditions of the "Doxology", Prayer, God from Whom All Blessings Flow," and a hymn "All Hail the Power" Rev. Totten offered prayer.

The choir of eighteen voices rendered the anthem "Helpless and Weary" Rev. Clarke read the lesson.

Mr. and Mrs. George Watson, Mrs. Fred Thain and Mr. Angus Todd sang as a quartette, "Hear My Prayer."

The congregation joined in "Day is Dying in the West."

Rev. W. E. Honey, of Myrtle brought a very impressive message based on the text, "Therefore enduring, hardness as a good soldier of Jesus Christ." He pointed out the various ways that persons may become good Christians and urged his hearers to do more for God's cause.

The choir rendered, "Now the Day is Over," with Miss Mina Dracup taking the solo part and Rev. Joblin pronounced the Benediction.

Shortly the day thru gavest Lord is ended and we thank thee that Thy Church unsleeping keeps watch o'er earth's all the world as Thy Kingdom grows for ever and ever.

On Monday many plans were made to entertain those who are home again.

For weeks the Board of Trustees, Mr. John Heagle, chairman, Mr. Carl Clancy, secretary, and Mr. Victor Taylor have been busy planning the minor details of this memorable occasion. Committees were appointed and the ladies spared no pains in getting the new matting for the aisles were purchased. The school yard has been decorated and electric fixtures arranged.

Weddings

POST—HOLMES

Eldorado, (Special)—A quiet but pretty wedding was solemnized at the parsonage, Eldorado, Ontario, on Madoc, on Saturday, July 30th., when Miss Kay Holmes, second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Holmes of Madoc Township, was united in marriage to Mr. Donald Post, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Post of Eldorado, Ont. The bride and groom were unattended and only immediate relatives of the young couple were present.

Rev. J. Smith, pastor of the Standard Church, officiated. Mr. and Mrs. Donald Post left shortly after on a motor trip.

For travelling the young couple will reside on the groom's farm at Eldorado.

Father F. D. Hyland of Madoc, said the Nuptial Mass.

The bridal couple were attended by Miss Dorothy Corneyeau, sister of the bride and Mr. Fred Allan of Queensboro. The wedding music was played by Mrs. Frank Barry organist of St. Henry's Church.

ROYLE—ARMS

A pretty wedding took place at Christ Church on Saturday evening, the seven-thirty when Dorothy daughter of Mrs. Adams and the late Emsley Adams and the late Mr. John E. Royle, son of Mr. and Mrs. John R. Royle, Rye. C. G. Wright officiating.

The bride, who was attired in navy taffeta with white accessories was attended by Miss Helen Paul, Toronto, cousin of the groom. The bridesmaid wore pink voile with white accessories. Mr. Vincent Foster was groomsman.

Mr. and Mrs. Royle will reside at 212 Coleman Street.

Youthful Widow Is Lonesome

Misses Loved Hubby and Wants Male Companionship

By VIRGINIA LEE

"DEAR MISS LEE: I am 33 years old and the mother of two little girls. About two years ago I buried a wonderful husband, whom I loved with all my heart.

"For almost a year after his death my health was so poor I could not go out in a crowd. Now it has improved and I long for good, clean male companionship. Not just anyone, you understand, but a good man with whom I can chum around.

"However, my parents are so opposed to my going out that I do not feel free to do so. How can I get acquainted with some nice men? And am I being unfaithful to my husband by wanting to go out with men? GERTRUDE."

It is perfectly natural for a woman of your age to want a male companion. Just because you have been used to having one. Happily married people are loneliest, after their mates, than those who are not well mated.

You might meet a lot of men who would attract you at church. And there is no harm in going to places with a girl friend, not to mention, if they are nice parties. Girls can be very helpful in many ways. They have a way of showing up where there are nice young women. Also their mothers are unattached men now you are over thirty-five. Perhaps you were not a girl, but still there probably are a few — elder bachelors or men who have lost their wives, among yourself.

Your parents probably don't want you to become the subject of the sort of talk that always goes about a too attractive young widow begins to accept the attentions of men. It sometimes is ill natured. I don't know why widows are usually talked about more than spinsters, but it is so.

And if you never find a man who will be a good father to your girls, better never marry again. Children need both parents, and when it is taken from them by death, they are entitled to a good substitute, or as near the missing parents should be both father and mother to them. It would be better for you to be lonely than to spoil your children's lives by giving them a stepfather who neglects and perhaps won't be too lonely with the girls to keep you company.

Washable Gloves

Washable gloves are especially useful in summer when hands perspire freely. Your hands soil your gloves and in turn soil your hands — a vicious circle that ingrains dirt and causes loss of chic. It's a good idea to stock up on three pairs if your budget can take the extravagance. Two are substitute for pair number one, which is in the laundry. With a washable, while pair number three is kept spotless for emergencies.

Frothy lukewarm suds and several clear lukewarm rinses do the trick. Then squeeze between the finger tips and palms don't twist or wring — and hang to dry in the suds in much the same way as you would hang out your hair. Whip up a fresh batch of suds, turn the gloves inside out and wash the inside. Rinse again and squeeze dry and best washed off the hands.

Then, while damp, roll in towels, shape carefully, and dry at normal temperature. While the gloves are still damp, pull them for a moment or two to finger-press the seams and tips. Then they're professionally laundered look when dry.

Try Peanut Butter Frosting

Try peanut butter frosting for covering white or spiced cakes. Add one-third of a cup of peanut butter to your regular boiled white frosting. Blend in the peanut butter and then beat icing the usual way. Add a few roasted peanuts as decoration.

BABY GOT DIARRHOEA?
REMOVE THE CAUSE

PHOTOGRAPHY HOBBY LEADS TO OWN SHOP

DOROTHY J. MacLEAN
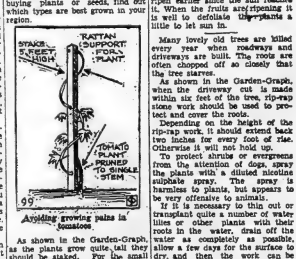
By LILIAN CAMPBELL

Her hobby, photography, led Dorothy J. MacLean, Gatlinburg, Tenn., to establish a business of her own, right in the middle of the depression. Friends said she was crazy, but her busy little shop where she sells camera supplies and develops the earnest efforts of amateur and semi-professional photographers, disproves the idea.

Miss MacLean was born in Dayton, O., and attended Ohio University at Athens. After graduation she worked in the Dayton Young Women's Christian Association taking pictures for her own pleasure in her leisure moments. For four consecutive years she went to Gatlinburg for her vacation, and right in the midst of the depression, she decided to go into business there for herself.

She had studied at the Art Institute at Dayton, and has had one-man exhibitions of her pictures in Chicago, Dayton, Philadelphia and St. Joseph, Mich.

Her little shop is at Gatlinburg, "gateway to the Smoky mountains," and a very busy place. It is open from March 1 to November. After that Miss MacLean sometimes works in a Dayton department store.



"Of 800,000 persons who last season visited the Smoky Mountain National park near Gatlinburg," she says, "I am sure 300,000 visited my shop."

And that is a pretty good record. One customer tells another about her and recommends her work, and so the business grows.

TODAY'S GARDEN-GRAPH

Written by DEAN HALLIDAY

For Central Press Canadian

Tomatoes are grown in almost every vegetable garden, since they are easy to raise and the fruit is nourishing and palatable. Each section of the country has developed varieties of tomatoes particularly adapted to its conditions. Before buying seeds, find out which types are best grown in your region.

Many lovely old trees are killed every year when roadways and driveways are built. The roots are often chopped off so closely that the tree dies.

As shown in the Garden-Graph, trees in the driveway cut is made within six feet of the tree, rip-rap stone work should be used to protect and cover the roots.

Depending on the height of the rip-rap work, it should extend back two inches for every foot of rise. Otherwise it will not hold up.

To protect the rip-rap stone from the attention of dogs, spray the plants with a diluted nicotine sulphate spray. The spray is harmless to plants, but appears to be very offensive to animals.

If it is necessary to thin out or transplant small seedlings of waterlilies or other plants with their roots in the water, drain off the water as completely as possible, allow a few days for the surface to dry out, and then the work can be done easily.

The Stars Say—

For Thursday, August 4

By GWEVIEVE KEMBLE

THE ASTRAL influence for this day runs to much hilarity and extravagance; however, it would be well to advise caution in the matter of budgets, or losses may entail. There may be many gains and postponements. The indications are for social, domestic and entertainment affairs.

If This Is Your Birthday

Those born on this day will be apt to be surprised if they have a year filled with unusual joy, indulgence or extravagance, although there may be personal gratification through these influences. Be careful, be prepared for delays or difficulties.

A child born on this day may be pleasure-loving popular and given to indulgence and domestic or emotional indulgences.

ALASKA AIR BASE

Provision For Air Base

The United States Congress authorized the air base in 1935 and Wilcox Act, providing for frontier aerial defences such as one already built at Thomas, Alaska. The army has projected a $5,000,000 base at Kodiak, Alaska, and less established at Sitka, Alaska, and Dutch Harbor, in the Aleutians, but the army has taken no action.

One objection to construction of the army base has been an administration desire to avoid arousing Japan's concern. Another was the prevalence of fog, making flying hazardous.

The first objection was removed to some degree by Japan's refusal to sign the 1936 London naval limitation treaty or to disclose any information on the warships she was building.

Tie With U. S. Highway

Harold Ickes, Secretary of the Interior, now on route to Alaska, said before leaving he hoped the way could be cleared shortly for construction of the Seattle-Fairbanks road. Some 2,300 miles long, it would permit completion of the tourist travel across British Columbia and the Yukon Territory. It would tie in with the inter-American highway being extended southward, and eventually with South America's projected pan-American system.

The cost of completing a road to Alaska has been figured at $12,000,000 to $20,000,000. The major difficulty is that most of the burden would fall on British Columbia. Premier Pattullo has been negotiating for possible assistance.

Vancouver, Aug. 2 (CP)— Announcement at Washington the projected Seattle-Fairbanks highway would be studied shortly by Louis Johnson, Assistant Secretary for War, was greeted with interest here today where the scheme has long been a live topic of speculation.

Roslin

Roslin.—On Thursday evening, July 14th, over one hundred friends and neighbours gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Horton, in honor of their daughter and her husband, Mr. and Mrs. Clare Carney, (nee Myrtle Horton) and presented them with a miscellaneous shower. Mrs. Roy Vance read the following address:

Roslin, July 14, 1938.

To Clare and Myrtle:—

Good evening, dear folks, we come here to bring
The heartiest good wishes of all and to sing,
Along the high prizes of a maiden and youth
For Dame Rumor has whispered so that we know has said
That a lad and a lassie have just been wed.
The young folks here mentioned we tell you with pride
Clare the groom and Myrtle the bride.
So that is the reason why we have come here
The young folk and old folk to bring you good cheer.
The house with our laughter and clatter will ring
As You're Jolly Good Fellows we all join to sing.
Now Myrtle we welcome you as you are with us to stay,
A new venture facing a new home to start.
But Clare, we know, will love you quite well.
To do so he promised as by Rev. Mr. Beazley he made vow.
And we are certain he will be as good as his word.
So here's to the future, may it with blessings abound,
As friendship's golden key you of all your old pals will go with you,
As you journey forward in life's fitful view.
May these blessings ever keep your heart gay,
Sometimes you may long for the home you have left,
Sometimes you may feel that of friends you're bereft.
But if you feel lonely, just whistle and sing
For that makes the clouds bright just like everything.
Don't ever start nagging, be cranky or pout,
It will spoil a home sooner than all get out.
And be a good husband, a dear loving wife,
And let love rule you,spast the rest of your life.
We are gathered here now just to wish for you
Long life and real happiness, prosperity, too,
Accept these ours gifts slight tokens we pray,
For the love and esteem we bear you always,
May your pathway be joyous as onward you go,
And the burdens you bear may they always be few,
Remember your Saviour, be loyal and true
To Him and your Church whatever you do.
And may God's richest blessing crown your home with delight
As Godspeed we wish you on this joyous night.

Signed on behalf of the Community,

Simeon Robertson
Mrs. Fraser Aiken

Mr. and Mrs. Carney graciously thanked their neighbours and friends for the lovely gifts they had received. Lunch was served and dancing was enjoyed by all. Mr. and Mrs. G. Burleigh furnished the music.

During the service in the Anglican Church on Sunday afternoon, July 17th, the infant sons of Mr. and Mrs. Orley Parks of Mt. Pleasant, and Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Reid of Belleville and the infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Reeks of Frederickville, were baptized by the rector, Rev. F. C. Beazer.

On Wednesday evening, July 20, the annual Lawn Social of the Anglican Church was held on the Rectory grounds. Part of the programme consisted of a Baby Show, Family of Wooler, Miss Annie Slirk of Ottawa showed lantern slides of "Quebec" and also of Switzerland. After the programme lunch was served.

Begoggled against the blinding glare of falling snow, reflected from the snow-covered mountain, Dr. James Conant, president of Harvard university, is shown returning to his base camp after a long seven-mile ascent over the Columbia icefield in Jasper National Park, Alta. Dr. Conant, whose hobby is mountain climbing, made the first ascent this summer—its fourth on record—of North Twin mountain (12,085) third highest peak in the Canadian Rockies.

Theatres

AT THE McCARTHY

"The Hurricane"

Hollywood's well-established axiom that the star makes the picture sometimes works in reverse.

Just often enough to be the exception that proves the rule, it's the picture that makes the star.

Some exceptional have been dishing up ever since the infancy of the picture industry. A few have been fortunate accidents. Far more have been the happy result of shrewd showmanship.

Realizing that , their greatest stock in trade is stellar personalities who possess the box-office appeal to lure paying customers to the box office, producers have deliberately cast unknown players of exceptional promise in pictures which because of dramatic power, magnitude, timeliness or type of characterization appear to be natural star creators.

It is not necessary to slight any cinematic period in mustering an impressive roll of star-making pictures. Each silent picture as "The Four Horsemen" which made a star of the late Rudolph Valentino, and "The Big Parade" which lifted the late John Gilbert into the top flight of leading actordom are typical.

Then come down to the modern sound era, there's "Flying Down To Rio" which created not one star, but two, in Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers.

There's also "David Copperfield" from which the youthful Freddie Bartholomew emerged a full-fledged luminary, and "Alice in Wonderland" which draped the stellar mantle about Evrol Flynn's broad shoulders.

And now there's "The Hurricane." Samuel Goldwyn's film version of the novel by Charles Nordhoff and James Norman Hall, authors of "Mutiny on the Bounty" which is now playing to capacity audiences at each performance at the McCarthy Theatre, and should make a star of Jon Hall.

Hall, a cinema unknown is being hailed as a "new Goldwyn discovery" in that category he joins an illustrious list of predecessors who in their time were "new Goldwyn discoveries." As the native hero, "Terangi" he has drawn one of the prize acting assignments of the year, a role that has all the natural markings of a star creator.

Goldwyn, who could have had most any big name player he desired for this part, deliberately chose an unknown. He did it for two reasons. First of all, he considered Jon Hall an ideal "Terangi" The boy has a magnificent physique, is handsome and tests proved that he can act. He was born in Tahiti, has lived there much of his life and is an expert swimmer, diver and surfboarder. He also knows the South Island natives as one who has never lived anywhere else would.

The producer's second reason was the positive belief, born of his "ins and outs" and unerring instinct in "The Hurricane" he has a star-building picture. Here, of course, lashed in a national magazine and book form, has been read by millions. It possesses all the elements of romance, drama and glamorous background which pack popular appeal and, topping all these, magnificent spectacle.

Goldwyn figured that by placing an established name player in the "Terangi" role, he would, of course, have a great picture. By giving that part to unknown he would still have a great picture and a new star. Needless to say, Jon Hall is under long term contract to Goldwyn.

"The Hurricane" is a real interesting spectacle picture which should be seen during its engagement at the MacCarthy Theatre by every man, woman and child that likes entertainment that leaves in the mind something which will always be a cherished memory to them.

In addition to "The Hurricane" the McCarthy presents a splendid all technicolor musical cartoon entitled "My Little Buckaroo" and a very interesting Wagaflash Pictorial Review that all will enjoy.

Nan Grey starred in "Reckless Living" now playing the Capitol Theatre.

AT THE BELLE

"White Banners"

Starting tomorrow the Belle Theatre will present for your entertainment the latest of Fay Lloyd C. Douglas novels in the screen version "White Banners". His two previous efforts "Magnificent Obsession" and "Green Lights" were both outstanding hits and this one is no exception. "White danners" is a picture with universal appeal. Laid in the 1920's, it tells the story of a typical small-town family, discouraged by depression. How they weather this and get a new start in life is a thrilling story that will run straight to the heart of every one who sees it.

Fay Bainter, noted stage actress, whose recent work in "Jezebel" was so highly acclaimed, has the central feminine role. Claude Rains has the principal male lead and Gary Johnson, Bonita Granville and grown-up Jackie Cooper round out the cast of principals.

"Gaiety Girls"

Jack Hulbert Britain's No. 1 comedian is in top form in this magnificent musical. Teamed with him is Patricia Hilliard, one of London's most beautiful stars. "Gaiety Girls" is a bright, cheerful piece of entertainment, packed with amusing situations and snappy dialogue. It gives Hulbert his finest opportunity of his career. The same may be said of his charming co-star who make a perfect partner. The pair put over several attractive song hits, notably "A Paradise for Two" and "Kiss Me Goodnight" which are already established as popular successes.

"March of Time" No. 19

Rounding out the program is another of the popular "March of Time" series. This one deals with "Tragedies and Triumphs" and "Racketeers vs Hopewives" and "Friend of the People".

Ends tonight. Luise Rainer supported by Melvyn Douglas and Robert Young in "Toy Wife" and Edmund Lowe in Edgar Wallace's "Murder on Diamond Row".

STIRLING COUPLE WIN AT BOWLING; BELLEVILLE SIXTH

Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Whitty of Stirling won the mixed doubles bowling tournament held recently on the lawns at the Kingston Bowling Club. The Stirling couple collected 22 points with three wins and 42 pins. Mrs. L. Newman, Kingston, were second with three wins and 43 pins plus one. Mrs. Nesbitt and Mrs. W. Burnham, Kingston finished third for three wins with a plus nine. Other prize winners were:

Eighth—Mrs. and Mrs. Reed, Kingston, three wins and 43 points.

Fifth—Mrs. and Mrs. Beggs, Kingston, three wins and 42 plus nine.

Sixth—Mr. and Mrs. J. Shaw, Belleville, three wins and plus 5.

Seventh — Miss Thurston and W. Building, Picton, three wins, 42 plus nine.

Eighth—Mrs. Evans and H. H. Ainey, Kingston, one win, 36 plus four.

Forty-eight couples competed in the tournament, which was the largest entry in the history of the annual Civic Holiday event.

SOLVE PROBLEMS

from the United States, through British Columbia and the Yukon Territory, Mr. Hepburn said it would be "quite improper for him to express an opinion as it was a subject to be settled "between the Premier of British Columbia and the Prime Minister of Canada."

"But I have a statement to make," he added.

"It did not make for national unity when a certain group of western Canadians sought delay of construction of the international bridge at Niagara Falls, when the Province of Ontario and the State of New York had negotiated a satisfactory agreement for immediate construction of a bridge which would cost $3,500,000 and would furnish much-needed employment.

"As for results," the Liberal leader of Senators J. T. Haig of Winnipeg, A. D. McRae, Vancouver and W. A. Griesbach of New Brunswick, had held up this great project when it came before the Senate Committee and a year must elapse before the Province of Ontario again seeks authority from Ottawa for construction of the bridge.

Export Power

"In the case or export of power from Ontario," he continued, "western members of the House of Commons had been responsible for withholding of jobs that would have meant $3,000,000 additional wages annually to the Province of Ontario.

"We can best build up the Dominion of Canada, by those of us from the east and west applying ourselves to solving our own problems and refraining from interfering with the plans and policies of sister provinces."

Premier Hepburn, Bernard Smith, New York broker and A. P. Bickell, Toronto financier, left Gun Lake Chalet by car yesterday morning after completing a tour of gold properties in this Bridge River district. They spent the week at Harrison Hot Springs," about 80 miles east of Vancouver.

The Premier said he would report at his office in Toronto, Friday.

CANADA'S BEST

When Canada's Davis Cup squad clashes with the racquet-wielders from Japan, starting July 26 at Montreal, the biggest rock Dominion citizens hope the Jap craft will crash on will be Bobby Murray, above, youthful Montrealer, and probably the country's No. 1 player at the moment.

"Please Mr. Jacobs, How's Tony?"

Youthful admirers of Tony Galento, tank-like heavyweight, crowd around Joe Jacobs, Tony's manager as he leaves the Philadelphia hospital where his fighter is waging a battle with the most stubborn pneumonia he ever met, pneumonia. Two-ton was scheduled to meet light heavyweight champion John Henry Lewis on July 26, but was stricken with a sudden attack a few days a before the event. The "ole" condition was considered critical.

Leaps to Death Despite Entreaties

John Ward, 26, unemployed New York bank clerk, ignored the pleas of his mother, fiancee, policemen, clergymen and doctors who attempted to persuade him not to jump from the ninth storey of the Hotel Gotham. Ward is shown here standing on the ledge outside his sister's room, as she, with a rope tied around her waist, leans out the window to plead with him to come back inside the room. Resisting all efforts to entice him from the ledge, Ward jumped to his death 10 hours after taking up his perilous position.

HIS LUNCH BOX IS THE TIME CLOCK

Stratford, Ont., Aug. 2 (CP)— A Canadian National Railways policeman took a bet of time catching his bus a bit wet hoon after work last night. Let for his bus, he snatched what he thought was his lunch box as he passed a work bench. When he got aboard, he found he had taken the shop's time clock instead.

SANTA CLAUS LETTER WRITTEN FOR NORTH POLE

Beaufort, Ont., Aug. 2 (CP)— Perhaps impressed by a recent post office announcement that Christmas mail for the Arctic must leave Ontario soon, a Brantford girl has written a letter to Santa Claus, addressed to the North Pole. Post office employees say this is a record for early Christmas mail here.

Corbys and Point Anne Win Opening Softball Play - offs With Winning Hurlers the Stars

Cementmen Down Belmonts While Corbys Beat 'Grocer Boys'

O. A. S. A. COUNT

Ed Schrieder And Stan Luffman, Winning Hurlers, in Rare Form

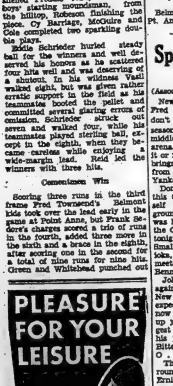
Corbys A.O. and Point Anne drew first blood in the Belleville and District Softball League playdowns as the former romped home to an easy 11 to 2 win over National Grocers at Coleman Flats while the "Cementmen" were forced to come from behind to win 3 to 4 over the Belmont kids on their home diamond. The Corbys' victory was chalked up in a dual win, counting both in their O.A.S.A. league playoffs and in the district loop playdowns as well.



It was a rather drab affair at Coleman Flats as Chuck Barnett's Corbys punched out six runs in the second inning and coasted in, adding three more in the fourth and last capping off the match with a pair in the eighth. Ral Kemp's "grocer lads" counted their two counters in the eighth and without registering a single hit off the deliveries of Eddie Schrieder, Corbys winning hurler of the night. Two walks and several ragged balls gave the "grocer boys" their runs.

Reid and Cole hit in open the second for Corbys and both scored on McMartin's subsequent single. Ellsworth completing the sacks with a circuit blow. Reid's double helped the winners in the fourth as they scored three more and Cly Barriage's single ahead of Reid's homer in the eighth terminated the winners' scoring. The Corbys nine fielded Freddy Vasil, the Grocer boys' starting roundsman, from the hilltop, following him behind the plate. Cly Barriage, McGuire and Cole completed two sparkling double play.

Eddie Schrieder hurled a steady ball for the winners and well deserved his honors as he scattered four hits well and was deserving of shutout. In his wildness Vasil walked eight, but was given rather ragged support in the field as his teammates booted the pellet and committed several glaring errors of omission. Schrieder struck out seven and walked four, while his teammates played sterling ball, except in the eighth, when three in a row came across after enjoying a wide-margin lead. Reid led the winners with a 3-for-4.

Cementmen Win

Scoring three runs in the third frame Fred Townsend's Belmont kids took over the lead, 3 to 2, in the games at Point Anne, but Frank Sedcon's charges scored a trio of runs in the fourth and three more in the sixth and a brace in the eighth, after scoring one in the second for a total of nine runs for nine hits. Green and Whitehead punched out hits to start the ball rolling in the fourth, while Gerlach, Whitehead and Genereaux hit in the sixth with Dickey and Whitehead doing the clubbing in the eighth for runs. Carson, Whalen and Rowan hit for the Belmonts to show three in the third, while Ethier's circuit blow terminated the junior's scoring in the seventh. Reynolds collected two singles to lead the juniors at bat honors, Whitehead with three and Gaulin with a brace of hits led the visitors at bat.

PERFECTOS OR PANETELAS 10c 2 for 15c

Stan Luffman went to the hillock for Frank Sedcon's homesters and struck out four while walking one, Lum Carson, who was given credit for the winners while Young and Mills batted well for the Lowry.

The line-ups:

East Belleville—Mills, 3b; Healy ss; McIntyre, 2b; Reynolds cf; Young lf; Goyer 1b; Correll, lf; Moore, rf and Cooper if.

West Belleville—Rogers and Shappee, c; Hall, p; Reed 1b; MacKie, 2b; Reeves ss; Burns lf; Young rf; Mills ss, and Burk 3b.

Score by innings:

West ..... 0 1 0 0 4 0 2—7 runs
East ..... 3 1 2 3 0 0 1—8 "

Sports Roundup

(By Eddie Brietz)

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

New York, Aug. 4.—If Jack Dempsey and Young Corbett don't open the Gardner's indoor season October 3, they'll settle their middleweight dispute at the ringside arena November 18 . . . Believe it or not . . . Every Tuesday train brings a load of broke horse players from Saratoga . . . Ah, the Yankees, rest and sleep nights!

Don't let anybody try to tell you that Tony Bryant didn't hurt himself a ball game at the polo grounds yesterday . . . He had one of his pitching elbows buttons right off the Giants' shirts . . . winner of Monday's Pennsylvania horse races, Small Montana and Katsumi Morioka, the Japanese-Canadian jockey . . . Little Dado of California for Benny Lynch's old title . . .

Joby Lewis' $200,000 suit against the three members of the New York State Commission is expected to be filed today . . . And now comes Doug Smith from way down in Texas to say that he can't get Tony Galento may have caught his pneumonia from being "Frolic Bitten" . . . Ouch with a Big O !

There's a tall one going the rounds out at Hobbs, N.M., that Ernie Lombardi was forced to go long to can light a cigarette, stand under a shower and not get the coffin Tack wet . . . A good one, Schoop !

Burgess Whitehead rays his side still hurts a little . . . Keep your eye, on a Bronx middleweight named Al Bernar who has Texas on the fire with 29 wins in 30 starts . . . Gosh, but it's hot in little old Nou York. . . .

Playground Notes

Behind the stellar hurling of their new pitching find, Healy, the East Belleville playground ballsters made it 'all even' in the city playground series versus their West Belleville rivals when the East won a scheduled game by a 9 to 7 score. The West Bill lads had previously gained an initial league game victory, but yesterday's reverse evened matters in the league standing.

The winners opened a torrid batting attack in the initial frame to score a trio of runs and added three more in the fourth, while the West Bill boys put on the pressure to score four in the fifth, but their seventh inning rally was throttled as Healy and his East Belleville teammates tightened. Theobold and Goyer swung potent bats for the winners while Young and Mills batted well for the Lowry.

The line-ups:

East Belleville—Mills, 3b; Healy ss; McIntyre, 2b; Reynolds cf; Young lf; Goyer 1b; Correll, lf; Moore, rf and Cooper if.

West Belleville—Rogers and Shappee, c; Hall, p; Reed 1b; MacKie, 2b; Reeves ss; Burns lf; Young rf; Mills ss, and Burk 3b.

Score by innings:

West ..... 0 1 0 0 4 0 2—7 runs
East ..... 3 1 2 3 0 0 1—8 "

Terry Suspends Melton and Giants Lose to Cubs; Yankees Bow to Tigers; Pirates Lose

Major League Clubs Staging Real Dog-Fight in Both Loops

VANDER MEER WINS

Clubs Purchase New Blood in Last-Minute Splurge Down Stretch

By HUGH S. FULLERTON, JR.
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

At least two Major League clubs have learned recently, if they didn't know it before, that a good ball team isn't quite enough to win a pennant in the kind of races the two big baseball circuits are staging this season.

There's no doubt New York Giants and Boston Red Sox are good ball clubs, but they're some distance from the top right now and Managers Bill Terry and Joe Cronin are working hard and spending freely in an effort to remedy matters.

The Giants remained five games behind Pittsburgh's National League-leading Pirates despite a 7-0 licking by Chicago Cubs yesterday, but that was only because Pittsburgh took a 3-1 setback in Boston when Johnny Lanning came up with a four-hit game. The Cubs, however, cut New York's margin over them to 5½ games.

Similarly the Red Sox didn't lose any ground to the Yankees, still trailing by 5½ games after their 7-4 loss to Cleveland. That was because the Yanks dropped a 4-3 decision to Detroit Tigers. Cleveland thus gained a four-game margin over the Red Hose."

"Terrible Bill" Terry of the Giants today announced the suspension of Cliff (Mountain Music) Melton. Terry refused to give any reason for suspending his sophomore left-hander who has been belted out three times running, but the act shows he means business.

The Red Sox, hoping to strengthen their pitching corps, have called the ailing Bob Grove back for duty and purchased two minor league veterans, Joe Heving from Milwaukee and Bill Harris from Buffalo. Then they secured Jim Tabor from Minneapolis to replace the injured Pinky Higgins at third.

In another important shift, Present Cletus Poffenberger, the youthful pitcher who was under suspension for a list of misdemeanors as long as his right arm, is Toledo and recalled Al Benton to take his place.

The moves toward improvement didn't show in yesterday's games. Cecil Hollsell and Dick Coffman for 12, including homers by Stan Hack and Billy Jurges.

Tabor was the only Boston newcomer in action. He hit two doubles but Denny Galehouse, Hugo Mrs-acre-armed Johnny Allen's place, kept the rest of a dozen hits scattered.

Vander Meer Wins

Brooklyn Dodgers gained fifth place in the National League by a split-point margin over Boston when they won two games from St. Louis, 6-2 and 9-3. Johnny Vander Meer's return to form helped keep Cincinnati Reds on the Cubs' heels as they downed Philadelphia 3-2.

Washington gained a 5-3 victory over Chicago Browns in a game protested by the losers after Umpire Nick Wildon had ejected a broken wrist in a collision with Billy Sullivan. The Chicago White Sox beat the Athletics, 8-4.

QUINTE TENNIS CLUB HOLDS JUNIOR TOURNEY

The Junior Tournament of the Quinte Tennis Club was held on Saturday afternoon and was keenly contested. For singles the best two sets were used, and for the doubles, one long set, was the basis of competition. The results were all afternoon and the results of the finals follow:

Girls' Singles: Judy Scott defeated Gwen McGrath 6-2, 6-4.

Boys' Singles: Charlie Tripp defeated Wade Tripp 6-3, 4-6, 6-3.

Girls' Doubles: Gwen McGrath and Mary Redfern defeated Peggy Doolittle and Frances Bain 6-2.

Boys' Doubles: Charlie Tripp and Judy Scott defeated Wade Tripp and Arden Smith 6-4.

Yesterday's Stars

(By The Associated Press)

Clay Bryant, Cubs: Shut out Giants with two hits, 7-0, and aided own cause with two singles.

Freddy Fitzsimmons and Dolph Camilli, Dodgers: Fitzsimmons stopped Cardinals 6-2 in opener hurling shutout ball until seventh; Camilli poled 16th and 15th homers in nightcap as Dodgers won again 9-3.

Jim Lanning, Reds: Gave Pirates only four hits as Reds stopped league leaders, 2-1.

Johnny Vander Meer, Reds: Won 12th triumph of season by beating Phillies 3-2.

Monty Stratton, White Sox: Best Athletics 8-4 with nine hits.

Canadian Football Play-off

Winnipeg, Aug. 4.—(CP)—A fighting squad with a disconcerting style of play today held a one-game advantage in the best-of-three series for the right to represent Western Canada in the Dominion Football Association finals.

Winnipeg United Welton came from behind last night to defeat Calgary Northern Electrics United 3-2 in the first game of the series. Second game will be played Thursday night, and a third, if necessary, Saturday. The winner will meet Dons Minns, eastern representatives in the Dominion finals starting here Monday.

Although Frank Corrigan of Ottawa, won the Eastern Ontario golf championship and the Kingston championship trophy on the Cataraqui Country Club golf course, congratulations are also afforded Tommy Carruthers, local and youthful golfer, who won the low net score with a score of 141 for 36 holes. Tommy was recipient of a handsome gold watch in winning the low net score at the Eastern Ontario golf championships on Civic holiday. Veteran golfers inform us that Tommy Carruthers is one of the most promising golfers seen locally in many years and the lad is still in his teens, which leaves rise for hopes he may some day realize his golfing ambition—the Canadian amateur golf championship, for a start.

In Canada tomorrow, Belleville will be to the ambitious team aged kid, just what Akron, Ohio, will be to the youthful world on Aug. 14th when the world's championship "soap box derby" will be competed for with the winner of the Belleville derby one of the two universal contestants in the International event. Aside from the actual race itself, the idea of "soap box derbies" gives the individual boy an opportunity to create and construct his own ideas and later to pit these constructions against others in the same world. Each driver is pitting his individual ability and ambition against the best that this field has to offer. Not only is the actual race a sporting event, but the construction of these "Kid Kars" are supposed to be the creation of the boy, which after all tends to assist the individual in his later battle for life.

Over 60 entries have been received which means there will be over 20 primary heats before the finals which will race in the semi-finals. The "soap box derby" officials have requested that spectators refrain from crowding the course, especially as the finishing line. They will have to give the drivers ample braking room at the finishing line, so necessarily drivers there should be at least 200 feet clearance after the finishing line is crossed. We hope the public will co-operate and assist us in making this "All-Canada" race the success it deserves in Belleville," President Cleo Collins of the Kinsmen Club said today.

Failing to heed the combined warnings of league officials, the clubs in the Bay of Quinte League today find themselves in a rather precarious position in the matter of postponed and unplayed the games. With the league championships slated to advance into the O.B.A. playdowns on Aug. 10th, the Quinte loop officials were forced to call a special meeting to be held in Napanee this evening prior to which Picton will play Napanee.

Napanee has two postponed and two tie games following Thursday night's league game with Belleville. Picton has a game with Kingston and one with Napanee, aside from their tie game with the Belleville nine not to play. Kingston with two games at six bases can only afford to lose one more game of their remaining four, or it's curtains for the Aces.

Yesterday the local intermediates agreed to play in Napanee today, but later found their players were too busy playing softball and were forced to inform Wall Cerow it would be impossible to meet today's previously agreed schedule, although the game was originally scheduled for Thursday. Frankly speaking if the local ball players are more interested in softball than in baseball, why not drop the whole thing and abandon baseball in Belleville once and for all? The players playing softball would rather break a leg than miss a game; when it comes to baseball they demand their pound of flesh, regardless as to who pays the fiddler and it looks like time to either call a halt or get out of baseball—so why not toss in the sponge and give themselves up?

The winning pitchers at last night's opening softball play-offs were tops, Eddie Schrieder hurling four hit ball for Corbys over the National Grocers while Stan Luffman pitched his all ball game for Cementmen downed the Belmont Juniors. It was really no effort for the Corbys in downing Ral Kemp's gang, although the support given the National Grocer starters was, anything but encouraging. Down at Point Anne, however, the Belmont kids did give Frank Sedcon's fellow a much better argument and caused them to the wire, despite six costly errors on the part of Red Townsend's kids. The "Cementmen" and juniors tangle again tonight here in town.

"Thanks for trying to make my punch into a palatial 100 foot yacht, pal, but I'm afraid your fighting a losing battle, as my punch, the Alaska is only a 32 footer, so it would be pretty hard to move the gang-ways inside 18 feet," dryly remarked Harry Smark, owner of the Alaska following our remarks to that effect yesterday. (Sorry Harry, we meant 15 inches.)

HOCKE PODGE—The top teams in both major leagues took a shellacking yesterday, the Indians, Reds and Cubs gaining ground to make the pennant in both league pen berth for the leaders . . . The new yellow — or Chinese ball—was tried in Brooklyn yesterday; result—players say the dye comes off and the pellet becomes mottled. Science says it is perfection, however, but science never played baseball. . . . Say what might be termed a baseball paradox at Coleman Flats last eve' Corbys fielded like fiends, while National Grocers fielded fiendishly. . . . After suspending Cliff Melton yesterday, Bill Terry purchased the veteran Bill Cissell from Baltimore; no apparently humorists muffed.

When the bewhiskered House of David nine appeared in Peterboro' on Monday night, no less a personage than Bert "Lefty" Noakes, former Belleville junior moundsman, started on the mound for the hairy-faced gang, and how Bert gave a beard so fast is still puzzling Manager Frank Powell of the local junior squad. The House of David didn't fare very well in either Oshawa or Peterboro, losing two in the latter city, Noakes hurled 3 1-3 innings, allowing four runs and four hits. He struck out two and walked a brace during, an encore on the Bewhiskered hilltop. Incidentally, the House of David bested the Bat-Men continued errors, being chalked up with ten in the two games at Peterboro' and eleven in one game at Oshawa, where the Motor City scribe secured a little incidentally. He belittled the hairy-faced gents' ability as ball players and then turns around, and writes columns pertaining to their two games at Oshawa.

Stirling

Stirling—Coming from all parts of the county the descendants of James Thompson, Hastings County pioneer, gathered at Fairfield's Bridge on the original property where the homestead was established for the second annual picnic and re-union. Rain did not hamper the attendance as much as was expected. Windsor, Rochester, Toronto and other distant places were represented and a most enjoyable time was had as the sky cleared. At the conclusion of the dinner, the gathering was called to order by Mr. Gilbert Thompson of Stirling president, and a most enjoyable programme began with lively community singing led by Joseph Gow. This was followed by the Lord's Prayer in unison. Miss Helen Thompson, secretary, then presented her report on the first re-union which was held in 1937. During the period set aside for the election of officers for 1938 the following members were appointed to direct affairs for the coming year.

President—Mr. Perry Thompson.
Vice President—Percy McDavid.
Secretary— Mrs. Phillips.
Treasurer—Dr. Demorest.
Programme Committee—Richard Reid, Convener; Mrs. Seymour Waller; Milton Reid, Alex Rose.

It was also decided that the McDavid property be selected as a permanent picnic ground for the annual gathering. At this time the secretary reported births, deaths, and marriages that had taken place during the year and a memorial service with a two minute silence was observed. The treasurer's report revealed the finances in good condition.

Mr. Roscoe Robson, Reeve of Thurlow Township addressed the gathering and voiced his pleasure in being present.

The next number was a humorous skit by Joe Gow, talented comedian, who is well known throughout the district. Dr. Demorest of Stirling gave an address on the family history and placed on display a lineage chart which enabled all present to trace their ancestors. Dr. Demorest having made a study of the subject was able to present many facts of interest to those present. The remaining numbers on the program followed in the order given musical selection—guitar and mouth-organ, Donald Thompson; vocal duet, Nellis Hodgins and Joe Gow; vocal solo, Gerald Thompson; tap dance, Kenneth Thompson; Speech by Rodger Mathieson of Stirling; instrumental duet by Robson sisters; speech by Al Gills. Musical number by Mr. Gow.

Sports Programme

Later in the afternoon an excellent sports programme was directed by the sports committee with the following prize winners:

Guessing contest — Kenneth Thompson.

Oldest married couple present — Mr. and Mrs. Holmes.

Youngest married couple—Mr. and Mrs. Carl Reid.

Those present from most distant point—Holmes brother of Windsor.

Youngest child present—daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Seymour Waller

Races

Girls—4 to 10 years—B. Thompson, 10 to 14—Miss Haggerty.

Shoe race—Miss Fox.

Boys 10 to 14—Kenneth Thompson.

Wheelbarrow 16 to 20—Burton Thompson.

Men's race over forty—Walter Thornton.

Glenn Ross Win Rawdon Softball Championship

Defeat Springbrook 16-8

About five hundred people formed the enthusiastic crowd that cheered themselves hoarse at the Stirling Agricultural Grounds on Friday night when Glen Ross captured the Rawdon softball Championship and the handsome silver trophy which goes with it. It was the largest crowd to attend a softball game in Stirling for several seasons and they were well repaid with an excellent brand of ball. In three first two meetings of the series Glen Ross took the first by a small margin and dropped the second game on their own diamond to even the count. All the surrounding county was represented at the final game. Smith seemed slightly smarter than Broadworth, who was not up to his usual standard on the mound. Smith on the other hand far exceeded any previous performance and pitched the entire game. Fine fielding was exhibited by both teams and the game ended with Springbrook lustily cheering their victors in sincerity.

The winners started slugging hard in the first innings and five runs crossed the plate before they took to the field. Their performance in the field was also superior holding Springbrook to only one run until the end of the fourth. In the fifth they got three and the crowd roared as they clicked for four more in the seventh. But the winners settled down and held tight Glenn Ross got five in each of the first and fifth and a pair in the last two innings making the total over Allen Glenn Ross 14; Springbrook 8.

The Teams

Springbrook—M. McKeown c; M. Heath 2b; D. Broadworth ss; C. Broadworth lf; M. Gilmer 3b; C. Thompson 2b; C. Burkitt cf; A. Holland rf; H. Bateman lf.

2nd Thurlow

2nd Thurlow — The Neighbour's Aid held a very successful lawn social on July 27th at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Mitchell with good attendance. Mr. Arthur Burke very capably acted as chairman for the evening. The fish pond in charge of the Misses L. Mitchell and Flossie Terry, caused lots of fun and excitement. The following programme was thoroughly enjoyed: Chairman's address, Song by Masters Cecil-Sisrt and Earl Grills; recitation by little Freda Mitchell; song by Misses Ila Keene and Lois Dent; two musical selections by Miss Laura Keent, and Messrs. Stanley Mitchell, Jack Howe and Douglas Mitchell; solos by Mr. Albert Hillman; reading by Mrs. Percy Spracklett; piano duet by Mrs. S. Grills and Miss Lorena Relght; accordion and concertina selections by Mr. Harvey; Recitation Isabel Atkins; musical selections by Miss Bernice Robinson, Misses Merle Robinson and Wilbur Warnamaker; mouth organ selections by Lorne Doherty, and Oscar Post; piano solo Miss Lorena Haight; guitar music Mr. H. Doherty; song June Terry.

Mrs. F. Doxtator president of the Aid, with a few brief remarks, moved a hearty vote of thanks to Mr. Burke, and to those taking part in the programme, the committees and to Mr. and Mrs. Mitchell who kindly offered their lawn and home. After singing the National Anthem, cake, coffee, and sandwiches were served.

A Belleville Boy May Speed Across This Line on August 4th

The thrill of thrills—the finish of the National Finals. With the frenzied cheers of thousands urging them on, the three finalists sped down the concrete ribbon at Derby Downs to decide the 1937 Soay Box Derby championship and the winner of the grand prize—a four-year college scholarship. Bobby Ballard, 12-year-old White Plains, N.Y., champion (right lane), won the coveted honor, nosing out the runners-up from Detroit, Michigan, and Bethlehem, Pennsylvania. Overhead on the judge's bridge, radio announcers broadcast the results to the listeners back home, while newsreels and cameramen recorded the exciting finale.

Exhibit Heralds Derby Day's Approach

This Soap Box Derby exhibit, in the lobby of the General Motors Building in Detroit, is a reminder that the thrills of Derby Day are at hand again. Boys from more than 100 cities and from Panama and Hawaii, will gather at Akron, O., Aug. 14, to compete for the awards in this unique coaster-wagon race, sponsored jointly by the newspapers and the Chevrolet Division of General Motors.

The exhibit, which has attracted thousands since its installation July 17, consists of four general parts. Its central figure is the group of valuable trophies, which, in addition to a university scholarship and two new Chevrolets will be presented to winners at Akron. A display of winning entries in the 1936 mechanical drawing contest conducted jointly by Scholastic Magazine and the Joseph Dixon Crucible Co., makers of Eldorado Pencils, have also excited much interest. It consists of six plans for Soap Box Derby racers, selected from more than 30,000 entries.

The tiny racers, entitled respectively "The All-American and "The Akron Beacon-Journal", were constructed according to Derby specifications by 117 boy students of Hower Vocational High School at Akron, at a cost of $6.37 apiece, of which was spent for wheels and axles. The cars are for test and display purposes, and are not to be raced.

A huge photo-mural showing the throng at last year's finals provides a striking background for the display. Due to the crowds surrounding the exhibit all day, the photographer had to postpone his shots until late at night.

Great care is taken to be sure that each car, with driver, does not exceed the specified weight limit of 250 pounds. Accurate scales, furnished by the Toledo Scale Co., are on hand at all local races, staffed by competeit operators, to check this important factor. Most champions have built as closely to the limit as possible. Extra weight usually means extra speed.

In many cases, weighing and measuring are done at the same time. In addition to checking the weight of car and driver, the inspection committee may also check the dimensions of the car to be sure they are within the allowable limits. In this instance the weight and overall height of the car are being checked at the same time.

NEW YORK EXCHANGE

New York, Aug. 3 (AP)—The stock market retired to the shade for a rest today after exhausting its energy on an early spurt.

Prices rocked back and fourth in narrow range while dealings dragged. There was a minor setback when the rally, carrying over from the preceding session, played out but selling quickly ran its course. Near the final hour prices were mixed throughout the list and the market about unchanged on the average.

Transactions were about 830,000 shares.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Aug. 3 (CP)—A mildly weak tone marked the Toronto Stock Market in the closing period today. A few of the golds were inclined to rally in the late phase but the list failed to follow and minor losses predominated in both mining groups and the industrials at the close. Volume entered the million share mark with the big action in the medium-price golds.

Senior golds, Dome and McIntyre, held strong while McLeod-Cockshutt, Chesterville, Hard Rock and Pamour lost ground.

Changes were narrow in base metal group with the seniors showing firmness. Western oils weakened, especially Calgary-Edmonton and in the industrial group utilities and steels dropped fractions, foods and papers were steady and the senior oils and liquors higher.

HOG QUOTATIONS

Toronto, Aug. 3 (CP) Hog prices continued their decline on most Ontario markets reporting today. Live-weights dropped 25 cents at Chatham and Hull and 50 cents at Brantford and Peterborough. Dressed weights were $1 lower at Chatham, 65 cents at Peterborough, 50 cents at Brantford, 35 cents at Kitchener and 30 cents at Hull.

Live-weights: Brantford $10.25. Chatham $10, Hull $10, London $10, Peterborough $10.

Dressedweights — Chatham $13, Hull $12.70, Kitchener $12.30, London $13.65, Brantford $12.30, Peterborough $12.35.

Board Room Gossip

As supplied to Biggar and Crawford
By Financial Service

Home Oil.

With more than 75,000 acres of potential oil bearing lands, development of which is proceeding, and in addition 20,000 Royalite shares, the company is in a strong position, says Nelson Spencer, president, in an interim report which tells of acquisition of additional acreage in North Turner Valley and in the Brazeau Field. Forty acres located in the centre of the 10,000 acre block already held in North Turner Valley were taken up to consolidate the company's holdings and eliminate the costly necessity of offsetting. In the Brazeau a further 1920 acres, within the boundaries of leases already held, have been acquired for 20,000 shares of Home Oil (Brazeau) Ltd.

The paramount question in the Street is whether the market is headed for higher prices in the immediate future. It is a difficult question to answer, but a study of the situation reveals the fact that business is improving, even if slowly, and that the fall outlook as a result of the bright crop prospects, is quite promising. Barring unforeseen developments, the stock market should move forward over the next few months.

A prominent local broker expressed the view this week that he is convinced that the majority of stocks are headed for higher levels. This individual is quite conservative and his opinion carries considerable weight. Reactions will develop from time to time, but such occasions should be taken advantage of for the acquisition of favorably situated equities.

The Trader in Barron's points out that since there is nothing at hand in the way of earning power to justify the current level of prices, the only conclusion is that the preponderant opinion of capital is that something will occur in the future to make equities more attractive. In fact, only that conviction accounts for the stubbornness of the market during the early spring in the face of the dire trends and predictions from the major industrial centres. The exaggeration of the forebodings of three months ago is most clearly apparent in the second-quarter earnings of General Motors and Chrysler, which, though far below the same period of 1937, showed a sharp gain over the first three months.

Dominion Bridge.

During the last building boom in Canada the Dominion Bridge Company handled a tremendous volume of business, resulting profits were large but dividend disbursements during this busy period were conservative. As a result of this far-sighted policy the company has been able to maintain dividends without a break right through the depression although the quarterly rate was reduced from 50 to 30 cents a share early in 1935. The annual dividend of $1.20 a share has been earned in only one year since 1923. Earned surplus stood at $7,150,941 on October 31, 1937. Ten years ago the capital stock of Dominion Bridge had a large following. It was then strongly sponsored and several of the leading specialists of the day held some good-sized blocks of stock. Since then Bridge has become more or less of an investment issue. The speculative appeal is gone and the indications are at the moment that it will be a long while before the Dominion of Canada will need any new skyscrapers or enormous $20,000,000 bridges. However, it is just possible that this company will benefit to a moderate extent at least from the aircraft business which is expected to be placed in this country on behalf of the British government. At any rate, a large amount of tools and equipment will be needed for our aeroplane-making concerns and Bridge or its subsidiary, Dominion Engineering, are in a position to furnish such requirements.

Livestock

Toronto, Aug. 3—(CP)— Cattle trade was dull on the morning of the Toronto livestock market, today. Except for a few butcher cows at $3 lots to sales were too few to establish prices. Calves, sheep and lambs held to former price levels while no hog price was set in early dealings. Cattle tradeover from Tuesday was 2,700 head.

Receipts reported by the Dominion Livestock Branch were: Cattle 270; calves 430; hogs 380; sheep and lambs 180.

Choice veal calves were $3 to $8.50. A few grassers sold downward to $4.00.

Previous close on off-truck bacon hogs $10.50.

Good ewes and wether lambs sold at $9.50 and other grades from $7.50 to $8.50. Sheep brought from $3 to $4 cwt.

Butter Surplus in Large Centres

Toronto, Aug. 3—All lines opened the week quietly at easier prices on the local produce market yesterday. Sales were not sufficient to establish prices on the butter market. Traders stood on the sidelines during the morning session awaiting the preliminary stock figures, and remained out of the market in the afternoon, when a large surplus was revealed in the three cities' butter holdings. Amount of butter on hand in Toronto, Montreal and Winnipeg as of Aug. 1 was reported by the Board of Trade at 393,838 boxes, and compares with 329,464 boxes a year ago, an increase of 64,374 boxes, or 3,594,944 pounds. A month ago the increase in holdings from a year ago totalled 36,735 boxes, or 1,497,760 pounds. Dealers were hesitant at quoting prices yesterday, but nominal quotations of 24¼c were picked on No. 1 Ontario creamery solids, 24c on 38 score, and 23½c on 37 score. Prints were unchanged at 25½c to 27c for top grades, and 23½c to 25½c for 38 score.

Slow trading resulted in slight accumulation of fresh receipts on the egg market, and prices were reduced on top grades in the graded and retail sections. Prices to the retail trade fell to 30c for A-large, 28c for A-medium, 26c for B's, and 24c for C grades. Graded shipments were offered at 27c for grade A-large, 26c for medium, 25½c for B's, and 23½c for C grades.

In quiet dealings, new makes of cheese to the wholesale trade eased. New, large parafflined was quoted at 14c to 14¼c; twins at 14¼c to 14½c, and triplets at 14½c to 14¾c.

Butter Surplus At Montreal.

Montreal, Aug. 3.—A surplus of butter appeared on open produce markets today, depressing prices of prints and solids about ½c each. Cheese and egg prices, however, were unchanged.

Creamery butter prints to retail dealers sold for 26c to 26½c a pound, and solids for 25½c to 25¾c. Quebec No. 1 pasteurized wholesale jobbing price was 24½c to 24¾c. Receipts: 509 boxes.

Cheese sold for 14c to 14½c a pound for No. 1 Ontario white, 14¼c to 14½c for Ontario coloured, 13¾c for Quebec white and 13⅝c for Quebec coloured. Receipts: 1,683 boxes, including 285 for export.

Graded egg shipments in cariots or less sold for 27½c to 28c a dozen for A-large, 26c to 26½c for A-medium, 24c to 24½c for B and 22c for C. Receipts: 1,164 boxes.

Smaller Boats Are Warned

Damage caused the Bay Bridge by last Thursday's storm, and another storm in this district is still being repaired by local electricians, and in the meantime owners of small boats crossing to and fro under the bridge are warned to slow speed and use the south channel. A heavy submarine cable, part of the system which was affected by the storm, is undergoing repairs. A temporary line is put in at a distance from the water under the north span and there may be danger of stray arcs striking this wire, thus creating under, hoat owners are warned.

Larger boats which usually use the south channel can be given sufficient notice and warned in time to avoid it, it was pointed out. The only worry, then, are smaller boats which cannot be warned so easily.

Hugh Jones, Madoc, Sought By Friends

HUGH JONES, Madoc.

Missing since early yesterday 42-year-old Hugh Jones of Madoc, is today being sought by anxious relatives, police and a posse of villagers. Jones has been suffering from a malady for some time, is believed to have been affected in the head and mental paralysis and might have wandered into the bush. A police bulletin issued today under Provincial Constable Dymone was circulated and residents in the surrounding police were asked to be on the alert in an effort to find the missing man.

Obituary

G. G. ASELSTYNE

(Deseronto)

Ill for some time past, the death occurred last evening of Mr. G. G. Acslatyne at the home of his sister, Mrs. G. Wagar in Deseronto. Deceased had been a well known resident of the town where he had lived for the past several years. He is survived by his sister, Mrs. Wagar in Deseronto and by one brother in Frankford and one in Toronto. A son resides in Ottawa.

The late Mr. Acslatyne was born in Ernestown in 1852 and had lived at various times in Belleville, Picterborough and New York State. Of late years he had resided in Woodstock where he carried on the profession of photography and artist. Thirteen years ago he came from Woodstock to Deseronto where he had since resided.

He was one of the oldest members of Union Lodge, No 6, of Napanee, and while residing was transferred to King Solomon's Lodge.

One son, Roy of Ottawa, two brothers, John of Toronto and Charles of Frankford and one sister, Mrs. Wagar of Deseronto, survive.

The body is resting at the funeral home of Evan Gardiner of Deseronto, from where it will be taken Thursday to Woodstock for interment there.

Police Blotter

Although no arrests were reported in Belleville and environs during the 24 hours, local police impounded what appeared to be an abandoned automobile early today.

The vehicle, bearing Ontario licence plates number 2A 728, has been parked on East Bridge Street for two nights and one day before being removed to a county garage by Constables Arnott and Taylor. The licence plates were issued in Toronto and efforts to locate the owner were in progress today.

Although the humidity has been lenient for some days past, transients continue to seek shelter nightly at the police station, seven sleeping quarters in the city last night.

OIL COMPANY CHANGES MADE

Following the completion of considerable work of rebuilding and enlargement of the Imperial Oil Bowen station, it is announced that the Triton distributing station for the Imperial Oil Company will be moved to Belleville this week. The new accommodation of the local plant will enable it to serve the entire Belleville district and the other stations in this area. Among the agents of the Company who will be located here will be Clifford Bread of Picton. It is stated that five new trucks will be used by the company to serve the entire district.

Britain's safest place, says the Minister of Transport, is the Scilly Islands, where there was not a single road accident last year.

To Battle for Sculling Crown at Canadian Henley

When the leading oarsmen of Canada and United States churn up the water at St. Catharines, during the three days of the annual Canadian Henley, starting July 28, one of the features, as always, will be the single sculls. Defending his title in this event will be Joe Burke, LEFT. New Jersey fruit-farmer and probably the world's best amateur sculler. Joe won the crown last year, as well as copping the United States title and journeying to England this year to win the Diamond Sculls. Chief opposition for the powerful invader is expected to be furnished by Johnny Coulson, RIGHT, of Toronto's Argonaut Rowing club. Coulson twice attempted to win the Diamond Sculls but without success. He has been rowing in the Argonaut eight as well as the singles this year, and the critics are looking for him to give Burke a great battle.

Hetty's News

By Edith Lockett Hosmer

Leslon had been very quiet for some time. In fact, so quiet that it seemed like the calm before a storm. The truth was that there was nothing happening in Leslon [must] them to talk about.

Conversation dragged at Mrs. Banker's, as the Leslon Women's society was meeting.

"I do wonder what's keeping Hetty Sneed," remarked Mrs. Banker for the fifth time, for it looked as if her tea party was going to be a flat failure.

Secretly every woman there was wishing that Hetty would arrive, for if there was anything of interest happening, or about to happen, or had the possible chance of happening, Hetty could be relied upon to know more about it. She was the source of more information, real or imagined, than any local paper would dare attempt to publish.

Suddenly Hetty herself breezed into Mrs. Banker's living room. "Didn't think I was coming, did you?" she inquired. "Well, fact is, I can't stay. Claude Doone thinks I'm down to Carry's store ordering supplies for the—"

"Oh, Hetty! Hetty!" a chorus of voices exclaimed. "Begin at the beginning!"

"Well, my phone's out of order or, believe me, Steve Banker would have been from me before now. As town constable he's the one to deal with this, I guess. You see, Claude Doone drove over yesterday morning to get me to go to the Winston place. He'd just got a long distance call from Mrs. Winston in New York. She wanted him to open up her summer home on the river and have a capable woman go with him and clean the place a bit. She's coming here by motor this afternoon at 4."

"Why, the Winstons haven't been at their summer home since 1917," remarked someone.

"Yes, and believe me, it was a mess, it went on Hetty. You know the Winstons always were close mouthed. Never would find out anything about them. Those two Winston boys Jason and Wilfred, and their aunt just stuck by themwhile I was working around. You selves. I got to thinking about them know, it was mighty queer the way they left in a hurry like. Fact, no one remembers seeing the boys go. Then in Mrs. Winston's bedroom this morning I found this note." With an important air Hetty handed to Mrs. Banker.

"Dear Aunt Ann—Forgive me for running away like this, but I can't stand it any longer. Especially thinking about Jason. Ever your Wilfred."

"My word!" chorused the women.

"Fact," Hetty's eyes sparkled with excitement, "I got to thinking, and remembering how I was up helping Mrs. Winston long about that time and recalled the boys fighting about something. Jason was going to go somewhere and Wilfred wanted to go, too. They told him he wasn't to go. I remembered Wilfred was awfully mad and excited.

"Well, this morning I went in the garden to bury some rubbish and dig a little hole, and this is what I dug up." Hetty opened a bag in her hand with a dramatic gesture and displayed two large bones and several small ones. The large bones were unmistakably of human origin.

"Oh, Hetty! You can't think — you don't mean—" came confusedly from the women.

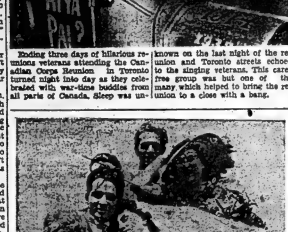
"I don't think—I know," Hetty interrupted triumphantly. "Wilfred Winston killed his brother, Jason and that's why he ran away.

At 4 o'clock a breathless crowd gathered at the Winston house, but it was when a large touring car drove up. Out of it stepped Mrs. Winston and two pretty couples.

"Why," exclaimed Mrs. Winston to the little group, "how dear of you all to welcome us! You all remember Jason and his young brother, Wilfred, who would follow him to war. He ran away, after Jason left to enlist; that's why he left so abruptly. Jason and Wilfred were married this morning in New York and they're come to spend their honeymoon here and they would have me with them."

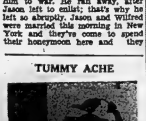
The Leslon crowd looked around for Hetty. Then Mrs. Banker hastily dispatched Steve for several more pies she had made and for the refreshments the tea party of the afternoon had been too excited to eat.

Nobody mentioned the bones, but Hetty found out afterwards that they were human bones, for Mrs. Winston's husband had been a physician and he had used them in his study of anatomy. At his death she had had them buried, as she did not want them about.



Leslon did not care very much one way or another whether there had been a murder or not, for now there was a double wedding in their midst—they had something else to talk about!

Prime Minister King and Canon Frederick Scott, known to 100,000 Canadian veterans as "The Canon" are pictured here as they attended the drumhead service held in Riverdale Park, Toronto, during the three-day Canadian Corps Reunion which was attended by 60,000 veterans from all parts of the Dominion.



Ending three days of hilarious reunions veterans attending the Canadian Corps Reunion in Toronto turned night into day as they celebrated with war-time buddies from all parts of Canada. Sleep was unknown on the last night of the reunion and Toronto streets echoed to the singing veterans. This carefree group was but one of the many which helped to bring the reunion to a close with a bang.

HUGE ICE CAKES ICE AGE RELICS

Fenelon Falls, Ont., Aug. 4 — (CP)—Rumors that two Fenelon Falls men have discovered relics of the ice age are circulating in town. The Jackett brothers, working on the Canadian National highway, were said to have discovered huge blocks of ice at depths of 30 and 40 feet in the ground. As ordinary frost could not penetrate so deeply, many form such large blocks of ice, the Jacketts suggest the ice has been covered for thousands of years.

COW'S MOUTH NEW GOLF HAZARD

Stratford, Ont., Aug. 4 (CP)—A Stratford golfer has discovered an entirely new hazard. When he had trouble finding his ball after a long drive on the Windermere course yesterday, he became suspicious of a cow placidly chewing nearby. He pried open her mouth, and, sure enough, found his golf ball.

Why the Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

Across the Pacific. Perchable weather may be expected in August for those who expect to travel the North Pacific ocean. Winds of gale velocity are rare. There are however, occasional storms east and southeast of Japan which come up from the tropics. Tropical typhoons are likely to occur north of latitude 10 and west of longitude 170, these average about four a year, more than any other month. Those who go west through the Panama Canal may expect in the waters west of Mexico about one storm a month of which about one-half attain hurricane intensity.

THE WEATHER

Toronto, Aug. 4 (CP)—Thunderstorms have centered in many districts from Ontario eastward to the Maritimes and it has been decidedly warmer in the lower lake region and Ottawa Valley, while in the Prairie Provinces it has been generally fair with moderate temperature. A moderate disturbance is centred over James Bay with a trough extending southward across the Great Lakes. Pressure is also low to the northward of the Western Provinces but mostly high over the middle western states and off the Atlantic Coast.

Lake Superior—Moderate or fresh westerly winds; fair and moderately warm today and most of Friday.

Manitoba—Partly cloudy tonight and Friday with scattered showers; not much change in temperature.

Saskatchewan and Alberta—Partly cloudy with much the same temperature today and Friday; probably scattered showers.

Boy Ill With Appendicitis Flown From Haliburton Camp to Hospital

Toronto, Aug. 4—(CP)— An Ohio boy brought by air from a boys' camp north of Haliburton, was reported resting comfortably today at Toronto General Hospital Private Patients' Pavilion. When he arrived in Toronto early Tuesday evening, arrangements had been made by telephone and he was operated on immediately.

Robert Blair, 14, of Shaker Heights, Cleveland, Ohio, was flown 200 miles to Toronto, accompanied by a nursing companion, Mrs. Neustetter, by Pilot Tommy Higgins of Air Trails, Limited, of Hunterville. The youth was bundled immediately into a taxi and rushed to hospital.

A $15,000 seaplane was destroyed by fire late Tuesday while it was being moved away from Toronto air harbor dock to make room there for Pilot Higgins to bring down his patient. The seaplane caught fire as it beached while being hauled from the dock out into the bay.

MILLIONS SPENT ON ARMAMENTS TO PREVENT WAR

British Policy May Lead to Disarmament And Collective Security

DOOR TO AGREEMENT

By J. F. SANDERSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, Aug. 4—(CP)— Great Britain may lead Europe back to disarmament and collective security by the paradoxical method of spending hundreds of millions of pounds on war materials.

Britain is spending £350,017,500 ($1,795,087,500) this year on a vast rearmament program designed to build up a defence force which will be a match for any aggressor nation sticking at her shame. It is one of the greatest rearmament programs the world has ever seen and embraces the army, navy and air force.

Traditional Attitude

For years after the war Britain planned her faith in disarmament and collective security through the League of Nations. Repeated efforts were made to persuade Germany into understanding and to reach international agreement for the reduction and limitation of arms. Britain was willing to take a risk for peace.

But the rise of Hitler and Fascist nations armed while British scrapped ships, almost abandoned the air force and permitted her army to sink to low levels of personnel and modern efficiency.

Britain finally woke up to the realities of the situation, realized

CHILD DROWNS AT TRENTON

Dorothy Van Valkenburg of Kingston Was on Visit to Relatives

Trenton, Aug. 4 (Special)—Dorothy Van Volkenburg, seven-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Van Volkenburg, Kingston, was the victim of the first drowning accident in Trenton district when she lost her life in very shallow swimming pool, on the west side of the Trent River along Front street, yesterday afternoon about three o'clock.

With several other children, Dorothy, who had been spending a few days at the home of her uncle, Mr. Percy Dennis, Front street, was swimming in the three foot pool recently fixed up for the youngsters children. Although two men are employed to watch over the swimming pool, the children were playing noisily and Dorothy's disappearance under the water was not noticed for about five minutes. Mr. Issac Martin found the body and brought her to the shore where Hydro and police officials worked for three hours to revive her. Dr. Gilmour of the child in Kingston were notified and came at once to Trenton.

7 Basic Rules to Avoid Collapse, Lessen Discomforts of Heat Wave

Toronto, Aug. 4—(CP)— Seven basic rules to avoid collapse and to minimize the discomforts of the present heat wave were set forth today by Dr. J. T. Phair, Chief Medical Officer in the Ontario Department of Health. They are:

Take an added quantity of salt in seasoning food in hot weather, thereby replacing the excess lost in perspiration.

Adopt a diet moderate in amount and made up of foods low in fat content. Avoid use of "too much" fried foods.

Drink plenty of water.

Avoid the use of beverages with a high alcoholic content—alcohol generates body heat.

Avoid strenuous exercise—particularly competitive exercises.

Obtain adequate sleep and rest—the burning of energy creates heat but the metabolism of the body is lowest while resting.

Wear light-weight, loose-fitting clothing.

TO SETTLE INCIDENTS

Proposal is Made in Strained Atmosphere of Hostilities

Tokyo, Aug. 4 (CP)-Havas)—Japan today proposed to the Soviet Union immediate cessation of hostilities on the Siberian-Manchoukuo frontier near Korea.

The proposal was made by Vice Foreign Minister Kensuke Horinouchi to the Soviet Charge d'Affaires Constantin Suetanin, during a two-hour conference at the foreign office this morning.

Horinouchi proposed a mutual agreement to cease hostilities in the border zone where fighting has been intermittently underway since Sunday.

Simultaneously, it was learned, Ambassador Mamoru Shigemitsu in Moscow called on the Soviet Foreign Commissar, Maxim Litvinoff, and presented a series of concrete proposals for termination of the dispute.

Terms of Proposal
Shigemitsu's proposals were un-

WM. MOSSMAN IS FOUND DEAD

Body of Young Man is Discovered in Woods in Sidney

After having been missing from their home since early morning, the lifeless body of William Mossman, well known Belleville trucker, was found hanging from a limb of a tree in Tucker's Woods, north of Belleville early last evening by a posse of farmers headed by Provincial Police.

The first indication to make neighbours suspicious that something unusual had happened was when Mr. Mossman's truck was observed standing all day on the side skirts of Tucker's Woods along a concession road. Further suspicions were aroused when a search party was found lying on his driver's seat. The engine was running and which was directed to police headquarters. Police stated today the note was in the possession of the coroner.

The body was first discovered by the dead man's brother-in-law, Roy Mossman, who heror-stricken ran to the home of his parents living on concession 2, Sidney. Later the posse, headed by Provincial Constable Ernest Hollows found the body and notified Chief Coroner Dr. J. J. Robertson, who decided that an inquest would be necessary.

Mrs. Ida Mossman declared the inquest would be necessary.

Mrs. Ida Mossman declared the inquest would be necessary.

When Mr. Mossman's truck was first observed parked along the concession road bordering Tucker's woods little attention was paid to it as the driver had been employed earlier in the week hauling gravel past that point into Belleville. It was not until late in the afternoon that neighbors became alarmed when the truck had been seen there for hours.

The family and friends had searched the woods prior to the notification of the Provincial Police, whereupon Const. Hollows discovered a considerable distance into the woods and at the bottom of a deep ravine a young man. William McBrien, O.P.P., was in charge of the investigation.

DAVID WRIGHT, 15 DROWNS IN CREEK

West Huntingdon Boy's Body Recovered, Resuscitation Efforts Fail

David A. Wright, 15-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Silas Wright, of West Huntingdon, was drowned in the waters of Rawdon Creek near his home in Rawdon Township early last evening. The teen-aged lad was alone when he entered the bath in the creek accompanied by two younger playmates, Billie Donnan and Frank Yateman, when he apparently slipped into the deep water and could not swim. It is divulged, Chief County Coroner Dr. J. J. Robertson, who was summoned to the scene of the fatality, later announced no inquest would be necessary.

Bathing in Rawdon Creek that time across the property of Mrs. Haggerty, West Huntingdon, young Wright is believed to have slipped from a diving board and had been placed in position by more experienced swimmers, into some eight feet of water. The lad shouted for sustenance as he rose to the surface, his playmates, Billie Donnan and Frank Yateman, both younger in age, tried to assist him, with the aid of a stick but their efforts were futile as the sinking youth could not grasp it. Both boys were not expert swimmers.

Mrs. Ida Mossman declared the inquest would be necessary.

CORRIGAN IN FOG LOOKS TO HOME AND ITS WELCOME

Daring Flier Who Flew to Ireland by Mistake Wears Old Clothes

CAN'T SING, DANCE

"So I Guess I'll Stay in Aviation" He Tells Passengers

By PATRICK McGRADY
Associated Press Staff Writer

S. S. Manhatian, at sea, Aug. 4 —(AP)— Douglas Corrigan, very important in the minds of Irishmen, grinned with pleasure today as he looked at the tail of his ship. He bound liner and looked forward to the welcome waiting him.

The ship moved at half speed through fog. Corrigan was in a fog, too, or at least he said he was as he remembered all that has happened to him in the month past—the flight in the old crate from California to New York, the takeoff for home, and the 28 hours of finding himself in Dublin, of all places.

Understands N. Y. Welcome

He knew, of course, what awaited him in New York. He had got more than a din idea of New York's welcome. A couple of days before he started his wild transatlantic flight, when the city sent a little balmy over Howard Hughes and his four world-circling welcoming.

A month ago, Corrigan was repairing, he was just another flier with an airplane that moved one and all to wisecracks. Few had heard of him, and he was the most talked of flier, and to him repairing was to make a living. Most of money he had never dreamed of making—offers to endorse commercial products such as tooth paste and cigarettes, appear in night clubs or in front of movie cameras.

Wears Flying Clothes

"But I can't sing and I can't dance," Corrigan protested. "So I guess I'll stay in aviation."

Corrigan scratched his beset hair as he stood at the rail talking. Most of his answers were limited to a word or a phrase.

He wore the old leather jacket and gray trousers he had on when he flew solo from New York to Ireland.

"If I make another flight in the old plane I expect to set the compass straight," he said.

And though he has been offered much money to do that in night clubs and on the stage he appeared a little concerned that no such offer had been made. He hadn't had come his way.

"I left in a fog and I'm coming back in a fog."

Again he insisted that it was all mistake that he went to Ireland, instead of going home to California that night from where he left Floyd Bennett field.

27 YEARS TODAY WAR DECLARED UPON GERMANY

London Press Refers to Momentous Day of 1914

VIEWS OF NEWSPAPERS

London, Aug. 4 —(AP)—With wars and war talk claiming the anxious attention of the world, London newspapers put unusual emphasis today on the 24th anniversary of Britain's formal declaration of war on Germany.

The Daily Telegraph, in a review of the world situation declared that "as year after year passes . . . international conditions do not grow less but rather more grave." It said the immediate pre-war period."

Fourteenth Danger

The Daily Express (Independent) linked the present danger of war with a "fourteenth danger" of flooding of gold.

"It is a quarter century after the panic mongers of finance are still perpetuating the miserable fear that caused them at the outbreak of the war, fear for their gold reserves," it said.

The News Chronicle —Liberal— declared "the new world is closing in on contemporary youth. It is a restless, fascinated generation. Frightened, formidable world

Queen Spends 38th Birthday at Sea, Princesses Present Her With Gifts

London, Aug. 4—(AP)—Princesses Elizabeth and Margaret scurried along the corridors aboard the royal yacht Victoria and Albert today to the aide of their mother, Queen Elizabeth, with gifts for her 38th birthday.

They had hidden the packages in their nursery cabin since the start of the family's "go as you please" vacation cruise began July 28.

The yacht travelled up the east coast and was expected to dock at Aberdeen today for the royal family's annual visit to Scotland.

At a "family party" attended by the officers of the yacht, the King handed gifts to his wife from himself and others of the family.

The yacht's crew dabbled together to buy the Queen a present and got a doubled rum ration for the day in honor of the occasion.

WINDS MODERATE HEAT INTENSITY BREAK EXPECTED

Citizens Take to Simple Life And Foods to Keep Cool

MANY ON BOATS

Sweltering Belleville, after two days of unbearable heat, awoke to fresh oppressiveness and the same high humidity again this morning. Clammy clouds in the western sky during the late morning gave promise of some welcome thunderstorm or rain in the near future.

The earlier part of the week was one of the most trying times of summer, through the combination of excessive humidity and strong sunshine which beamed through cloudless skies. Hundreds of local residents sought devious ways of combatting the combination which created discomfort and distress to a larger part of the population. Everywhere one looked on Monday evening to the scores who sought relief through the cool breezes of Victoria Park. Many brought blankets and the dependable alarm clocks and those with a real breeze from the bay fanning weary brows, sought solace in sleep. The number of auto owners who drove to the bay bridge road, the west end beach and Point Anne or Prince Edward and other spots along the bay, the heat still seemed to follow. Little relief could be found from the oppressiveness of some of the hottest nights.

On fire escapes of uptown apartment buildings blankets and sheets perspiration indicating owners had moved from hot, sticky bedrooms to the outside air. On the bay dozens of boats carried heat-stricken parties who sought relief on the water, only to be attacked by hordes of mosquitoes whose numbers increased with the heat brought by the recent heat and dampness. Soft drink establishers and confectionary drinks and ice cream concoctions at downtown soda fountains reached a new high in sales while ordinary summer sales was registered. Even the cafe trade felt the effect. Hundreds who could, escaped from the city, purchasing their refreshments at roadside stands and other resort stands, this counter balancing the sales which would ordinarily be registered if intense heat had not resulted in such an exodus.

Probabilities today were for rain, but the heat and high humidity which apparently has set a high record of summer discomfort.

In Event of Rain Race Postponed Until Friday Even

In the event of rain this evening, the real inaugural regatta of the 6:15 o'clock on North Front street hill, will be held at the same time in the same place on Friday, tomorrow, evening, it was announced this afternoon by the racing committee.

CORNWALLIS CHANNEL BREEZE CARRIES ROWBOAT TO ROUGH WATER

Montrealer in England Has Harrowing Experience

TO AVOID HEAT

Fareham Creek, England, Aug. 4 (CP)—After the harrowing experience of being carried in an open rowboat by the tide into the English Channel and buffeted by a choppy sea for hours, Eric Walwright of Montreal was safe in this south coast hamlet today. He said he was determined never to do his rowing in safer waters.

Mr. Walwright, employed at Vickers Aviation works at Weybridge, was spending his holidays at Folkestone and yesterday decided to escape the oppressive heat by rowing across the channel breeze. On the beach at Sandgate, near Folkestone, he left his raincoat tied to his bicycle.

Heading For Sea.

A few minutes later, to the alarm of persons on shore, he was out to sea before a stiff breeze. An alarm was promptly given and two launches manned by three men in a rowboat, an air force plane, and two fishing boats. The fishermen returned without finding any trace of the Canadian.

Mr. Walwright today explained what happened.

"After hitting the boat I found the tide sweeping me out to sea," he said. "I had become exhausted when a cargo vessel and a tug sailed it. The crew picked me up and hauled the rowboat aboard. I saw the airplane but had no idea it was searching for me. I guess I was mighty lucky and, believe me, I'm not rowing on a smaller river henceforth."

PATIENCE AND CONCESSIONS SEEN AS WAY TO PEACE

Former Head of British Board of Trade Pays Formal Visit

SUDETEN ATTITUDE

"Sudeten Community Will Study Written Proposals"

Praha, Aug. 4—(CP-Havas)—Viscount Runciman today began his study of Czechoslovakia's German minority problem as newspapers here, commenting on his arrival yesterday, gave practically views of the situation.

"Patience" and "mutual concessions" were emphasized by the former President of the British Board of Trade in a statement to the press as the best means of securing "permanent peace." Today he was received by both President Edouard Benes and Premier Milan Hodza. His calls were described as purely formal visits.

Sudeten Views

Die Zeit, organ of Konrad Henlein's Sudeten party, warned the German minority that they risk its confidence to Lord Runciman in advance, although it is willing to assist in the unofficial British attempt at Mediation.

The Sudeten German community is quite disposed to support the Runciman mission, said will study written proposals" the editorial said.

Border Protests

Praha, Aug. 4—(AP)—The German government protested sharply today to Czechoslovakia against alleged violation of the frontier yesterday by two Czechoslovak airplanes. It demanded punishment of the persons involved.

COMB (German official news agency) report from Glatz, 12 miles from the German-Czechoslovak frontier, yesterday that two Czechoslovak airplanes flew into German and observers photographed the town.

Many Colts Seen On Pastures

"Hardly a farm in this central district that hasn't a colt running around the pasture this year," stated Mr. Cameron Hardy, Ottawa horse dealer during a brief visit to the city and district today, commenting upon the unusual number of colts which are being raised in Ontario farms this season. In the expectation of higher prices next season, farmers in wood marts are raising as many colts as they are able to rear. Already this year, the Horses are in good demand, and according to hopes, prices will remain lucky and, believe me, prices for six it is reported to the fact that few colts have been raised during the past few years owing to the high cost of feed.

MOSQUITOES STAY

Swarthmore, Pa., Aug 4 (CP)—Swarthmore's dunked 24 goldfish into a spring-fed well on a local golf course with the comment: they'll be back in a few hours." A week later the mosquitoes remained. Police were ordered Reed refused to draw any conclusions.

COW GOES MAD

AND BORES HORSE

St. Catharines, Ont., Aug. 4—(CP)—The heat wave which is benefiting fruits seems to be affecting the animals too. A farmer's cow became crazed in a week with two cows, apparently as gentle as most of the breed. But they proved an exception. Turning fiercely on the horse for some reason, the cows tried so badly he had to be destroyed.

QUEEN REPLIES TO GREETINGS

Her Majesty Receives Many Messages on 38th Birthday

London, Aug. 4—(CP-Havas) — The Queen, celebrating today her 38th birthday aboard the royal yacht Victoria and Albert cruising off Scotland, received many kind grams of congratulation, among them one from Sir Harry Twyford, Lord Mayor of London, to whom she replied as follows:

"The Queen is most sincerely, my Lord Mayor, for the kind message which you, on behalf of the citizens of London, have been good enough to send me on my birthday. The appreciation of good will which the King and I have constantly received from the city of London are a real inspiration to us and a recent demonstration of loyalty upon our return from Paris touched us both deeply. I am indeed grateful to you for your kind wishes. Elizabeth."

FARMERS WANT DRIER WINDS
Cooler Weather Is Wanted Also For Sake of Grain
While local residents mop their brows and sip cooling drinks during the past two days of high temperatures and extreme humidity, farmers of the district are praying for cooler weather and drier winds so that grain still standing will not sprout prematurely. It was reported by Wilson Diamond, Sidney agriculturist this morning. The hot weather of the past week, besides bringing discomfort and annoyance to city residents has almost doubled the work on the farm which is being carried on under disagreeable circumstances. Stock have been suffering from the heat and mugginess and must be watered and cared for with unusual pains, it was stated. Harvesting operations are also being carried on under the threat of heat

'CANADA'S STARS OF TOMORROW' MAKE HIT HERE

Canada's Stars of Tomorrow, a group of young entertainers who very recently were stars of the amateur field and who promise to find an important place in professional entertainments met with the whole hearted approval of audiences at the Capitol Theatre last night. Their act was splendid and each performer showed outstanding talent and definite promise. Dancing, singing, musical novelties and impersonations made up a program which was one of the finest stage performances to visit the city.

"Tippy Tin", played with a real swing by a very youthful musician, Bill Duffy, opened the program and at once gave the audience an indication of the very high standard of entertainment they were to enjoy. The young performer proved a master of his instrument, and his stage presence was that of a veteran.

Following this number Blanche Harris, a fairy like and graceful dancer, was received with enthusiasm by the audience as she sang and tapped. Possessing a fine "blues" voice, and dancing toes that performed with a variety of intricate steps, Miss Harris should go far in her career.

Outstanding among the entertainers was Charlie Sullivan, another youthful aspirant to a stage career. Gifted with a remarkable baritone voice and the ability to use it effectively, his selections "My Margarita" and "I Simply Adore You" were given in a manner that far radio performers could top. Helen Vassaly, another charming member of the group, has a very sweet voice which she used to advantage in her expert interpretations of "Music, Maestro, Please" and "Melancholy Baby."

Adding variety to the program were the impersonations by Bill Harding whose uncanny representations were warmly applauded. The ease with which he impersonated well known radio stage and screen stars, capturing not only their voices, but their facial gestures and mannerism was extraordinary. He was in turn Lionel Barrymore, Edna May Oliver, Charles Laughton, Charlie McCarthy, to mention only a very few out of his extraordinary repertoire.

The stage presentation is being given this week with the screen show "Reckless Living" making a thoroughly enjoyable presentation.

MECHANICAL GIFT SHOWS IN CHECK OF DERBY ENTRIES

Preparations For National Event This Evening (Thursday) Complete

Belleville abounds in mechanical genius.

This is the unanimous conclusion of members of the local Kinsmen Club who for the past two days have been checking, examining and weighing the more than sixty entries in the all-Canadian Soap Box Derby which will take place on North Front street (Derby Hill) at six-fifteen this evening. From this race will be chosen an all-Canadian champion who will represent Belleville, or Peterborough or Toronto in the world's championship Soap Box Derby races at Akron, Ohio, later this month.

Preparations for the race this evening were reported all complete by officers of the Kinsmen Club and General Chairman "Buster" LeBarr. Even a truck for the transportation of the scores of tiny racers which have been parked in the empty building next the Ontario Intelligencer office on Front street, to the scene of the race has this been forgotten by the committee in charge of the race.

Kinsmen Enthusiastic

But it is of the makers of these small masterpieces, duplicates of the world's speedway motorized racers that Kinsmen speak most enthusiastically. Juvenile craftsmen between the ages of ten and twelve and fourteen—master builders, who with tools as simple as a screwdriver and hammer have turned out creations which would do justice to the laboratory of any great motor manufacturing company. Perfect in detail, equipped with every mechanical aid for speed and safety, gleaming in new paint and polished metal, upholstered, in many cases with the same painstaking care of expensive furniture, the cars reflect the genius of their small creators.

I never knew we had so many mechanically-minded kids in Belleville," stated president Cecil Colling. "Some of those cars are built better than many an adult used to tools could do." Which statement finds echo of agreement among the rest of the Kinsmen members.

66 Cars Examined

Of the total of sixty-six which have been entered for approval of the racing committee of the Kinsmen Club which has as its co-sponsor in the race, the Daily Ontario Intelligencer, a few have been rejected. Their builders did not follow the specifications so clearly and plainly outlined and explained in succeeding issues of this paper. In some cases, with the assistance of the members of the racing committee the cars were able to be repaired and given the official stamp of approval. In other cases not sufficient time could be given to rebuild the machine. For this class, it has been announced a special "dud" race will be held, the winner to receive a prize of ten dollars in cash.

Judges for the races this evening have been named, and are Mr. J. B. Boyce, Mr. Newton Thompson, Mr. Fred Douglas and Mr. Wm. Cook. Lt. Fred Jobson, Bandmaster of the Belleville Municipal Band will be master-of-ceremonies during the race.

Spectators are again reminded that Derby Hill (North Front) must be kept clear at all times during the initial runs and races. The co-operation of the thousands expected to attend the race is asked by the committee in charge.

No Representative To Be Sent to Bridge Opening

Belleville will not be officially represented at the official opening of the Thousand Islands International Bridge on June 24th next, it is expected several local publications residents will be in attendance when President Franklin Delano Roosevelt severs the sash on the bridge at three o'clock on that afternoon of that date which will link the two friendly countries. President Roosevelt will arrive in Kingston on August 17, according to information received by Mayor Jamieson Rose and Alderman "Mac" Haig, chairman of publicity of city council. He will remain in Kingston overnight, and proceed to Queen's and Queen's University on the next day. The President and his official party will travel to Kingston in a six-car special train from Hyde Park. He will cross the New York State border

FRONT STREET FACE LIFTING WILL CONTINUE

Modern Store Fronts Are Taking The Place of Old Styles—Signs of Confidence by Belleville Business Men in Bigger And Better Business.

Face lifting of Belleville business section promises to continue—already the paint up, clean up campaign has resulted in a continuation of the business boom all over the city, and particularly in the business section. Announcement has just been made of another new store front to be installed on Front street in which a well known business establishment will have its "face lifted". Not saying it, and appear in the most modern of store fronts when the alterations are completed.

Plans have been completed for the erection of a modern store front to be constructed on the premises now occupied by The J. A. McNabb, Limited. According to the plans and specifications the front is to be a Black Vitrolite facing, with chromium trimmings, and Terrazzo floors. A most up-to-the-minute lighting system is also to be installed. The entrance door will be completed in about three or four weeks after the contractor begins. This is an evidence of business confidence which can not be denied, and is significant of the fact that The J. A. McNabb Co. Limited, in their growing business in Belleville has decided on this large expenditure is a sign of this firm's confidence in the present and future prosperity of this growing manufacturing sign all round.

The upper portion of the McNabb building is to be converted into modern office suites.

It is the practice of the firm to redue the large stock of ladies ready-to-wear, at the closing sale in order to make room for the workmen and protect the goods from injury and deterioration during alteration.

PEARL WHITE DIES, CINEMA ACTRESS

Early Dare-Devil of Screen, She Did Not Want to Return to Movies

Paris, Aug. 4—(AP)—Pearl White, cinema actress in the early days of the motion picture, died today in the American Hospital at Paris.

She was 46 and had been ill for several weeks of a liver ailment. She was born in Greenwood, Mo., March 4, 1889.

In the days when the motion picture business was young, movie audiences sat on the edge of their seats following the daring deeds of Pauline" an adventure-packed serial in which the beauteous heroine managed to reach death's door at the end of each chapter, never to die.

"Pauline" was Pearl White, buxsyed actress catapulted to fame as the first of the dare-devils of the screen. The public shuddered for a week at the thought of Pauline's perilous predicament, as each instalment fated out with the blackhearted villain likely as not cackling with satisfaction, the hero meeting death on the way to the rescue.

He always made the grade at the opening of the next episode, only to let "Pauline" get into deep trouble again. Besides "Perils of Pauline" there were the "Exploits of Elaine" and a dozen other serials of the same melodramatic cast.

Grows Rich in Films

Pearl White grew rich on this. She went to Paris in the early 20s, and afterward saw little of the United States.

For several years she was in the gay international set of Paris and Deauville. In later years she lived quietly, although in her town house in Paris or her chateau at Chesnay, near Rambouillet.

She went abroad in the first place because her movie days had afflicted her health. Back-breaking and stunting for the films took a toll of her eyes and hearing was affected by the lights employed in the early studios.

Recovers Health

She recovered her health in France, but it was then too late to continue type of picture in which she was best. She appeared in Parisian revues and made a few films, the last in 1927. In the same year she made her last public appearance on a London stage.

Pearl White did her own stunts. She leaped from speeding trains, clung by finger tips from bridges and steeples, and endured the jaws of death on swinging ladders. In those days there were no stand-ins or doubles.

In Royal-Regal State

On a 1935 trip to London, Miss White crossed the English Channel in semi-royal state, with a part of the steamsy deck roped off for her special use.

In England, a silver bracelet around her right ankle, Miss White train tagged "Pearl White's Special". A fleet of motor cars was drawn up in London, all labelled "awaiting arrival of Pearl White Special". But most of England was ignorant over her identity, despite the early Hollywood-type publicity efforts.

She liked to see modern movies, but to see again? "Oh, no, not me," she said recently. "I have no ambitions. Why should I? I've got plenty of money in the bank. Why should I go to Hollywood? Do I look crazy?"

The Sporting Way

By ALAN EDGAR HAW

The great day of boyhood dreams had arrived. Jimmie Connell was making some final adjustments to his entry in the National Soap Box Derby. With the air of an artisan he tightened a nut here and there, checked the all-important steering arrangement and flicked imaginary particles of dust from the sleek red body of his racing car.

Finally he stood back and proudly surveyed the work of his skilful young hands.

Doesn't she look a peach, though?" Jimmie enthused, addressing his younger brother.

"I'll say so," said Donald, the light of hero-worship in his eyes. "She's in better shape than when you won the Bayview City championship. You ought to win the Canadian championship easy."

"Oh boy!" Jimmie grinned. "And then a trip to Akron, Ohio, for the World Championship. Just think of it, Don. Won't you be proud if I come home world's champion?"

"Gosh, Jim, I'll bet you do it easy as falling off a log."

"Oh, but there'll be some good cars in that race. Well, anyway, I'll do my best. Dad says it isn't so much the winning that counts but how we try."

"And dad's right," said mother, appearing at the back door, "but to hear you boys talk one would think you already had today's race won. Come in now and eat your dinner; you haven't much time to get ready for the parade."

The boys washed and then sat down to their meal but Jimmie appeared to have very little appetite, the way he picked and toyed with his food. His father glanced at him shrewdly.

"Too excited to eat eh son? It's not good, you know, for an athlete to start out on an empty stomach. Better have a little fruit and a couple of glasses of milk. That's good nerve and energy food."

"Oh, he's excited about the trip to Akron, to the world championship race," interposed Donald.

Their father laughed. "Why, Donnie boy, he hasn't won the Canadian championship yet; and believe me he'll find tougher opposition than he did in the city championship.

"It's a fine thing to have confidence", continued Mr. Connell, "but it's just as well to remember the old saying about counting your chickens before they are hatched."

Jimmie's mother smiled and patted her son on the head. "Don't discourage the boy, father," she cautioned. "I'm sure Jimmie will do his best."

"Of course I will, mother, but dad's right, there'll be some good cars in this race. If they're good enough to beat me it's not that I'll do my best anyway."

Mr. Connell slapped his son on the back. "That's the stuff, my lad; no one is ever condemned for doing his best. But just the same, I think you stand a very good chance of winning."

A few minutes later Jimmie sat proudly in his car near the head of the parade, pushed by his enthusiastic brother. As city champion, Jimmie attracted considerable attention and hundreds of people lining the street cheered him and shouted words of encouragement.

It was the event of the year. The Comrades Club, sponsors of the race, were a live-wire organization. Well-known as lovers of children and champions of the underprivileged, the Bayview Comrades had really put their town on the map for the soap-box derby was a classic any town might well be proud to hold in its confines.

The municipal band was out in full force; dozens of floats, representing Bayview's industries, glided gracefully along; the streets were a riot of color. Scores of tiny cars, propelled by adoring sisters and brothers, made a never-to-be-forgotten picture. The eyes of the world were on Bayview today and each little driver knew it.

Jimmie swelled with pride as he overheard the favorable remarks made about him and his car; "There goes Jimmie Connell, the city champ. Hasn't he a smart car? The kid should take this race easy."

Such praise went to Jimmie's head, like new wine until he began to tell himself that he couldn't possibly lose. Already he could see himself on the way to Akron. He began to play grandstand and waved and and bowed to the admiring crowd.

The Comrades Club had laid their plans well. Loud speakers were installed at strategic points and a well-known sports commentator was at the microphone to keep the thousands of spectators informed of every step in the great race. An ambulance was ready in case of accident, with first aid men in attendance. Nothing had been left to chance.

At the top of the hill Jimmie checked his car over again for loose bolts. He squirted oil on all the moving parts and gave the steering a final test. He, too, was leaving nothing to chance.

The crowd tensed as an announcement blared from the loud speakers. The first heat was ready to start! Three little cars were on the ramp, hugging the starting board. The snow fencing that lined both sides of the street bowed and swayed as the mass of humanity craned their necks.

"They're off!" roared the loud speakers and the crowd in unison as the starting board dipped and three hopeful youngsters flashed down towards level ground.

A black, streamlined car forged ahead. It was not a particularly fancy-looking car but it appeared to be sturdily built and it ran straight and true. The driver was so small only his head was visible but he drove with a skilful hand and finished an easy winner.

The third heat drew forth considerable interest from the onlookers when it was announced that Jimmie Connell was included. Here was the lad to watch—a proven champion. Jimmie tilted his crash helmet at a careless angle as he nonchalantly faced the starting board.

There was the signal! The board dipped and Jimmie's smart red racer leapt down from the ramp like a newly leashed whippet! He exulted as the wind sang its song of speed past the rim of his helmet.

Half way down the hill and over a second dip in the road, the little cars picked up speed and for a dozen yards ahead of his nearest rival; the third little racer was having trouble with his steering. The latter wavered to and fro and then speed proved too much for his car and he crashed into the curb. A groan escaped the spectators.

The announcer played the incident for all he was worth. A crash, coupled with the romping home of the favorite, an easy winner, was something to enthuse over. The lad who had crashed was not hurt, however, and heat after heat followed, some exciting and close, others with nothing to arouse the crowd.

The elimination process finished at last and with the semi-finals the race settled down to real competition. Jimmie Connell continued to win, though his confidence was badly shaken on one occasion when a rival car led him for two thirds of the course, only to have Jimmie gain on the final spurt and win by a scant two feet.

Another car had attracted the sympathy of the spectators—a black streamlined car, steered by a tiny driver, whose face could scarcely be discerned. He was never headed. Though sometimes he crossed the finish line with only inches to spare. Ken North was the little chap's name, and he lived somewhere on the outskirts of town. Nobody seemed to know much about him.

At last came the final race! A great hush settled upon the crowd and speculation as to the ultimate winner was held almost in whispers. The man at the microphone was talking earnestly. Akron, Ohio, was listening in to this final race, he claimed.

A pulse in Jimmie Connell's neck pounded painfully as his heart accelerated with the deepening tension of this crucial moment. He removed his helmet, wiped off the perspiration beaded on his forehead, and climbed grimly into his vivid red car.

Jimmie had been too engrossed with his own races, and the oiling and checking of his car, to pay much attention to Ken North and his black speedster. As the three finalists lined up—the two local boys and a lad from Norono—Jimmie took stock of what he felt was his most dangerous rival.

Not much of a car to look at, thought Jimmie; should be able to beat him all right. The little driver's back was toward Jimmie and he was talking earnestly with a slim, shabby man. His treble voice carried to Jimmie's ears.

"Oh, dad, if I can only win this race and get to go on to Akron for the world championship. It isn't so much the winning that counts with me but I do so want that college scholarship. It means everything to me."

The father patted his son on the shoulder, soothingly.

"I think you'll do it laddie. If you can beat that red car over there you can beat anything. Steer true and watch the humps in the road."

Ken North turned to look at his rival and for the first time Jimmie saw the face of his keenest competitor. It was a pale, pinched little face and the large crash helmet tilted on his head made a pitiful, incongruous picture. The little driver climbed awkwardly out of his car to give it a final inspection and Jimmie noticed with surprise that the boy was lame.

Jimmie swallowed painfully and a strange sinking feeling knifed in the pit of his stomach. Winning against a boy like that wasn't going to be so sweet. Jimmie was too young to be very well versed in philosophy but he realized somehow that Ken North's whole future depended upon his winning the race. Jimmie's father could afford to send him to college and the glory of winning was his chief concern. This other boy wasn't looking for the glory of winning so much as the college education that came with it. Suddenly life was strange, he thought.

"All set, boys," cautioned the official starter, "and may the best man win."

The little cars were crowded against the starting board. Jimmie in the middle, Ken North to his left and the boy from Norono to his right. Thousands of people craned their necks, their excitement at fever pitch.

"They're off!" came a great roar and three little cars dipped their noses toward fame and fortune.

It was a race that would stir the sporting blood in any man. They were neck and neck at the quarter mark, then Jimmie began to inch ahead. At the half-way mark Jimmie's red car was three yards ahead of Ken North's black racer and ten yards ahead of the boy from Norono.

Shouts of encouragement came from the crowd.

"Jimmie Connell—he's winning—good boy—go it lad!" Come on fellow—you can win!"

Then came swift diversion that changed the entire picture. It happened so quickly the crowd was left gasping in astonishment. It happened precisely in front of the sports announcer and his voice increased in tempo as he broadcast the drama to a startled world.

A child had been dangling a large hoop over the snow fencing and suddenly it slipped out of his hand and rolled into the path of the speeding race cars.

Jimmie Connell saw at once that he would miss the hoop but that it would surely roll in front of Ken North, who was nearer the curb and only a few yards behind.

Quick as a flash he leaned out, scooped up the hoop and threw it clear. In doing so he lost his balance, nearly fell out and desperately clutched his steering-wheel. His car veered sharply to the right and the multitude groaned as it seemed certain he would crash into the curb.

Just in time he brought his car under control and took the centre of the road again. The boy from Norono was still a few yards behind but the black racer was in the lead.

A deafening roar broke from the spectators and continued long after Jimmie had crossed the finish line in second place. Strange, he thought, dazedly; they seem to be making as much fuss of me as the winner.

Newspaper reporters rushed over to interview him; scribbling avidly as they clamored for his version of the affair.

"Aw, gosh," was Jimmie's comment, "a fellow can't see a good race spoiled if he can do anything to prevent it."

The newsmen chuckled. This was good copy. Here was a true sportsman and they intended to splash him in their reports to the papers.

Ken North timidly approached Jimmie and held out his thin little hand.

"You should have won, by rights," he said. "I think they should run the race over again."

"Aw—quit cherrieing," scoffed Jimmie. "Your car is as good as mine. If I hadn't been so dumb I wouldn't have lost control. I'm glad you're going to Akron and I hope you win that college scholarship."

"Oh, indeed," came the voice of Jimmie's father, "and we'll be right there to cheer you on. I've decided to take my vacation in a couple of weeks and we may as well visit Akron as any other place."

"Gosh, dad," blurted Jimmie, "you're a real sport!"

"So are you, son. I'm proud of you."

Ken North's eyes dimmed with tears of joy.

3 MEN IN BOAT ESCAPE WARMTH

Fall Asleep as Punt Barely Escapes Speeding Boat

Stripped to the minus quantity of clothing, three men in a boat—a square-rigged craft which slapped idly against the waves at its moorings on a spar buoy in the middle of the bay last evening—slept blissfully on the padded seats. It was an attempt at escaping from the city heat, and their sleep was apparently a dreamless one, undisturbed by the cloud of mosquitoes which hovered over the unconscious forms. But there were other factors forgotten while the three men were lulled by Morpheus. Their craft unlighted, was a potential danger mark for the other speedy boats which churned the weedy waters of the bay, swerving just in time to avoid the dark hulk, leaving a wash which at times stood the punt almost on its beam ends. Still the occupants slumbered, oblivious of the mosquitoes, the speed boats, the heat, et al.

British Expert Expected to Visit Trenton Air Base

In Canada to study training facilities here in connection with a plan of training Royal Air Force pilots under Canadian instruction, Commander A. M. Robb, technical expert of the British Air Ministry, is expected to visit the Royal Canadian Air Force base near Trenton this week.

Commander Robb visited the Royal Canadian Air Force base at Camp Borden earlier this week, arriving from Ottawa on a plane piloted by a R.C.A.F. officer. He inspected fully the facilities of the Camp Borden base.

Military Convoy Passes Thro' City

Enroute to Camp Borden a motor convoy of mechanized units from eastern Canada passed through the city early today under motorcycle patrol escort. Included in the convoy was a detachment from the Royal Canadian Regiment, Halifax, the Royal 22nd Regiment, Quebec City, and several detachments from the Royal Canadian Army Service Corps.

The convoy passed through Belleville at 7 a.m. under the escort of motorcycle Patrolman Sam Ervine, Belleville, and Percy Dowsley, Kingston.

Concentration camp at Camp Borden is the largest which manoeuvres to be held in Canada since the termination of the last war will be staged for a period of over two weeks. The Royal Canadian Dragoons, with horse and motorized equipment, left the Maritime Provinces late yesterday by rail for Camp Borden, where they also will participate in the forthcoming military manoeuvres. When the motorized convoy passed through Belleville it was under the escort of motorcycle Patrolman Sam Ervine, Belleville, and Percy Dowsley, Kingston.

THE CANADIAN CORPS REUNION

The Canadian corps which held its reunion in Toronto with one hundred thousand men present can be regarded as an institution to represent the true spirit of Canada, especially in an age when there are trials and troubles such as today. These men who greeted old comrades who have sealed their friendship with one another and with Canada in their blood and in their deeds of gold were very, very happy when they met in Toronto for it was a great thing to so many to meet with fun, anecdote, even with repetition of some of the rectic scenes which served to help carry the load of services in war years. There was the very human side of meeting with old friends. Then there was the spirit of the representative Canadians who knew what service meant when it meant everything. They stressed Canadian unity.

One of outstanding facts of the reunion is the loyalty of the men of service to one another and to the corps in which they served. One hundred thousand men gathered together in one city from all parts of Canada with one thought in their minds!

They had a good time, they did not neglect the lighter side of life, which is first proof in the iron and blood trials by war. They have the vision. That war has left its marks on them. It has shown them that war is not desirable but that sometimes men have to perform the almost impossible for the best. Theirs are not the ones to be raised in attack o na nation, but theirs it is to preserve and achieve peace, but if an unholy foe arises to attack their land and their loved ones they will show the way to all noble men how to defend and fight as heroes in defence of liberty and friends.

AS IT SHOULD BE

Constant appeals to car drivers are having an effect in Hamilton, the Spectator says, noting that Chief of Police Goodman feels that there has been a real response to the call for cooperation. For over three months there has not been an accident of a fatal character on the roads of the city, though outside Hamilton the record is not so clear.

This avoidance of accident proves that close attention by drivers is the best preventive of tragedies. To attain what Hamilton has attained means that there has been general cooperation, not cooperation on the part of a few with the rest leaving the cooperating to them.

This has meant cautious driving, when men might have liked to let their care "go" a little. But they have done it for the sake of other drivers and passengers in cars and for their own sake and for the sake of pedestrians they have proven themselves the possessors of the truest liberty—that which allows others the fullest liberty. The guarantee of safety and loyalty to their fellow citizens demand that drivers be models of "live and let live."

This fine record of Hamilton shows as the moral law does—that there is true liberty in restrictions necessary for the preservation of life.

Hamilton deserves the congratulations of other municipalities, particularly of the larger ones. There is a belief that it is more easy to drive around a smaller city than is great one and that it is easier to make a record for lack of fatalities in the small one. Yet the record of some of the smaller ones is not too good, and Hamilton has proven that a large city can protect its citizens and visitors.

This is as it ought to be—a record of no accidents of a serious nature. The day will probably come when an accident will be something strange. May that day soon come! That may be asking much, but it is necessary. In that day what a load will be missing from the hearts and minds of motorists, so different from today when so many have had to bear losses or been the unwilling agents of accidents.

The Hamilton record together with the report published yesterday that there seems a direct indication that the people are listening to the appeal of the authorities ofor safe driving suggests the coming of a brighter day without accidents if that is possible.

THE KING IN THE BOYS' CAMP

His Majesty King George visited a camp of 400 boys at Southall, England, Tuesday, in the camp he had sponsored for them.

King George is naturally the ideal of the boys of England. In his days as Duke of York he was keenly interested in boys' work and in the royal seat of England he has not forgotten them.

The monarch of Britain, he came wearing grey shorts, tennis shoes and an open-necked shirt. Then he came in a bowsheet from the royal yacht, the boat manned by a couple of sailors. As he leaped ashore the boys in the camp mobbed their king in enthusiasm.

The visit to the camp was an interruption in the royal cruise as the ruler thought of the public school boys and the boys working in factories then enjoying camp. That camp and those 400 lads will not forget their king.

LIFE

When harvest gold is gleaming
O'er sunny slope and plain,
And summer winds are wooing
The heart to roam again,
Then dreams long since forgotten,
And hopes that stirred the soul,
Come in a throng of memories
And o'er my being roll.

The leaves that sing of summer,
The fields of golden wheat,
The waves that lave the shore-line
All bring a message sweet;
And all the old-time ecstasy
That reigned within my heart,
Comes back in gladsome memory
And forms of life a part.

For oh! the dreams and visions
That filled each summer day
Were parcel of my being
And ne'er have passed away;
The outward life is seeming—
The labor, care and strife—
But thoughts, ideals and visions
Make up the sum of life.

—Helen B. Anderson.

"O! pathless world of seeming!
O! pathless life of mine whose deep ideal
Is more my own than ever was the real."

—Pauline Johnson

SPENDING A BRIEF SUMMER VACATION IN TORONTO is not what it's fired up to be, but there may be cool places there as the Toronto Island, perhaps, which might be coding after a ride on the old-fashioned ferries which chug across Toronto Bay. Sometime, they say there's going to have a bridge over to the Island, but Toronto will have to grow up a bit more to absorb in one gulp such a stupendous undertaking. Toronto had a Mayor one time with a broad vision, and an impressive name, Horatio Hocken, once a printer, later a reporter and editor and later still a member of the Dominion Parliament and publisher of the Orange Sentinel. Mayor Hocken suggested subways for Toronto to make the street traffic less of a nightmare and more efficient. He was laughed out of court because he was years ahead of his time and Toronto continues to suffer, more or less gladly, the inconvenience and the inconvenience because of its outmoded transportation facilities.

However, to get back to a holiday spent in Toronto in the heat. The victim sat in Allan Gardens for several hours enjoying the antics of the kiddies who in abbreviated costumes demonstrated perpetual motion in and out of the fountain. For diversion we talked to newspaper-writing fellows with rather overcoats on and little else, one chap boasting that he hadn't changed his winter underwear yet. He looked lucky to have any. Conversation turned to employment, civic government, provincial and Dominion-ship guys holding down jobs, politicians who had been called fatheads and even racketeers. Some Englishmen were talking about the visit of Britain's King and Queen to France and its postponement because of the death of the Queen's mother. They spoke in reverent tones of the love and loyalty the British Empire-world over in his love for the British Royal family.

x x x

When we shirted to Riverdale Zoo and resumed conversations with occupiers of benches on the state of the nation and what is to be done about it. None were sanguine of any sure remedy and "Back to the Farm" suggestions did not seem to interest. Even as they could see the farmers were not getting anywhere worth while and were little better off than the chaps in the city or relief. Perhaps the wish was father of the thought. Here too, the kiddies in partial undress put on a pleasing show under easily a large class of school children in charge of teachers taking nature history lessons, apparently, with major attention divided between the monkey cage and the polar bears.

x x x

Tired of Riverdale Zoo, as the city clocks chimed the noon hour, we had a bright idea—we'd enjoy a street car ride to High Park, grab a light lunch while walking through the park and just amble along wherever fancy pleased. Here we received another shock in finding that the street cars which used to switch back from the gates of the Riverdale Zoo were there no longer, not even any rail to run on. So we walked, a darn sight farther than we intended, and to be absolutely sure that our take-off from the corner of Carleton and Parliament. After scudding along Carleton and College Streets for apparently many miles we found that it was necessary to change cars and get up to Bloor street some way. Finally by taking a Dundas car we got to the corner of Bloor street, and a Bloor car carried us right to High Park, where we landed with a hungry appetite and were done justice to a six-course meal. Walking, walking, walking, up hill and down dale, and still a sign of an eating place till the shining waters of Lake Ontario hove in sight.

After walking miles and miles in High Park without meeting a human being, we were quite startled when the stillness only disturbed by an occasional automobile carrying folks with such subdued mein that we hated to disturb them with questions—and why it was the best, or perhaps it was the humidity, or the rumor that High Park was infested with bandits who hid behind trees in the daytime and patrolled the walks by night—certain it was that there was no sociability visible. No place to sit down for a chat or even a hot dog stand—not even a honeydew thirst quencher for the asking. Not to talk about it, but we couldn't have been surprised if a bold, bad, bandit had suddenly popped out at us and demanded our roll.

In the midst of all this desolation lo! and behold! in making a short cut through a heavily wooded section we came upon a restaurant, not a tearoom but a real eating place to which were parked about two hundred cars, with we hoped to get the vicarious thrill which shot through us years ago when as a new lad from Canada we got our first glimpse of Coney Island, where all the noise and clatter in the world seemed concentrated at that time.

However, to skip along, we emerged from Sunnyside after landing in a cul-de-sac, and climbing several flights of steel stairs, nearly dying in the attempt from breath shortage — a street car—next stop, the new Globe and Mail building, where a guide was waiting to show us a printer's dream of a newspaper that's too big for this column and merits a story by itself, of a printing office floating on terrazzo, defying all the age-old traditions of the craft where the latest and revered printing shop lowe) will never be known, where the trays and cases of historic renown would not dare to set his dusty feet, and where all Mark Twains happy description of the old time newspaper shop would fail to fit by a million miles. We wandered around on this personally conducted tour and were told that certain offices with closed doors and forbidding aspect house such notables as Judith Robinson and J. W. McAree, automobile—and would you believe it we almost walked right in—then happily recovered our sanity and realized that any guide-conducted alighteer hustin' in on their guarded privacy would be shot at sight or torn apart by McAree's pedigreed reverbuncle or hoodnoodle or what have you. So we turned sadly away, realizing what a narrow escape we had, and by and by vanishing. Wonder if Judith and Mac realized what a narrow escape they had.

x x x

And that, dear children, perhaps is why we hesitated to disturb the serenity of that old dreamer Bill Wright who brought his prospecting pick out of the Cobalt-Kirkland Lake country just to show the rest of us how to remember productive plant in the world was made possible because of the wealth of natural resources in New Ontario and that we never say die of rugged pioneers who suffered hunger, thirst, black flies, mosquitoes, heat, cold and forest fires to insure Ontario and Canada of a prosperity we would not have had otherwise. And Bill Wright, although his stake has grown considerably since its old Cobalt days, can still sing, no doubt.

x

Let's sing a little song of Cobalt,
The best old town we know of.
If you don't live here its your fault—
Where all the silver comes from, etc., etc., etc.

L'ENVOY—Wonder if Bill Wright, Big Newspaper Magnate, remembers Burr Mosure, "The Man on the Spot" and the Toronto World's office in Queen's Hotel—those were the happy days—ask Sid Logan, Big Banking Tycoon, first bank manager in Cobalt, also in a tent—later General Manager Canadian Bank of Commerce, now President of the Institution.

That Body of Yours

By James W. Barton M.D.

You Can Live Many Years With Heart Disease

"At a clinic which the eminent heart specialist, the late Sir James Mackenzie, was conducting in Edinburgh, the amphitheatre was filled to overflowing with students and outside physicians, many of whom were expecting a spectacular and learned discussion. The first patient was a middle-aged woman who had suffered since girlhood from a heart condition caused by rheumatism. Her heart had "compensated"—that is, done its work properly all the years until just three months previously, when suddenly the heart broke down and she had to spend much time in bed.

After hearing the report of the case and the findings, Dr. Mackenzie, instead of giving a lecture to the students and physicians, stepped over to the patient and asked her if she had recently made any change in her place of residence. The woman stated that she had, for many years, lived in a basement apartment, but for the three months previously (at which time her heart broke down) she had moved into another apartment which necessitated her walking up three flights of stairs several times a day. Dr. Mackenzie shrugged his shoulders and sat down."

I am quoting from Disease and The Man by Dr. Roger Lapham. Believe this simple story of a heart clinic should be a striking object lesson to physicians in that the biggest factor in estimating a heart condition is as to the actual amount of work it can do. In my student days it was the detection of the murmur, the exact period of the heart cycle at which the murmur occured and the valve or valves affected that was of chief interest to us. It was late in the beginning of the Great War these were considered the important factors. However the work of Dr. Mackenzie showed that the power the muscular power of the heart was the most important factor in estimating the true condition of the heart with the result that thousands of men with heart murmurs were able to carry on in active service.

The lesson to those with heart ailments is to remember the above story of the patient who had no trouble with a diseased heart from the time she was a girl till she reached middle-aged until she had one of the fights of their several times a day. Just as long as she lived on the basement floor did not ask the heart to do so much her heart was able to do all that was required of it.

They'll Do It Every Time :-: By Jimmy Hatlo

"The DOCTOR" by MARY ROBERTS RINEHART

She had gone away then, feeling alone and blue, and had walked the streets for hours....block after block, scenes and people, carriages, wagons, automobiles, a wedding party coming out of a church, a woman, shaking a crying child, a hand organ and a small monkey. Life all around her, and death in her breast.

Stanton Lewis, fastidious and resentful of anything that disturbed the order of his days. Beverly vaguely suspicious and alarmed. Old Marjie, who knew now and was praying for her in silence and alone. And a small stabbing pain which made her draw back from her clothing and shop in a drug store to buy the brucide which would do little or nothing to allay it.

She went home after that, outwardly unchanged. She was essentially a simple woman. For years in her history she had made layettes for the nameless babies born at the hospital, and some of her maternity went into these small useful garments. Now she turned to them again, sitting all day by her window, sewing her fine stitches, and making such plans as she dared. But only once during these weeks of early spring did she mention Chris Arden.

"I liked you, young doctor. Beverly. What's become of him?"

"He's busy, I suppose. And he's not mine, Mother."

"Doctors make good husbands."

"Good gracious, Mother," said Beverly, and colored hotly, "He has no idea of marrying me."

"I don't see why not."

"He has no intention of marrying anybody. He won't be able to marry for years."

"Not even if you had an allowance?"

"Do you think he would live on our money, Mother? He would starve first. And he detests Father. I'm sorry, Mother, but that's true. Even if he cared for me, which he doesn't—"

"He wouldn't be marrying your father, Beverly."

Beverly leaned down and kissed her. "Look here," she said severely. "He'll marry when he wants and whomever he wants. He's that sort. And don't throw me at his head. You'd only get me back in a hurry."

Nevertheless, something of precisely that sort was forming in Annie Lewis's anxious mind. One night soon afterward, she slipped out of the house and went down the hill.

CHAPTER XX.

Annie moved slowly, every so often putting her hand to her breast. She was trembling when she reached Chris's house, and she waited a moment on the doorstep before she rang the bell. When Chris opened the door, however, she was smiling.

"I'm frightfully late, Doctor. If you are busy—"

"Come in," said Chris. "I'm not busy at all. But don't tell me you are a patient."

"I really came to talk to you. But I suppose I am—in a way."

He saw at once that she was thinner and that she moved carefully, like a woman who was saving herself from something. But she was still smiling as he put her into a chair.

She looked up into his face. Something there gave her confidence. She could trust this man, and all at once she felt an overwhelming desire to trust somebody.

"I want something for pain, Doctor."

"What kind of pain?"

"Before I tell I want your solemn promise to keep my secret. That sounds rather melodramatic, but—"

"That's understood, of course," he agreed quietly.

"I'm afraid I want more than that. I don't want Beverly to know, or Mr. Lewis. Not yet, at least. And I must be certain they won't."

He stared at her. He saw that her mouth was quivering.

"It was too late to do anything," she said quietly. "And Beverly is young. Also, my husband has a horror of anything of the sort. I would like them to—I would like to carry on as long as I can. Surely you can understand that."

"I can understand it. Don't expect me to agree with it. If there is anything to be done—"

She was shaking her head. However, as she told him of her condition. She had not come for a diagnosis. She already knew what was wrong. She had seen a man in New York. She had come for relief, for something to stop the pain. She had thought there might be some other way out. Chris, listening incredulously, saw behind all this something more than the eternal—and invisible—shame and secrecy of women in her condition, and was filled with consternation. What sort of man was Lewis anyhow, that he must be saved a knowledge of this?

He would give her no opiate until he had examined her, and at last reluctantly she allowed him to do so. When he straightened, it was to find her watching him with her faint smile.

"You see, I was right, wasn't I?"

"I'd like another opinion on it," he said cautiously, "in any event something ought to be done and done at once. At least it—"

"At least it would give me a few more months of this! Do you think I want that?"

"I don't understand you. To have let yourself go like this, when you have a husband and a child, fiercely, you owed them something."

"I wanted Beverly to be happy as long as possible, and I thought that she would marry before this became acute. Nature does a great deal for us, Doctor. If she could have married and had children of her own, it would have been more bearable. I had even hoped—"

He looked at her closely. She was still smiling, but rather diffidently now.

"Yes?"

"I had even hoped that you and she would care for each other. I suppose I am very foolish, but at least, as things are, I can afford to be candid."

He knew then why she had come. The pain was real; no doubt of that. But it was Beverly and Beverly's problem which had brought her to him. For the moment the surprise was dominated by his pity for her.

"I am shameless, of course, Doctor. But at night when I can't sleep, I lie awake and worry about her. My husband—" she hesitated—"my husband will do very well. He will miss me in some ways, but he has his business and his friends. He—" She smiled again her faint apologetic smile. "It is a long time since he really cared for me."

She glanced at him, but he said nothing.

"I have always wanted a son," she said. "I think things would have been different if I had had a son. Beverly is closer to her father than she is to me. She loves me, but girls are often like that."

And when he still said nothing, for sheer lack of anything to say:

"That is why I have talked like this tonight, Doctor. She is like her father. She wants a great deal out of life. She needs a man she can look up to, and some one who will look after her. The ones she knows—"

Then she saw Chris's face, and her voice trailed off. She pulled her wrap around her shoulders and prepared to rise. Her eyes were tired and defeated.

"I suppose I have made a mistake. I often make them. I am not a very clever woman, Doctor. Please forget all this."

He was on his feet instantly and around to where she sat. Then with a queer, boyish awkwardness he stooped and put an arm around her shoulders.

"Mistake? What mistake? Why not be honest? You know that I'd ask nothing better than to care for her all her life if she would have me. But—"

"I suppose it's my pride," he said. "I want to support my wife when I marry. A few years and I could do that, but now—"

"I can not wait a few years," she said quietly and got up. "I have suffered a long time for one man's pride, Doctor. It has done many things for him, but it has not made him happy."

He hesitated, looking at her. "I can't make terms with you," he said. "Not with things like this. You know that I care for her, and that, God willing, I'd care for her to the end of her life or mine, if I want to do that in my own way—"

"Why not do it in your own way—"

And then, and only then, he agreed. Looking back, he was to see that scene as a strange one and his own part in it not particularly noble. But the whole situation was unreal. He was slightly dazed. Even when she swayed a little and he held her to steady her, he found his new status difficult to comprehend.

"I shall sleep tonight, Doctor."

"She may not take me. Remember that."

"I think she will. You are big and gentle. Big men are always gentle, I think."

It was still unreal to him when he took her home that night, going slowly so as not to tire her. Now and then he stopped on one excuse or another to let her rest.

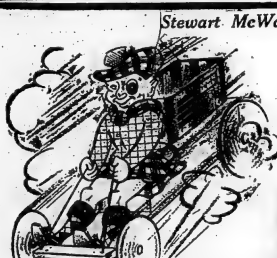
Look at the city lights. Like stars in a pool, aren't they?" Or, "I'm sorry. I'll have to lie my shoes."

Not a word of what was uppermost in both their minds, until at last they reached the door of her house. Then she put out a thin hand and laid it on his arm.

"Good-night, Chris. May I call you Chris now? And God bless you."

He did not let her go at once, however. They stood in the driveway like two conspirators, while he urged her to get another opinion, to do something, anything.

"Why not try Grant? He's a good man."



In the end she agreed; but as he went down the hill again he knew that she expected nothing from another opinion, nor indeed from life itself. Not any more. She was clearing her way, laying her course to the end. He was so absorbed in her problem that he was halfway home before he remembered Beverly and his promise.

"To marry her and take care of her!" he thought. "On what? With what? Not with Lewis's money. Not with his dirty money."

Weddings

RAINBIRD—MARKLE

Saturday, July thirtieth at St. Saviour Church, Toronto, the wedding took place of Mary Isabel, only daughter of Mrs. Markle and the late Mr. Alfred Markle to Howard Gorton, son of Mr. and Mrs. Tom Rainbird of Belleville. Rev. G. Harold Johnson officiated. The church was decorated with summer flowers.

The bride given in marriage by her brother, Mr. Ernest Markle, looked charming in a gown of white chiffon over taffeta cut on Grecian lines with short sleeves. Sweetpeas and carried an arm bouquet of talisman roses and baby breath. She was attended by her niece, Jean Markle, who wore a gown of pink lace with matching accessories and carried a colonial bouquet of cornflowers and carnations. Mr. Frederick G. Pollard, cousin of the bride, was best man.

The wedding music was played by Mrs. Gordon Price. During the signing of the register Miss Georgia Mae sang "Because".

After the ceremony a reception was held for the immediate members of the family. The bride's mother received wearing a navy and white print sheer with matching hat and corsage of red roses. Owing to the illness of the bride's mother, Mrs. J. J. Hibbard, sister of the groom, and Mrs. F. T. Hainbird, sister-in-law, assisted.

For travelling the bride wore a navy gown with white accessories. Following a short honeymoon the couple will reside in Belleville.

You and Your Vacation

Are You Travelling by Train?

When you are planning for a long train journey, it is best to buy your railroad tickets and Pullman reservations well in advance; for a very long journey, "through" tickets and reservations.

Give careful consideration to the luggage that you will take. An experienced traveller wisely "travels light". Don't take any more luggage than you will really need, for every extra piece will mean extra trouble. A trunk may or may not be an essential. Many people prefer to travel with the ample-sized pieces of luggage, and with the combination hat-and-shoe box. But "on land or sea", an overnight bag, fitted or not, is now regarded as practically indispensable for the traveller.

In this we put our robe (a dark, tailored "Pullman robe" is the most looking and most convenient); a sleeping garment, slippers (not leather slippers that will add far more than a small case are perfect), toothbrush and toothpaste, and comb, brush, mirror, comb, and brush, nailbrush, clothes, brush soap powder and creams and so forth. The woman who is a traveller; shaving outfit for the man traveller.

Fastidious people dress for travel as they do for any other public place. They take special care that their clothes are not only good-looking but appropriate as well.

Dark colors are obviously more suitable for travel. Materials should be one that do not readily crush or wrinkle . . . and nowadays it is easy to find these. Simple accessories should be chosen.

It is true . . . as you will see by short observation . . . that women who are accustomed to travel in the correct manner wear their hats and gloves more than do women who are unaccustomed to travel. The woman accustomed to travel wears her hat and gloves during a short journey; she wears her hat to the dining-car; and for a long journey she provides herself with fabric gloves to protect her hands during the journey and to wear to the dining car.

Tomorrow: More About "Travelling by Train".

Double Ring

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1—When a boy and girl are planning their wedding, how is the girl to know whether or not it is to be a double-ring wedding ceremony? Does she ask him whether he wants a ring or what does she say and when?

2—What ways for he's ring? I understand that he buys her wedding ring and her engagement ring. If she has an engagement ring—

3—If it is to be a single-ring ceremony, what sort of gift should she get him?

Bride

1—The question as to whether the marriage ceremony is to be the usual one with the one ring, or the double-ring ceremony, is one that should be broached by the bride-elect to the bridegroom. The bride should be his decision, . . he is the one affected by it. . . While a double-ring ceremony is quite customary in Europe, it is not usual in America. Therefore, if the man do not like to wear a wedding ring any more than they like to wear one, they may do so. However, you can sense at once his 'reaction' to the idea.

2—If your fiance decides that he would prefer to have the double-ring ceremony, he will buy the bride, about buy his ring. He, of course, gives her your engagement ring and the wedding ring.

3—As your wedding-gift to your groom you may give him as consequential gift as you wish: a wrist watch, pocket watch, a watch chain, a key chain, a pair of cuff links, an example of silver travel ware, a cigarette case, a wallet, a handsome gold or silver pencil or fountain pen.

Advice to the Lovelorn

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

Does Class Ring Mean An Engagement?

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Not long after his graduation last year he asked me for his school or class ring. I did this and regardless myself engaged to him.

During the winter he got a job in another city, and I heard from him less and less often. Now I understand he's going with a girl in that place. I haven't heard from him for several weeks. He says nothing about coming to see me, and as long as I have his old ring, other fellows seem to consider me engaged, and I get few dates. Shall I send back his ring? Or, shall I write him a note and ask him what he intends to do?

Polly

As you haven't heard from this young man in several weeks, and you hear he is attentive to another girl, it seems hardly necessary to ask him what he intends to do. Write him a friendly note, and tell him you're returning his class ring. It's always as well, in this type of an affair of this kind, to keep someone you once cared for as a friend, instead of making an enemy.

It's also just as well to have enough pride to conceal hurt feelings. I'm glad you're not taking this affair seriously.

Not a Flirt

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Being from the South, where we still have a sense of chivalry toward women, I'm shocked recently by letters from men in your column, when they say they don't want to take girls out unless the young ladies go 50-50. What kind of pikers are these? Please let me say I'm glad not to belong to the breed, I've a small Government salary and I can't afford to take a girl out very often, but when I do you may be sure that she is a guest to be treated, should, and pay all the expenses of the entertainment.

Southerner

While your reaction to these letters is quite natural, and your generosity and sense of chivalry, still, please, remember that a great many girls would have no dates at all if they didn't suggest a 50-50 plan. So many young men with modest salaries have dependents at home, and a guessing of Dutch treat's or no treats at all.

Objects to Her Constant Gum Chewing

Dear Miss Fairfax

This may seem a silly problem to you, but what's a fellow to do—? I work with two girls who chew gum all day long, cracking it at intervals at the same time. I can hardly do my work, and yet they'd become insulted if I told them how much they disturbed me.

I've been on dates with one of them, and quit seeing her on account of her chewing and cracking in time with the music when I took her to a dance. Don't you think this cheapens a girl? I really thought of marrying one of them, but never, never a gum-chewing Lily for me.

Objector

There's a time and place for everything, including gum-chewing and chewing and cracking (I've never heard of that form of accomplishment) must be partly distracting, heard from a nearby desk in office. But if you know the girl well enough to have considered marrying her why not tell her these effect that chewing and cracking has on you.

I've had a good many similar letters from other young men.

Free Toy Library Boon to Children

Most children have far too many toys. They cannot possibly play with the many which have been showered upon them by doting relatives and friends.

But there also are thousands of children who have no toys at all. For such Mrs. Ida Cash, a problem officer of children's court of Cleveland New York, suggested the establishment of a free lending library of toys, for she found that youngsters got into trouble for stealing the toys they longed for but could not possess.

Mrs. Martha Taylor is president of the group which collects the toys from children of the well-to-do and sees to it that they are cleaned, mended and put into condition for the enjoyment of toy-starved youngsters.

Donations of toys are solicited, and sponsors of the movement declare that while there is naturally need for replacements, as the toys endure a great deal of usage, the percentage of breakage is surprisingly small, and anyone who has seen the delight of children forlorn of toys in England for the first time is not surprised that the youngsters cherish their borrowed treasures as most to the point of reverence.

Sine Family Holds Reunion

The ninth annual reunion of the Sine family was held at Crescent Beach, Oak Lake, on Wednesday, July 27th.

After all had partaken of the bountious lunch provided for the ladies, the tables were cleared and the meeting was called to order by the president, C. M. Sine, for the disposal of the business.

Correspondence expressing regrets at being unable to attend the reunion was received from relatives in Lethbridge, Vancouver and Mount Pleasant, Michigan, and was read.

The president called upon Dr. Charles Green of Crescent Green, New York, for a few remarks. Each expressed pleasure at being able to attend the reunion and hoped that we would continue having them.

Election of officers followed with the following officers for next year:

President—C. M. Sine.
Treasurer—Clifford Sine.
Corresponding Secretary—Ernest Sarles.
Recording Secretary—Josephine Sine.

It was decided to hold the reunion next year on July 26th, at Crescent Beach.

Sports events were then given a treat by the organization.

The remainder of the afternoon was spent in water sports and a game of softball.

80TH BIRTHDAY IS CELEBRATED

A happy event in the life of Mrs. T. C. Treverton took place on the evening of July 28th, it being the occasion of her eightieth birthday, when her daughter and sons and their families, also her sister, brother who was eighty-one on July 31st, gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Treverton in honor her on the attainment of four score years.

The table which was centred by a two-storey birthday cake and flowers, was laden with the dainties. After all had partaken of the sumptuous repast, Rev. Mr. Armstrong read a p assage of Scripture and made a few remarks relative to Godliness with Contentment after which Olive Treverton read an address and Hilda Treverton made a presentation to the guest of honor. The address was as follows:

Latta, Ontario,
July 28th, 1938.

Dear Mother, Grandmother and Great-Grandmother.—

We, your family descendants, have gathered here this evening that we may share with you and you with us the happiness that this occasion brings. This is four times in eight years that we have had such a gathering; first years ago for the fiftieth anniversary of your marriage; then five years ago for your fifty-fifth anniversary; last February for father's eightieth birthday and now that you also have attained the full age of four score years we again gathered together to do honor you on this momentous occasion. These birthday gatherings are inspired by love and it is a pleasure we derive from them and we are only in a small way fulfilling the Commandment which says, "Honour thy father and thy mother" the only Commandment that carries with it a promise. We feel we have much to be thankful for that you and father have been spared to us for this great number of years and that we are able to meet together as an unbroken family. We trust that this has been the happiest birthday you have ever had and we hope that by God's grace you may live to enjoy many more years of life and health.

Signed on behalf of

Your Family.

The remainder of the evening was spent in music, games and social intercourse, during which Mrs. Treverton many more happy birthdays, all left for their several home feeling this had been an evening well spent. Those being present were: Mr. and Mrs. T. C. Treverton, Mr. and Mrs. Oral Beer, Mr. and Mrs. P. W. Bunker, Rev. Hilda, and Mr. Albert Fralick, Ivan and Mrs. Fred Treverton, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Treverton, Olive and Earle, Mr. Ed Treverton, Clem, Arthur, Roy and Milton, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Mrs. Lough on behalf of the Guild members, thanked Miss Pile for her kindness in opening her beautiful home for

Germ-Carrying Insects Transmit Most Diseases, Says Physician

List of Ills Spread by Contact With Victim's Clothing Small

By LOGAN CLENDENNING, M.D.

Many germs which cause human disease do quickly enter those parts of the body or are not in contact with some animal tissue. Such diseases are spread by direct human contact fed, but during the entire life or by carriers.

It still is widely believed that "catching diseases" are spread by such things as clothing, books, bedding or material which was handled by the sick person. As a matter of fact, the number of such diseases is very small. The fears recently spread that certain dread diseases could be transmitted by drinking cups or spoons at a soda water fountain are entirely groundless: the treponema pallidum does not live when not in contact with human or animal tissue.

In growing the virus of such diseases as infantile paralysis, it was found that the old feed goblets and vegetable media were useless. The virus has to be grown on living animal tissue cultures.

Try to Catch Fever.

It will be observed in the film "Yellow Jack" that in trying to determine the way yellow fever was spread, two American soldiers volunteered to sleep in the bed clothes used by two victims of the fever who had just died. The bed-clothes were stained with the patient's excretions and vomitus, but the two brave experimenters did not "catch" yellow fever from them. It took the mosquito to carry that.

These germs which cannot live except in contact with animal tissue are spread by animal carriers.

The ordinary house fly is one of the most dangerous of these carrying insects. Its eggs are laid in stable manure on which the larvae feed, but during its entire life it is a scavenger, going on the one hand, to filth of all kinds, and on the other, to the dining table. It is said that in some of our country hotels the flies recognize the dinner bell. Food poisoning often is translated to this source.

The mosquito is in tropical climes worse. The Anophles mosquito carries malaria and the Aedes acrypti carries yellow fever. In the not very distant past, yellow fever has broken out in our sea-coast cities as far north as Philadelphia. Indeed, it may appear again if we are to believe Dr. Victor Heiser's recent magazine article, "Yellow Jack Breaks Jail". He thinks that other carriers than the mosquito may spread yellow fever and that man may not be the only host, and that airplane travel can be a factor in disseminating this supposedly conquered disease.

Questions From Readers.

J. L. W.: "In taking a nap, when the person does not sleep, just the resting quality, what percentage, beneficially, is it to fall sleeping for the same length of time?"

Answer: I do not believe anybody has ever worked this out scientifically, but I should say about 10 per cent.

Fiery, Itching Skin Gets Quick Relief

There is one simple yet inexpensive way to stop the itching and irritation of Eczema instantly, and that is to apply Moone's Emerald Oil night and morning and people who suffer would be wise to try it.

Ask Doyle's Drug Store or any first-class druggist for an original two-ounce bottle of Moone's Emerald Oil, full strength and refuse to accept anything in its place. It is such a highly concentrated formula that two ounces last a long time.

The Stars Say—

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

THIS SHOULD be a particularly lively and interesting day. There is a prospect of promotion, preferment and honors from superiors or employers. But it is a propitious time for launching new undertakings. Care should be taken in signing papers as there is a menace of fraud or misrepresentation.

If This Is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is may look forward to a happy year, with great ambition winning the favoritism of employers and those in authority. It might be advisable to be cautious in signing papers or contracts.

A child born on this day may have splendid initiative, should be successful on its own or in employment, and will be greatly favored by superiors. Care must be disposed to attain its objectives in the latter years.

Natural Make-up Is Best

CLAUDETTE COLBERT
Prefers natural-looking make-up.

(By HELEN POLLEIT)

THERE'S MAGIC in restrained making, especially in the summer. Little Miss Thrifty, who fluffs powder lightly over her flower-like face instead of spreading it all over herself and the surrounding landscape, is the girl who displays the most natural effect. She dispenses with rouge or uses it sparingly, selects a lipstick that is a cool color, etc.

If a heavy coat of tan has been acquired because of a restful out-door life, the powder must carry a golden cast which will make the complexion appear even more appealing. The lipstick then must be a red orange.

Eye shadows are more suitable for winter indulgence. They belong with gay lights, rich fabrics, and no fellowship for diaphanous frocks of faint hues.

The girls who wear glasses should have the bows and nose piece examined periodically. If they are out of alignment, there will be a deplorable effect upon vision.

Every two years the eyes must be tested. And believe it or not, 70 per cent of individuals over the age of 40 need glasses. Don't let vanity keep you from wearing them.

There's a neat little massage movement that will improve the shape of the nose.

Apply a massage cream; place the first finger in the centre of the upper lip, thumb at one side, second finger at the other. Mold the finger in the centre accurately, pull up the lip ends with thumb and other finger, forming a cupid's bow.

Cleaning Hints.

Always wash woodwork from the top down to prevent streaks, and put a tablespoon of ammonia to each pail of water. When you want to give a bedspring a good cleaning, take a sharp-handled bottle brush and dip it in hot water. There's no part of the spring you can't reach with the brush.

One life; a little gleam of time between two eternities; no second chance for us forever more."—Carlyle.

Infant Needs An Incentive To Learn

Patient Training is a Factor in Teaching Child to Walk, Talk

(By LISA GRENELLE)

WHEN JIMMY wished to play with some toy he simply pointed to it and someone always gave it to him. And if he felt like handling Daddy's watch he smiled and put out his hand toward it, and Daddy, of course, always understood.

If Jimmy wanted to say no, he just shook his head—no one misunderstood. His nods of the head conveyed a meaning no one could possibly fail to understand.

Most people don't do much unless they have to. Few men work very hard or consistently unless their livelihood is at stake.

The average baby, like the average man, is a bit lazy. He needs an incentive. Why should Jimmy learn to say "No", when a shake of the head does just as well? That's not saying anything to the baby, but by the time he's a year old he should make some effort to repeat it after you, especially if you withhold the desired object a second.

A baby should never be allowed to get the idea that he can obtain what he wants without some effort; some payment, even if it's only asking for it as clearly as possible.

Encouraging baby slowness in learning to talk is a sign of backwardness, not genius. It's just laziness.

Learning to stand and walk is slightly different. In the first place, unless you're sure of your ground, it isn't always safe to urge a child to stand. He may be too heavy for his feet; and a child who walks too early sometimes becomes bowlegged.

On the other hand, as in Jimmy's case, many babies continue crawling for want of an incentive to change their mode of travel.

Select a special object where he can't reach it unless he pulls himself up; or, if you're a fiendish bribery. But avoid using any device that holds a child in an upright position. A helping finger is all right, but no more. If he's really too strong for you to stand by himself, let him crawl.

Fashion Flashes

(By ALICE ALDEN)

QUITE A WARDROBE of hats is achieved by a girl who bought a white felt tricorne with a white organdie ruching, and a red felt version of veils in various colors such as red, blue, green and purple, and she uses them to harmonize with various frocks.

Eyes turn in the direction of the woman who wears beautifully-cut clothes. A perfectly-cut dinner dress is a turquoise taffeta with a skirt in sun-ray pleating, the bodice done on shirt-waist lines with round collar and long sleeves.

Slip off street clothes and slip into a cool housecoat. A black organdie housecoat is trimmed at the collarless neckline with row on row of pink rickrack braid, the braid forming a square yoke effect. The hem is also trimmed with rickrack braid. Nice over a pink organdie slip.

A salad plate served as inspiration for a pretty print. Of white voile, it is printed in a colorful design that includes radishes, little lettuce leaves and cucumber slices. Little radish-shape red buttons fasten the bodice.

Everyone talks of the continued success of all purple shades. Lavender blue chiffon is used for a charming evening dress. The bodice is entirely shirred onto vertical cords, which continue up to form shoulder straps. The flared skirt has slight fullness in back.

Looking ahead we prophesy success for a smart coat of dark brown tweed with front panels of beige tweed. A full collar of bonds the coat continues down in the form of two rods fronts that just show the edges of the beige panels.

Seeing three large sharks swimming toward a group of bathers near Durban, South Africa, an airman landed his plane and warned the bathers when the sharks were only fifty feet away, enabling the men and women to reach shore safely.

Girl Sad At Lover's Desertion

Free Toy Library Boon to Children

By VIRGINIA LEE

So many of my young readers are so sure they never can recover from their love sickness. "I can't live without him (or her)," they wail.

We who have lived a few years longer can tell them that the human heart is a pretty tough article. It can endure, and endure and endure, without dying — deep, cruel wounds. I have known folk whose lives were ruined by two years her junior. I simply have marveled how they could deal life worth living at all. And yet they have kept on, breathing one wave of trouble after another, and not giving up. I hope such get their reward in heaven.

Now comes LOVEDEAR MARIE and testifies that she is in love with a boy of another nationality and race moreover. She is two years her junior.

She loves him so much that she can't live without him". His people want their son to go with her, and her people want her to go with him. On top of that he doesn't want her to go and she knows him who anyone can say them and he never comes to see me unless he's intoxicated.

And to complicate matters still further, she has been married and has two children, although she is only 22, and yet she writes:

"Miss Lee, I want to live a free life and not have anyone bossing me. I think I'm old enough to take care of myself."

I'm afraid it is too late to live a "free life", dear. It is a matter of fact, none of us are free to live our lives as we want to. We all have obligations to consider and responsibilities to shoulder. Even the birds have to feed the children. It is too bad you married so young and had children, but there it is, a fact. It wasn't your children's fault that you did, and it's your fault to give them the best life you possibly can. Ever think of that? In fact, your greatest happiness will come if you think of them and try to make up to them for your early mistakes. I repeat that it is hard for you to believe.

And as to Tony—he isn't much of a lover when he lets other people tell him when he can see you and when he can't, and won't risk even talking to you in public. He'd make a pretty weak husband, you'd probably be divorcing him before long if you were so silly as to marry him—which he evidently isn't planning.

You can and must live without him, my dear, so why not make up your mind to it and set the part of a woman as you have achieved the role of mother?

x x x

SILEEN: The best thing I can advise you to do is to cultivate a sense of humor. Make up your mind that life will be much happier for you if you have one. Forget about yourself and try to see the funny side of life. And may good luck attend you.

Poems That Live

TO THE ROSE

Go, happy rose, and interwove
With other flowers, bind my love.
Tell her, too, she must not be
Longer flowing, longer free,
That so oft has fettered me.

Say, if she's fretful, I have bands
Of pearl and gold, to bind her hands;

Tell her, if she struggle still,
I have myrtle rods at will.
For to tame, though not to kill.

Take thou my blessing thus, and go
And tell her this—but do not so!
Lest a handsome anger fly
Like a lightning from her eye,
And burn thee up, as well as I.

—Robert Herrick.

BUY BY GRADE BUY WITH CONFIDENCE

When ordering your beef, eggs, poultry, canned fruits and vegetables, and creamery butter, ask for the quality you want, by grade — then look for the grade mark on your purchase. When you buy by grade, you buy with confidence.

BEEF

The Government grades of Beef are RED BRAND - BLUE BRAND

RED BRAND, "Choice" quality, is marked with a red ribbon-like stamp, so that part of this grade mark remains visible on every cut.

BLUE BRAND, "Good" quality, is marked similarly, with a blue ribbon-like stamp.

CREAMERY BUTTER

The Government grades of Creamery Butter are

FIRST, SECOND and THIRD

FIRST GRADE—highest quality; excellent flavour; well made; smooth, waxy texture; uniform in colour.

SECOND GRADE—usually imperfect in flavour; may be defective in texture or uneven in colour.

THIRD GRADE — Inferior to Second Grade in flavour, texture or colour.

EGGS

The Government grades of Eggs are GRADE "A" - "B" and "C"

GRADE A (three sizes: Large, Medium, Pullet), best quality, suitable for poaching, boiling, frying.

GRADE B, good quality, slightly inferior to Grade A for poaching, boiling, frying, but entirely suitable for cooking purposes.

GRADE C, lowest graded quality. Grade A; Large Medium, Pullet, finest quality fresh eggs from Government-inspected flocks, are available in limited quantities in certain localities.) Grade names are marked clearly on egg containers.

CANNED FRUITS AND VEGETABLES

The Government grades of Canned Fruits and Vegetables are FANCY QUALITY - CHOICE QUALITY - STANDARD QUALITY

FANCY QUALITY, packed from a selection of the best fruit and vegetables available; practically uniform in maturity and free from blemishes; uniform in size and colour, canned at the proper time so that excellence of flavour and appearance may be preserved.

CHOICE QUALITY, packed from fruit and vegetables selected for tenderness and flavour. Not as uniform as "Fancy Quality" shows slight variation in size, colour and maturity.

STANDARD QUALITY, packed from fruit and vegetables of good quality but not necessarily meeting the higher grade requirements as to size, colour and maturity.

Travel Aids Teacher's Work

By GARRY C. MYERS, PH.D.
Head Department Parent Education, Cleveland College, Western Reserve University.

A Fifth Grade teacher writes:

"Dear Dr. Myers: I want to tell you how thoroughly I appreciate the article you wrote concerning teachers spending their summer travelling. I am a teacher in the public schools and I agree with every word you wrote.

"Last summer I spent abroad, and it was an experience I shall never forget. Each day brought some new experience and a rich amount of knowledge one could never attain any other way than by traveling.

"It was my first trip abroad, and most interesting. I have had a very enjoyable year teaching because of my trip of the past summer and the knowledge gained from it. My pupils have learned a vast amount of knowledge from my trip, as it all correlates with what I teach. They are so interested in hearing of my stories I tell them concerning the customs of every country I visited, and I visited ten.

"I obtained addresses for each of my pupils and each day, a friend to write to their own age. They write to Holland, Italy, England, Wales. At Christmas my children sent their friends boxes, and received boxes of gifts in return.

"Virtually every few days some one receives a letter from a friend across the sea, and they are the proud possessors of their name. We have sent our school papers, work, etc., and in turn have received samples of their school work. I have one side of my classroom made into an exhibit of the work done by my children. My pupils are able to converse very intelligently about the countries they write to. Their parents are interested and have told me they appreciate all of it.

"I have absolutely no discipline problems to deal with, as we are too busily engaged to think of bad behavior, and besides they are afraid I might not allow them to continue with their pleasant correspondence."

A Grandmother Commends.

A grandmother writes to know where she may get the series of articles I have written concerning babies and young children says:

"I cannot tell you, Dr. Myers, how greatly I value the wonderful articles you are writing, and they must be bringing great help to the young and old parents who are often greatly bewildered and discouraged by their responsibilities with their children. I have never read such uniformly wise, earnest, understanding advice to parents. I am a teacher in a Sunday school here, and recently at a semi-annual teachers' meeting one person had been asked to read an article written by you."

Fresh peaches would be even better than canned for this time of the year, or you could use berries in the custard meringue. The recipe has been tested in Good Housekeeping Institute.

Today's Recipes.

PEACH CUSTARD MERINGUE — One cup milk, three egg yolks, slightly beaten; two tablespoons cornstarch, one cup granulated sugar, speck salt, one-half teaspoon vanilla extract, six canned peach halves, three egg whites. Combine first five ingredients; cook over hot water, stirring until the custard coats spoon. Cool. Place a peach half in each custard cup. Cover with custard, top with meringue of egg whites beaten stiff with six tablespoons sugar. Brown in oven. Serves six.

FACTS AND FANCIES

Discovered by Swedish Chemist.

Swedish cookery leaders into so many cosmetics, medicines and food preparations, was first discovered in 1751 by Dr. Karl Wilhelm Scheele, a young Swedish chemist. A druggist's apprentice in a country town, he worked and studied under the constant handicap of poverty and debt, without even the ordinary laboratory conveniences. His laboratory was a little room. There he did only seven years later, in 1786, without living to see the full significance of his discovery, died.

Recently, on the anniversary of Scheele's birth, the American-Scandinavian Foundation cabled to the Crown Prince Gustaf Adolf of Sweden expressing appreciation of the nation's service, through Dr. Scheele, to human progress. The cable, signed by the Foundation's president, Henry Goddard Leach, read:

"On this the one hundred and ninety-third anniversary of the birth of your distinguished countryman, Karl Wilhelm Scheele, permit me to express our great appreciation of the service to humanity performed by this famous Swedish chemist; better living conditions throughout the civilized world. The Swedish people have just cause for pride in this discovery which was done so much to enrich science, industry, and the arts."

City Picnic.

Instead of going to crowded city parks, we often picnic in our own back yard. A sturdy oak table is left out there all summer and we use the lawn bench and kitchen chairs for seats. I keep paper plates and napkins on hand and use an old tablecloth and oil cover. So it is easy to have supper there on hot nights. I try to have one hot dish.

Poems That Live

TO THE ROSE

Go, happy rose, and interwove
With other flowers, bind my love.
Tell her, too, she must not be
Longer flowing, longer free,
That so oft has fettered me.

Say, if she's fretful, I have bands
Of pearl and gold, to bind her hands;

Tell her, if she struggle still,
I have myrtle rods at will.
For to tame, though not to kill.

Take thou my blessing thus, and go
And tell her this—but do not so!
Lest a handsome anger fly
Like a lightning from her eye,
And burn thee up, as well as I.

—Robert Herrick.

GOOD-NIGHT

Good-night. Good-night. Ah, good the night
That wraps thee in its silver light.
Good-night, good-night is good for thee
Good-night.

Good-night. Be every night as
As that which made our love com-
Till that last night when death shall be
One brief "Good-night", for thee and me.

Cementmen Two Up in Series; Quinte Loop Play-off Dates Announced

Point Anne Downs Belmonts For Second Consecutive Time In Play-offs, Score 6 to 2

Johnnie Bawden Too Good For Junior Softballers in Clutches

ALLOWS NINE HITS

Genereaux Leads Hitters as Winners Collect Even Dozen Bingles

Making it two straight, the Point Anne "Cementmen" moved into a commanding position in their thrust for the Belleville and District Softball League championship when they downed the Belmont kids 6 to 2 at Bowman Field last evening, after taking the initial game of the league semi-finals last game of the league semi-finals.

Scattering nine singles nicely, Johnnie Bawden hurled steady ball for the winners, seldom being in difficulty, while he was also theoretically air-tight support in the field. Bawden whiffed nine and only walked one, his control being superb. Moon, on the opposing mound, showed glare of wildness As he walked five, two of which subsequently scored.

Hit Consistently

Point Anne scored a brace of runs in the initial frame as Genereaux opened the piece with a single, Murray walked and they both scored after subsequent outs. Hits by Genereaux, Bawden, Murray and Bero saw three more runs scored by Frank Sedore's charges from the Cement Village, in the seventh, while Green and Loft hit to score another in the third. Ronsley and Whalen hit to score Skipper Townsend's initial run while Whalen came through with a hit to open the sixth and scored after a walk and two fielder's choices in the sixth.

Genereaux led the hitters of the night with a double and two singles, Bero, Gaulin and Bawden getting a brace of safeties each. Whalen and Reynolds were the only Belmont batters to touch Bawden with any degree of consistency, each getting a brace of singles. No games are scheduled in the City League playdowns this evening, although all four clubs resume activities in a dual bill on Friday.

Bawden returned to his former hurling prominence last evening and was most effective in the pinches.

CANNIFTON TIES FOXBORO 4-4

Former Keep in Running But Fail to Capitalize on 13 Hits

Canniflon Stays in the Running by Tying Foxboro

Foxboro, Aug. 4 (Special)— The Canniflon "sluggers" still in the running for baseball honors in the South Hastings League and by their feat of battling the high-flying Foxboro lads to a four all tie on their home diamond last night they gave fair warning that the series was not over yet, with the series standing at two games to nil and facing possible elimination the hohlsters staged a determined assault on the offerings of Stan Johnston and only with the help of some sparkling fielding on the part of the infielders were he and his pitching Canniflon boys held to even terms.

Canniflon nicked Johnston for a total of thirteen safeties including doubles and one triple out with runners on the base paths "Bud" bore down considerably and with the help of a double play and the old hidden ball trick managed to hold them to four runs. Foxboro were hitting into the hands of waiting fielders all night with only a lapse of control by Loucks who was relieving them in the Canniflon made it possible for them to ekk out three runs in the fifth inning Loucks' control went decidedly lacking when he hit two and walked two during the short chore which dispelled any chances of victory. Only ten Foxboro batters got aboard by virtue of hits while five of them were victims of Loucks' strategy with out swinging.

Foxboro went out in order in the first canto but Canniflon made things interesting in their half when Webb singled, Collins hit into a double play when he was trying to sacrifice but Empson singled as did Bill Reckman to load the bases with only one gone but Johnston managed to strike out the next two batters and all were left stranded. Foxboro went two up in the third on a Walt and Stewart singled and Peacock also took one by being hit-by-pitcher, bases. N. Guay struck out and Bentley drove in the other second to score Walt. Williams and Johnston both walked forcing in two runs but V. Guay struck out and Ketcheson flew to left to end the inning. Canniflon drew up on even terms with the visitors in the ninth when they scored two on four singles. Collins, however, looked very foolish when Seeley worked in the old hidden ball trick on the second base and Ed. Jarrell and Loucks flew out to end the game. Foxboro appeared all set for a last minute rally in the seventh when Seeley singled after one was out, Williams, however, forced him at second when Johnston made a quick return to his hit to right and was out at first a moment later when the catcher caught him off the base.

The next game will be played at Foxboro on Friday evening and Canniflon will have to stay in the running while a win for Foxboro will end the series at three games to none.

With Pirates and Indians Well Up in Race, Calendar Must Be Wrong, Says Feder

Pittsburgh Wins Brace to Fortify Lead in National League

REDS WIN

Yankees Win as Indians Split With Detroit

(By Sid Feder)
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

New York, August 4.—(AP)—This is Aug. 4th, then what are Pittsburgh Pirates, who are usually sound asleep by this time, doing up there 5 1-2 games in front of the National League pack at this late date, and how come Cleveland's Indians, once so docile and sweet to the leaders, are in there pushing, only two games off the American League Party?

And those aren't the only cases where either the calendar is way off or someone has his dates twisted. For instance, there are the Cincinnati Reds, doormats of '37, tied with the up-and-down Chicago Cubs for the National League's third place, while the somewhat gaiess Cardinals wallow around in seventh and Brooklyn's baffling Dodgers head the second division.

Senators Hang-on

And over in the American League, the supposedly woe-begone Washington Senators hang grimly onto fourth place, while Mickey Cochrane's Tigers can't seem to stay above the .500 mark. Take that National League fuss. Pie Traynor must be feeding his blazin' bats a combination of raw meat liberally sprinkled with dynamite. Even though the season is on the way toward the three-quarter mark, the "Zing" Lee Handley and Pep Young are pouring in the infield, plus the work of the young er pitchers, is making the Club poster than the weather.

They added half-a-game to their first place bulge yesterday by knocking off the Bee up in Boston, both ends of a double-header, 9-4 and 5-3, which is no easy task in itself, and the fact they fired 28 hits in turning the trick makes it one of the season's wonders.

From the looks of things, the Giants, 5 1-2 games back—seven on the losing side—aren't going to do much catching up, even though they showed signs of coming to life in walloping the Cubs 8-3 yesterday with an attack featured by four homers.

Yankees Win

The Yankees, who were supposed to have somewhat of a pushover in the American League, don't seem to put any appreciable daze between themselves and the Indians. Yesterday they added a slim half-game to their edge by downing the Tigers, 10-7 in 10 innings with Lefty Gordon's overtime homer featuring the winning rally. The tribe, after dropping a 4-3 decision to Boston a Red Sox in a twin bill opener, came back to take the nightcap 8-6.

Paced by Gordon's 7th circuit clout, the Belleville-Point Anne matches as several games were forced into extra ends, but the extreme heat took its toll in both tournaments as the contesting players left the courts exhausted from the tedious games played under a broiling sun and intense humidity.

The results of the two matches were as follows:

At the Country Club

Men's singles—Murray Mitchell (Country Club) defeated Ken Kingston (Campbellford) 3-6, 7-5 and 6-1.

Men's doubles—Cliff Weston and Harry Free (Campbellford) defeated Bud Odell and Fred Baines (Country Club) 6-4 and 6-1, while Bill Stevens and L. Birchall (Country Club) defeated Paul Sullivan and Jim Hempstead (Campbellford) 6-3 and 8-6.

Ladies' doubles—Kay Henley and Evelyn Jack (Country Club) defeated Grace Cairns and Ruby Townsend Don Mayer (Campbellford) 6-2 and 6-2.

Mixed doubles—Jessie Weston defeated Grace McCreery and J. Archambault 6-4, 6-8 and 6-2, as Eleanor Ferris and Wilda Kingston (Campbellford) defeated Ernie Whelpton and Phillips Burrows (Country Club) 6-4 and 6-2.

At the Quinte Skating Club Courts Belleville 4 pts., Point Anne 2 pts.

Men's singles—H. Kerr, (Belleville) defeated Clare Fraser (Pt. Anne) 6-4, 1-6 and 6-1.

Men's doubles—D. McLean and Art Demerson (Pt. Anne) defeated Murray Clare and Spencer Evans (Belleville) 6-4 and 6-4, while Jack Hart and Bud Roseberry, (Pt. Anne) defeated Fred Fisher and Don Smallbeer (Belleville) 6-2 and 7-5.

Mixed doubles—Jo Cruji and Jack Dickens (Belleville) defeated Pearl Talk and Robt. Hutchings 6-4 and 6-1, and Wendy Warland and Gordon Barclay (Belleville) defeated Mrs. Hutchings and Mrs. Carter (Pt. Anne) 6-2, 3-6 and 6-2.

Ladies' doubles—Marion McLean and Esther Moncrieff (Belleville) defeated Helen Callaghan and J. Delong (Pt. Anne) 6-3 and 6-2.

LOCAL NETTSTERS WIN AND DRAW

Belleville Club Defeats Point Anne at Country Club

Singles Split, Doubles Shared

The Belleville Tennis Club took four of a possible six points from Point Anne while the Bay of Quinte Country Club netsters were forced to accept a draw versus the Campbellford Tennis Club in a dual bill of tennis played in the Bay of Quinte Tennis League at Belleville yesterday.

At the Country Club the home teams won the men's singles, Murray Mitchell downed Ken Murray Kingston also winning the ladies' doubles and set of mixed doubles to break even with their Campbellford adversaries while they swept the ladies' doubles.

At the Quinte Skating Club courts, the netsters were not fortunate, winning four sets to their Point Anne opponents' two. Howard Kerr won the men's singles ,or the home club as they added victories in the men's doubles, both of their mixed doubles sets and completing the day's activities with a win in the ladies' doubles.

The Belleville-Point Anne tennis matches marked the opening of the Bay of Quinte League's playdowns for the championship of the district, with the Belleville netsters now holding a commanding position in their thrust for the Belleville and District Softball League championship when they downed the Belmont kids 6 to 2 at Bowman Field last evening, after taking the initial game of the league semi-finals last game of the league semi-finals.

BAY OF QUINTE LEAGUE ADOPTS PLAY-OFF DATES

Must Complete All Postponed Games, Says League Heads

Arrangements for the completion of all postponed games in the Bay of Quinte Baseball League and the adoption of the league play-off schedule dates were sanctioned at a league meeting of the executive held at Napanee last evening. Neutral umpires were assigned for all league play-off games, these officials to be selected from within league districts, however.

Facing three postponed and two unplayed fixtures, it is a must to completed before the league play-offs commence, the dates for the unplayed games were scheduled as follows—

August 5—Picton at Napanee.
August 8—Kingston at Belleville.
August 10—Kingston at Napanee.
August 12—Napanee at Picton.

The league play-offs will commence on August 15th with the ultimately third placed club playing on the home diamond of the second placed team with the return game scheduled to be played on the home diamond of the second placed club on August 19th. A possible third game, if necessary, will be played on the home diamond of the second placed club on August 23rd.

In the league finals, the ultimate winners of the above semi-final will play on the home diamond of the latter's home diamond on August 24th with the return game being played on August 26th and a possible third game on the diamond of the first placed club on August 29th.

The umpires available for the league play-offs were named as Thomas, Belleville, Corrigan, Kingston, Young, Picton and Lynch-Cook, Napanee. Neutral umpires will be employed in all play-off games.

"Tonight" in "Soap Box Derby Night," in Belleville, is estimated by the weatherman smiles, providing the 10,000 people that approximately 10,000 people will witness the Kinsmen Club's third "Kid Kar" race and its first "All-Canada" event, the second of its kind ever to be presented in this fair Dominion of Canada, the only previous one being held in Toronto last year when George Wilson won and was declared "Soap Box Derby" champion of Canada, which won him the right to represent the Dominion in the international event at Akron, Ohio. To the winner of this classic derby in Belleville go the same honors as won by Wilson last year, the Dominion title plus a trip to Akron in the world's championships. The Kinsmen are anxious to have the general public cooperate to the fullest measure this evening and refrain from crowding onto the course, especially at the finishing line where they will be under the cars.

The executive of the Bay of Quinte League stepped in and took a firm grip on the league's operations at Napanee last night. To date some of the clubs have been lax in the matter of arranging dates for their postponed games with the result that the league could not met and drafted a schedule, that will be rigidly enforced to the letter. There are three more replay games and also the dates for the league play-offs appear elsewhere in today's issue. Yesterday before a Kingston Centennial crowd of 4,000, Kingston 'Locos' sprang a surprise 20 to 0 win over the Picton club, beating the offerings of three Prince Edward boundsmen to all corners of the Kingston Cricket Field. Apparently the 'Locos' are not to be counted out of the Bay City League race yet. Belleville has two more games, one with Kingston here next Monday and the other at Napanee tonight. Napanee has also two games on hand, one of these games to cinch first place, however.

With Johnnie Bawden in the driver's seat and with Skipper Townsend's Belmont juniors in the role of victims, Belleville should improve invaluable to them in their forthcoming O.A.S.A. playdowns.

With a stiff southwest wind blowing and with Skipper Maurice Callaghan at the helm, the After You and Joka speed their sails up the bay in the early laps, but once the wind spread in the pinches and no prettier scene has been seen on the bay this year than yesterday's wind-filled sails off Victoria Park. Incidentally Duke Smith informs us that he who pulled the little girl out of the water at Deseronto on Civic Holiday, Maurice Jumped in and held me as soon as he could," added Duke.

With Stead Craig , of Kingston handling the reins, Jack Penny's crack little mare, Catharine Grisdale, stepped around and two third's in the free-for-all class at King ston yesterday. The mare's next held in connection with the Kingston Centennial. Some excellent times were chalked up in this class, the best time being in the last race when the gear stepped it in 2.10. In the 2.25 class Ed Herrington's Widow Grattan from Picton won.

The torrid sun and the intense humidity did not discourage the tennis players in the Bay of Quinte tennis loop yesterday when some keen tennis was seen locally decided the extremely hot weather. The Belleville netsters took four of a possible six points from the Point Anne tennis crowd in their match, while the Bay of Quinte Country Club netsters drew with three games each versus the Campbellford Tennis Club at the Country Club.

Messrs. Alex Hume and James Sharp were the two oldest pupils who attended school Monday morning.

Antique Display

The Orange Hall was the Mecca for a large number of interested sightseers as here the teacher, Miss Mary E. Sharpe, and her committee had assembled a large number of their home treasures on display, old oaken yokks, spinning wheel, iron kettles, several old quilts and fancy needlework, candlesticks, bedspread, pepper grinders, lanterns, guns, cradles, dishes, pictures, carving and several utensils used in the early days. Both in and in the home, it was splendidly arranged and each article placarded with name, its age and donor of same.

Miss Sharp also had for sale Centennial Folders, which were a part of a project in English prepared by the present pupils of Wellmans Public School.

Cafeteria Lunch

At noon a cafeteria lunch was served in the church sheds and over forty dollars was realized for the school.

Afternoon

In the afternoon two games of softball were staged in Mr. Clifford Sharpe's field.

Seymour West boys won over Glen Ross with a score of 5-0 with the following line-up.

Seymour West — S. McKenzie, J. Watson, E. McCook, C. Anderson Lorne Watson, Neil Hooper, Don Barnum, Alex McKenzie, S. Hoard.

Glen Ross — O. Fraser, M. Brown R. Fyrar, G. Fyrar, J. Armstrong, H. Brooks, A. McDonald, C. Smith, Fraser.

The Crow Bay girls and Rawdon girls gave a fine exhibition game of ball which ended in a tie of 32-32.

Crow Bay — Susie Atkinson, c; Jean Ingram, p; Josephine Lock, 1b; Doreen Pollock, 2b; Helen Murray 3b; Doris Locke, ss; Evelyn Atkinson, lf; Paulin Milne, rf; Bernice Fry, cf; Enid Hay, sub.

Rawdon—Pearl Stapley, c; Ruby Stapley, p; Marjorie Hagerman, 1b; Nellie Morrison, 2b; Aileen Stewart 3b; Marjorie Richardson, Irene Tucker and Nellie Morrison, fielders, Olive Stewart, ss.

Afternoon Addresses

A programme of addresses were given in the afternoon on the school porch.

Mr. A. Martin, Inspector of Public Schools of Northumberland, was chairman. He welcomed the guests on behalf of the trustees of the school. He also commended those in charge for the success of the centennial and briefly spoke along educational lines.

The guest speaker was J. B. MacDougall, B.A., D. Paed, assistant chief inspector of public and separate schools for Ontario. He paid tribute to the United Empire Loyalists who settled in Ontario many yeas ago and gave many reminiscences of by-gone days. He referred to the fact that Rawdon township had a historical name after Sir Guy Carleton.

He graphically pictured the original log building, the first teachers who were worn out soldiers, their various modes of punishment and the teaching of reading, writing arithmetic and spelling, the process of making home made ink, and the school days of 100 years ago and then traced education down through the years and the wonderful progress that has been made. He spoke of the fine teachers, the good discipline, and the interest today in education.

In closing he urged the parents to remind their children of the wonderful opportunities that are theirs in this family of children and especially at this Wellmans School which is another of the wayside shrines and temples of learning dotted all over Canada.

Miss Reta Burwell, of Bonarlaw, recited "Levinsky at the Wedding."

Mr. Ross Payne, M.P.P. for Peterborough - Hastings brought greetings and paid tribute to the pioneers who built shanties, cleared patches of ground, built schools and churches, handed down on a blazen trail and began civilization in a new land. He said virtue, wisdom and ability are needed to make a success of life.

Mr. Malcolm Totten, of Ryiestone, contributed a vocal number "The Sausage Machine."

Mr. A. W. McGuire, I. P. S. of Hastings County, said he was glad to be back again at Wellmans, 1838, he will again have Rawdon township schools under his supervision.

He congratulated Wellmans School on the organizing of this Centennial and said great good can grow out of such a celebration. He paid tribute to past school boards, especially to the memory of the late Mr. Blake Totten, also to teachers of the past who had given service to the school. In reminiscent mood he spoke of the fire of 1927 which destroyed the inside of the school and then complimented the trustees on the fire structure of today. He hoped for the same support that had been given his predecessor, Mr. Martin.

Miss Mary E. Sharpe, present school teacher of the school read a history of Wellmans school as published last year and which has been entered in the register. This historical document was prepared by a former teacher, Mrs. Burton Morton nee Grace Dayman.

The chairman added his compliments and paid tribute to the inspector, past days, Mr. MacIntosh and Mr. Minns.

The National Anthem closed the afternoon service and the flags were displayed in the school yard and at the Orange Hall.

The school yard was decorated for the occasion and electrically lighted with a special booth where soft drinks, ice cream and confectionery were sold.

A large number remained for supper and were served plate lunches and at midnight lunch was also on sale as well as home cooking.

A dancing pavilion was built on the school grounds and over five hundred people attended the evening performance.

Round and square dancing was enjoyed by the youngest as well as a few old timers with music supplied by George Ketcheson, piano; Norman Rocketon, violin; Maurice Bell, clarinet and banjo; Grant Millar, trumpet; Gerald Sperenzi, saxophone; Clare West, Saxaphone; Frank Butler, drums.

About 1 a.m. the Centennial closed and everyone were loud in praise of the splendid celebration, the proceeds of which were around two hundred and thirty dollars.

Special praise is due Mr. and Mrs. John Heagle, Mr. and Mrs. Carl Clancy, Mr. and Mrs. Victor Taylor, Miss Mary E. Sharpe and several of the ratepayers of the section who worked so strenuously to put across such a gigantic celebration.

During the evening Miss Reta Burwell contributed a humorous selection between times.

The committee in charge are grateful to all who came from far and near and so whole-heartedly joined in this centennial celebration which is now known across the few scholars in the province of Ontario that are one hundred years old.

Pupils of Former Day Attend Classes at S. S. Centennial

Wellmans S.S. No. 8 Rawdon Scene of Busy Day's Events

ORIGINAL SCHOOLHOUSE

Rawdon, August 4 — (Special)— Monday, August 1st was a very rainy morning, which for a time dampened the ardour of the raiepayers of School Section No. 8 who were marking its centenial.

However, the show must go on and by ten a.m. a large number had gathered on the grounds to attend school.

Miss Frances Hinchcliffe, Sidney, a former teacher, took charge of the school and was assisted by Mrs. Mildred Clark Pidgeon of Madoc Junction.

All repeated the Lord's Prayer together and those who were former pupils marched in and took their seats while the National Anthem was filled to the doors.

Several of the girls wore hair ribbons and gingham dresses and Mr. James Sharp wore his wedding suit.

During the morning session of school, recitations were given by Ethel Whitton McCaughen, of Stirling; Rose Totten Reid, of Mount Pleasant; Clifford Sharp and William Starr, Wellmans. Malcolm Totten sang a solo, Ivan Clancy read an essay which he composed in the Wellmans for Short addresses were given by Merle Todd and Angus Todd. Mr Alex Hume reviewed old school days. Emma Rainie and Maggie Mehlkjohn Johnson, accompanied on the piano by Minnie Totten Honey sang "A Hundred Years From Now." Ivan Clancy recited a poem, gave a short talk and dismissed school.

Notes Are Written

The old pupils had a grand time writing notes. They signed their names on the board as follows: Hector Wilkins, Malcolm Totten, Alex Hume, Burt Potts, George W. Potts, Lizzie Maybee, John Totten, 1866; Will Snarr, 1871; Ivan Clancy, 1904; Donald W. Gullett, 1903. Rosella Totten Reid, Florence Jackman Dracup, Cynthia Whitton Hoy, Lily Maybee Yimmer, Maggie Mehlkjohn Johnson, Minnie Totten Honey, Thurza Gullett Green, Malcolm Jackson Panning, Minnie Rainis Totten.

Class of 50 Years Ago

The class of 1887-1888 sang "The Happy Days of Childhood" with Malcolm Totten taking the solo part. Those singing were Mrs. O. Dracup, Mrs. E. Thor, Mrs. Reid, Mrs. W. Dracup, Mrs. W. Honey, Mrs. R. Gullett, Mrs. W. Yimmer and Maggie Maybee Rupert.

The late Blake Totten, his wife, formerly Hannah Reid, sister and their seven children all received recognition at this school.

Those singing were blown down in the severe storm which passed through this vicinity on Thursday. The home of Mr. D. Green was badly damaged when struck by a falling tree.

AT THE BELLE

"White Banners"

"White Banners," one of the feature presentations at the Belle is based on best-selling novel by Lloyd C. Douglas, who also authored those popular successes, "Magnificent Obsession" and "Green Light." The success of the two previous films was more than enough to prove conclusively that the picture-going public finds his stories just as engrossing as his large and devoted band of readers. In the picture, as in the novel, the dominating character is that of Hannah Parmalee, the lonely, middle-aged governess, who into the household of Paul Ward, the small-town soldier boy, brings a troublous time and devotes herself unselfishly to the service of the Ward family.

Necessarily condensed, the story of the picture deals mainly with the period in which Paul Ward invents an iceboat and then reaches the climax in the discovering by Hannah that the adopted son of the town banker is her own child. What she does thereafter movingly illustrates the author's contention in behalf of the nobility of the human spirit.

The part of Hannah is played by Fay Bainter, long famous on the stage. Claude Rains plays the part of Paul Ward, the school teacher and inventor. Screen-age Jackie Cooper and Bonita Granville round out the cast of notables in grand style.

"Gaiety Girls"

For the coming feature the Belle theatre offers a light-hearted musical packed with laughs and tuneful song hits, the cast of "Gaiety Girls" is headed by Jack Hulbert, popular English comedian, dancer and singer. Co-starred with Jack is Patricia Hilliard, one of Hollywood's most beautiful and talented stars. The fun is maintained from start to finish, and the music ranges as a tribute to Thornton Freeland, the director, who was responsible for one of the earliest and most successful musicals, "Flying Down to Rio."

"March of Time"

Rounding out this outstanding program is another of the popular "March of Time" subjects.

MILLIONS SPENT

she was easy prey for several European countries, realized the principals of collective security had failed for the time being—and started to arm.

5-Year Program

Attempting to make up for lost ground in the world armament race, Britain started a program under which $1,500,000,000 (s7,500,000,000) could be spent in five years. But, while Britain is arming at a rate the world never witnessed before in peace time, she leaves open a door to a world disarmament on disarmament. And this is where the paradox comes in—Britain having entered the arms race, no other European can keep up to her pace and there is every reason to hope will return to sanity and a form of collective security rather than prolong the uneven contest in which Britain's vast navy reserves and almost unlimited world credit are the factors. But one thing Britain is determined to do—never be caught again with an army, navy and air force definitely inferior to other first class powers.

Dedication to Peace

But it's a two-way street policy. While Britain is rearming, her foreign policy remains decidedly pacific. She admits an arms race is vicious business and is ready to call a halt anytime a world agreement can be reached. But if the rest of the world wants an arms race, Britain is determined to prove she can set a pace that no other European dictatic country can follow and in that roundabout course may very gain her objective of regaining international disarmament.

The new armaments program is a vast and comprehensive it almost beggars description. For instance, the naval forward building plan for Jan. 1, 1938 was 129,345 and on Jan. 1, 1939, 247,000. There are 2,018 naval ships being built in British today, the biggest peace-time program in the world history. So far Britain has had 844 first-line aircraft. Today the unassigned total is 1,600 and is rising at 2,350 by 1940 in addition to vast undisclosed reserve strength. The army is being simultaneously and mechanized with the stress on coastal and anti-aircraft defence.

Seashells 20,000,000 years old have just been found in Tolworth, England.

Shannonville

Shannonville — Mr. and Mrs. Stanley MacDonald motored to Calabogie Peaks, North, for the week-end. While in Callander they were two of the 7,000 that viewed the unemployed during the day. Mrs. MacDonald states that they appear to be very similar to a picnic party did tan. While Mr. and Mrs. Mac-Donald were watching the amusing antics of the famous children, the nurses brought out a little lunch and all began to eat with the exception of little Marie who was busy washing clothes and hanging them out to dry.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Stewart motored up to Lake Joseph for the week-end. Enroute they were accompanied by Mrs. Margaret Smith of Belleville, who spent a

AT THE McCARTHY

"The Hurricane"

Filming a South Sea Island picture in Hollywood proved a costly undertaking to Samuel Goldwyn.

"The Hurricane" which will continue its engagement at the McCarthy Theatre for a few days at the large attendance daily and the many fine comments that the patrons are giving to this most spectacular production, it really is one of the greatest motion pictures to be ever made and one that every man, woman and child should plan to see.

Originally it was intended to film "The Hurricane" entirely in the South Seas, thus eliminating the major cost of set construction.

Carefully analysis proved, however, that the more practical method was to send only a camera crew to the South Seas to film scenic background shots, to construct the story around with the cast in Hollywood. The expense of taking the necessary equipment to one of the islands would almost equal that of bringing a section of the South Sea to Hollywood. The weather gamble was also eliminated by making the picture in the studio.

Consequently, Goldwyn's technicians constructed two islands on the lagoon within a stone's throw of Hollywood Boulevard. They imported a fleet of native canoes and equipped two trading schooners. They also installed an ocean wave machine, a system of tanks, hydraulic pumps and spillways. topped off by a palm clute which was used in creating a hurricane fully as realistic and far more amenable to control than those provided by nature.

The main island on which John Ford directed his cast, headed by Dorothy Lamour, Jon Hall, Mary Astor, C. Aubrey Smith, Raymond Massey, Jerome Cowan and Thos. Mitchell, occupied two and a half acres of the Goldwyn Studio's "back lot". It comprised an acre and a half lagoon containing 981,-250 gallons of water.

Eighteen native huts, a trading post, the government residency of the French Administrator, a church and priest's home make up the village which fronts one shore of the lagoon.

Some sixty cocoanut palm and pareu trees frame the lagoon. Plaster casts of the trunks were brought from the South Seas. Technicians did the rest, attaching California native date palm foliage to the concrete renderings. Even the large mangrolla leaves to the parau trunks.

Richard Day, Goldwyn's art director, brought 1100 personally shot photographs from the South Seas to serve as guides in creating the setting.

Adjacent to this large island, known in the story as Manukura, is the smaller islet of Motu Tonga. This setting is built on a tank, a tank 100 feet square, a white beach of imported Monterey sand and a veritable forest of towering cocoanut palms. A subterranean cave, artfully concealed among the rocks, is a feature of this setting.

Motu Tonga is inhabited, but as a refuge for the fugitive hero, Terangi, it figures almost as importantly in the story as Manukura. Motu Tonga is on the "back lot," but is separated from the one-end of which is a beautifully realistic sky backing.

Responsible for the production aids are few, thanks to the concealed way in which the Manukura village was built. They include a Tahiti honky tonk, a prison and a few small huts on adjacent islands.

In addition to "The Hurricane" the McCarthy Theatre has an excellent Pictorial Review and all color musical cartoon presentation.

"Women of Glamour"

Virginia Bruce, Melvyn Douglas and a distinguished supporting cast in "Women of Glamour" will be presented at the McCarthy Theatre. "Women of Glamour" tells a glaring and modern story of a socialite who turns to crime to avoid a high club entertainer into his ideal woman. When he falls in love with the girl-reporter who tries to ruin him, the romance and comedy that will follow are now to see "Women of Glamour."

Picton

Picton — Traffic on the roads to the Outlet Beach and the Sand Banks was terribly congested on Sunday. A seaplane and an aeroplane were carrying passengers, and landing near these resorts. Every Sunday throughout these spots, but Sunday's crowd exceeded any yet seen at the beach. Cars and trailers of every description were crowded there, and driving was hazardous. A sport coupe driven by Stel. May of Ben Gill, crashed through a telephone pole on the road between Bloomfield and West Lake. The car turned down into the marsh but the occupants escaped injury. Bathing at the Beach was enjoyed by old and young, and many dogs being seen swimming with their young masters and enjoying a respite from the heat.

Mrs. Rodney Rundle was hostess at a very enjoyable bridge at Killarney Castle on Thursday afternoon. Five tables were in play with the lovely favour going to Miss Annie Bradley. Tea was served at quarterly tables following the game.

Picton friends of Mr. and Mrs. George Weiman and Mr. and Mrs. Walter Wyatt were sorry to hear that the room of their friend, Mr. Benson House, Lindsay, was blown off during the terrible wind storm

HOW TO OVERCOME ITCHING PILES

If you are annoyed with itching piles or rectal soreness, do not neglect the same any more. Get a jar of Peterson's Ointment today. Soreness or painful passage of stool, is nature's warning and proper treatment should be secured at once. For this purpose get from J. S. McKeown or any druggist, a package of Neuroid and use as directed. This formula, which is used internally, quickly relieves the itching and soreness and aids in healing the sore, tender spots. Hemroid is a physician's prescription and is highly recommended. It is easy to use and it seems the height of folly for anyone to suffer an operation when a simple remedy, which is so pleasant to use may be had at such a reasonable cost.

Unable to Attend Reunion Wellington Veteran Spends Weekend With Solitary Letter

Geo. Newson Hears Through Unique Channel From Buddy After 20 Years

MEMORY FOR FACES

Wellington, Ont., Aug. 4th (Staff) Far from the blaring bands, waving flags and marching feet of his comrades as they celebrated the second reunion of the Canadian Corps Association, George Newson, local veteran, was unable to join his ex-comrades in their festivities, though not his wishes, but visited a lone reunion with a solitary letter from a war-time buddy he had not seen in twenty years, as his only companion.

Confined to his home for the past ten of fifteen years with conditions resulting from shrapnel wounds in the head, Newson was unable to attend the festivities held in Toronto over the holiday.

A few weeks previous, a sketch of a man found on the sports pages of the Toronto Evening Telegram awakened a dim trail of memory in Newson's mind.

Night after night he puzzled his brain as to where he had seen the man. Nearer drew the date of the reunion. Then by a strange coincidence, memory flooded back.

It took the lone soldier back to early days of 1917 when the twenty-first Battalion were in action near Vis-en-Artois, in France. This battalion with its brigade units were attempting to consolidate captured positions when Newson became entangled in enemy barbed-wire. In his efforts to extricate himself he made his position the more precarious. Machine gun bullets drummed over his head. Shells dropped around him.

With hope almost gone he heard a voice shout, "What the h---are you doing out there?" Turning, he saw two Canadian officers of the 18th Battalion approaching him. One of the officers dropped to the ground blood spurting from a bullet hole in his head where an enemy machine gun bullet had scored a direct hit.

The other officer labored with his task, and finally succeeded in extricating Newson from his dangerous position. The men parted, and went their various ways.

Closer scrutiny of the sketch in the Toronto paper, convinced Newson that the object of the drawing Major J. F. Fitzgerald, sports editor of the Telegram, was none other than the officer of the incident at Vis-en-Artois.

However, a letter left the next day to that effect, and Newson's reunion cup of joy was filled to overflowing when on Saturday last he received a letter from Major Fitzgerald bringing the news that he was the officer connected with the incident.

"You must have a remarkable memory for faces" the Major wrote, "or else its this funny 'mug' of mine. Anyway it's just another way of showing what a real Canadian meant in those days".

Huge Bill-Fish Opens Inch Gash in Fisherman's Lip

Walter Lott, Oshawa Spends Hour in Landing 49-inch Gar-Pike

FISH LUNGES AT FACE

Wellington, Ont. (Staff), Any doubts that Walter Lott, Oshawa tourist vacationing here, may have had to the effect that a fish won't bite a man were rudely dispelled over the holiday, when a nine-pound gar-pike, commonly known as a bill-fish, opened an inch gash in Lott's lower lip while he was endeavoring to disengage the hook from the fish's mouth in his boat in West Lake.

The pike, said by local oldtimers to be a rarity in these waters, measured forty nine inches in length while its narrow torpedo-shaped body was covered with speckles of many hues.

The nine-inch bill that protrudes from its jawbone was lined with sharp needle-like teeth, that slant backwards in close formation.

Lott had hooked the nine-pounder and landed it after a strenuous sixty-minute fight and was attempting to remove the hook from its jaws, when, by accident or design, the fish suddenly lunged at his head. Sharp teeth swung in a vicious arc, laying open a gash that measured one inch deep in length and nearly pierced the flesh in Lotts lower lip.

After receiving medical attention Lott "anchored" his catch by means of a string tied to the shallow water on the shore of the park here where it was the cynosure of hundreds of eyes of holiday visitors.

BOYS UPROOT NEW-SOD LAWN

Hunters For Worms Blamed For Damage to West Side Lawn

Fridful lawn owners, long enemies of cut worms, moles and other varieties of grass-ruining pests who have worked diligently upon their lawns to put them in shape for the summer in the city have been faced with a new problem lately and are loud in their complaints.

Boys with lighted lanterns, flashlights and even candles, lately have been making life miserable for some of the fine grass plot owners, by crawling and tramping and digging into the sod during night crawlers. Even flower beds have been invaded by the after night searchers, and flowers have been trampled and ruined by them.

In one instance a resident on the west side of the city engaged in considerable work and trouble to re-sod his lawn. This week several boys invaded the new lawn, lifted the sod and, worms, and carelessly tossed several of the grass patches into the road, leaving vacant places in the lawn.

ASKS KING TO LET HER DOG ENTER ENGLAND

Hazel Hurst, blind American girl, is pictured aboard ship with her dog "Babe" without which she claims her "sight-seeing" trip to England cannot be made. British authorities have declined to relax regulations which require a six-months quarantine on dogs entering England and Hazel remains aboard the liner. She appeals dto the King to intervene in her behalf. "Babe" is a trained guide dog and its mistress depends upon her canine friends to lead her.

CAN. BIG-GAME HUNTER BACK FROM AFRICA

Colonel A. H. MacNab, left, president of the Campfire Club of America, and Colonel Harry Snyder, of Montreal both noted big-game hunters, are pictured as they arrived in New York, returning from adventures in the African wilds. Snyder shot the largest elephant on record during a recent hunt on the dark continent, and both hunters used a camera to "shoot" a wild

HAS DEATH RAY

Invention of a powerful "death ray," so potent it can cut quarter-inch steel plate in 300 yards and wither human or animal bodies, is claimed by Major Arthur W. Marchant, construction engineer, who is pictured at Somerville, Mass. The ray, which Marchant says is invisible and odorless and more mysterious and harder to analyze than electricity, will be given to the United States government for sole military rights. The government has been so impressed by a series of secret tests that Major Marchant and five co-inventors have been supplied with unlimited materials for experiments.

RABBI UNDER ARREST

Accused of smuggling heroin into France, Isaac Leifer, self-styled "grand rabbi of Brooklyn, N.Y." is being held by the police of Paris on dope smuggling charges. Leifers of New York Jewry say that Leifer, who used holy books in his alleged smuggling activities, is not connected with any Brooklyn congregation.

WEDS DODGE HEIR

A story-book romance with Laurine MacDonald, ABOVE, as the central character, reached its climax when Miss MacDonald was married in Rochester, N.Y., to Daniel G. Dodge, 21 year old heir to Dodge motor millions. The bride was formerly a telephone operator at Gore Bay, Ont., and the romance began three years ago, when Dodge was on a north wood's vacation.

Corrigan Comes Home

With two welcoming committees battling over the right to greet him officially, Douglas Corrigan, Irish-American flier who crossed the Atlantic solo to land his decrepit airplane at Dublin, returns to New York by boat. Here are two photos of the devil-may-care flier. At top he gives his best "Hello, America!" pose just before he sailed. Corrigan in a ship-to-shore radiophone agreed to attend the Broadway reception arranged by Mayor La-Guardia rather than the rival Brooklyn parade.

BEDAUX TO BECOME ADVISER TO GREECE

PREMIER METAXAS

CHARLES BEDAUX

Charles E. Bedaux, renowned industrial expert whose link-up with the proposed visit to America of the Duke and Duchess of Windsor, brought that project to a halt, is expected to become special adviser to the Greek government of Premier John Metaxas, with the task of reorganizing the country's economic structure. Mr. Bedaux was quoted in Athens as forecasting a swift rise in Greece's living standards. He has recently been advising the Turkish government on economic reforms.

JEWELS THIS FALL

This fall, according to those in the know, will see our lovely ladies of fashion gaily bedecked in sparkling rubies, sapphires, pearls, emeralds and diamonds, much in the manner of the miss ABOVE. According to the story they tell, it is Lady Mendl, British society leader, who is responsible for this fashion whim. When she recently visited several of the high potentates and Maharajas of India, her hosts showered her their overflowing gem vaults and sent her home with several quarts of the above-mentioned gems. Lady Mendl had several lavish settings made for them and as a result several manufacturers asked permission to copy them.

Cape Cod Type House Found Satisfactory Model

Design 227-A, Courtesy National Plan Service, Inc., Chicago

Typical Cape Cod home containing five rooms and porch.

Typical of Cape Cod, this type of house has served through long years as a most satisfactory architectural model, especially for the small house.

The house pictured contains five rooms with a porch at the side. The porch is reached through the large living room, which occupies one entire side of the house. This room is 12 by 27 feet in size and has an open fireplace.

On the other side of the house is a dining room and kitchen, with a passage through from kitchen to living room which contains a closet and a lavatory. The small entrance hall, from which the stairs go to the second storey, also has a closet.

Upstairs are two large bedrooms, and the bathroom. The bedrooms have closets, alcoves and built-in drawers.

The size of the main building is 23 by 36 feet; size over all 42 feet 6 inches by 35 feet 8 inches. The house contains 22,400 cubic feet, porch, 750, making a total of 23,150 cubic feet in all.

Wool Jersey Beach Cape Is Versatile and Stylish

Navy blue wool jersey beach cape with stitched gores from yoke

By LISBETH

If you are seeking fun on the beach, you will be pleased at the fashions of the season which are as decorative and also as really practical as can be.

Comfort in your beach clothes is one consideration, of course, with plenty of freedom for action, protection against wind, sun and spray, and durability.

Clever designing and fine materials have combined these qualities with gay colors and patterns for very smart and ornamental effects.

Beach coats and capes are made of many different materials. In fact, it seems as if noted dressmakers have played around with just about all the materials there are. They have sent forth models in silk, satin, toweling, hopsacking, denim, washing material, and woolen. If I've left out any, excuse, please.

The very intriguing cape pictured here is navy blue wool jersey with a yoke in the back, from which run sixteen stitched gores. It is equally handsome in deep red wool and is tied high at the front with self-fabric ties. Beach coats and capes in these light-weight woolens lack weight and are crush resistant, so they are worth considering when you need such a garment. They also keep their lines even when they are wet.

A cape such as the one shown may be used at other times than on the beach. It may even be requisitioned as an evening wrap to wear over summer cotton formals.

White Details Make a Simple Navy Flannel Dress Distinctive

Navy Flannel Dress

Slim lines, flared through the skirt for comfort in action, are accented by a white slide fastener at the full-length front closing of this smart little summer sports frock in fine navy flannel.

The white touch is repeated at the self-fabric belt, and a patch pocket is a nice detail. A white scarf tucked in at the roll-over neckline is another youthful touch.

Warns Church in Italy

Roberto Farinacci, above, right-wing extremist of Italy's Fascists, fired the first gun in the battle which looms between the regime of Mussolini and the Roman Catholic church over racist theories when he declared in his newspaper that the problem was a political one over which the church should not attempt to exercise control. Pope Pius, in a pointed speech recently, attacked Italy's new policy of race purism. The breach may have far-reaching effects, threatening the concordat between church and state.

HULL ON THE JOB

With President Roosevelt fishing and various other functionaries gone back home for the hot spell, U. S. Secretary of State Cordell Hull is on the job in Washington virtually alone. He's pictured at his desk on one of he hottest days of the summer.

ress styling seen at Bailey's Beach, Newport, was quilted elaborately, and accompanied by striped cloak and a large, colorful hat.

For the beach Mme. Schiaparelli recently designed an apron front suit worn over wide-legged shorts, and a matching sunbonnet which was cut so that the corner of the material centered the wearer's forehead, forming a peak—original, as usual.

The House

By LAURA M. LARRABEE

The old Page house, as it was called, stood well back from the street, at the end of a winding driveway, shaded by stately elm trees. It was a large, squarely built, white house with green blinds and many, many windows, that glittered in the sun. The house was topped by two enormous, red brick chimneys, Rambler roses, that were a riot of beauty and color, twined lovingly above the massive front door where an old-fashioned, brass knocker hung, tarnished and broken.

This used to be the show place of the town when Colonel Page was alive. But now it was only a shabby old house, medieval by memories of by-gone grandeur. Still, there was something infinitely lovely about the old house yet. But Diana, the last of the Pages, and its present owner, did not think so.

She sat in a low chair before the window, rocking moodily back and forth. The rocker squeaked gently, and unconsciously inched toward the fireplace as though preferring to make its exit that way. Diana blinked it back impatiently.

"This old chair is like everything else about the place," she said crossly, "old and worn out."

She glanced defiantly at grandfather's picture hanging over the mantel. Everything about this place was old, old! She hated it. hated it all! She wished grandad had not willed it to her. He had often bemoaned the fact that she, the last of the Pages, had been born a girl. Well, she wouldn't be a Page—she'd be married Robert Warren in the fall.

Diana's gaze rested for a moment, without approval, upon the tall mahogany clock ticking away complacently in its corner, where it had stood for 50 years or more. She was even provoked with Bob, on this nice June morning, for suggesting last night that perhaps she would rather have him fix the old place up in preference to building a new bungalow.

Diana cupped her round, dimpled chin in her small, white hand and fell to musing; happy day dreams these were. They would build a bungalow like Mrs. Winslow's across the street, with a darling little breakfast nook in the kitchen.

But Mrs. Winslow complained it was hot over there in summer with no shade trees. Oh, well, one did not have to rake a driveway in the fall when the leaves came tumbling down; there—

Back came the same old bothersome subject. The house! What would she do with it! Sell it? No, for no one would buy such an old place. She looked at grandad's picture defiantly. Then, she stamped her small foot angrily (did i tell you Diana had red hair?)

"I hate this old house, granddad," she said. "I just wish it would burn down—flat!"

But wishes, sometimes, come true, and there came a day Diana never forgot. Beginning one afternoon, with a small boiler explosion in the box factory, flames, fanned by a high wind, spread with appalling rapidity until the whole town of Lynnfield was threatened. All night Diana crouched by her bedroom window and watched that dread wall creep nearer and nearer. She saw greedy flames seize the tall church steeple and then—a blackened shadow—topple over. Many people would be homeless, before morning. Suddenly something gripped her throat like iron hands. Perhaps, before morning, she too would be homeless.

"Oh, I never meant that," she sobbed aloud. "I don't want my dear old house to burn." Ah, she had been wicked to wish such a terrible thing. And now her wish was coming true. Her home, her father's home, her grandad's home, the home of all the Pages was going to burn—flat!

"I will never leave my dear old house, never!" she sobbed. "If it burns, then I will burn with it."

But what was that noise? Oh, the doorbell.

Diana hurried into bathrobe and slippers and went downstairs in the dark to open the front door.

"I thought I'd run over to tell you," smiled Mrs. Winslow, "Everything is all right, my husband just called up. He has been down there fighting the fire, and he said they have it under control now and expect to have it out entirely in a few hours."

The reaction was so great that Diana could feel herself trembling violently.

Mrs. Winslow put a comforting arm about her. "You poor dear," she said, "I know how bad you must have felt.

"A bungalow like ours could be rebuilt in a short time, but a wonderful old place like this one could never duplicate. I have always envied you your home, Miss Page. If you ever want to sell it, I—"

"Oh, never, never!" solemnly declared the last of the Pages.

WALL ST. CLOSE

New York, Aug. 4.—(AP)—Selected industrial stocks leaned moderately toward the rallying side of today's market.

Gains of fractions to a point or so in steels, motors and other leaders predominated at the opening. There were subsequently slippage down or cancelled in many cases. Prices hardened again after noon, but most were under the best near the final hour and an assortment of losers was in evidence.

Philip Morris, after climbing to around its year top, encountered profit taking pressure and dropped more than 2 points. Transfers were about 600,000 shares.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Aug. 4 (CP)—Volume of trading lightened and prices wilted moderately in the early hours of the session on the Toronto Exchange. Recent bid strength, including Preston, Waite-Amulet and Kerr-Addison, all slipped back and other issues followed.

Preston declined to 1.85 and recovered half the loss while Waite touched 7.20 before rebounding to 7.45, off about 30 cents net.

Noranda and Hollinger golds turned strong in the early afternoon. Noranda moved to a new high at 74½ and McIntyre touched new ground at 47.

Industrials were inclined to weakness with New York, minor recessions predominating in steels, utilities and miscellaneous issues.

QUEBEC STORMS CAUSE 3 DEATHS

One Killed as House Falls, Another Struck in Carriage

Quebec, Aug. 4.—(CP)—Violent storms that left a trail through eastern Quebec in the past 24 hours left three dead and an unknown number of injured. A cyclone wind flattened houses and barns, whisked roofs away on the wings of the tempest and levelled trees. Damage amounted to more than $250,000.

The dead were Alfred Caron, 68, of St. Pierre de Montmagny; Antonio Soucy, 50, St. Jean Deschaillons, and Alfred Beland, 50, St. Lambert de Levis. Caron and Beland were killed by lightning. Soucy was killed when his farm home was blown down by a cyclone during the storm ranging over the Lotbinier county town of St. Jean.

When a lightning bolt struck a carriage in which Caron was driving with his wife, a married daughter Celia Letourneau, he was killed outright. The wife and daughter, Mrs. Armitage, killed Lecaron's horse and threw the young girl to the ground seriously injured.

Beland was seated at home before a warm stove when he lost his life at St. Lambert in Levis County. Lightning had destroyed more than a half-dozen barns and farm buildings in the vicinity before it stopped a hole in the roof of the Beland home and tore the iron stove from the floor. Neighbors found Beland's lifeless body stretched out near the overturned stove.

Communication lines were felled and highways were blocked elsewhere in Eastern Quebec district by

Decrease in Cheese Shipments

Toronto, Aug. 4.—Shipments of cheese from Canada to the United Kingdom continue to shrink. Dominion Department of Agriculture reports for the week ended July 30 number of boxes shipped amounted to 20,785, which compares with 31,-240 in the week of the year, and 28,127 in the corresponding week of last year. Exports for the period May 1 to July 1 amounted to 344,792 boxes, a decrease of 81,431 boxes from the 426,223 boxes shipped in the like period of 1937. Averaging 85 pounds to the box, this decline represents approximately 7,000,000 pounds.

Prices drifted lower for butter and ungraded eggs, on the local produce market yesterday.

Trading resumed at a quiet pace on the butter market. Sales were recorded on the Ontario first-grade product on a basis of 34½c, down ½c from the previous day's nominal price of 35c. Western make was offered at 25c. Some quarters shaded values of points, being quoted in the wide range of 26c to 27c for top grades, and 25½c to 26¼c for 38 score.

Although fresh receipts were not heavy, the local wave trends tend to ease consumption, and dealers reported accumulation in offerings on the egg market. Ungraded eggs dropped a full cent per dozen on top grades to 24c for grade A-large, 22c for medium, 20c for B's, and 18c for C grades. No change occurred in the other divisions, but graded shipments were easy to the prevailing rates of 27c for grade A-large, 26c for medium, 23c for B's, and 21c for C grade.

Montreal Improves.

Montreal, Aug. 4.—Some general tone of the produce section of Canadian Commodity Exchange improved slightly. Second grade butter and Quebec cheese were in demand, prices gaining about ½c each.

Butter, spot — Quebec fresh (92 score), 24¾c to 25¼c; Quebec specials (38 score), 22¾c to 23¾c. Sales, 200 Quebec fresh (92 score), at 24¼c; 200 Quebec fresh (92 score), at 24½c; 50 Quebec seconds (36 score), at 23¾c.

Cheese, spot—Ontario white, 14c to 14¼c; Ontario colored, 14c bid; Quebec white, 13¾c; and Quebec colored, 12 11-16c bid. Sales: 400 Quebec white, at 13¾c; 600 Quebec white at 13 11-16c.

Eggs, spot—Ontario A-large, 27½c; A-medium, 26c; A-small, 25c; B-large, 24c asked, and C, 22c asked.

To arrive—Butter, Quebec fresh (92 score), 24¼c to 24½c; cheese, Quebec white, 13¾c bid.

Butter futures — Steady and unchanged; August, 24¼c to 24½c; November, 25¼c to 25½c. One November future was sold at 25¼c.

The order opening the parks and playgrounds Sunday specifies "from one p.m. to dark".

Mayor Ralph Day emphasized that no organized or commercial sport would be allowed Sunday. "The idea is that people will be able to use the parks as they might their own back yards," he said. "They can play tennis or anything they like on

THOUSANDS WILL LINE RACE ROUTE

Silver Collection Requested For Sake of Kinsmen's Charity Work

Before the first shout of "here they come" is heard on "Derby Hill", North Front Street, tonight, (Thursday) thousands of citizens and visitors from allthoughout the Belleville district will have lined the course for the Belleville Kinsmen Club's annual All-Canada "Soap Box Derby".

Only a silver collection is being requested in an effort to obtain finances for the continuance of the Belleville Kinsmen Club's charity enterprise, their erstwhile Kinsmen Eye Clinic. The Kinsmen of Belleville are doing a public service in providing a treatment and eyeglasses for all children who are in need of such attention. It is with this thought in mind that the sponsors of tonight's event are appealing to the general public for financial assistance. The expenses entailed to assure suitable prizes for tonight's winners and also to provide transportation for the winner to Akron, Ohio, for the world's championship "Soap Box Derby" event, have been extensive and must be met through the receipts this evening.

"Our club has rendered what public service we have been called upon to meet, especially our Eye Clinic work must be carried on and it is only through enterprises such as the "Soap Box Derby" from which we can derive revenue to continue our charity ventures. Our club members in general are appealing to the public to please donate generously, but no matter how small the donation it will be most acceptable. I assure you," announced Race Chairman Kinsmen Bill Hurst this morning.

The Kinsmen Club is devoted to the welfare of children and it naturally follows their sponsorship of a "Kid Kar Derby" is most fitting and within their field of activities. The attending public is urged to heed the appeal of the Kinsmen Club and donate whatever possible towards this charitable cause.

derstood to be the following:

1. Cessation of hostilities.

2. Withdrawal of Japanese and Soviet troops to a line of demarcation on either side of the disputed strip of hilly country overrun. Changkufeng and Shatasopin.

3. Temporary neutralization of the area and reopening of the frontier gates for creation of one or more commissions to delimit the frontiers and settle further border incidents.

Japanese spokesmen said the proposal showed "signs of moderation and would serve to "conclude" Moscow's "provocative action." By offering to withdraw her troops, they said, Japan would compensate for the loss of supplies which the Russians would suffer by abandoning the attempt to drive the Japanese by force of arms.

The Hortimoscow-Sustanin interview took place in a strained atmosphere.

DELUGE OF MAIL BRINGS POST OFFICE

Disney, Okla., Aug. 5 (AP)—Disney, boom town of 1,500 on the Grand River Dam site, needed a post office, so civic-minded residents got busy. They wrote those words of letters to senators, newspaper and magazine advertisements. Then the mail carrier was staggering under bales of literature. Disney got a post-office.

The nurse, married only a month ago, collapsed while attending a five-year-old child suffering from the same disease.

Why the Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

Summer Heat: How is it a season for summer fogs where they usually occur. They form over land, cool nights of summer along creeks, rivers, and moderate valleys. At the end of quiet, warm days, the air is full of moisture as evaporation has been going on continuously all day from the moist surfaces. At night, and often before midnight, the surface air has cooled sufficiently by radiation that the dewpoint temperature is reached and litul fog droplets are formed. These fogs are rarely very thick and are soon dissipated by the morning sun.

THE WEATHER

Toronto, Aug. 5—(CP)—Light showers have occurred very locally in the Prairie Provinces, and it has been generally fair in Alberta and Saskatchewan. The weather is fair and warm in Ontario and Quebec, but cloudy with scattered showers and considerable fog in the Maritime Provinces. A trough of low pressure extends from the west coast of Hudson Bay south to Kansas and pressure is also low over Labrador but ridges of high are in the region and over the Prairie Provinces.

Lake Superior—Moderate southerly winds; partly cloudy and warm, followed by local thunderstorms tonight and early Saturday, then becoming somewhat cooler.

Manitoba and Saskatchewan—Partly cloudy; probably light scattered showers; cool tonight. Saturday, partly cloudy and moderately warm.

Alberta—Partly cloudy today; cool tonight. Saturday, fair and moderately warm.

BOBBY WILSON, 13 CHAMPION, BEARS VICTORY SHYLY

Tells Newsman it Took Just Two Weeks to Build His Car

AFTER ARDON LAURELS

A small, blonde, 13-year-old winner of the all-Canadian championship Soap Box Derby races held in this city last wedding, Bobbie Wilson of previous Derby racing fame, smiled down from the top of a truck in which sat his brim, streamline red and white racer, officially judged the fastest in the Dominion, and assured newspapermen that he would try to better his brother's record at the World's Championship Soap Box Derby races being held at Akron, Ohio later this month.

As the result of last evening's races held under 12- joint auspices of the local Rinamman Club and the Daily Oracle Intelligencer, Bobbie earned the right to represent Canada at the Akron world's competition for this class of racer. He will drive it, confident of himself and machine, and supreme in the conviction that he stands as good a chance of winning the world's championship as any one of the hundreds of other boys who will be present.

Mobbed by Boys

Mobbed by a small battalion of boys and others at the conclusion of last evening's races on Kenny Hill, Bobbie took his honors shyly and without comment of any especial nature. His machine was immediately hoisted into the rear of the special truck used during the evening to transport racers from the finish line to the starting line again, and was conveyed downtown where the speedy machine was placed under lock and key in the window of the business building next door to the Daily Ontario Intelligencer. During the evening and through the day hundreds viewed the home-built machine which proved a speedtest against a field of more than sixty others last evening.

Changes to Facilitate Reformation Of Convicts Planned for Prisons

Ottawa, Aug. 5—(CP)— The government intends to proceed with prison reform in Canada as rapidly as is possible under the statutes despite the failure of a bill to set up a penitentiaries' commission at the last parliament, Justice Minister Lapointe announced yesterday.

Mr. Lapointe said that some of the recommendations of the Royal Commission on the penal system, the report of which led to the government's reorganization plans, had already been put into effect. Inspector O. L. O'Leary and G. E. Elcock have been named to assist Inspector G. L. Sauvent, acting superintendent of penitentiaries. Inspector Sauvent took over largely the duties of General D. M. Ormond, former superintendent of penitentiaries, who resigned after his retirement had been recommended by the commission.

A major change in the regulations governing the computing of days of remission earned by a convict for good conduct will become effective Aug. 15, Mr. Lapointe's announcement said. The changes will make it easier for remissions to be earned.

The changes are brought about with a view to encourage good conduct and industry and to facilitate the reformative treatment of convicts," it was said.

ON HUNGER STRIKE

Declaring that he would rather die in America in hunger than return to Nazi Germany to face the headsman's axe, Alfred Henry Hesselbith started a hunger strike in Los Angeles that extended into his second week. Hesselbith is an Aryan and a writer on racial persecution in Germany. He is being held for immigration authorities following trial and dismissal of seven theft counts against him.

BRITAIN TO SPEND $632,000,000 ON 'AIR' IN 1938

1935-1940 TOTAL

By J. F. SANDERSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer.

London, Aug. 5—(CP)— Great Britain will spend £126,400,000 ($632,000,000) on the air force this year—more than the Canadian budget for all governmental purposes.

In a gigantic race against time, the Chamberlain government has mapped out a program calling for 2,850 first-line aircraft by 1940, three times as many as in May, 1935. But that's only part of the rearmament program—practically factories are being built, airdromes constructed, and thousands of pilots trained, bombs, machine guns and other armaments stored up and training schools enlarged.

SULPHIDE BOY GORED BY BULL

Bull Prevented From Dashing to Another Field Turns on T. Cassidy

Tweed, Aug. 5 (Special)—Thomas Cassidy, 13, was severely injured on Wednesday evening when he was gored by a Holstein bull at his home near Sulphide. The young lad was driving the cattle to the fields after milking. The bull made a dash for another field and when young Cassidy attempted to turn him, the bull suddenly dashed him to the ground, fracturing a rib and injuring his hand and neck. He returned to his home after medical attention.

NO SPECIAL PLAN AGAINST JEWISH GOV'T DECLARES

Jews Must be Limited in Influence to Ratio in Population

DOCTRINE OF 1919

Bulletin Says Duce Does Not Want Hybrid Race in Italy

Rome, Aug. 5—(AP)—The Italian government announced today and had "no special persecution plan against Jews."

It expressed determination, however, to limit participation by Jews in "the full life of this state" to the same proportion that Jews form in Italy's population—about one in a thousand.

The announcement was made in a bulletin issued by the official agency. Informazione Diplomatica, which replied to foreign criticism of the "Fascist race doctrine enunciated last month.

No Hybrid Race

The bulletin declared the doctrine was one which it was stated by Premier Mussolini as early as 1919 and was designed to prevent creation of a hybrid race in Italy.

The bulletin disclosed a special census will be taken shortly to determine the exact number of Jews in Italy.

"We will send into Libya and East Africa—with the passing of time and for the facilitation necessity of life—millions of men," Informazione Diplomatica said.

Need for Sentiment

"To avoid a catastrophic plague of mongrelism, creation of a bastard race neither European nor African, from confusing die-integration and revolt, severe laws promulgated and enforced by Fascism are not enough.

"There also is need for strong sentiment, strong pride in clear, unimpresent consciousness of race.

"Discrimination does not mean persecution. This is said to the all too many Jews of Italy and other countries who raise useless lamentations to the skies which pass from arrogant complaint to attack and senseless panic."

ELECTRIC SHOCK FATAL TO WORKER

Pipe of Pump Touches Live Wire at Point Iroquois

Iroquois, Ont., Aug. 5 (CP)—Malcon Shawel, of Iroquois, was electrocuted yesterday at Point Iroquois, summer resort on the St. Lawrence River, when he struck the pipe of a pump with which he was working touched a live wire overhead.

Shawer, Samuel Webb and Frank Timlock were working on the pump which supplies the resort with water. They finished the pipe in the air. As they were lowering it, it swayed and hit a 2,200 volt power line. Shawer was the only one touching the pipe at the time.

Webb suffered severe burns to the hand while applying artificial respiration to Shawer. He came in contact with a chain hanging from the hoist holding the pipe up.

Coroner Dr. Peter McLaughlin, Winchester, will consult Crown Attorney E. H. Guss, Cornwall, before deciding on an inquest.

MOSCOW IS FIRM ATTACKS BY JAPS MUST BE ENDED

Withdrawal of Troops Would be Followed by Discussions

TREATY OF 1886 CITED

Tokyo Believes Basis For Peace on Borders Can be Found

Tokyo, Aug. 5 (CP-Havas)—Unofficial Japanese circles today said four Soviet light bombers attacked the Japanese lines in the disputed Siberian-Manchukuo-Korean border zone late today.

The raid was the second of the day. It followed authoritative reports that the Soviet reply to the Japanese proposal for settlement of the Manchoukuo border incidents was acceptable to Tokyo in principle.

Moscow, Aug. 5.—(AP)— Russia is ready to grant Japan peace on the frontier with Manchoukuo, if the Japanese discontinue attacks upon Soviet territory and withdraw their troops.

Russia then would be ready to start diplomatic discussions on the establishment of frontier posts, not only if Japan recognizes the lines established by maps attached to the Russian treaty with China of June 26, 1886. This stand left the next move to Japan.

It was Foreign Minister Maxim Litvinoff's reply to Japanese proposals for mutual withdrawal of troops from the disputed area, at the junction of Russian Siberia, Japanese Korea, and Manchoukuo.

FISH BITE WELL DESPITE HEAT

Story of Good Catches Continued Through Warm Spell

Heat waves and resurgences of the past several days may have brought discomfort to the general citizenry, but to fishermen of the city the summer's high temperatures have made little difference. Any hazy or more fish, are being caught during this peak hot weather as were during the cooler months of June and four weeks Bass are biting well in the bays and large catches of big fish are reported. A fine, four-pound specimen of small-mouth was landed Wednesday in the vicinity of Snake Island by Wilfred Grey, Dundas Street. A seven-pound muskellpole was broken in an attempt at landing the fighting fish.

'Purified, Festival A German Excursion

Salzburg, Austria, Aug.5 (CP-Havas)—The Salzburg music festival, which Chancellor Hitler of Germany and Premier Mussolini of Italy will attend, is to open with Richard Strauss' "Arabella" and will include a special aerial exhibition of two worlds to an almost strictly German holiday audience, with Nazi vocal selections and sports clothes filling the seats once occupied by Foreign visitors in evening clothes.

CHILD'S HEAD WEDGED BETWEEN BEDSTEAD AND THE SPRINGS

Owen Sound, Ont., Aug. 5 (CP)— Three seven-months-old child of Mr. and Mrs. Royal Ackerman, was killed yesterday afternoon at Lloyd-head when its head became wedged between the bed-stead and springs of a bed. The mother had gone into the garden after putting the child to sleep. A few minutes later two other daughters, Roberta and Madie, aged three and five, left the child who was all right, and the accident occurred some time later. An inquest was ordered a verdict of "accidental death."

$40,000 ROBBERY WITH MACHINE GUNS

Woodriver, Ill., Aug. 5 (AP)— Three bandits armed with machine guns, held up an assistant cashier of the First National Bank of Woodriver today and robbed him of between $35,000 and $40,000.

The holdup occurred outside the Woodriver post office, where Ralph Welsh, the assistant cashier, had gone to get a small shipment of money from the Federal Reserve Banks of St. Louis and Chicago.

Ferocious Grizzly Breaks Cage, Spreads Terror in Pittsburgh, is Shot

Pittsburgh, Aug. 5—(AP)—A ferocious grizzly bear that broke from a steel-barred cage in the Highland Park Zoo and spread terror through the adjoining residential district, was shot and killed near a reservoir in the park five hours after her escape today.

Before the bear was killed zookeepers appealed to parents to call their children from the streets and 50 policemen, armed with high powered rifles and ordered to shoot to kill, encircled the area.

The grizzly broke three one-inch bars in the ceiling of an outdoor cage, tore off a wooden roof and climbed out the opening. A few minutes later an excited man telephoned police he had seen a bear ambling from the park gate into the residential area.

Arnold J. Schaumann, superintendent of the zoo, warned police the bear was "dangerous" and ill-tempered.

950 PLANES BEGIN TACTICS OVER SEA, PLOT 'WAR ZONE'

Dutch Air Lines Official Threatens to Cross Zone Over North Sea

AIR LINES WARNED

London, Aug. 5—(AP)—The Royal Air Force launched 950 planes in defense maneuvers with 950 planes today over a North Sea "war zone."

Beginning of the exercises was delayed until afternoon by fog and thunderstorms.

An official of the Royal Dutch Airlines said seven of the company's airliners would make their usual trips between Amsterdam and Rotterdam, the Netherlands, and Croydon, England, flying across the area.

Airlines Advised

"The North Sea is a neutral area" this company official said. "Everybody can put a ban on crossing it".

The Ministry this morning proclaimed the limits of the situation.

The company was reported to have been informed by telephone of the decision to ignore the warning and later confirmed it by letter, which was said to have gone unanswered.

Warning of Straying Planes

The government established an emergency wireless control system to warn Royal Air Force machines of any civilian planes straying into the "war" area, which stretches from the middle part of England across the east coast to the territorial waters of Belgium, The Netherlands and France.

To give the airmen maximum training there will be no theoretical casualties. Only when "enemy" planes were ordered to continue their flight will they be shot down.

The announced object of the manoeuvres is to "test the air and ground defenses of the British Isles against attack in the area of the exercises, and the organization and efficiency of the various forces taking part."

TOURIST CAMP BUSINESS LAGS

Not Many Tourists Stop Over on Way Across Country

Though tourist traffic is heavy, and the extent of their spending is evident by the amount of American money being handled in local shops, business at the city tourist camp during the past week-end has dwindled noticeably. It is reported by caretaker, George Wilson. A daily average of four or five recently constituted good business for the camp. Fresh, inviting looking but no reason is given for the apparent reluctance of the visitors to the city to stop over. It is believed, however, the condition is general as tourists pass through this central section.

Railway Ties Tumble on Speeder, Section Hand Killed, Another Hurt

Sennterre, Que., Aug. 5—(CP) —Section hand J. A. Ebacher was killed and foreman E. Bouchard was injured late yesterday when a load of railway ties hauled on a push car behind a speeder tumbled over rear men manning the speeder.

The accident occurred on the Canadian National Railways Northern Transcontinental line a short way from here. The two other sectionmen riding the speeder escaped injury as they sat at the front of the conveyance. Ebacher and Bouchard rode in the rear.

Bouchard and his companions said the push-car crushing Ebacher. It has not been decided whether an inquest will be held.

80 CENTS PEG FOR 1938 CROP ASSURED WEST

No Hoarding by Government to Boost Prices

ANNOUNCEMENT MADE

Ottawa, Aug. 5—(CP)—Western Canada farmers today were assured of at least 80 cents a bushel for this year's crop of No. 1 Northern wheat, delivered at Fort William, and world wheat markets had the Canadian government's word there would be no hoarding by it to boost prices or create monopoly.

Decided especially by the world grain trade, Prime Minister Mackenzie King's announcement came this night at 8 o'clock shortly after cabinet council had fixed the base price of 80 cents for top grade wheat.

7¼ Cents Below 1937

The Price is 7¼ cents below the minimum fixed last year but an important guarantee of minimum for previous years has been withdrawn. The Canadian Wheat Board will buy all the wheat offered regardless of what the market does. In the two previous crop years the wheat board was not permitted to buy wheat at 87½ cents unless the price dropped below 70 cents and it never did.

Today speculation in the capital turned largely on what might be the financial results for the government of the new Wheat Board policy of buying all wheat offered it.

FAMILY ESCAPES BURNING COTTAGE

Sturgeon River Folk From Bucket Bri-gade

Sturgeon-Bay, Ont., Aug. 5 (CP)— Three, Mrs. Corrigan and her fourteen months old baby escaped unscathed early today when fire destroyed their summer cottage at the head of this Georgian Bay summer resort, fifteen miles west of Midland. A few seconds after they escaped the dwelling it was a mass of flames and nothing was saved.

The blaze, believed started from an overheated stove in the kitchen, was discovered by Cyril English when he was awakened by choking smoke. He aroused his wife, Stephanie, and baby daughter, Sandra, and together they made their way to safety.

Other resort residents formed a bucket brigade from the Sturgeon River and soaked nearby cottages with water to prevent the flames from spreading.

There was no chance to save the blazing cottage. Eighteen years old, cottage and contents were not covered by insurance. Money, clothes, jewellery, furniture and other personal effects were among the items destroyed and the total loss was unestimated.

COOL AND BRASH CORRIGAN GRINS, AS CITY WELCOMES

Crowds Roar Greetings to Lone Hero of Bizarre Ocean Flight

IN STATE OF SURPRISE

'You've Brought Irish of Two Great Boroughs Together' Says One

By JOHN FERRIS
Associated Press Staff Writer

New York, Aug. 5—(AP)—Cool and brash, young Douglas Corrigan rode triumphantly up Lower Broadway today, grinning infectiously as the temperature rose and sweltering thousands cheered his progress, indifferent to the oppressive heat.

All the enthusiasm for his mad solo flight from New York to Dublin was let loose in a continuous roar that dinned above his ears from the battery to city hall.

Brokers and business men, bankers and stenographers, clerks and other office workers weren't stayed down a bit by the devitalizing humidity and the heat of the swarming sidewalks.

The tons of torn paper and ticker tape fell, the perspiring crowds yelled and shoved and Corrigan grinned, sitting on the back of an open car with James M. McGurrin, chairman of Mayor La Guardia's reception committee, and the mayor's secretary, Stanley Bowe.

Brother in Parade

In the second car rode Corrigan's brother, Harry, of Baltimore, and his wife, Anita. In the next car were Walter and Steve Hatch, friends who helped Corrigan service his plane at Roosevelt Field in the week Howard Hughes was making his record round the world flight.

The imperturbable Corrigan remained just as he had grinned earlier in his hotel suite when he insisted anew he had made an honest mistake in flying to Ireland instead of to California.

He grinned and the crowds roared. He grinned when he came down, thinking thoughts in the dark mist the time his old crate was thundering through the clouds to soar above the shores of Eire.

Crowd Roars Its Welcome

From the moment Corrigan was escorted from the hotel by police and detectives who made themselves a flying wedge through the jammed lobby and sidewalk the roars of the crowds were in Corrigan's ears.

The crowd was a dense Corrigan was virtually lifted by the police and dropped in the automobile in the ride down the west side Express Highway to the battery and the ride up Broadway.

Manhattan and Brooklyn, which in their separate boroughs constituencies have been far apart on Corrigan question joined hands to fete him.

Shy, Perpetually Grinning

Shy, perpetually grinning, and with a ready wit that explodes in the most surprising manner, Corrigan has been in a state of acute surprise for three weeks ago when he flew from Brooklyn for Los Angeles and landed in Dublin.

Corrigan got a ticker tape shower down Broadway and a speech by the Mayor today, in the manner of the heroes from Lindbergh to Howard Hughes—with a Brooklyn welcome thrown in.

"We've brought the Irish of the two great boroughs together, Douglas, my boy," spokesman told Corrigan as the slight 130 pound airman steamed up the bay yesterday aboard the liner Manhattan.

Corrigan's welcome began when he found the tug Shamrock leading a dozen no-descript vessels ilrad with cheering keeps and celebrating up the bay. Tears coursed down his cheeks as he waved 'at them, at the thousands who lined the waterfront and at his flying fellows who had come out in front of the ship and dipped their wings.

"All this for me," he said incredulously.

CANAL TRAFFIC IS MAINTAINED

Records kept by Murray Canal tending show that traffic through the canal this year is up over last year's record, with some 100 larger boats being clocked through the waterway this season. The majority of the craft are United States owned boats carrying vacation parties down through this inland waterway to the Bay of Quinte. Many of them have stopped in the vicinity of the Royal Canadian Air Force base to view this imposing establishment, while Belleville also is benefitting this season by the large number of foreign boats tying up at the park and wharves.

SIMCOE INQUEST RESUMES TONIGHT

The adjourned inquest looking into the death of Nick Simcoe, a transient who died of injuries received when a Canadian National Railway freight train ran over him some weeks ago in Belleville, will resume before Chief Coroner Dr. J. J. Robertson at the police station commencing at 7.30 p.m. this evening. Following the preliminary inquest the body of the deceased was released for burial and shipped to Winnipeg.

WOMEN SMOKERS ON THE INCREASE?

The fad of women smokers is on the noticeable increase it is evident by observation of the numbers of tourist cars passing through the city at the present time. Feminine occupants of the cars that formerly concealed their 'smokes' when passing through a city or town, now nonchalantly puff on their cigarettes with the spicnch of veteran smokers as they drive their car through traffic, or loll at ease on the cushioned seats. Through a single case of a pipe smoking feminine driver was observed last year, this fad has apparently not become general in public.

LOCAL FAIR IS SHORT TIME OFF

Belleville Fair is just short weeks off, and already colorful advertising of the annual event of the city and district is being pasted locally and through the rural sections. Entries which are expected to top in numbers those of last year and previous years, according to hopes of Fair officials are coming in with the office of the secretary, R. H. Ketcheson, in increasing numbers daily.

NOW WANDERERS ARE FACING WEST

Eastward Trend of Transients Has Definitely Turned

The moving tide of restless transients which has been shifting east across the country since Spring began has reversed its flow during the past week or so, and again the wanderers are heading west, this time to the harvest fields of Western Canada. It is revealed at the local Government Employment Office where numbers of them tarry briefly enroute through the city.

Men will be needed in the West to gather in one of the largest harvests there in years, and the unemployed have been quick to take advantage of the promise of employment. It is pointed out by the office. Earlier in the season the moving battalions of workless had headed east in the hope of obtaining shipping berths on some of the coastal steamers from the docks at Montreal or the Maritimes.

A few Belleville unemployed will make up the large numbers of workless harvest bound in the west, but for the most part the local youths will invade the tobacco fields of Essex and other counties of Western Ontario in the hope of obtaining work gathering the leaf, it is believed by the office.

At the present time the supply and demand for farm labor in the district has reached a stalemate. Daily one or two calls for help are received at the local office, and are promptly filled. But the number of workers still in type of occupation is reported as limited as the calls received.

The next work which is expected to result in employment at the office is tomato picking, and already a survey of the number of workers is being made by tomato acreage owner, it is reported. One district grower has announced his intention of hiring some fifteen hands when the crop ripens within the next week or so.

Obituary

LATE MRS. E. FITCHETT (Tweed)

Tweed, (Special)—Death claimed an old resident of Tweed in the person of Margaret Ann Vance, wife of Edmund Fitchett, on Wednesday evening at her home in Tweed. The deceased who was seventy-seven years of age had been ill for several months and in a critical condition for some time.

The late Mrs. Fitchett was born near Lodgeroom, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Vance. She was married to Edmund Fitchett, thirty-four years ago at Actinolite and moved to Tweed in 1918 from Hungerford. She was a member of the United Church.

Surviving are her husband, a brother, Hiram Vance, of Belleville, and a sister, Mrs. John Leffman, Lampman, Sask. The funeral was held Friday from her late residence, on South Victoria Street, to the United Church. Interment was in Tweed cemetery.

Court Cannot Impose Penalty Though 2 Barbers Found Guilty

No Penalty Provided in By-law Under Section Two

AMENDMENT NEEDED

"I would suggest the city amend this bylaw, if we are to enforce it. As it reads now violators can be prosecuted and convictions registered, but there is no penalty provided," stated His Worship Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C. today as he delivered judgment in two cases pertaining to the violation of the city bylaw regarding the closing hour of local barber shops.

Two local proprietors of barber shops, appeared in local police court last week charged with accepting customers and trade after the designated closing hour. The evidence was adduced in the previous court. His Worship reserving judgment until today.

"I find the accused men have violated section one of this bylaw but as section two of the same city bylaw does not provide any stated penalty, consequently the court cannot impose any punishment and I will have to permit the accused persons their leave," held His Worship today.

"In other words, it would seem as though the bylaw has no teeth, I would suggest the amendment," concluded His Worship.

DRY GRASS, WEEDS CALLED MENACE

Mayor Bone Calls on Highways Minister to Take Action

The menace of dry grass and weed growth along the right of way of No. 2 Highway east and west of the city has been recognized by Mayor Jamieson Bone as a distinct fire threat for properties bordering along the highway.

Speaking on behalf of the large number of property owners along the road, Mayor Bone today appealed to the Honorable T. B. McQuesten, Ontario Minister of Highways, for action in cutting down this overgrowth of grass and weeds.

In his letter to the Highways Minister, Mayor Bone points out:

"This, No. 2 Highway is one of our most important highways, and I notice this year, as I did last year, that your department has not cut the hay along the right-of-way.

"The result is that there is a long growth of unsightly, dry hay, constituting a serious fire hazard for adjoining properties. You are also sowing noxious weeds broadcast, and it is very poor advertising for our American tourist friends. It looks to me like false economy, and I would be interested to know why this work is apparently neglected, especially when a few laborers, at very little cost, could keep it clean like the railways do."

Child Falls Through Roof Of Porch

Tweed, Aug. 3 (Special)—Phyllis, three-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dewey Kleinsteuber, who resides on Victoria street in Tweed, narrowly escaped fatal injuries when she fell through the porch roof at her home to the cement verandah floor some fifteen feet below. She sustained a fractured thigh bone and severe head injuries. After receiving medical attention from a local physician she was taken to Belleville General Hospital where she two miles was rushed.

POLICE COURT

"I was returning from the Soldiers' Reunion in Toronto and really wasn't harming any person," pleaded Samuel Bolton, transient and war veteran after he pleaded guilty to a charge of intoxication before Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., in today's local police court. "Let me see weren't you before the court on July 26th when you were convicted of the same offence? Yes, and if my memory serves me right you said you were en route to the Corps Reunion then and the court reduced your sentence so you would be free to attend that gathering," remarked Crown Attorney R.C. Donnan, K.C., in the preferred a second offence intoxication charge, which resulted in a minimum sentence of one month being subsequently imposed.

Charles Blakely, St. of Stirling, was convicted af driving an automobile while intoxicated. "Was there any damage resulting?" asked Mr. Donnan.

"About $200 worth to another automobile with which he collided," replied County Constable S. Eggleton of Stirling, who investigated the case.

A jail sentence of fourteen days with the accused man's automobile being impounded for a period of three months and the driver's licence permanently cancelled, was the sentence of the court.

William Sihbre, Belleville, appeared charged witl assault occasioning actual bodily harm. The evidence of the prosecution was presented at a previous court, Sihbre today testifying he had been attacked by the complainant in the case. His Worship finds the accused guilty. A fine of $10 and costs was imposed while a subsequent charge of driving a motor car while intoxicated which was preferred by Motorcycle Patrolman Sam Rivette, was further enlarged until the 26th instant. Ormonde Burke, local barrister, appeared on behalf of the accused.

A domestic case concluded today's proceedings.

and for diplomatic negotiations to settle the boundary on the basis of documents possessed by both parties.

The critical situation grew from the Japanese allegation that Russian troops fortified Changkufeng Hill in the disputed area July 22.

Optimism in Tokyo

Tokyo, Aug. 5—(AP)—Optimism that the Siberian border dispute with Russia would be settled peaceably pervaded this capital today.

Belief a basis for diplomatic negotiation would be found sprang from the Japanese government's offer to Moscow of a truce yesterday and from discussions between the Japanese Foreign Minister and the Russian Charge D'Affaires here.

Nevertheless, the Japanese army reported heavy shelling by Russian artillery in the disputed Changkufeng Hill area began at 4 a.m. (3 p.m. Tuesday, EDT.)

Russia on July 11 occupied the hill area, claimed by both Japan and Russia, where the frontier of Russian Siberia joins the borders of Japanese Korea and Manchoukuo.

BRITAIN TO SPEND

$2,500,000,000 Program

Between 1935 and the end of 1940, the air expansion program calls for the expenditure of £500,000,000 ($2,500,000,000), representing a fairly big chunk of Canada's whole national debt. The 1938 expenditure will be six times as big as 1934, twice as large as 1936 and 25 per cent higher than last year. For years after the war, Britain's average expenditure on the air force was £17,000,000 ($85,000,000).

The air force has five functions in Britain's defence plans—home defence, counter-attack, reconnaissance, trade protection and cooperation with the army and navy.

Today's Air Armada

Britain today has an air armada of 123 squadrons, comprising 68 bomber squadrons, 30 fighter squadrons of general reconnaissance aircraft and torpedo bombers and 10 squadrons of army cooperation planes. Behind this first-line fleet are greatly enlarged training and reserve organizations in support.

"Parity in the air" is the slogan behind it all, a determination to build up an air defence unit which will rival any aggressor force likely to attack this country. It is a part of a huge program embracing the army, navy and air force, entailing hundreds of millions of pounds and designed to make this country inviolable to attack by any of the European nations which, for the past seven or eight years, have been arming to the teeth.

A program of such proportions practically amounted to the air-craft industry of Great Britain going on a war-time basis.

PATIENT IN CAST GOES FOR WALK

His Plan to 'Cool Off' Ended by Toronto Police Patrol

Toronto, Aug. 5—(CP)— Police radio cruisers and patrolmen scoured the city last night searching for a patient from the Toronto General Hospital who went for a walk with a broken back strapped up in a cast covering his back from hips to shoulder. He returned after two hours of freedom and explained to an astonished desk clerk he had found it too hot in the building —so had gone out to get cool.

Twenty-four years ago yesterday Britain declared war on Germany.

Now Europe is passing through a stage of history which will be of interest to future generations for out of the present developments which arise from the chaotic conditions which followed the world war's end must come changes whether there be a new war or not. If British peace efforts with the aid of democracies bring the world to a sane outlook and a sense of security, there will be changes which will be a blessing to the world. If there should be a struggle which many today feel is impossible, it would be calamitous to humanity and mean the rebuilding of the world from below the foundations — a rebuilding which can only be possible after endless bitter struggles for supremacy in the pit among weakened nations.

This world as it is has wrongs that need correction but they will best be changed with progress from the present not by destruction. Those who seek to destroy the benefits of civilization may be assured they cannot escape whatever destruction they are responsible for.

Now twenty-four years after Britain entered the war against the offending nation Germany, Britain is striving by the route of peace to save mankind She has the help of the democracies in her efforts and there are signs that countries of other policies look with respect upon the security Britain gives in the world.

MAY OPEN POET'S GRAVE

There is a possibility that the grave of Edmund Spenser, one of the first of the great English poets of the days of Queen Elizabeth, will be opened in Westminster Abbey to settle a dispute as to whether there are buried in his grave poems written by the great poets of the day who attended his sad obsequies in the year 1599. Spenser died when but forty-seven years of age and when Shakespeare was about 35 years and when the latter had already indicated his ability to create drama and poetry.

Shakespeare in "As You Like It" written about 1600 refers to Spenser as the "dead Shepherd" and if Shakespeare was held among the great then it is felt a poem of his extolling Spenser might be in the grave, for the historian Camden said that poems were written by the poets and these poems with their pens were placed along with the coffin. This many think would be a definite answer to the controversy as to whether Sir Francis Bacon actually wrote Shakespeare's plays.

But as Shakespeare was largely an actor and a playwright and theatre owner though he did write the two long poems and many sonnets, it may be that he was not at the funeral of Spenser and hence his elegy on Spenser would not be in the grave If a poem signed by Shakespeare were found with the Spenser coffin in the familiar handwriting of his as shown in documents including his will, it might be proof of Shakespeare's authenticity as on author but the Baconians might say he signed Bacon's work with his own name even then. If however, there is no elegy by Shakespeare, Shakespeareans would not admit it as proof that he did , not write the works credited to him. Shakespeareans will stick to their belief in Shakespeare as author and playwright, despite the Baconian controversy If no poems signed by the poets in one fund, what then of Camden, the historian?

Most persons who have read both Shakespeare and Spenser would wish that the grave of the latter be not tampered with. Once some men with implements set out to take a deep look at the grave of Shakespeare over which rests an imprecation about the man who would disturb his bones. They never finished the job but gave up. Today no one would think of opening the Shakespeare grave.

There may have been a real fear that graves might be interfered with, else why the imprecation "but cursed be he that moves my bones" written above Shakespeare's tomb. There may have been much interference with graves in the 17th and sixteenth and seventeenth century but one or some friends of his say nothing unusual in having carved these words of threat.

Does it seem likely that the man over whose grave an imprecation rests carved in stone in quaint language, would wish to have the proof of his greatness found by interfering with the grave in the Abbey where Spenser has lain at rest for 339 years.

There is a general reluctance to disturb the dead, though moving a grave has often opened to make way for progress. But still the fear persists.

After all in the Spenser case, what is the use of trying to prove to Baconians that Shakespeare and not Bacon wrote the plays and poems. They believe in a cryptic code they claim to have found written across the poet's works everywhere spelling Bacon and not even the spirit coming from the grave could satisfy them that they were wrong.

To the average man the Baconians and their theory are so much nonsense.

CORRIGAN SPELLS CORRIGAN, and New York City and other parts of the United States are going Corrigan in a big way. New York City has arranged a civic reception which will outshine Lindbergh's. Wednesday night the New York Corrigan reception committee and friends held a two-way telephone-radio conversation with Corrigan, the lad who flew to Ireland when he was supposed to be winging for California. Corrigan Wednesday night was on a steamship two hundred miles out from New York. Looks like all the Corrigans in the world will concentrate in New York for the Corrigan reception. Brooklyn, too, wants to go Corrigan in a big way, and the Mayor of Houston, Texas, and other cities will be on hand to welcome this daring aviator who accomplished the seemingly impossible. Uncle Sam cancelled the young aviator's license for five days, punishment in not having procured permission to fly the ocean, and the five days will be up before Corrigan comes ashore — so what?

IN THE GOOD OLD SUMMER TIME we seldom think of the joys, and otherwise, of winter — particularly of the joys of long ago connected with bob-sledding or "coasting", when every hill was a slide, carefully treated with water until the bobs would flash down the incline like meteors. Considerable rivalry existed as to whose bob was the speediest, and special care was taken in the construction to encourage speed. Bob-sled racing has become a recognized winter sport in Europe and America and great race meets are held in the Adirondacks each winter, with steep courses, made faster by ice build-ups, and very fast time is made in the thrilling encounters with hairpin curves, etc. That's all very well for the winter, but what about the summer? Out of the mists have come the Soap Box Derby sponsored by newspapers all over the United States and Canada, and directed by a wealthy automobile firm, holding local meets where the community champion is decided and then the international and world championship finals in a central city of the United States witnessed by more than one hundred thousand people, and a roomful of prizes including a four year college course, al Jeopenses paid. The Soap Box Derby is the beginning of what may develop into a greater thing, along the line of building better citizenship from the cradle, almost, up.

Battleships as Targets

It is easy enough to write plausibly on the vulnerability of warships to air attack if the many technical points at issue are brushed aside; but the subject bristles with technicalities, and any discussion which ignores them is as futile as its conclusions are misleading.

x x x

The battleship of 1914 was designed at a time when bombing aircraft as we know them, did not exist, and plunging fire on battleship targets was regarded as impracticable.

In every navy the effective range of the biggest gun was assumed to be not more than 16,000 yards, because the fire-control apparatus of that era would not function effectively at greater distances. The guns then were given a moderate degree of elevation—20 degrees in the later British ships, 23 or 25 degrees in their German opposite numbers. As the guns themselves were high-velocity pieces, the angle of the descent of the projectile even at 16,000 yards was not very steep and there was every chance that if it hit the target ship above the main armour belt it would, owing to the angle of impact, be deflected by the armour deck.

The designer was not called upon to provide massive horizontal protection; there was no reason to suppose that the ship would be exposed to vertical or semi-vertical blows. The all-important thing was considered to be the protection of the waterline against flat or medium trajectory fire. So, while the sides of the battleship amidships being fortified by plates up to 14in. thick, the thickest deck did not exceed 6in. All the capital ships, British and German, of the Jutland period were projected on these principles, which were speedily found to be fallacious.

Alike in the Dogger Bank and Jutland actions, British ships opened fire at ranges as great as 20,000 yards, and the few hits obtained were terribly destructive, because the shells, falling at a steep angle, by reason of the high trajectory and angle of elevation at which the guns had been fired, crashed through the thin upper decks and detonated below. That their effect on the lower hull was great was due to the indifferent quality of our wartime ammunition. The lesson, however, was not learned by the world's naval architects and in due course applied.

In the Nelson and Rodney, begun in 1922 as the first British post-Washington ships, an entirely new distribution of armour was made. The vital area, boxed up for as 40 per cent of the displacement of 33,000 tons is said to be invested in protection.

Turning now from passive to active defence, we find the modern battleship in a very different case from her predecessor. Even at the end of the war the anti-aircraft armament was feeble, consisting in the great majority of our battleships of two 3in. 12-pdr. guns. The Nelson was given six 4.7. A.A. guns and older but modernised ships now mount eight 4in., and in an offensive communication issued on the occasion of the Silver Jubilee Naval Review in 1935 it was stated that future battleships would carry from 12 to 16 4.7in. or heavier A.A. guns.

These powerful weapons are believed to have a range equal to the service "ceiling" of most bombers; being semi-automatic they have a high rate of fire, and they discharge H.E. shell after a

That Body of Yours

By James W. Barton M.D.

Keep Head Low in Fainting Spells

One of the mistakes well meaning individuals make when any one faints is to try to secure a pillow or folded coat to put under the victim's head. The raised pillow raises to some extent the chest also and as the heart should be at practically lowest point to enable blood to flow easily back of it, no pillow should be placed under the head, in fact the head should be on the level with, or lower than, the feet.

In a large department store when a member of the sale's force or a customer faints, the sale's force are instructed to place the feet of the victim on a chair and the head on the floor.

That this simple method of restoring the circulation is useful at all times when the circulation fails is recorded by Drs. S. Weiss and R. W. Wilkins in the Journal of Clinical Investigation.

"The failure of the circulation—collapse—occurring in pneumonia and other infections, acute perforation of intestine, shock from some substance to which the patient is sensitive (allergy), is due to widespread dilation or widening of the veins carrying blood back to the heart. This dilation or widening means that the pulse pressure of the heart is poor and so not enough blood gets back to the heart to keep it pumping properly.

"Placing the patient in the horizontal position is necessary, as the Trendelenburg position (head and chest below the level of the body) will increase the blood flow to the heart and result in strengthening the pulse and raising the blood pressure."

It should be remembered that this fainting fits and lying and lowering the head is for cases of fainting when the face is pale, breathing rapid and pulse weak. It should not be used in cases of head injuries or a stroke of apoplexy when the face is flushed, breathing deep (snoring), and the pulse full and slow. In these cases the head should be slightly raised.

In fainting, smelling salts and sprinkling cold water on the face is good treatment. In cases of injury to the head or a stroke, rest is applied to the head and patient, kept as quiet as possible.

SAFETY PATHS

Of course there should be footpaths along all highways for the safety of pedestrians but they will have to be forced to use them. Efforts of public bodies to make highways fit for motoring have created a menace for the pedestrian, who exercises the right of freedom to walk on the road. That right is still right, but a flimsy buffer against a truck or motor car. Nevertheless, in this city and district we have installed sidewalks most pedestrians deliberately walk in front of cars on the highways.

The fact that there are on this continent more than three thousand deaths a year from walking along a country road—and the rate rising annually—should force a community like a community the advantages of the pedestrian sidewalk. Not built only willy-nilly, of course, merely for the sake of building sidewalks, but installed on a sound engineering basis that, first, determines where they are necessary, then installs adequate construction to such details as possible illumination, fire-hydrants, curbing, etc., which may have so much bearing ultimately on whether or not the walk is used when built.—Brandon Sun.

OLD STUFF

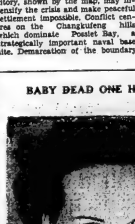
Well, well, all this stuff about research into the doings of little children is right tonight as very far. The National Council of Teachers at New York has been giving the results of some studies into the habits of little boys and girls. A few days' research, it has been found that among the jingles sung by children are these one:

I should worry, I should care,
I should marry a millionaire;
I should worry, I should cry,
I should marry another guy.

Now, all this has been prompted into a little research, and we discover from some of our middle-aged friends that the little girls of two-score years ago were also singing those same jingles.



All of which goes to prove that a lot of this child research psychology is just a lot of nonsense and simply that human nature never changes.—Windsor Star.

RUSSIA BEARS FANGS OVER BORDER DISPUTE

Both Moscow and Tokyo are believed in Europe's capitals to be ready to settle their dispute in Manchoukuan border conflict and avert another major war in the east, which clashes in the disputed territory, shown by the map, may intensify the crisis and make peaceful settlement impossible. Conflict centres on the Changkufeng hills, which dominate Possiet Bay, a strategically important naval base, site. Demarcation of the boundary is in dispute. Russia is reported moving up heavy artillery, like that shown at top, during manoeuvres in the same area, and to be using airplanes in her campaign. The powerful amphibian fighter shown below, is a type recently manufactured in considerable numbers in United States for the Soviet air force. It has a 2,000 mile cruising range with full load, is heavily armed with a movable machine gun in the rear cockpit.

The DOCTOR // by MARY ROBERTS RINEHART

It was shortly after that that old Dave Mortimer died. Chris, going home after his morning calls, found Hiram and Lucinda, writing in her crabbed old hand.

"Doctor," she wrote, "is not so well this year. He is over eighty now, and as he often talks about you, I am writing to tell you so. He has made no calls for a year or so, but people still come to him for help, and he gives it. You wish you could come and talk to Chris. It's time he took a rest."

Over eighty and still working! Chris had not written since his reply to David the summer before, and somehow, reading over the short letter from Hiram Mortimer stating that his father had bought a car and that he was exactly as he had ridden his horses, into and out of everything, made him feel that Chris had a vision of that indomitable old figure riding through life, taking the straightest route he knew to trouble, any trouble, all comers.

He took a train that same night, and arranged with Hiram that his old mare and with young Lawrence—a new man down the aspen—should be ready at seven next morning he was getting off at the little station, shaking and shaking hands with Hiram Mortimer.

Hiram was taciturn as usual. The aspen looked exactly as it had done into the village.

"Heaven's sake, the night we found your father in the ditch, Hi?"

"Which one was that? He's been in ditches all over the county more than a year since we pulled him out of one with this car on top of him."

"Great scott, was he hurt?"

"Not so as you could see," said Hi with a modest pride.

Chris looked at the end of the main street, with the big farm behind and beyond it. Chris was remembering Dave as a boy, with his big frame was as huge as ever, but gaunt now, with deep lines in his face, his eyes, piercing and direct, were still young.

"Well, Chris, grown up, haven't you?"

"Dave passes, sir. I'm almost thirty."

"Thirty!" said old Dave. "You're a child, Chris. A babe in arms. A man doesn't know anything until he's thirty-five. Women out of his blood by that time."

He chuckled with laughter as Chris flushed.

"Hit you there, eh? Sit down, I suppose you've come for your fee. It's no good, Chris. I owe you that from before the war. I don't owe anyone else, too! Always have and always will. But I'm not quitting that. Now, tell me what about yourself!"

Chris talked a good bit through the day. Now and then a car or buggy would drive up, and once Chris called in the office to see a sufferer from a bad attack of gallstones, and a day or two later he went to see that same man's wife, and then, with the weight of that responsibility present for Chris. The boys had gone back to their houses scattered over the big farmhouse, with its wooden houses, each with its wood lot, its barn, its chickens, and its overflowing children. David Mortimer never, so we used any land, they said, but what was in the soil. So there was plenty of land. And Chris, lying here alone, was thinking of all this, that the boys were plenty and would have more, and that Chris, with the exception of her boys, looked worn and not at all handsome.

"Sit down, Chris," she said in her thin voice.

He sat down and took her hand with his knotted veins. She was like Dave himself, with her indomitable will undefeated.

"I'm lonely tonight," she told him, "but I'm not grieving. Chris. Not for David. He's all right. He would be glad to get rid of his body. It had troubled him a lot won't ever know what you're thinking about. Get a wife who'll travel the whole road with you. And it's no easy road."

Chris had had a small sermon then and there on matrimony, and Chris told him he had missed his vocation.

CHAPTER XXI

Chris never saw David— alive again. He was going back on the train that night, he thought over what he had said. Even if Beverly cared enough eventually to marry him, could she adapt herself, or be happy with such a life as that? And he could give her? He saw Letitia Mortimer sent with a thousand burdens not the least of which was her face when the many came home that night years ago with a saddle but no rider; saw her indomitably bearing and rearing tall sons, working in the law helping in the office. Nevertheless he felt that he had left behind him something of triumph, of victory. It was in them that the old man's work well done. And now harvest and the setting sun.

He went back to his work and to occasional visits to the Lewis home, and was quiet, quiet, but Annie had done as she had promised, and Grant had ordered her to bed. Chris, driving there, saw the sky and lay heavy on that country. There was sad and remote and not a little terrified. It was no time for love-making.

Beverly met him in white-faced and silent. "Will she suffer, Chris?"

"They'll look after that dear." Chris looked at the three months later, he was to remember them as such. Beverly, Annie and Grant, shy, hasty and sober hours with Beverly, and of quiet intervals in a world violently happy. Annie was not on duty now, but he was still there, and Grant was almost possibly he operated. He was utterly content then with a return of that early boyhood in which Grant was king or God, but that some of the glamour of godship old Dave had bestowed had for a time passed from him.

And then old Dave died, and not from age after all. Chris received a telegram.

"Father killed last night. Autopsy confident. Mother asking for you. Can you come?"

He went at once, shocked and saddened, and a day or two before he saw old David laid away in the country cemetery where he had always said he buried all his mistakes. The crowd was enormous and in the forefront stood Letitia surrounded by her boys. She did not look down. She stood with her head thrown back and she looked at the sky, as if she saw David riding in through those fleecy white clouds somewhere beyond the clouds.

That night, lying alone in her big bed, the other side hollow with the weight of that indomitable body, Chris told her mother how David had died. The boys had gone back to their houses scattered over the big farmhouse, with its wooden houses, each with its wood lot, its barn, its chickens, and its overflowing children. David Mortimer never, so we used any land, they said, but what was in the soil. So there was plenty of land. And Chris, lying here alone, was thinking of all this, that the boys were plenty and would have more, and that Chris, with the exception of her boys, looked worn and not at all handsome.

"Sit down, Chris," she said in her thin voice.

He sat down and took her hand with its knotted veins. She was like David himself, with her indomitable will undefeated.

"I'm lonely tonight," she told him, "but I'm not grieving. Chris. Not for David. He's all right. He would be glad to get rid of his body. It had troubled him a lot

"Darling!" he said. "My own girl. Don't cry like that."

"I can't help it."

"I know, sweet. I know."

Chris lay in the house. I dare-n't let her see me with my eyes swollen.

"Let me kiss your poor eyes, darling."

Bright sunlight all about them, the imposing grounds around them, and nobody in the world but the two of them.

"I love you so desperately," he said. "I was so simple as that.

"I love you so desperately," he said. "I was so terrified."

Chris took care of you now, darling. "Take care of you all my life, God willing."

It was as simple as that.

How to Get That Trim Line

Kay Francis has no Figure problems
By JULIET SHELBY

Central Press Writer on Beauty

KEEP YOUR trim line is the present standards. This may seem pretty difficult if you have a woman that comes in the problem class, but the desired lines can be achieved by the intelligent selection and wearing of brassieres. Then the reconstruction routine is up to you.

If you have a pendulous bust, then you probably think you are the most unfortunate of women. But don't be discouraged. Naturally you want a firm, high, separate bust and you can attain your desire if you will go in for an uplift. When you are making your selection be sure to go to a saleswoman on whom you rely and let her bring you the type of garment that will hold up your breast and feel comfortable at the same time. Be sure to keep trying on brassieres until you find a model that really does the trick. Settle on this type and stick to it. Remember that you have at home that press you down and encourage the separate muscle to sag even a bit more. Then get one of your friends to throw a medicine ball with all her might at an hour every day. This is a swell beach game, and on those rainy days you can practice at home. Remember to lift your arms high above your head and keep them straight when you are throwing the ball. We can safely say that in a very short time you will be amazed at the improvement in your bosom. The strengthened muscle will really lift your bust and make it firm and high again. Then you will wear your clothes and add them at their uplifting.

If Yet Are Too Small

Maybe you are worried over having a bust that is just too small for the current fashions. Again an uplift will help to accentuate, or you may use a regulation pad with the waist. If you wish to really go in for developing your small breasts try daily massage. Apply a little cream or oil, then massage each breast with a gentle rotary movement for three minutes. You may remove the lubricant immediately after completing your massage, because it really has nothing to do with the developing, but only helps your hands to slide easily over your skin without stretching it. A general diet to gain will also assist in attaining a larger bust.

With a too large bust you will want a brassiere which will control and support the garment and thus minimize its size. This brassiere usually should be of the bra type, moulding the breast. It should be constructed so that all strain will be relieved through the proper shoulder straps. Of course general reducing will help you to lose a big front and if you will augment this by practicing the breast stroke, as used in swimming you will see a decided improvement.

Rining Technique

Although bluing serves as a light bleach it will produce dingy-looking clothes if it is not used correctly. Use the correct amount and mix it thoroughly with water before adding it to clothes.

Quite a sensation has been reported in the Antarctic of a low-cut black satin bathing suit that a strapless! It is held up and closed with a slide fastened in back.

Help Child Maintain Respect For Parents

Even Deserted Mother Should Not Tell Her Offspring Father is a Scoundrel

By LISA ORENELLE

ONE DAY Bobby's mother told him what a scoundrel his father was, and she didn't mince words, either.

Why deceive the child? Bobby's mother had asked herself. He might as well know the truth and make the best of it from the start. And there were those, after two years, who agreed with her.

Certainly there seemed little or nothing to be said for the father. He had deserted his wife and child when they needed him most. Bobby was only four then, and his mother was not in very good health. Besides, she had no business training of any kind. She deserved sympathy, and her personal bitterness and resentment against her husband were no doubt justified (although I wonder whether they did from any good). But did she have any right to pass on, stimulate and encourage that bitterness and resentment in her little son?

Should the child have been told the truth?

Tell "Funny" Side

Yes, I think so, in good time, when he was strong enough to bear it. Not, perhaps, right away, but then only the "sunny" side of the truth. Truth always has a humorous side, as well as the honest, but one sunny and one shadowed.

Truth can be presented with kindness, tolerance, understanding, or with bitterness, malice and intolerance.

Babies weaned on bitterness and hate don't develop normally. Not only does it destroy immediate happiness and the so necessary immediate sense of security, but it is bound to affect their character, give them "rickets of the soul".

The first lesson Bobby's mother taught him was to hate his father. Whether or not Bobby's father deserved such condemnation has nothing to do with it. First lessons, like first loves, are never forgotten, make a deep and lasting impression, and usually deeply considered responsible for his actions. She is not related to him by blood. Whether or not she is divorced, he is no longer hers. Sch need therefore feel no shame.

But he will remain Bobby's father. Bobby will remain the son of a scoundrel to the end of time, the conscious and knowing son of a scoundrel. Bobby may never see his father again, feel nothing but dislike for him, still the relationship is biological and cannot ever be severed or changed.

One of the most cruel and unforgivable things you can do to a child is to make him ashamed of either or his parents, whether or not they deserve it.

I don't believe in setting parents on pedestals, but better a pedestal than the "mud" any day. If, of himself you can no longer respect or excuse the child's father, you must respect him because he is his father, and it was your act that made him so. You must find excuses for him, for the child's sake, so that the child will have something to build his pride and his ideals upon.

Set Health Program—Stick to It!

By HELEN FOLLETT

BUSINESS GIRLS should follow the example of the beauteous ladies of the silver screen, outline a health program and stick to it. Many a girl takes it out of one. To keep fit there must be opportunities to relax—recreation for fun and fear caused by the expenditure of energy.

Some career girls never give a thought to what they eat. To them eating is a duty, the business of eating is all wrong. Every meal should be a pleasant event. Plenty of time should be taken for it; there should be a few minutes of rest afterward. Nutrition is an important factor. The undernourished individual is pale, weary, unwell, but ultra easily, worried is no fun to have around.

Nine hours of sleep seem like a lot, but the girl who slumbers restfully for that period of time starts her day with zest, is able to tackle the job with enthusiasm. Sleep is the "magic" word for the business girl.

How Dyes May Cause Eruptions

Dr. Clendening Tells How Dress Colors Poison Some

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

ALLERGY, or hypersensitiveness, which we have been discussing this week in connection with hay fever, may have many peculiar manifestations. Often puzzling are the skin eruptions that can follow certain articles of clothing.

"Dress dermatitis" is an entity that should be easily recognized because it consists in an eruption, usually from a dye in the dress, which occurs sharply localized parts of the skin — places where the dress meets other clothes and the body. The eruption may also be due to perspiration may dissolve the dye. These places are around the armpits, the tops of the arms, and the neck. The eruption may extend over the rest, but only in the line where the underclothes come to protect the skin. The eruption has the features of eczema an itching, crusting inflammation.

The eruption around the armpits is most characteristic — it affects the under and peripheral of the armpits, not the pit. This is markedly different from other skin diseases which affect the top of the pit especially.

Dye Usually Responsible

While the material—silk or wool of the dress is sometimes responsible, it is usually the dye. This also is proved by patch tests. The dye is laid directly on the skin and covered with adhesive plaster, and if the dye is the cause of the particular eruption appears on that spot. Blue dresses are most often responsible, although this is not absolute, and in one patient a blue a black and a green dress all produced the eruption.

Shoe dermatitis is another form of sudding sensitiveness. People with this have an eruption that resembles athlete's foot and is a matter of fact, many of them are treated for a long time for athlete's foot, until the true cause is discovered. The eruption is likely to be on the sides and also of the foot. The leather, the linings and brown and black shoe polish have all been found responsible as the cause. One man was found who was sensitive to sheep skin in a patch test, to leather from 17 different shoes. He has to wear canvas all summer.

Sock dermatitis also occurs, and it could be easy to prove by the distribution of the rash is exactly that of certain socks. Dyes, rather than the material of which the sock is made, are the cause. Anilin dyes are especially enough, is to wear white socks.

Poems That Live

TO A NEW-BORN BABY GIRL

And did thy sapphire challop slip
Its moorings suddenly, to dip
Adown the ether, ethereal sea
From star to star, all silently?
What tenderness of archangels
Bore thee, sleeping, to our hearts?
Remembered Earth a little while.

Now from the coasts of morning pale
Comes safe to port thy tiny sail.
Now have we seen by early sun,
Thy miracle of life begun.
Thy fragile body, new thou art,
With beauty templed in thy heart
To fade with years, to wither not
Of wings along far azure hill.
And hear within the hollow dell
Thy fresh laughter ringing well.

These shall recall that thou hast known
Their distant country as thine own;
To speak the word of vales and streams,
And publish heaven through thy dreams.

The human accent of the breeze
Through the long star-acquainted trees
Shall seem a voice heard earlier,
Her voice, the adoring sign of her,
When thou amid rosy chrism-light
Didst hear her call thee, far away,
And dream in very Paradise
The warmth of thy mother's eyes.

The Stars Say

For Saturday, August 6

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

THIS DAY may be notable for the breaking up of constant conditions, although it might be advisable to be alert for sudden changes in activities. In the romantic or emotional life there is quite likely to be a surprising development.

Those whose birthday it is will be grateful for the breaking up of long stagnant conditions, but in this strangeness or intrigue may be necessary. In private life there is need for discretion.

A child born this day may be industrious, serious and hard-working, at the same time tactful and intriguing. It may be rather lax in its private life.

Weddings

WARREN—KELUSKY

St. Paul's United Church, Bancroft, was the scene of an interesting wedding on Wednesday afternoon, August the third, at twothirty o'clock, when Leola Ernestine Kelusky, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Kelusky, became the bride of Mr. James Albert Warren, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Warren of Stirling, Rev. W. J. Davis officiated at the ceremony. The wedding music was played by Mrs. W. J. Davis and the soloist was Mrs. Walter Warren.

Pink and white gladioli and ferns formed a colourful background for the occasion. The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore an exquisite gown of dawn pink moussaline de soie and lace over satin with bias bands and a long full skirt forming a graceful train. Her shoulder length veil of palest pink tulle was held in place by a cluster of flowers. She carried a Colonial bouquet of Butterfly roses and lilies-of-the-valley. Mrs. Sterling Gibson of Belleville, sister of the bride, was her matron of honour and wore a gown of beige lace and net over taffeta with matching chiffon turban. She carried an arm bouquet of Jessica roses. Miss Lugo Reyno'ds of Toronto, who was the bridesmaid, wore a floor length gown of blue lace. With it she wore a tulle hat of matching shade. Her flowers were Talisman roses and larkspur. The Misses Betty Brown and Barnara Carlisle of Stirling, flower girls, were dressed in Victorian frocks of pink and blue organza over taffeta and carried arms of blue and pink flowers. Old-fashioned bonnets added quaintness to their appearance. Miss Wm. Warren, Belleville, was his brother's groomsman.

Following the ceremony, at the home of the bride's parents, a reception was held. Mrs. Gibson received the guests wearing a graceful gown of roseberry and white crepe with floral French flowers. With it she wore a model hat of white organza trimmed with a Talisman rose. Mrs. Warren wore a gown of navy blue crepe with touches of white and her hat was of navy taffeta trimmed with white. Her flowers were Talisman roses.

A buffet supper was served and later the bride and groom left on a boat of good wishes, left on a motor trip through Quebec and the New England States, the bride wearing an off-the-face model in Parisand felt. On their return they will reside in Belleville.

JONES—WOOD

At the home of the bride's parents, 2nd Sidney, Belleville, on Saturday, a pretty wedding took place when Dorothy Wood, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Wood, became the bride of Mr. Charles Jones, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Jones of this city.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. Mr. Hicks.

Gladioli, phlox and zinnias in profusion decorated the house during the ceremony took place. The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a pretty wedding look

Girl of 10 Has Beau Troubles

Sympathetic Mother Asks Aid to Solve Difficulty

By GARRY C. MYERS, PH. D.
Head Department Parent Education, Cleveland College Western Reserve University

FROM A MOTHER comes the following:

"My Dear Dr. Myers: - I don't know of anyone who is doing ...ore good than you are by your usable and helpful articles. They are short and to the point, w...ch means much to a busy mother. They carry with them the feeling that you are sympathetic. The good sense of many of the articles are decidedly wholesome.

"I have a problem that is serious to me and my little ten-year-old girl. I need help and am praying your counsel in the matter . . . Her report card shows nearly all A. She is very attractive in physical appearance. Yet she doesn't seem to attract little boys, which fact nearly breaks her heart. She says she doesn't care to go out with them, she knows she is too young for that, she only wants them to buy her some attention as they seem to her friends . . . . .

"I have warned her against flaunting the boys. I wonder if I have overemphasized that point and caused her to shrink from the boys, thus making them to shun her. I do want some help on this if it can be had . . . I wonder if any woman who reads your column tell that way or had similar experiences when she was a child. If there is such a one I wonder if she could give me a suggestion in the matter."

Answer: You must be a good, sympathetic mother to face so frankly with a little child a problem so serious to her, which her thoughtless mother would only laugh at. Now in your honest effort to help her, be careful you do not lead her to overemphasize its seriousness. While you listen to her about it each time she begin to talk of something else as soon as possible, which will "shame" her.

Has Foolish Notions in Head

Some child or other adults put foolish notions into her head. Normally a child should rarely be seconscious at this age, though your child may be physically precocious. Try in almost groups of boys and girls to your home and home playground, boys and girls her age, but avoid pairing or any suggestion of it. See that there are noticeably more girls than boys, or more boys than girls. Encourage your little girl to go on playing freely out in the open and join in the rough and tumble of the neighborhood playground, with no child that she should not enter boy's games wherever she is welcomed.

If you find this child continuing to be anxious about this matter, rewrite me further about it, telling me quite fully exactly how she spends her spare time, and in what way she gets the greatest enjoyment. I do want to commend you for your unusual interest. Your attitude of yours will prove precious to you and your daughter as she grows older. Your appreciating words about my column, I am humbly grateful. I still would like to measure up to what you say.

SHARP SHOPPERS SEE "FINDS" IN SALES

Discoveries Correct To Take You Places for Summer Parties

Left, long, filled white rayon coat over white and navy blouse dress; right, pleated, printed silk chiffon cape coat over matching dress. Courtesy Good Housekeeping

By LISBETH

DO YOU feel the need for a new summer dress, even if the stores are featuring autumn clothes and winter coats?

When the dog days begin it is a common feeling with women to want just one more dress to finish the season. It is a grand time to look for one, too, for even the smartest things are marked down in the August sales, and you may make a real "find" when least expected. There is plenty of time to wear such discoveries, too,—several weeks, anyway.

You will be properly gowned for any daytime party during August if you choose either one of the costumes pictured here. The one on the left is a long, fitted white rayon coat over a white and navy blouse dress. The coat may be worn over many other dresses.

The model on the right is a pleated printed silk chiffon cape coat worn over a matching silk crepe dress.

Trimmings are important in the new fall dresses. Soutache braid, fringe, buttons, ribbons, are some of the decorations used for them. Slim princess lines are continued, with the lines accented by various trims.

Soft Fabrics Preferred

Fabrics that are soft to handle and drape well are used almost exclusively for dresses for town and afternoon wear.

Surface novelty is one outstanding feature of these fabrics. They are invariably in matelasse, mossy embroidered and novelty silks and rayons.

In the afternoon group are included many velvets — preferably in the crush-resistant type — metals, although the latter are not so prominent. Taffeta is shown in full-skirted dresses for the college girl.

The grainy type crepes are used most as background for embroideries in beads, paillettes, colored silk and other trimming media.

Measure Your Face and Apply Make-up to Correct Any Defects

By JULIET SHELBY

Know your face and you can make the most of your good points and minimize your defects.

You can figure out for yourself whether your nose is too long or too short, your chin is out of proportion or your forehead is wrong, if you know how to do it.

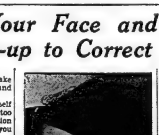
Naturally it is all a question of measurements, and this is the way it is done.

Hold your right hand in a straight, rigid position with your fingers and thumb close together, just as though you were going to snap into a salute.

Now place the tip of your thumb under your chin. If the tip end of your first finger touches the tip of your nose you are correctly proportioned so far.

Next, with your hand in the same position, put the tip of your thumb under your nose. This time the tip of your first finger should reach the centre of your eyebrow.

The third measurement is done with your hand in the same rigid position. Place your thumb at the lowest point of your eyebrow. The tip of your first finger should reach your hairline.



If you are one of the lucky girls who find that your proportions are correct for beauty then you probably have nothing to worry about but if you find that you just miss remember that knowledge is power. So set about to use makeup, hair styles and hats to give the illusion of perfection.

Study Your Face.

First work with your powder, rouge, eye shadow and mascara. If your nose is too prominent use a slightly darker shade of powder on it than you use on the rest of your face. The best idea is to study your face and work out your own methods of makeup.

Some time ago, in this column, we gave makeup suggestions for different type faces as well as hair arrangements to suit faces. With a practical knowledge of your problems you can combine these general rules with your own propositions and discover the most flattering way to apply cosmetics and to do your hair.

Another point that you should remember if your features are not perfectly proportioned is to take both time and thought in your selection of hats. In buying your hat don't forget that although you see it only from certain angles, other people see it from the front, back and sides. So when you think you have discovered exactly the right model, look at yourself in a triple mirror, and then stand up and walk towards yourself, looking at your reflection in a full-length glass. These simple sounding rules will truly be a tremendous aid in improving your looks.

Ice Cream Is Dressed Up With Peanut Butter Sauce

By MRS. MARY MORTON

Menu Hint:

Spaghetti Green Beans
Mixed Vegetable Salad
Hot Rolls
Ice Cream With Peanut Butter Caramel Sauce
Iced Tea

Whether you make your own ice cream or buy it, it is good food for the entire family. You can buy or make a plain ice cream and then make a sundae of it with fresh fruit or nuts. Or you can serve over your ice cream can be made at home or bought in your favorite grocery store. We are giving you a recipe for peanut butter sauce which is excellent over ice cream.

Today's Recipes

PEANUT BUTTER CARAMEL SAUCE—One cup brown sugar, four tablespoons table cream, one tablespoon butter, three tablespoons peanut butter. Combine sugar, cream and butter. Allow it to cook slowly (boil about four minutes). Remove from fire and cool. Add the peanut butter, blend well. Serve ice cream and top with whole or chopped nut meats.

FACTS AND FANCIES

Stuffed Prunes

Select large prunes, wash and dry. Remove stones and replace with nuts.

Stuffed Apricots

Wash apricots and s... for five or six minutes. Press a nut into each apricot while the fruit it hot.

Stuffed Dates

If packaged dates are used it is not necessary to wash them. Remove pits or use pitted dates and press a nut into each date. Roll dates in granulated sugar.

Brazil Chocolate Soufflé

Five egg whites, one-half cup sugar, two squares unsweetened chocolate, melted; one-half cup ground Brazil nuts. Beat egg whites until stiff and dry. Fold in sugar carefully. When well blended, fold in nuts. Pour mixture into well greased top part of double boiler. Cover and cook over hot water three-fourths of an hour. Turn out on platter and serve with pudding sauce or whipped cream.

For Better Pies

Before you roll out your pie dough to fit it into pie pans chill the dough thoroughly. Doing so makes it easier to handle. Then roll out just enough dough for one pie crust at a time. Work quickly, and roll from the centre to the outside. Try to keep the shape as round as possible.

Egg Tests

Egg tests: Fresh eggs will sink when they are placed in a pan of cold water. Held in front of a candle flame in a dark room they will appear clear.

Housekeeper's Tip

Wash oilcloth and table linoleums with warm water and a mild soap. Then rub them over with equal parts of cold water and skimmed milk. Wipe dry with a soft cloth. The surface will have added luster.

Market Hint

Good beef or pork or calves' liver is very bright in color and has little odor. Remember these points when selecting it.

Doesn't Sour Milk

Electrical storms have no effect on the sweet milk, but sour conditions prevailing during storms are favorable for rapid bacterial action. —New Jersey State Department of Agriculture.

Removes Stains

For those hard-to-remove stains around the rims of oven pie plates, casseroles and so on, mix a tablespoon of washing soda or soap powder with a couple of pints of hot water. Then boil the oven glass in a dishpan for four or five minutes, letting the solution just cover it. It comes out bright and shiny as new.

Robert "Bob" Wilson Wins Canadian "Soap Box" Derby Championship

Brother of 1937 Champion Realizes Youthful Ambition Will Compete at Akron

Over 7,000 Acclaim New Canadian 'Soap Box Derby' Champion in Belleville

ERNEST YOUNG SECOND

New Champ Flashes Under Finishing Wire in Exciting Final Heat

Seven thousand cheering residents of Belleville and district lining the fenced-in avenues of North Front Street, henceforth known to the Dominion as "Derby Hill" acclaimed a new all-Canadian champion of the Soap Box Derby, who won handily in it's low-slung red and white racer over a field of sixty-four other contestants for Canadian racing honors last afternoon.

Sturdy, blonde-thatched, 13-year-old Bobbie Wilson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. E. Wilson, Chatham Street, winner of the "Kid Kar Derby" held under the auspices of the local Kinsmen Club on July 30th last, won the right last evening to represent Canada at the world's championship Soap Box Derby race held at Akron, Ohio, later this month, as winner and driver of Canada's fastest, official Derby racer.

Closest contenders for this honor in last evening's Canadian championship race proved jointly to be the Belleville Kinsmen Club and the Daily Ontario Intelligencer were Ernest Young, who came second in the evening's finals, and Barney Wright, third. All three were Belleville made and driven machines. Entries from Toronto, Peterborough, Deseronto and Greenville, reached only the semi-finals, which events proved to be among the most exciting of the evening.

Colorful Event

Colorful in its enthusiasm and keen interest, the huge gathering of between seven and eight thousand people who thronged the Derby Hill course behind the fences erected on the street almost from the upper bridge to the top of the hill at the Canadian National Railway bridge upon which a steep wooden ramp had been especially constructed to give the racers an initial start, experienced one of the most interesting and thrill-filled events ever staged in Belleville. Checked out with the smooth precision of a well-rehearsed scene, the races moved faultlessly and without a hitch to the thrilling climax of a single contest among the three fastest cars on the course. Just two minor accidents were registered during the evening, one when the young driver of one machine lost control as it sped down the steep ramp and forced his companions into the fence, the second when an axle of another machine broke as it started.

An ambulance provided by the Martin Funeral Home, with its attendants, and two physicians, Kinsmen Dr. Ralph Hunt, in charge of the Club eye clinic, and Dr. Stanley Walters who had volunteered their services, were not needed for even minor first aid.

Though a threat of rain hung over the district during the late afternoon, by early evening the skies had cleared and perfect weather conditions prevailed. Long before the starting hour, members of the Kinsmen Club were on the scene engaged in the last minute arrangements upon which depended so much the unqualified success of the evening. It was the first time Belleville had stepped to the forefront to name title to the scene of the all-Canadian championship Derby races from which a winner would be chosen to represent the Dominion at the World's Championship races in Akron, Ohio. The races held here last evening were held under Akron championship rules.

Fitting Climax

It was the climax last evening to weeks of building, rebuilding, testing and improving on the part of the Belleville boys who in their scores have talked and dreamed of Canada's entry in the Derby since it first broached. And it was the successful end of weeks of work on the part of President Cleo Colling and members of his Kinsmen Club who will use the proceeds from the evening's collection on the street to further the necessities of safe treatment and help for underprivileged children, of Belleville, Kenyan and district. And judging by the way it was good, it was reported by Club members and spectators alike, that co-operation and help has been voiced by the Club.

Complete with loud speaker system along the length of the street, and telephone connections at the various sections of the course at handy intervals, Derby Hill was a scene of activity and excitement acute just prior to the start of the race. Starting between the two bridges and the marked finish line at the bottom of the hill was arranged. Here Fred Jokson, Bandmaster of the Belleville Municipal Band, and his musicians, keeping the thousands of spectators informed through the microphones every event about to happen. As the races progressed, a running account was given by the capable toastmaster-of-Ceremonies.

It was a serious business to boyish minds, this matching of wits and self-constructed racing machines and the latter during the evening's preliminary heats and trials, and such enthusiasm was evident upon the faces of the various contestants as they urged their machines down the asphalt course, flunched low in their small bucket seats, the drivers took every advantage of wind and bump, steering for the most part a straight and narrow course, unmindful of the competing machines. Wide differences in speeds of the racers were revealed in this trying competition, in some of the trials only a car's length separate, the racers. In others the faster machines far outdistanced the others before the race was half under way. Several of the machines revealed their weaknesses, of dished wheels, wobbly axles, or loosened frames and were pulled from the race at the starting distance on the course, their owners keenly disappointed at failure. Little did either the probable winners of the semi-finals was apparent after the first of the speedy "A" Class cars had run their race.

Policemen of the local force, traffic officers and firemen of the city department guarded the length of the course, keeping the ubiquitous boy in his place and the roadway clear of all spectators. Other members of the Kinsmen Club arranged their stations, and took over the task of starting and timing. Winning cars of the various races were taken from the finish line back to the starting point for other races by the Ottawa Street truck in order to speed the events. At the ramp they were hauled up and held on the starting tracks by Club members until started by the signal of the official flags waved by President Cleo Colling. From the starting point it was every driver for himself in a race that held all the thrilling potentialities of a world championship track race for powered cars.

Close Finishes

Several of the races appeared dead heats until near the finish line, when through some unexplainable spurt a car or another was able to pull ahead of the others. A few of the heats though close apparently did not cross the finish line. There was as much individual, lay shovel in the style streamlined racers as exhibited by the drivers, themselves.

It was a testing time for both boy and machine, and Belleville and district are to be congratulated on the cleanliness in sport and fairness in failure as exemplified in test bouts since sport began. Jealousies and bickerings were absent and forgotten throughout the whole evening. First to congratulate the winners of the various races were the losers themselves. And wholehearted were they in acclaim when the final winner was announced.

Eminently satisfied with the success of the evening, president Cleo Colling and members of the club voiced their appreciation for the support given by the general public in this strenuously arranged event. Not only has the City of Belleville received through this all-Canadian championship Derby Dominion-wide publicity as the most vigorous of Canadian cities, but the local Kinsmen Club has been given an impetus and support that will go far toward its objective in supplying help for the city's underprivileged children in the matter of eye treatment.

"We wish to thank Belleville and the district for this support," stated president Colling, which sentiment has been echoed by members of his Club.

THE RESULTS

Special races were necessary to accommodate some of the cars that failed to qualify under the International Soap Box Derby rules which prompted the sponsoring Kinsmen Club to promote two special races at the last moment, a "Duffers race" for cars that did not qualify under the rules and regulations and a Class "B" race for drivers of cars between the ages of nine and twelve years, as the minimum age for qualification in the International Soap Box Derby is 12 years of age.

Three cars were disqualified under the regulations as provided by the International Soap Box Derby Association entry from Peterboro and Harold Dafoe, a Belleville lad, entering in a special race between these two cars, McIsaac's Peterboro entry winning. A cash prize of $10 was given the winner in this heat.

In the class "A" race six local entries faced the starting ramp with Tony Bellenger, 12, Belleville, Ernest Young the first heat and Ken Stapley, 28 Johnston St., Belleville, winning the second heat. In the final heat for the Class "B" title Bobbie Wilson won out and was rewarded for his efforts with a medal and cash prize.

The heat winners were—
1—Allan Dall, Belleville.
2—Lawrence Cook, Belleville.
3—Barney Wright, Corbyville
4—Barney Wright, Belleville
5—Ernest Young, Belleville.
6—Robert Wilson, Belleville.
7—Gordon Dulyea, Belleville.

ship, Bob?" he was asked by a reporter.

"How long did it take you to build your championship car?" he was asked.

"About two weeks."

"Did your brother George help you in its construction and if so did his knowledge of seeing the American-built car at Akron prove any assistance?" he was asked.

Will Seek New Honors

"Yes, George helped me and I suppose he did get some good ideas when he saw those Canadian Tankers cars last year at Akron," admitted the 1938 Canadian "Soap Box Derby champion.

"Do you think you will make a better showing at Akron on Aug. 14th than your brother George did last year?" he was asked.

"I hope so, that's what I hope to do. Nothing would please me better than to win the International "Soap Box Derby" championship and bring that honor back to Belleville," added Bobbie.

"How did you get along with your first driving of a car during the race, Bobbie?" he was finally asked.

"Just swell, we talked in the pits and one of my best friends Barney Wright, who placed third in the finals. They're all swell kids and I hope to meet them again on Derby Hill in another race next year," declared the champion.

DERBY SIDELIGHTS

Derby Hill, Aglow, with enthusiasm. Crowded with thousands who sought vantage points along the course of last evening's all-Canadian Derby championship race.

Derby Hill....the name will stick for generations to come, across last evening of one of the largest and most thrilling events yet staged in this city. An event able to attract some eight thousand people from the city and throughout the district. Even tourists from remote points who leaned against the fence and studied road maps while awaiting the events to start. Police and firemen and traffic officers on guard to clear the roadway for the serious-minded youthful racers whose evening was their own. An evening devoted to clean sport and the thrill of competition through self-made effort. And through it all wended representatives of a popular chewing gum manufacturing concern handing out plentiful samples....until the larger part of the thousands present were working jaws vigorously chewing gum

And at the head of the hill carpenters engaged in the last minute touches to a huge wooden ramp built on the C.N.R. car bridge upon which the tiny racers were hauled and help until the drop of the flag by Ernest Young, Chief Starter, gave them an initial start.

An estimate of speed of these small, home built, streamlined racers, as they sped down the asphalt course of North Front Street hill placed variously by spectators at from 20 to 30 miles an hour. The latter figure more correct judging by repeated stopwatch trials of some of them before the official speed checkers who jingled collection boxes for donations to assist in the expenses of this huge event. Timed along its length by a loud speaker system over which the voice of the Master-of-Ceremonies carried every event of the evening. Complete even to telephones at every interval through which course officials managed to keep in touch with the separated points.

An enthusiastic crowd that thronged the course at the finish line, and through whose ranks the racers were hauled to the starting point for other races by the Ottawa Street truck in order to speed the events. At the ramp they were hauled up and held on the starting tracks by Club members until started by the signal of the official flags waved by President Cleo Colling. From the starting point it was every driver for himself in a race that held all the thrilling potentialities of a world championship track race for powered cars.

And pain and anguish and humiliation was written on the faces of those luckless owners last evening whose cars failed before the thousands watching to live up to their hopes and promises of earlier test trials. Cars that carried out in some cases secretly by their owners on some hill after dark. It was a serious business for boyish hopes being pulled out of a race through some mechanical last minute fault. And keen disappointments were easily discernible. Wheels seized on axles, axles in some cases bent and failed under the strain; in one case a heavy weight carried by one boy to make up the necessary 75 pounds specification carried the fragile bottom out of his machine half way down the course.

The champion's car, skimming like a wind-blown feather down the hill, was the result of careful balancing his competitors in the earlier competitions and resulting in the finals of the world's championship races. For spectators were at times forgetful that intense eyes was being carried out speed tests to determine the fastest, official Soap Box Derby car in Canada. There may have been faster cars built and aimed at present in Canada than Bobbie Wilson's trim speedster which won the honors last evening, but they did not come forward with their owners to compete and claim with the more than sixty from Toronto and, Peterboro and Belleville and other points in the district which entered in the racing and thus gain the coveted title. A new Canadian champion was crowned from the ranks of Belleville Derby racer builders and boyhood is lost in its mountain.

Another contest was held in conjunction with the championship races of last evening, a contest conducted by the local Kresge Department Store, and a lucky winner was named by Mr. Jack McVeigh, store manager, who had donated a welcome blanket to the holder of the lucky number, 0013. It became necessary for Master-of-Ceremonies Lt. Fred Jobson to broadcast several times the name of Mrs. G. Coleman of the city over the loud speaking system before she arrived finally to claim the prize.

Members of the local Kinsmen Club, who in conjunction with the Daily Ontario Intelligencer staged and were responsible for the success of the event, voice an "Thank You" to all whose co-operation made such success possible. Weeks of work had gone into the making of this championship race, weeks of worry and lost time and hours far into the night had been sacrificed unstintingly, however, the project was carried on to its worthy conclusion. With results were they for the effort by the interest alone which was displayed by the thousands in the Dominion. And even now plans are progressing, it is learned for a repetition of such interest.

Prior to the race each driver to qualify for the final—Canadian "Soap Box" Derby Hill—was presented with an all-steel crash helmet, a permanent gift from the International Division of the General Motors Corporation of America. These crash helmets became the popular and permanent possession of the drivers and will be treasured and cherished for years to come by their owners today, as a token of the memorable day when the owner raced in the Dominion "Soap Box Derby" championships at Belleville.

After the last "Soap Box" racing car had been officially checked at the Derby headquarters at 162 Front Street yesterday afternoon, all participants in the 1938 All-Canada "Soap Box Derby" were taken to the Y.M.C.A. where they were entertained by the Belleville Kinsmen Club from 4.00 until 5.00 p.m. During that time the youthful "Barney Oldfields" were treated to free ice cream and soft drinks with the Kinsmen Club as hosts. The respective drivers fraternized for the full hour, talking upon the various qualities of their individual entries, all claiming certain victory. At 5.00 p.m. the "teen-aged and hopeful drivers were escorted to the racing pits at the top of "Derby Hill" North Front Street, where they were permitted a full hour of final tuning up for their, machines before the big event got under way and the initial cry of "here they come" was heard from the voices of nearly 7,000 interested spectators.

Awards Won By Champion And Runner-up

In winning the 1938 Canadian "Soap Box Derby" championship on Derby Hill in Belleville last evening; Robert "Bob" Wilson, the new champion, was awarded the Coyle Trophy, a gold medal and a free trip to Akron, Ohio, with all expenses paid, where he will compete in the International "Soap Box Derby" championships.

The second placed driver, Ernest Young, Belleville, was recipient of a silver medal, while the third placed Barney Wright received a bronze medal. The youthful drivers won cash prizes for winning their respective heats to qualify for the final championship race, however.

Yankees Move into Cleveland As Giants Make Final Stand At Polo Grounds; Pirates Lose

Turning Point in Majors Looms on Baseball Horizon Today—

HEAT IS ON

Cubs And Yankees Win to Gains Over Opponents, Melton's Suspension Lifted

(By Sid Feder, Associated Press Sports Writer)

Another of those "turning points" that have had this season swinging along in a groove somewhere between a merry-go-round and a streak of lightning, pops up in both Major Baseball Leagues today.

New York Yankees, enjoying their gaudiest western whirl of the year, tangle with Cleveland's persistent Indians in a series for the American leadership. And New York Giants, doddering along with 15 1-2 games off the National League pace, make a last-ditch stand in their own Polo grounds against the front-running Pirates of Pittsburgh.

The best in all on the Indians and Giants. Anything less than a sweep in the weekend campaigning will do either little good.

By virtue of banging an 8 to 4 beating on Detroit Tigers yesterday, while the Tribe's hitt with the Red Sox was rained out, the Yanks invade Cleveland with a 2 1-2 game bulge. The Giants were knocked 9 to 6 by Chicago Cubs, and although the Bucs lost 4-3 to Boston Bees, Bill Terry's Terriers were left seven games back on the all-important losing side.

If the Indians should lose only one game to the Yanks, Gehrig and company will go back east in front—and when the World Champions are on the scuttle as they are at Alleghenies, bouncing them out of the league lead is no easy matter.

Crucial Series

In this "crooshal" American League set, both teams are nursing physical ailments. For the Yanks, Big Ruhle the Red Ruffing is suffering from an ailing knee, and batting Bill Dickey had to retire from yesterday's game with a slightly banged up leg. The Tribe isn't exactly cheering about the sore arm bothering its pitching ace, Johnny Allen.

As a result Manager Joe McCarthy, holding the upper hand anyway, is gambling with Bump Hadley, who's something less than a dependable winner, in today's opener against young Bobby Feller.

The Chicago Cubs, who whitewash yesterday for the second time in three days and the 12th time this season, are lifting the suspension on Cliff Melton, the stringbean southpaw who was banned on Pirates. Pie Traynor's hired hands are betting inside Bob Klinger or the hospital list for his first outing since he discovered he couldn't pitch off a sore arm back on July 24.

The victories for the Cubs and Bees comprised the only business transacted in the National League yesterday. The Cub conquest was accomplished through a totally unexpected six-hit flinging job by Lefty Larry French, while Deacon Danny MacFayden of the Bees hooked for the Bees.

WORLD'S CHAMPION

One of the big surprises of the year in the boxing world was the one-round knockout of world's middleweight champion, Freddie Steele, by an unknown, in the east Jean, Al Hostak (ABOVE). Al, only 22 years old, took just one minute and 43 seconds to finish off Mr. Steele and confiscate his title.

reversed the proceedings yesterday. Thornton Lee's six-hitter took an 8-2 decision in the opener, and the whole club gagaged up for a 17-hit attack for a 7-3 edge in the night-cap. Harry Kelly's steady hurling and Mike Bonura's four hits gave the Senators an easy 10-4 win over the Browns.

Sports Roundup

By EDDIE BRIETZ

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

New York, Aug. 5 (AP)—Brand new spirit of Cub team has thrilled New Yorkers.....You had to be at the polo grounds yesterday to get it first hand.....When old Gabby Hartnett poled a long one into the stands every man on the squad was on his feet and outside the dugout. Waiting to welcome Gabby who is 100 per cent with all hands.....Phil Wrigley had been there he probably would have said to himself: "How long has this been going on?".....Corrigan and his old sewing machine are the boy for here at the moment, but it might be worth mention that the best you can get on Armstrong now is 13 to 5 with most of the gamblers holding out for 12 to 5.

The fighting Zivic brothers of Pittsburgh are at Pompton Lakes tuning up for an eastern campaign.....Time something was done about Mace Browne of the Pirates —a "day-off" or something.....So far the Bucks have played 89 home games and Old Mace has been in 33 of 'em.....The way those Boston Bees win games on nothing has the baseball world talking.....Give 'em three runs and they'll win a doubleheader any old day.....Which brings to mind that Deacon Danny MacFayden has won six of his victories by one marker.....By the way, what's become of Joe Vosmik?

Today's tall one: A team down in Gaston county, North Carolina, has a pitcher who is 50 per cent cross-eyed.....One eye looks straight ahead and the other starts off at a complete right angle with a sort of westward for its gleam in it.....In other words, the guy (who is a right-hander) can stare the batter in the face and keep a glimmer on first base all at the same time .....Question is, what would an umpire who takes his balks seriously, do if the pitcher, while eyeing the batter with his right eye, suddenly whips the ball to first picking off the runner who's name he is looking at with his left orb?

'ORFUNS' LOSE TO NAPANEE 6-4

Loss in No Way Affects League Leaders at Napanee

USE THREE HURLERS

Plenty of Errors Seen in Exciting Ganoe, Belleville Rallies

Walter Gerow's Napanee ballsters moved into a mathematical tie for second place in the Bay of Quinte League when the "Gibbardville" nine downed Burrell Fanning's Belleville "Orfuns" 6 to 4 in the final scheduled league game at Napanee last evening.

The place was filled with plenty of excitement as a total of ten errors were committed, while 18 hits were garnered off the offerings of three hurlers, two being collected by the homsters and eight by the locals. Stan Spratt was the winning Napanee moundsmen. "Lefty" Weeks went to the hilltop for the "Orfuns" but was replaced by Wilkins in the sixth, following which the Belleville nine ultimately gained a few counters.

The loss in no way materially affected the standing of the Belleville team for the time being at least, the "Orfuns" remaining on the top rung of the Quinte League ladder, a position they can clinch by virtue of a possible win over Kingston in their remaining league game scheduled to be played in Belleville next Monday.

Each team scored a counter in the initial frame, but a run in the third and two in the fourth gave the home team an advantage yesterday. Two more Napanee counters clinched the piece in the sixth. Belleville rallied in the late innings, but could not push across the tying run in a belated ninth inning rally, however.

Accidental Success !

Emma McArdurdy, of New York City, recently went to a summer resort and while there she played her first round of golf over the short nine-hole course. She did the nine holes in 26 strokes, three or four strokes better than the scores turned in by the experienced players in the foursome. Of course, a hole-in-one helped to lower the total. And after the game she also won a free-for-all putting contest.

When telling us about these things she talked more about the impression her performance made on the other players than she did about her own ideas of the game. One thing was obvious, she was already in the position that most players attain sooner or later, of confusing accidental with deliberate success. It is quite easy to see that most of her success was accidental. Even though due credit is given her natural athletic ability it isn't possible to account for all of her exceptionally fine performance with a claim for skill.

"If players in general could only credit to skill that which is the direct result of skill and to luck the things which come from good breaks there would be much less confusion about the things that afford consistent success at the game. The fundamentals of the technique that should be used would be recognized and the success of days would be so few and far between.

Playground Notes

The West Belleville ballsters moved one game ahead of their East Hill diamond rivals by virtue of a 15 to 6 victory over the East Belleville playground nine on the home diamond yesterday. With each team having won on previous occasions, yesterday's West Hill victory gives that team the odd game in three played. The winners scored in every inning except the last.

The lineups:

East Hill: Galbraith 2b; Lookyer ins; McNally p; Doug Locke 3b; Cooper ss; Bankier rf; D. Locke c; Orsky cf; Jones lf and B. Bankier.

West Hill: Dixon cf; Meagher ss; Strachan p; Patterson 3b; Massey 2b; Lowery lb; Hurst rf; M. Massey cf and Cherry c.

Score by innings:

|---|---|---|
| East | 400 010 1—6 | runs |
| West | 342 510 x—15 | runs |

CHAMPION TROTTERS TO MATCH STRIDES AT GOSHEN

Two of the greatest trotting horses in the game will meet at Goshen's famous Goodtime Park on August 2, the day before the running of the Hambletonian Stake, when Greyhound and Rosalind face each other in a match race. Greyhound, shown at the left, with trainer Sep Palin, won the Hambletonian in 1935 and since that time has been breaking records regularly. Rosalind, at the right, was the 1936 Hambletonian victor, and fans of the trotting game are anticipating a great battle.

HAMBLETONIAN HOPEFUL

Trotting over Goshen's track at a fine clip is De Mar, owned by C. B. Shaffer's Coldstream Stud of Kentucky. De Mar is one of the leading candidates for the harness sport's highest honors, the Hambletonian Stake, to be run at Goshen, Aug. 10. Tom Berry handles the reins for the promising three-year-old.

EQUIPOISE IS DEAD, HELD WORLD RECORD

Lexington, Ky., Aug. 5 (AP)—Equipoise, which blazed a golden trail in seven years of race track campaigning, is dead.

The C. V. Whitney horse, second to Sun Beau as the greatest money winner in turf history, died last night on Whitney's Blue Grass Farm near here after a two days illness. An autopsy was scheduled today.

In 81 starts the chestnut son of Pennant-Swinging by Broomstick, finished in the money 43 times, winning 20 races and earning $338,810. Sun Beau won $376,744.

"Zikky" also held the world's record for the mile, running it in 1.34 2-5, June 30, 1932 at Arlington Park.

Equipoise lost a chance to pass Sun Beau's money mark when he bowed a location in the 1933 Santa Anita Handicap, finishing seventh. He was retired to stud after that race.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Aug. 5.—(CP)—Ignoring the strong tone of the New York list, the Toronto market moved sluggish around mid-day today and prices were nicked for minor losses here and there. Early gains in the golds were shaded but both the golds and the metal groups were higher in the indices at noon. Industrials and western oils showed minor net losses.

McIntyre and Pickle Crow posted new high prices for the year on the East Malartic, O'Brien, Kerr-Addison and Wright-Hargreaves firmed on substantial volume. Hard Rock and Macleod-Cockshutt were off. Changes were limited to fewer fractions in the senior base metals.

Industrials were in small volume and price adjustments were limited to minor fractions.

WALL STREET CLOSE

New York, Aug. 5 (AP)—Buying of stocks broadened out in afternoon trading today. Wall Street was in the market's creeping advance

Near the closing hour, many issues were up fractions to more than two points, some to new peaks for the year. Interest centred on industrials but rails also did better after the usual featureless period disclosed a moderate gain.

New 1938 peaks were reached by General Motors, American Can, Continental Can and Greyhound Corp., among the prominent on the upturn were U.S. Steel, Bethlehem, Chrysler, Montgomery Ward, Anaconda and Loew's.

Philip Morris, on the "big board," recently one of the strongest performers, backed down as talk was again heard of a split-up in the stock.

Transactions were about 1,000,000 shares.

THREE ARE VICTIMS OF PARA-TYPHOID

Kitchener, Ont., Aug. 5 (CP)—City health authorities today attempting today to trace the source, locally, of a case of para-typhoid fever. The disease in two of the three cases reported to the health unit was contracted out of town, it has been established. There is no relation, as far as can be determined, among the cases. Two women, one married, and a girl, are the victims.

ROSE FROM LABOR RANKS

Lebanon, Penn., Aug. 5 (AP)—John Emmett Edgerton, 58, who rose from a laborer in the tobacco fields of North Carolina to the presidency of the National Association of Manufacturers in the United States, died last night. He served as president of the National Association for ten years before his resignation in

Board Room Gossip

As supplied to Biggar and Crawford By Financial Service

Copper

Continues firm but rather a dull and uninteresting market. Selling pressure is not great and liquidation is believed over. There was a rumor that the domestic price in America was to be raised to ten cents, but we can get no confirmation of this and we rather doubt it taking place. Business with consumers in the United States has again declined to a low ebb and demand here and on the Continent is only moderate.

More people today are watching the foreign situation than ever before and many investors are influenced by developments in China, Spain and now in Manchuko. Up to the present it is not expected that the border clashes between Russia and Japan will develop into a war, as both countries, it is claimed, are not anxious for a fight. It is for this reason that the market has, in some cases, ignored this latest development.

Another happening outside of Canada that caused a great deal of excitement was the unprecedented demand for gold by European traders. The situation today is the exact reverse of what transpired a year ago. At that time, Great Britain and the whole world was over flooded with gold offerings by hoarders, and in the summer there a cut in the gold price was imminent. At the moment, talk has been heard from time to time that a higher gold price levee is in the offing and the world for the first time in a year ago are now endeavouring to repurchase it. The action of British authorities in refusing to sell gold after the close of the official market on Tuesday appeared to have intensified the demand from Continental hoarders.

Despite denials, the feeling persists that the price of gold is headed upward. The fact that the United States Secretary of the Treasury is now in France has intensified this rumour. The belief exists that ten yellow metal price will be raised to $37 an ounce and stabilized at that figure and Canadian currency is expected to result in an improvement in world trade.

Large Stocks Butter in Storage

Toronto, Aug. 5—Indicative that Canada's butter surplus—continues to mount is the preliminary report issued by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics, showing creamery butter in cold storage in nine principal cities as of Aug. 1 3.52 million pounds heavier than on the same date of last year. Cheese holdings were also increased, up 2.6 million pounds but cold-storage eggs dropped 1.2 million dozen from a year ago. Cities reporting include Quebec, Montreal, Toronto, Winnipeg, Regina-Saskatoon, Calgary, Edmonton and Vancouver. Amount of butter in cold storage totalled 22,940,631 pounds, as compared with 19,440,000 on Aug. 1, 1937. Cheese holdings aggregated 23,694,-987 pounds, against 20,995,536 pounds, while stocks of cold-storage eggs on hand totalled 6,909,000 dozen, compared with 7,326,657 dozen on the corresponding date of last year. Frozen eggs totalled 2,-904,250 pounds, which represents a small decrease from the year ago total of 4,080,078 pounds.

Graded eggs went lower on the Toronto egg market yesterday, but no change occurred in other lines. Continued selling pressure depressed values in the graded division of the egg market, while other quotations were quiet and unchanged. Graded shipments were clearing at 26c to 28½c for extras, 24c to 25c for A-large, 22c for A-medium, 20c for B's, and 18c for C grades.

SKITTLES, BALL UNDER OLD BAN

Old Statute Also Bars Swimming on Sunday, Says W. R. Angus

Toronto, Aug. 5—(CP)—The action of Toronto City Council in allowing the use of municipal parks and playgrounds on Sunday will not free tennis players and others from being liable to prosecution under the Lord's Day Act, a federal statute prohibiting "noisy" games, W. R. Angus, acting city solicitor, said today.

The old law forbids the playing of ball, football, lacrosse, quoits or any other noisy game." It prohibits also "the running of races on foot or on horseback or in carriages or any other vehicle."

Sports Association

The statute also prohibits swimming on Sunday. "We still have how far that is enforced," Mr. Angus said, smiling.

The act decrees a fine of $1 to $40 with costs for each offence. The city would be liable only to a fine of $50 to $250 if it supervised Sunday sport, according to the act. Toronto Island Council decided Wednesday while throwing open playgrounds for Sunday sport by amateurs that it would not allow any sports which require supervision of employees.

F. A. Lawson, Secretary of the Lord's Day Alliance, said today that even though it had the power it would not open its parks to baseball nor Sunday games unless the games were commercialized or prize were given.

No Ban on Friendly Ball

"We would not countenance baseball games between industrial teams or other games intended for commercial benefit, for entertainment of the public, but the Mayor and Board of Control told us permits for such Sunday games would not be granted," he said. "A baseball game where persons are playing for their own amusement, not to entertain onlookers, is not a public game."

Mr. Lawson said any individual could lay a complaint under the Lord's Day Act, a federal statute passed in 1845 prohibiting "noisy" games Sunday.

Japanese Drive Cut to Yardage Basis

Shanghai, Aug. 5 (AP)—After 355 days' fighting, the Japanese have advanced up the Yangtze River at an average of 1 mile and a quarter daily, the invaders 'offensive seems to have slowed to a yardage basis.

Japanese warships concentrated their efforts today on trying to sweep mines from the river above Kiukiang. Yangtze port 135 miles below Hankow. They also shelled Chinese defenses on the Yangtze's south bank, above Kiukiang.

PLEASURE YACHTS AT NAVY SERVICE

Sydney, Australia, Aug. 5—(CP)—Royal Australian Navy reserve units will place their yacnts and their services without reservation at the disposal of the Australian Navy in the event of a national emergency, under a scheme inaugurated by a number of Sydney Motor yachtsmen.

Car Devices Tested in 'Safety Lane'

Local motorists have been quick to avail themselves of the privileges of the 'Safety Lane' where free testing of all mechanical features of their cars is being carried out on the corner of Dundas and Front streets. Up to this afternoon it was stated by P. S. H. Gooderham in charge of the novel service device, a total of 106 cars had been checked, while during the latter part of the day a steady stream of cars was observed passing through or awaiting their turn to enter. The 'Safety Lane' idea will remain in Belleville during Saturday also, it is expected, hundreds of cars will be accommodated. The "Safety Lane" is operated under the direction of the Canada Operators' Association of Ontario, Limited, with Prince Edward Region Automobile Association as branch. Assisting during the afternoon today were Walter Aselstine, local garage owner, and Charles Woods.

SCOTT'S SCRAP BOOK

By R. J. SCOTT

The Child Effie

By CORINNE K. DAVIS

The sun, at the end of that hot August day, bobbed mockingly like a huge red Jack-o-lantern on the hill horizon, then swiftly dropped from sight. Evening came, and with it a cool breeze.

The two sisters sat side by side on the farmhouse piazza. Silence, more hostile than ever before, followed the argument that had been more bitter and determined. Aunt Flortilla's hands were folded tightly on her spacious lap; her amiable mouth was set in straight lines of unyielding stubbornness. Aunt Jane's knitting needles clicked angrily and her usually calm countenance was grim in the gloom. The time was rapidly nearing when the question must be settled once for all.

Aunt Flortilla first broke the unfriendly silence, speaking in little, breathless sentences. "It's so important—and I've always given in to you, all my life. The child Effie," she sighed for emphasis, "she is going to have what the rest of the family didn't."

"Yes," answered Aunt Jane harshly, "she is. She can go to normal school. Then when she's taught a while and saved some money, she can marry some nice, steady going fellow if she wants to. But finishing school! Learn to use the right fork! Bah!" her voice shook with disdain.

The younger sister turned on her furiously, her pudgy hands gripping the arms of the chair. "Yet, learn to use the right fork!" she shrilled. "With her looks and a little training nothing will be too good for her. Any man would be proud of her as a wife. She could travel, Jane you! she choked on an hysterical sob, "you condemn her, your only niece, to the everlasting scrubbing and dishwashing of every other woman in this town."

Minutes passed. It was quite dark now. At last Flortilla spoke again. "Jane," she said, and something in her low constrained voice startled the other, "you hold the whip hand and always have. The child Effie will do as you say if we have to put it up to her. But listen here, Jane, if you go against me this once in all our lives that I've stood out, then the day Effie goes to your normal school I leave here, too, forever."

A chill swept over Aunt Jane the elder by 12 years, old age was fast becoming a reality to her, and what a hideous reality, alone. For the first time she wavered, but the old habit of domineering proved too strong and a wave of anger obliterated every other emotion.

"Very well," she agreed crisply. "Be that as it may, Effie goes to normal school."

An hour passed. Night was well on its way. A clear bright moon lighted the tidy front lawn.

A car stopped at the gate and a young girl jumped lightly to the ground.

"Not tonight, Dan," she said in a low voice, "it's too late. Goodnight." She lingered a few moments looking after the disappearing car, then came swiftly up the walk.

"You two still up?" she called gayly, casually, but there was an sentiment in her voice that both aunts would have been quick to notice ordinarily.

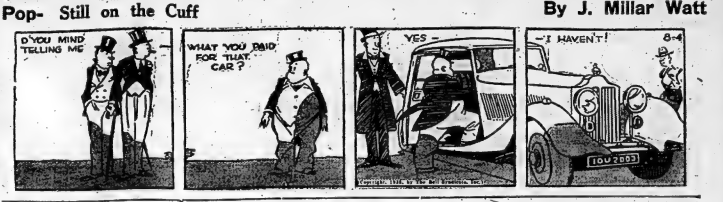
"Of course we are," snorted Aunt Jane. "How in the world can we go to sleep with you gallivantin' round the country all hours of the night?"

Effie started to speak, then stopped. Then she began again, hurriedly. "I must tell you, she asked me—we're engaged. We are going to get married in the spring."

Neither sister spoke. It was as though a thunderbolt from the summer sky had dropped in their midst. The girl broke the pause.

"I am afraid it's quite a surprise to you, I'm sorry, but I was afraid Dan didn't like me—and I couldn't say anything to you." She arose, a slender, radiant figure. "Don't say anything tonight, but wait till tomorrow." She broke off and kissing them, ran into the house.

Aunt Jane it was who spoke first. "Flortilla," she said, and there was a curious relief in her voice. "I guess them things ain't for us to say. Dan's a good boy."



She was stirring in her inarticulate way to offer some sympathy to the other, whose disappointment she sensed must be greater than her own. But it was not until the two lay side by side in the big old-fashioned bedroom that Flortilla answered her.

"Once I went to see our sister soon after Effie was born," she said gravely. "She was all cragged out, and the house wasn't any too tidy. I guess I must have hinted some sympathy, for all at once she went to the old clothes basket you and I had rigged up as a crib, and picked up the baby. 'Florilla' she said real solemn like, 'never say anything like that again. Happy! I'm almost afraid to be so happy'."

It was Flortilla's way of giving in.

CHARGE NEW YORK JURISTS INVOLVED IN RACKET-BUSTING TRIAL

New York foresees a major political scandal with the banning by District Attorney Thomas Dewey of his predecessor in office and of two city magistrates, one deceased, as allegedly having been bribed, intimidated or influenced by metropolitan racketeers. The names were published in an indictment in the case of James J. Hines, Tammany leader, accused of participation in a policy racket. Justice Ferdinand Pecora, new dealer, brushing aside arguments of Hines' defense counsel, Lloyd Paul Stryker, ordered a special "blue ribbon" jury for Hines' trial, August 15. Meanwhile J. Richard (Dixie) Davis, one-time lawyer for the late Dutch Schultz and accused with Hines and two others in the policy racket case, returned state's evidence in the prosecution of Hines. William C. Dodge was the former district attorney named, and Magistrate Hugh Capshaw, a jurist from the social register, has been suspended from his duties pending investigation of the charges. The trial is the latest of Dewey's racket-busting efforts.

THE WEATHER

Moderate variable winds; partly cloudy and warm today and Saturday with local thunderstorms; a little cooler Sunday night.

NEWS ODDITIES AND BRIEFS

PRISON BOXING PLAN IS CANCELLED

Jackson, Mich., Aug. 6 (CP)—Public protest forced cancellation of plans for a boxing match tonight between prison officials and outside fighters before an audience of prisoners and prominent citizens. Officials expected a crowd of about 4,000, two-thirds of them prisoners. Penitentiary authorities told officials of the Jackson prison here the plan might have serious consequences, so the show, first of its kind in the United States, was cancelled.

ASK FORD TO REPUDIATE GERMAN DECORATION

Detroit, Aug. 6 (AP)—The Jewish war veterans of the United States today began a drive to request Ford to repudiate a decoration given him by the German government, forming his "acceptance of such an award an endorsement of the cruel, barbarous Hitlerian action and policies of the Nazi regime."

PARTY FOR NEWLYWEDS HAS UNHAPPY ENDING

Welland, Ont., Aug. 6 (CP)—A party for newlyweds at Crowland Township ended unhappily last night when Albert Armbruster, 19, was taken to hospital with serious injuries resulting from an exploding can of a keg of cider at Mr. and Mrs. Walter Allen greeted the couple by firing guns set in the ice by mischievous, one of the weapons exploded and fragments of the Armbruster body just below the heart.

FIER BOAT AFIRE, YOUTH PLUNGES TO DEATH

Halifax, Aug. 6 (CP)—His clothes ablaze, 18 year old Reginald Harris, drowned during a flaming duel of his 30-foot fishing vessel and another craft moored in outer Halifax harbor while two companions, Fred Gibbs, 17, and Cyrie Smith, 16, swam ashore.

Harris struck a match on the ship's motor and the fire started. During the excitement Harris tore the gasoline feed pipe loose and the small engine room burst into flames.

Why the Weather?

Paths of lightning! Most of us think of lightning as having a single path, as in fact that is the way artists show lightning in their pictures. But the more accurate-seeing camera shows the most common flash to be of many paths—as a sinuous curve—over Regina. Then the streak and branches many of which catch haunt themselves in midair never reaching the earth, pictures of some flashes were printed with black ink, they might very easily be mistaken for maps of rivers with their tributaries. A map of the Amazon River has often been used to illustrate this similarity.

THE WEATHER

Toronto, Aug. 6 (CP)—The weather has been fair and warm from Ontario eastward but thunder storms are occurring this morning near Lake Erie while in the Prairie Provinces it is now comparatively cool and light showers have occurred in Saskatchewan, Alberta and the Peace River district. A trough of low pressure extends from the east coast of Hudson Bay southwestward to the lake region, and pressure is also low over the southwest States, but high over the northwest portion of the continent.

Lake Superior: Moderate variable winds; fair, local thunderstorms tonight and Sunday.

Manitoba: Today, Sunday, mostly cloudy and comparatively cool with scattered showers.

Saskatchewan and Alberta: Mostly cloudy today and Sunday with showers in many districts, but much change in temperature.

Chief's Prayers Go Up to Manitou That Indians Do Not Forget Dreaver

North Battleford, Sask. 6 (CP)—From an Indian council tent here yesterday there went up to the Manitou the prayers of a great Indian chief beseeching his God to put 15 into the hearts of his Indian children never to forget the noble example set by George Dreaver, aged hereditary chief of the Cree who died Wednesday.

His death saddened the tribesmen assembled here for the annual convention of the League of Indians. They stood on a site old in their tribal story.

To Chief Charles Pine Day, 92-year-old warrior of pre-treaty days, head of no band yet virtually leader of them all, fell the honor of making the last oration for Chief Dreaver.

Heads of Indian chiefs were bowed, and silence fell on the tent, save for the quavering voice of their leader who spoke in Cree. Years stretched even his wizened cheeks, as he recalled in his prayer to the Manitou those far-away treaty days at Carlton in 1876, when he and George Dreaver were braves together; when Chief Mistawasis and Star Blanket shook hands with Governor Morris, and the friends of the Great White Queen.

Then Chief Pine Day leaned wearily on his stick, and for a moment, it looked as if he was faltering. Then he went on to tell how his spirit still lived on through the years, gilding George Dreaver to counsel his people aright; of Mistawasis, great in wisdom, who in treaty making days saw through the veil of the Unseen and decided for his people. What he speak of and do now will last as long as the sun shines and the river runs."

BRITISH CONSUL IN ALICANTE HURT AS CITY IS RAIDED

Buried Under Mass Of Wreckage as 500-Pound Bomb Falls

CONSULATE HIT

Alicante, Spain, Aug. 6—(CP-Havas)—The British Consul here was seriously wounded today during an insurgent raid on this government seaport by six insurgent planes.

The Consul was buried under a mass of wreckage when a 500-pound bomb fell on the consulate building. He was rushed to a near-by hospital, grave but not critically injured.

The consulate building suffered heavy damage, the bomb leaving a hole six feet deep.

Seventy bombs in all were dropped on Alicante during the raid.

One dead and 12 wounded had been pulled from the debris of ruined buildings by early afternoon.

19 YEARS LEADER OF LIBERAL PARTY

Rt. Hon. Mackenzie King's Record Unequalled in World

Ottawa, Aug. 6 (CP)—Prime Minister Mackenzie King will complete his 19th year as leader of the Liberal Party tomorrow, a record believed unequalled by any other living political leader.

On August 7, 1919, a National Liberal Convention in Ottawa unanimously chose Mr. King, then 44 years old, as the successor of Sir Wilfrid Laurier who had died the year before after nearly 25 years. In his 19 years of leadership Mr. King has been Prime Minister for 11 years and leader of the Opposition for the other eight.

He is now 63 years old.

Other political parties both in Canada and other countries have seen many leaders come and go during this period. No other present leader in the world, it is believed, has headed the same party for such a time as Mr. King.

Premier J. B. Hertzog of South Africa, is Mr. King's only rival in point of service but the party he heads has been split by a wing of the coalition.

In the United Kingdom Rt. Hon. David Lloyd George is still leader of the Liberal Party which he headed when Mr. King was made leader but the modern Liberal party has split and Mr. Lloyd George has left it to sit as followers in the House of Commons. He is no longer the leader of a national party in the wide sense.

As he enters his 20th year in the leadership Mr. King faces a new opponent. Hon. R. J. Manion, recently chosen leader of the Conservative party. Dr. Manion will be the sixth Conservative chief to oppose Mr. King either as official or acting leader.

Proposed Agreement Calls For Closed Shop, Wage Increases

12 HOUR DAY ASKED

Montreal, Aug. 6 (CP)—An estimated 1,000 sailors on 45 lake vessels stood by today awaiting the noontime "zero hour" set last night by Canadian Seamen's Union officials as a deadline for agreement with Canada Steamships, but attempts to secure a written understanding had been unavailing.

Offer to Resume Negotiations.

R. R. Enderby, managing director of the company said an offer had been made for resumption of negotiations shortly before the strike was announced.

Warning his company would not re-open negotiations if the men remained out, Enderby today estimated the walk-out would affect 40 O.S.L. ships, but he believed five passenger and 10 cargo boats could not be affected.

Meanwhile, President J. A. (Pat) Sullivan, a Union statement said the strike had been "forced on the men by failure on the part of the company to meet the C.S.U. representatives in a spirit of good negotiations for a written agreement."

Union Statement.

"This agreement was submitted to the C.S.L. on July 27," the statement said, "and intermittent discussion, notwithstanding the continuous efforts of the union to meet the company to meet the C.S.U. representatives in a spirit of good negotiations for a written agreement."

Union Statement.

"This agreement was submitted to the C.S.L. on July 27." the statement said, "and intermittent discussion, notwithstanding the continuous efforts of the union to meet the company to meet the C.S.U. representatives in a spirit of good negotiations for a written agreement."

15 Per Cent. Increase.

(At Toronto a union spokesman said the increase sought was 15 per cent for all ranks of personnel.

"The C.S.U. has kept government officials fully informed on developments and has notified both the Department of Labor and the Minister of Transport that strike action will be taken.

Enderby said his company's verbal agreement was in effect until midnight today when the C.S.L. offered to extend it.

"But we had difficulty reconciling our position with that of the union in view of the fact that we were having the union had always been a 'closed shop' organization.

"I think now that some high pressure is being exerted. We are confident we can settle with them, but we will not be sandbagged."

Social Planning and Building To Be Discussed at Conference

Antigonish, N.S., Aug. 6.—(CP)—Not only social planning, but social building as well, will be discussed at the fifth annual rural industrial conference sponsored by the Extension Department of St. Francis Xavier University, to be held Aug. 16-18.

Results of work will be reported on by the study clubs of Eastern Nova Scotia, which have developed various credit unions, co-operative stores, housing units, fish processing and marketing unions, and health service groups. Reports will also be heard from Newfoundland and neighboring provinces to which the movement of adult education from that is what it is beginning.

IN BOG TO NECK JONES DISCOVERED HOLDING TO LOG

Missing Farmer Found in Ooze Near Crow River

IN WEAK CONDITION

Relentless Quest by Police Leads to Farmer's Rescue

Missing for six days and nights and the object of an intensive search on the part of hundreds of Rawdon Township and adjoining township residents during the week, Hugh Jones, 44-year-old Bonarlaw farmer was discovered held fast up to his neck in a bog or the Crow River five miles south of Marmora early yesterday.

For nearly a week the man, held fast in the gripping mud that forms a lone battle, unable to extricate himself from the treacherous ooze, took for his food what he made his weakening cries heard. When rescued during the afternoon by Constable Arthur Dymond of Madoc and Constable Percy Grey of Marmora, only the head of the man was visible above the surface of the reed-grown mud.

Clutching grimly a protruding log, the weakened man was barely able to support himself above the surface longer when finally reached. He was unable to speak when the uniformed rescuers who had led search parties day after day discovered him.

Today his condition at the Belleville General Hospital, where he was at once taken from Marmora was described as serious. Effects of hunger, exposure and the constant threat of death during the eternal hours of imprisonment in

150 MEN COMB WOODS FOR BOY

Little Berry Picker Has Been Lost Since Wednesday

Sturgeon Falls, Ont., Aug. 6 (CP)—More searchers were recruited today as a hunt for five-year-old Fernand Tessier, missing since Wednesday when he went out berry-picking, gained impetus. More than 150 men, including many of the French-Canadian lad alive.

More than 150 men combed the thick undergrowth of desolate Bonfield Township, 13 miles north of here, in an effort to locate the youngster. Hounds were called in but thronged with bears and wolves. Fernand was lost Wednesday while berry-picking with his sister, Thalmarte Tessier, about a mile north of their farmhome.

Operations were suspended at the Field Lumber Company at midnight by mutual agreement of field, 11 miles north of here, and every employee was enlisted in the hunt. The mill was closed partly yesterday when 50 employees engaged in the search.

Search Not Suspended

At no time since the lad was reported missing has the search been suspended. All the local countryside has been combed by men carrying lanterns. Wild hands of a trail are equipped with lanterns by business firms there.

Field has also established telephone connections, but over the Boreland telephone, wire of the Ontario Forestry Branch, co-operating in the search, came word to Sturgeon Falls that no sign of the youth had been found. Searchers were unable to enter the bush by car for a trail as much of the countryside is rocky.

Twelve citizens from Sturgeon Falls left here this morning volunteering their aid. Lloyd Jessiman, fire protection officer of the Ontario Department of Highways in road construction gangs have joined in. Constable Ed. Mitchell of the North Bay detachment of the Provincial Police also was sent to aid.

COMPOSER DIES

Los Angeles, Aug. 6—(AP)—Abraham Chernavsky, 52, composer and former conductor of the Royal Opera House at Moscow died yesterday of a heart attack. Among the survivors are his widow and two sons, Leo, Jack and him are three sons, Leo, Jack and Mitchell, known as the Chernlavsky trio.

SIBERIAN BORDER FRAY BREAKS OUT AT CHANGKUFENG

Artillery Duel Ends in Silencing of Soviet Guns, Says Tokyo

TANKS TAKEN

Russia Demands Study of Legal Aspects of Whole Border Question

Tokyo, Aug. 6—(AP)—The Japanese army announced today that general fighting broke out in the vicinity of Changkufeng on the Siberian frontier about 8:30 a.m.

Soviet infantry was said to have retreated under an artillery bombardment.

At 10:30 a.m. a communique said, Japanese and Russian batteries engaged in an artillery duel which ended by the Soviet guns being silenced. A Japanese bombing report dropped shot down by anti-aircraft guns during the raid on Kogi and Hunchun.

The army said the Japanese had destroyed four Russian tanks and four heavy machine guns.

Japan, meanwhile, held out for cessation of hostilities and diplomatic negotiations to settle as an isolated episode the 26-day Soviet-Japanese conflict.

Russian Demands

Russia, however, demands a study of the legal aspects of the whole border question, which has stirred both countries for years, as prerequisite to a practical settlement of the present dispute.

This was disclosed today by the Japanese Foreign Office when it released a partial report of conversations in Moscow Thursday between Mamoru Shigemitsu, Japanese Ambassador, and Maxim Litvinoff, Soviet Commissar of Foreign Affairs.

Japan placed the responsibility on Russia for the large-scale fighting which broke out July 31 in the Changkufeng Hill area, where borders of Manchoukuo, Siberia, and Korea meet.

At the same time an army communique said Japanese troops bombarded Soviet troop concentrations near Changhih and Shachofeng, in the Changkufeng region.

Moscow Report

One Soviet battalion with approximately 50 tanks was being deployed in the district, the announcement said, but retreated under Japanese artillery fire.

The Russian communique said a dozen Soviet soldiers crossed the border near Suidanho and began erecting defenses. Japanese artillery fired Korea, near the Siberian frontier, and Russian batteries answered shelling the Changkufeng neighborhood at dawn today.

The Foreign Office report of the Litvinoff-Shigemitsu conversations follows:

Shigemitsu: "The Japanese government view the present border line [illegible] as a local question and it is their policy to exert every effort for a peaceful, rational solution as such. The Japanese government propose immediate cessation of hostilities on the spot and opening diplomatic negotiations for a settlement."

TWO ARE KILLED IN EARLY CRASH

Five Toronto Residents Injured in Collision at Newmarket

Newmarket, Ont., Aug. 6—(CP)—A collision between two Toronto cars on No. 11 highway, half a mile south of the Newmarket airfield early this morning, resulted in the death of two persons and injuries to five Toronto residents.

A southbound car, believed to have been driven by a man identified tentatively as Frank Williamson, Toronto, hit a northbound automobile driven by Alex Zeigelstein, Toronto, when Williamson pulled out to pass the auto ahead of him. Williamson and a companion, believed to be Thay Kendall, also of Toronto, were killed.

The injured are Mr. and Mrs. Bursowsky, Alex and Allen Zeigelstein and Sam Dalinsky.

Germany, Japan Linked by Editorial With Fighting on Siberian Border

By WADE WERNER
(Associated Press Foreign Staff)

Moscow, Aug. 6 (AP)—Germany was linked with Japan in the Siberian-Manchoukuo border warfare today in an outspoken Russian editorial.

"Gudok," mouthpiece of the Russian railways, declares "the moment chosen for the Japanese attack on Changkufeng confirms the Soviet thesis of the possibility of peace: one can assume this attack was initiated through the secret channels of the Tokyo-Berlin axis."

While Soviet circles believed Foreign Commissar Maxim Litvinoff by diplomatic negotiations had enabled Japan to withdraw gracefully from the border zone where Soviet-Japanese skirmishes and fighting have continued since July 11, Russia kept her eyes on her western border, too.

Developments in Czechoslovakia where the Sudeten German minority is demanding autonomy, were reported in greater detail in Soviet newspapers than developments on the Changkufeng battlefront, narrow strip of hilly land which both Russia and Manchoukuo claim.

Similar close watchfulness in all directions was reflected also in Russian newspaper speeches, resolutions and editorials.

Japan seldom is attacked alone in the wrathful comments on the Changkufeng incident.

Germany and Italy as other members of the "Fascist bloc of aggressors" received their share of uncomplimentary epithets.

24-PASSENGER PLANE MAY FLY ATLANTIC MONDAY

Nothing To Be Announced Until Arrival At New York from Germany

PERMIT GRANTED

Bremen, Germany, Aug. 6 (AP)—The Pock-Wulff Airplane Company plans to send a 24-passenger plane to the United States on a non-stop flight to New York as soon as possible, it was learned today.

Secrecy attended preparations today for the undertaking, for the firm intimated nothing would be announced until the plane arrived in New York.

The director of Pock-Wulff, asserted his blood is American, and that he is proud of it.

"We deny," he said, "that the only form of government which confronts the choice of mankind is that of a totalitarian state of one kind or another.

"We assert that the destruction of personal liberty, freedom of thought or speech, the right to peaceful assembly, liberty of conscience and the right of the individual to his person and in his rights, is the high a price for anything that dictatorial government can give."

In his address, the Ambassador delivered President Roosevelt's personal salutation in Welsh "Cafan Gymas," which means, "warm regards."

WELSH ARE URGED TO STAND FAST BY DEMOCRACY

U. S. Ambassador to Belgium Speaks at National Festival

LIBERTY PRECIOUS

Cardiff, Wales, Aug. 6.—(AP)—Joseph Davies, United States Ambassador to Belgium, urged Welshmen here today to "stand fast in the preservation of democratic principles against the encroachments of would-be regimentators and dictators."

Mr. Davies of Welsh descent, spoke at the Eisteddfod, Welsh National Festival, on behalf "of those who shed blood in America."

"We deny," he said, "that the only form of government which confronts the choice of mankind is that of a totalitarian state of one kind or another.

"We assert that the destruction of personal liberty, freedom of thought or speech, the right to peaceful assembly, liberty of conscience and the right of the individual to his person and in his rights, is too high a price for anything that dictatorial government can give."

In his address, the Ambassador delivered President Roosevelt's personal salutation in Welsh "Cafan Gymas," which means, "warm regards."

CRUSH TOO GREAT FOR CORRIGAN

Suffers Minor Injury in Sway of Crowds in His Welcome

New York, Aug. 6 (AP)—Douglas Corrigan, grinning boyishly at the error, wouldn't let a chest injury keep him today from receiving the celebrations honoring his memorable flight to California by way of dawn today.

The irrepressible Irishman was to be guest of honor at a welcome parade staged for him yesterday—a tumultuous tribute during which 4,000,000 persons showered a ton and 1,800 tons of ticker tape and torn telephone books.

Grinning despite his hurt, the 120 pound flier agreed to submit to an X-ray examination of his chest. He is scheduled to go to Peekskill, N.Y., tomorrow by car to inspect the 69th infantry and is to attend a banquet here tonight at the Hotel Astor.

The Broadway parade left Corrigan a bit mildly-eyed.

Corrigan made no mention of his injury, but a bandage was visible under his rigidly taped when he returned to his hotel after a subsequent reception at City Hall. Corrigan also attended a quiet dinner and heard Mayor La Guardia throw a ball at Lewisohn and Yankee Stadiums before he went to bed.

Monkeys Inoculated Show Traces Of Mysterious Human Illness

Owosso, Mich., Aug. 6 (AP)—Biologists observed an inoculated monkey in a laboratory cage today for a clue to the cause of a mysterious illness which has brought to six Owosso children in past few days and sent five other persons to the hospital.

Dr. C. C. Young, Director of the State laboratories, said one of the monkeys, inoculated, from cultures believed to be those of the disease virus that caused the human death yesterday was showing symptoms of the disease.

He expressed hope a study of the animal's ailment would yield a clue that would avert further human sufferings.

Dr. Don Gudakunst State Health Commissioner, came to Owosso today to assume direction of all augmented field force of public health physicians, technicians and nurses.

He asked residents of the locality to report all cases of intestinal upsets in recent weeks.

Dr. Gudakunst said technicians were convinced the disease, apparently a severe type of dysentery caused by bacterial infection, was carried by food.

MAKE ARMY LIFE MORE ATTRACTIVE IS NEW PROGRAM

Promotions Not Dependent Now Upon Vacancies as Heretofore

EQUIPMENT LIGHTER

Plan to Place Nation Rapidly to Party With Any Possible Attacker

London, Aug. —(AP)—The War Office today announced promotion of more than 2,000 army officers as a result of War Minister Leslie Hore-Belisha's program to make army life more attractive.

More than one-third of the army's captains and lieutenants were elevated in the reorganization of the War Minister's abolition of the system in use since 1871 whereby promotions depended upon vacancies.

The promotions, effective August first, were listed in a special 20-page supplement of the London Gazette—its largest ever issued.

This was considered a major feature of the War Minister's program, announced July 28. The program also provides for lower retirement ages, more retirement pay, creation of officers from the ranks regardless of wealth and social position as requirements for admission into Sandhurst.

Attractive Service

Efforts have been underway for some time to make the army more attractive for the enlisted man.

His pay has been increased. He is eligible for a pension. If he wishes he may learn a trade His barracks are being modernized, giving him hot water to shave, a more comfortable bed, a wardrobe for his clothes and space for his radio set.

His equipment is lighter—and his clothes better fitting and more comfortable. He does not even have to make long marches any more. He generally rides in a truck.

Parity to Sought

All this is part of Great Britain's drive to place the nation on a parity with any country likely to attack her.

Her land-claims started his program last year by placing younger men in high army posts. He named Lieutenant General Lord Gort chief of the General Staff to succeed Sir Cyril Deverell and picked other young officers in key positions.

"Join the modern army" is the slogan which now adorns posters plastered over the country. The army wanted 20,000 men by first, 1939, was 448,625—including the territorial army—but it will be increased sharply this year. Recruiting drive for recruits has been under way for months.

Great Britain will spend £106,500,000 (about $532,500,000) on the army this year, compared to £76,174,000 ($440,870,000) last year and £36,127,000 ($180,635,000) in 1931.

STORM FLOODS LIVERPOOL DOCK

Climax of Week of Freak Weather Is Reached

Liverpool, Aug. 6 (CP-Havas)—Dock areas of Liverpool and the Merseyside were badly flooded today following a storm which lasted three hours. It was one of the worst thunderstorms ever experienced in the Merseyside area.

It was the climax of a week of freak weather and storms which have prevailed throughout Europe accompanying an unusual heat wave.

One hocse caught fire after being struck by lightning, but the three occupants escaped unhurt. Drains were unable to clear the heavy fall of water which came pouring down from roof-tops. Many business premises and cellars were flooded and considerable damage was done to goods stored in basements and cellars of warehouses and factories.

Many basement flats were deluged to man pumps to clear flooded cellars.

JAP WARSHIPS MOVE UP RIVER

Are Now Within 110 Miles of Hankow, Capital

Shanghai, Aug. 6 (AP)—Japanese warships fought their way up the Yangtze River today to within 110 miles of Hankow, China's provisional capital.

They were reported shelling Chinese positions on both banks of the Lungping, ten miles downstream from the boom at Wuzueh, while Chinese shore batteries replied vigorously.

The Chinese opened the boom barrament to be followed by air attacks and then by an attempted landing for an attack on Kwangtai, 25 miles north of Wuzueh. Such a landing would be the first major advance troops, which Chinese said were being held in the Yangtze flood.

Chinese' advices said the floods, caused by torrential rains in Szechuan, were growing worse, with dike breaches widening and the river inundating huge areas on both banks.

LAKE FISHERMEN HALTED BY WIND

Local lake fishermen have welcomed the cessation of the high winds earlier in the week which had completely halted daily netting operations and threatened very serious the loss of hundreds of dollars in ruined nets. Trout lifts have been light lately, and many of the fishermen have been attempting classe netting with fairly good luck.

LOCAL MAN HIRED AS MARMORA TEACHER

Mr. A. E. Berry, B.A., of this city has been engaged as assistant on the teaching staff of Marmora High School, succeeding Mr. W. T. Fraser, B.A., who has resigned to go to Port Francis, Mr. Berry is a graduate of McMaster University.

COOL, WET SUMMER SEEN IN MARITIMES

Farmers of the Maritime Provinces this year are experiencing an unusually wet and very cool season. Though the pea crop is good, and there is expected to be a normal abundance of apples, the cool, wet summer has not been too favorable for other crops, it is learned by Mr. Pearce, in charge of Canadian Canners for Eastern Canada, who has just returned from a visit to the east. No talk of hard times is evident in the Maritimes, and farmers have been content to carry on without fear of depressions or the effect of business booms, it is reported by Mr. Pearce.

BUCK AND DOE SEEN ON BAY FRONT ROAD

Believed to be the animal which crossed the road from the bay to the north side of the County House of Refuge to Cedar Grove on the highway, a point at the County House of Refuge to Cedar Grove on the highway assaults side, this spring, and which has been glimpsed only once since in that section, a buck and doe deer was sighted on the farm of Earl Weese on the Bay front road between Rednersville and Albury this week. The buck was accompanied by a smaller doe.

Setting up grain in the back field of the farm of Allen Weese and Earl Dawson observed the buck and doe leap a rail fence lightly and disappear into a thicket. The animals have not been seen since.

Police Blotter

Leaving his automobile parked at the upper end of Front St. while he crossed the street for less than one minute, Vernon Weir, Belleville, returned to where he had parked his car in time to see it driven away by a car thief yesterday afternoon. Although the matter was immediately reported to local police, who subsequently notified Trenton, Tweed, Madoc, Marmora, Napanee and Cobourg police departments of the theft, no trace of the vehicle was found. "I was not out of the car more than a minute," said Mr. Weir as he admitted he had neglected to remove the ignition key.

The car, a 1936 model Dodge sedan, was bearing Ontario license plate markers number 1725 when stolen.

When a truck driven by Wm. J. Masterson, 94 East Moira St., collided with a motor car, being backed out from the curb on Front St. by Barnard Wilson, 111 Chatham St., the rear end of Masterson's truck badly damaged and Masterson was detained for questioning by police yesterday afternoon.

Oshawa police are seeking the whereabouts of a taxi cab reported missing from that city. The vehicle carried Ontario licence plates number M 9711. It is a Chevrolet sedan.

A local citizen found himself in the toils of the law yesterday after unsuccessfully denying that a theft, no trace of the vehicle was found. "I was not out of the car more than a minute," said Mr. Weir as he admitted he had neglected to remove the ignition key.

DERBY CHAMPION, OTHER DRIVERS RECEIVE AWARDS

Amid the jubilulious applause of hundreds of admirers, Robert "Bobby" Wilson, 1938 Canadian "Soap Box Derby" champion, was introduced from the stage of the Capitol Theatre last evening and was awarded the trophies and medals he won on "Derby Hill" last Thursday. Also present to receive their awarded medals were the second and third place drivers in the "A" class and the two winners in the "B" class for sub-decked age boys.

President Cleo B. Colling of the Kinsmen Club, was introduced from the stage and personally conveyed the thanks of the Belleville Kinsmen Club to the citizens and all who made the 1938 Canadian "Soap Box Derby" the success it enjoyed. "On behalf of our club I wish to thank all for the hearty co-operation that has been afforded our club in all its ventures in years passed," concluded President Colling as he introduced Kinsmen Elmer "Buster" Labarge, general chairman of the 1938 Canadian "Soap Box Derby", who in turn introduced Mr. J. B. Boyce, local Chevrolet dealer representing the parent company which is sponsoring the world "Soap Box Derby" finals, and who awarded the prizes and trophies to the winners last night.

Mr. Boyce thanked the work of the Belleville Kinsmen Club, especially their efforts in their Eye Clinic endeavours. "This young club boasts of aggressive, energetic and determined men, and is engaged in their sponsoring of the "Soap Box Derby" they are giving the youth of our city an opportunity to have them develop their own ideas in the construction of their "Kid Kars." The genius, resourcefulness and ingenuity displayed we saw yesterday "uring the race speaks highly of the constructive development of the boys of our city," concluded Mr. Boyce, as he introduced the first driver to receive and applause.

To Robert Wilson, the 1938 Canadian "Soap Box" winner, went the Goyle Trophy, a fine large silver cup, and a gold pennant, emily and emblematic to the Canadian "Soap Box Derby" champion. Wilson won for the gold Chevrolet medal. Second was Ernest Young of Belleville, who received a silver medal and third was Barney Wright, Kingston, winner of a bronze medal. In the special "B" class arranged for drivers under 12 years of age, Ray Sargent, the winner and champion of his class received the trophy and medal, while Stapley, who finished second, a silver medal was given.

Trophies to Ernest Young, Barney Wright, Tony ellinger and Ray Sargent were all presented from the stage at the Capitol Theatre and as each one was given his trophies and medals they were welcomed with continued ovation.

"We all wish you the very best of luck when you race in the Indiana Derby, and if you don't go to Akron, Ohio, next week and the Canadian finals you will be disappointed and Canada the world's championship, Bob," concluded Mr. Boyce. Young Wilson will leave shortly to Akron by a party of Belleville Kinsmen, who will sponsor the Canadian "Soap Box Derby" in conjunction with the Ontario Interests.

The champions were the guests of Cleo B. Colling manager of the Capitol Theatre, for the remainder of the evening.

Obituary

LATE WILLIAM H. MOSSMAN

The funeral of William Henry Mossman took place from his late residence, 31 Sidney Street, Friday afternoon, August 5th. The service in the home and at the graveside in White's Cemetery was conducted by the Rev. A. Beauchamp Payne, Vicar of St. Thomas' Church.

The bearers were Messrs. D. Howard, J. Hannah, W. Urch, R. Morgan, A. Glass and W. Shannon.

CHARLES OSCAR BRICKMAN

After a brief illness Charles Oscar Brickman passed away at his late residence, 20 Bleecker street, on Friday afternoon, Aug. 5.

The late Mr. Brickman was born 68 years ago near Redersville in Prince Edward County. At an early age he moved to Belleville and had resided here for many years. He was well known and most highly esteemed. For over thirty years he was foreman at the Belleville Hardware Company, now the Belleville-Sargent Hardware Company. He was an expert workman and was popular with his fellow employees. For the past few years he lived retired.

Fraternally Oscar Brickman was a prominent Mason, Oddfellow and Forester. He was a Past Master of Bureks Lodge No. 283, A.F. and A.M., a Past Noble Grand of Belleville Lodge No. 81, I.O.O.F., and Past Grand Secretary of the Prentice Boys. To many friends his death has brought sincere feelings of regret.

Oscar Brickman was an enthusiastic bandsman and for many years was a valued member of the old Oddfellow Band. He was the last of his family, his wife passed away two and a, half years ago.

The funeral announcement is made elsewhere in this paper.

Laughing Children

Laughing, shrieking, shouting children. Small brown bodies glistening in the strong rays of the afternoon sun. Two hundred or one hundred and fifty or more whooping merrily in the waters of the concrete swimming pool on the end of Victoria Park. Proud mothers seated nearby knitting or engrossed in an absorbing story in some book or magazine.

One of the most popular pools in the city, the bathing pool in Victoria park this season is daily holding its full quota of the smaller swimmers. Tiny toddlers taking their first faltering, hesitant steps in the water, larger ones what at the deeper end of the pool are learning quickly the first strokes necessary to swim the deeper water safely, and a few who same merry abandon of careless, lazy summer days.

And on the outside, the end of the park where is erected a platform with diving tower over, scores of swimmers gather daily to enjoy the cooling waters of the pool and estimated three hundred swimmers a day crowd the park and the water, swimming at times, at others heal-

CAR CHECK-UP SHOWS NEED TO CORRECT DEFECTS
"Safety Lane" Service is Eye-Opener to District Motorists
'GOING OVER' NEED

Fifty per cent. of the automobiles being driven by Belleville and district residents have either defective emergency brakes, service brakes, headlights out of line or focus, or are not mechanically safe in other features, it is learned by officials connected with the "Safety Lane" of equipment located for the past two days on South Coleman Street, near Dundas Street, where since Thursday hundreds of car owners have taken advantage of the free check-up of their machines.

The mechanical aids of the "Safety Lane," a safer-driving help for motorists of the Province, are conducted by the associated garage operators of the Counties of Hastings and Prince Edward, and have revealed many weaknesses of local and district automobiles. One of the most complete checks possible is given these machines who call at this location, and either a stamp of approval ,indicating mechanical feat. ures in good condition, is placed on the windshield, or the driver is referred to any one of the garages in Belleville or Prince Edward County garages for repairs.

Not Many 'Unsafe' Cars

"We haven't found many which are badly out of condition and to be labelled unsafe" stated Mr. S. H. Gooderham, Toronto, in charge of the 'Safety Lane', "but we do find about one-half of them needing some kind of a going over. The biggest trouble has been with lights which are out of line, and emergency brakes which are not in good condition, or altogether undependable."

The "Safety Lane" will remain in Belleville until six o'clock this evening, after which the mechanical equipment will be packed, and on Thursday, members of the various local and Prince Edward County clubs have assisted Mr. Gooderham in his work.

Co-Operation in Belleville

"We've had splendid co-operation in Belleville and district, in that all the garage operators for this help," stated the director of the "Safety Lane." "Belleville motorists have been very fair, and appreciative of our help."

Yesterday 56 local cars were examined by the "director of the "Safety Lane." It is expected that the number will be even larger today. Since May 2nd, when the "Safety Lane" first started its tour of the Province it is estimated by Mr. Gooderman that some 25,000 or 40,000 cars have been checked by the complete service. The company will likely be carried on in other sections of Ontario until October 15th.

DECORATION DAY SET FOR AUG. 14
Veterans Will Place Flowers on Graves of Deceased Comrades Here

During the past few days arrangements have been made with the Sir Sevrer Mers Associations in the city to hold "Decoration Day" on Sunday, August 14th, 1938, when the Veterans will proceed to the cemeteries and place flowers on all the graves of veterans who have answered the last roll call.

The Veterans will Fall In as in former years and proceed from the Armouries along Bridge Street to Highland Avenue where buses and cars will await to complete the journey to St. James Cemetery and the Belleville Cemetery.

An invitation is extended to all fraternal societies to assist the Veterans in this ceremony, the several bands of the city and vicinity are being asked to assist also on this occasion which will help to make the affair most outstanding.

The Veterans will wear the berets and arm bands and medals for this parade.

Citizens who can loan their cars for transportation facilities are requested to notify any of the committees of the Veterans' Associations in the city and final arrangements will be made in the course of a few days.

Any citizen who may have the name of any Veteran who has passed to the Great Beyond since the decoration day last year is requested to give in whatever information he may have to the committees in charge will not overlook any plot. If the Veterans can assemble in this formation as early as possible it will be greatly appreciated.

The Hike to "Ten" will be announced later when all final arrangements have been completed, the usual stand for the donation of refreshments will be placed on the Market Square on Saturday, August 13th, where friends may leave flowers for parcels, and those who are unable to leave flowers at this station but who may wish to forward and arrangements will be made for a car to call for same on Saturday, August 13th.

The Veterans anticipate a very large turnout on Decoration Day, hope that the citizens will accept this announcement as an invitation to take part in the Decoration of Graves along with the Veterans.

NICK SIMCOE INQUEST CLOSES
Evidence Given That Man Was Warned Left to Go Straight

The adjourned inquest looking into the death of the late Nick Simcoe, transient, who sustained fatal injuries when run over by a Canadian Pacific Railway freight train in the Belleville C.N.R. yards, concluded in the police court rooms before Chief Coroner Dr. C. V. Cooke, K.C., this morning. The jury found that, "Nick Simcoe came to his death in the Belleville General Hospital on August 1st, 1938, as the result of injuries received when struck and run over by a Canadian Pacific freight train in the yards in Belleville and while the said Nick Simcoe was trespassing on C.P.R. property."

Sergeant Arthur Harman was the chief witness called. Harman, with Constable A. Donnan, K.C. "Through papers found on the deceased man's person I located a brother at the Grayling military camp in Michigan. Information from the latter officer directed my investigations to the Winnipeg police who located the sister of the deceased in Toronto. Mr. Harman's brother-in-law, Mr. Herbert Smith, Wall Street operator, were with him.

Mr. Harman said he would board their plane early today and expected to reach Toronto Sunday.

FOXBORO CHAMPS OF HASTINGS LOOP
Win Tummon Trophy For Fourth Time in Six Years

Foxboro, Aug. 5.—(Special)—It's all over again for another season! Five straight wins and the league championship. What a feat! "Well done boys, you are a fairly!" Such were the congratulatory terms that the local baseball fans heaped on the victorious Foxboro nine after their feat of winning the South Hastings, Baseball Championship here last night. After defeating Shannonville two straight in the semi-finals Foxboro continued their winning streak, winning the first-place Canniton squad and with only one tie game marring their consecutive win record went on to polish the leaders off in three straight games to win the fine Tummon Trophy, which is emblematic of South Hastings Baseball honours, for the fourth time in six

The DOCTOR" by MARY ROBERTS RINEHART

He was utterly happy and contents after that. He could not save Annie Lewis. No power could do that. But to Beverly during those days he was a rock in a weary land. She was more nearly demonstrative than she had ever been. The small casual caresses of most families had never been hers, and her kisses were still the kisses of the child rather than the awakened woman. But there were times when in his arms he felt her sigh and relax, and his heart leaped. She was his, she was utterly and lovable, and she was his.

"You do love me, darling?"

"I adore you, Chris."

But their times together were brief. The telephone would ring, or he would look at his watch.

"Well, I'll have to go."

"But you've just come!"

"It's a strange thing, my child, but a surgeon's duties, if he is good, naturally wants a doctor around. Nine times out of ten he could get just as well without him, but there you are.

"Well, have to have this out, Beverly," he went on patiently, "My life divides itself into two parts. One of them is the service that I owe, belongs to the state, and it makes me difficult to live with. The other part is you. That's what I am so vital that I'm afraid to think about it. And somebody will have to reconcile the two."

"I'm to get what's left over. Is that it?"

"That's not fair, dear."

"If I cared less, I'd be more fair, dear," she said.

Nevertheless she was happy, fiercely and possessively happy. He would belong to everybody before he belonged to her. For richer or poorer, in sickness and in health, she would be his, and he would only see and then be hers. But she put that thought away from her.

There was no announcement of the engagement and for a day or two Beverly did not even tell her father. He was rather unapproachable now, fastidious and dapper as ever, but shutting himself into his study in the evenings and looking older, as if a bright head suddenly withered him. Each evening he went in and sat with Annie, and three visits now every day lasted; he could not entirely cocoal his sense of loneliness and fear, his resentment that now at last she was failing him.

"How are you tonight?"

"Comfortable," she would whisper. "What sort of day did you have?"

He would tell her, and she would listen. The morphine made her mouth dry, and now and then she would like a drink of water. But he would not stay by the bed. He would move uneasily about the room, picking up this and that.

"Where'd that come from?"

"You bought it for me in Naples. Don't you remember?"

He did not love her, she thought. He had not loved her for a long time. Sometimes she felt that he was silently enraged against her, that she made him feel sinful merely because he was alive and she was dying. A gentle enough man, after his fashion. He was even almost gentle on the night when Beverly finally told him of her engagement, although his face was set as he came into Annie's room afterward.

"What's this nonsense about Beverly and young Arden? Is it serious?"

"She's in love with him."

"And what about him? Is he in love with her?"

"So I gather."

"A doctor!" he said. "What kind of life will she have? At every body's call all hours and the night and day. And no time in it. Why couldn't she have picked somebody worth while? What do they expect to marry on? He's got nothing."

She tried to moisten her dry lips. "They haven't talked of marriage yet. Of course she'll have what I leave her."

She was surprised to see his face twist, as if he had hurt him. It couldn't be possible, of course. Not after all those years. But how ironic if he still cared about her now that she was going on somewhere else, where it wouldn't at all!

"We're not talking about that yet," he said, and stooping over, kissed her for the first time in years. Then he stal. t out of the room.

CHAPTER XXII.

June came and went, with Annie slowly sinking and Chris put to it sometimes to find time for her, of Beverly either. The heat brought up his city work, milk poured in hot rooms, babies were sick and wailing. Now and then a worker in one of the mills reeled and fell lay like a fallen ox. When Chris got to the Lewis house, he would be tired and dusty, too tired even to talk. Sitting on the terrace, the light showing his shadowy lines and the tired lines on his face, he would look far below to the mist by the river and wonder why he was there at all.

Then suddenly Katie submerged for weeks under his work, forced herself on his attention again.

One night late in June he found himself sitting beside Lily in the hall in the high school, a Lily surprisingly decked for the occasion, while on the platform sat Katie in a new white dress, very composed and looking entirely professional. Not only grown-up. When she got up to receive her diploma, he realized that she had become a very pretty girl. She was more slender than she had been when her hair was down and were small. Katie, he thought idly, was a miracle in her way—anything so young could get out of that background of hers was surely a miracle. Beside him Lily was twittering with excitement.

"It's the best dress there," she whispered. Miss Warner made it, out of the money Dick left me."

And it was that night, with Katie brave in her new finery and Lily in the kitchen preparing a supper by way of celebration, that the girl walked into his office and confounded him with his engagement.

Chris looked up to find her standing at him with reddened eyes in a small white face.

"Engaged? Who told you that? And why don't you knock before you come in?"

"I heard it. That's all. Is it true?"

"It is true, of course. That needn't make any difference as yet to your mother or to you, Katie." And you looked very tired tonight."

Katie, however, was past compliments. "Are you in love with her?"

"I'm very fond of her Katie."

"And you're really going to marry her?"

He kept his temper, although his color rose. "It hasn't come to that. Here's a long time from now when I can ask you if you as a grown-up and married yourself."

"Grown-up! Listen, Chris Arden, I'm eighteen now, and I'm more grown-up than she'll ever be. She's been pampered all her life. I'm not. I've had to look out for myself. Oh, I know I'm not to you but she's all wrong."

"That's enough, Katie. Stop it."

"What are you going to do? Live off her? Or turn us out and bring her here?"

"I can't discuss it with you, Katie. It's not settled anyhow."

"A doctor's wife!" said Katie, "running to answer the telephone and trying to catch you some place for a baby case! How long would she do it?"

"I don't need any help in managing my own affairs, my child," he told her stiffly. "Let's forget it. As I said before, you looked very pretty tonight."

"And much you care!" she said, and banged out of the room.

It was the next day that she asked him for a letter to Miss Simpson at the hospital. He was startled into speechlessness.

"Why shouldn't I be a nurse?" she said sharply. "If you think I'm going to stay here now and live off you, you can think again. Anyhow, if anything is to be married—"

"Listen, Katie. If you think a nurse's job is to smooth pillows and stroke foreheads—"

"I know all about it. Don't be funny, Chris. I'm no brow-stroker, but I'll do the job all right. You won't be ashamed of me. But if Beverly Lewis is coming here to live, I'm out, and that's that."

It was a long time that night before Chris slept, but one thing was certain. He must get Katie out of the house and out of his life as soon as possible. He had no illusions about her. But she was young and attractive, and she was undoubtedly dangerous.

He went to Miss Simpson the next day and laid his problem squarely before her. She listened carefully, watching him.

"What sort of girl is she?"

"She's straight, if that's what you mean."

"And she's fond of you?"

"She thinks she is. She'll get over it."

"I don't like it, Chris. How do I know she'll behave here? In particular about my girls. They're straight, and they stay straight."

"She has good stuff in her. She's never had a chance."

"And you're still supporting them?"

"Good as it is! I'm a sort of licensed victualer these days. But I'm anxious about the girl. She has no chance where she is. As a matter of fact, she almost got into trouble last fall. Maybe I ought to tell you, but I want to start right."

He did tell her, saving nothing, and she looked more than doubtful. But she was in love with Chris, and the picture of the family he had drawn had been, she imagined, a masterpiece of understatement. In the end she compromised. She would see Katie and let him know.

That was toward the end of June, and on a blistering day early in July Katie carried a small bag into Chris's office and closed the door behind her.

"I'm going, Chris."

"Well, good luck to you, Katie."

"I'll not bother you any more. You know that!"

"You never did, my dear. I've been no anger of light myself, have I?"

She stood close to him, her face a mask of tragic indifference.

"I suppose you wouldn't kiss me for good luck?"

"Miss you? Why not?"

He bent over and kissed her gently, as a brother might, or a father. Then she turned and went out.

CHAPTER XXIII.

Like everything else in that transition period before the World War, medicine was moving rapidly. The isolation period in surgery had ended with the College of Surgeons. There were new standards, items of medicine on the market, but faith in empiric prescribing was rapidly dying; scientific medicine was taking its place, and specialization was coming hand in hand with its banners.

Chris, reading his medical journals that summer when he had the time, tried to adjust himself to the new trend and to find Ted Lawrence down the street that he felt out-dated already.

"Another few years of this," he said, "and we'll be as extinct as the dodo!"

"Not you," said Lawrence philosophically. "You can always take a knife and do a little carving. It's the general fellows like me who'll be ringing a bell and carrying a tin cup!"

It was a mighty movement just getting under way. Laboratories were busy at work. Institutes were being endowed for research into this and that, and preventive medicine, public health and public welfare were coming to the front.

Chris was desperately in love by this time. What had started, more or less as a romantic dream had become a reality which was bone of bone and flesh of his flesh. Beverly's picture sat on his old bureau, and his good-night and during those days was more of a prayer than he knew.

He went sporadically enough about his work, however, stormed as usual at the conditions of the poor in the blistering heat, fought Jenkins for ice, for milk, for whatever he could get, earned a little, even slept a little; but he knew them and was always to know that his feeling for Beverly was the strongest actuating motive of his life.

"I'm frightened, Chris. Come over here and hold me. Don't let me go. Never let me go."

"I'll never let you go," he told her gravely.

That was his courtship, a somber affair at best, with Chris holding to him like a scared child and a hush over the house as if it waited for something. As indeed it did.

Katie had better days, days when she would get Beverly in and even plan her trousseau for her. One day in July Beverly asked Chris up to her sitting room, and he found her on a couch in an old-fashioned wedding dress of pink satin and a long tulle veil.

"She had them brought out today, Chris. She wants me to wear my mother one."

They stood together, gazing at the dress; its long train lined with lace ruffles, its high neck banded with silk roses. The veil had a satin band over the head and a bunch of osprey at the side. Beverly was crying.

"She must have been so happy when she wore them, Chris."

"Don't, dear, don't. I'm fading. Don't think. Just love me and let me love you."

Beverly matured at that time, confronting raw life and suffering as she was for the first time. One day she told Chris that she wanted to make him a home and bear his children. She wanted somebody else big sons like himself. He was touched, humbled, amazed. Later he talked to her about their marriage.

"I'm a poor man, Beverly. You won't like that."

"I'll not be poor, Chris."

"Listen, darling. I can't let your father support me, or you either. If you take me, you must take me as I am."

"Then I take you as you are," she said softly.

Then that she had no idea of what he meant, no idea of a real poverty or of struggle or any sacrifice. He was too deeply in love by that time to insist further. But that night day soon after that, when she showed him the linens, that he felt that something must be done. Then he began everywhere great piles of shining linen, embroidered with her monogram; linen sheets, towels, tablecloths.

"Good Scott, do I have to live up to that? Who's going to wash them?"

"You're too practical, Chris. That's my business."

Then one day Staunton Lewis sent for him, and he found himself across the desk in the library from a devitalized Fate man who regarded him with blank eyes but intense dignity.

Anna Neagle starred in "Lookout For Love" at the Capitol Theatre commencing Sunday midnight.

"I have been waiting for you to come to me, Doctor," he said. "Since it is a question of my only child—"

"I thought it could wait, Mr. Lewis. This hardly seemed the time."

"It was not a time for Beverly to become engaged, for that matter," said Staunton coldly. "Nevertheless it is time we came to an understanding. If you intend to marry her, she must be supported, naturally."

"I had hoped to do that, sir."

"On what? On what?"

"On what I earn, or shall earn."

"Nonsense! If you want to starve with your affair, Beverly is another matter. Then you volo changed. "She has—she will have—some money from her mother. I suppose that will help?"

"Not to support her. If she wants to buy her own things with it, that's different. I must support my own wife, Mr. Lewis. I can't live on her money or on yours."

"Better men than you have done it."

It ended where it began, both men determined and adamant, blowing hard with anger. Toward the last he called Chris a stubborn fool, and after that he was barely civil to him.

ROLLINS REUNION

One of the most successful get-together picnics of the Rollins family was held at Scarlet Beach, Oak Lake, on Monday, August 1st., when, in spite of the unfavorable weather, one hundred and six of the members registered. After all had partaken of the dainty and substantial lunch prepared by the ladies, the president, George Harris, of Cooper, called the gathering to order. Business was transacted and the following officers were elected for the coming year: President, George Harris, Cooper; Vice President, Harry Rollins, Belleville; Secretary, Mrs. Harper Rollins, Stirling; Treasurer, S. B. Rollins, Tweed. The Executive consists of Dave Rollins, Belleville; Joe Rollins, Ivanhoe; Hark Rollins Sr. Cooper; C. B. Rollins, Coe Hill; Will Rollins, Cooper; Mrs. George Post, West Huntingdon.

Sing song under the direction of Harry Rollins and leadership of Mrs. Harper Rollins and W. J. Woods brought the crowd together for the part which followed.

Girls' Race Under 5—Faye Rollins, June Rollins, Lois Benedict.

Boys' Race 5-7—Ivan Rollins, Donald McCurdy.

Girls' Race 6-9—Joan McCurdy, Margaret Harris, Velma Rollins, Donna Rollins.

Mr. C. S. Rollins invited the clan to meet at Coe Hill the third Wednesday in July, 1939. The invitation was accepted.

After a light lunch good byes were said and all started homeward, feeling well satisfied with the day.

PLAINFIELD W. I.

The August meeting of the Plainfield Women's Institute was held at the home of Mrs. R. Donning on Thursday August 4th. The meeting opened with community singing led by Mrs. R. Wilder.

The Roll call was answered by a quotation from the Lord's Prayer in unison. Roll call was answered by a good law, with 30 adults and 14 children present.

A number of business matters were dealt with. It was decided to hold a quilting and dinner in the Hall at Plainfield on August 10th. Correspondence was read and discussed. Mrs. Walter Hall rendered a solo entitled "Only In the Way."

Very instructive topic was given on "Parliamentary Procedure, for Institute meetings." A contest was held to name the flower committee for plants and candy which had been given to Mrs. Donning.

Mrs. R. Wilder gave a reading, "The Lives Of Some Flowers." The collection was taken and the meeting closed with the National Anthem—and that the Unwed Will have a Literal Body in Hell"

THE ROYAL FAMILY'S SERVICE

There are no pieces of news with more appeal to readers everywhere than those which have to do with the royal family. The household of Their Majesties the King and Queen with their two daughters is the most famous household in the world today. These may be days when some seem to feel that too much of the old and tried is being lost, but when one regards the love and devotion of the people for the royal family, their appreciation of what this family means to the nation, one can understand that the hearts of the people are sound, that they have set their minds on the worthwhile principles.

The other day was the 38th birthday of Her Majesty who comes of a Scottish house whose place in history is an honored one of service to the crown. The world listened to the story of the little Princesses in their delight secreting birthday gifts for their royal mother in their nursery and then on the morning of her birthday tripping down the corridors of the yacht on which the King and Queen were travelling to her ancestral Scotland, to surprise and present her with their tokens of love for her. Indeed the part which this royal couple and their daughters are playing in influencing the minds of the people of Great Britain is one readily understood.

Britain is blest in her rulers and their children. The fierce light which beats upon the throne has no fears for them. They prove the highest function in the land, that of the kingship and queenship and exalt the office to which they have been called. How proud Britain is of them at home and as they go abroad!

The unity of this family is outstanding. One always associates their majesties and their family, together just as one associates King George the ruler with King George the man.

Today the throne is strong. It is the throne of its kind in the world because it has rendered and is rendering service.

THAT AMAZING YOUNG MAN

Douglas Corrigan has been taken to the heart of the world in a way as no one ever has been treated before. His flight to Ireland was of the same type as his disposition and has every word and deed since the landed in Ireland and on his coming home to the United States have all been of the same cloth. He is himself and the people love him for it.

Many would give their eye teeth to be admired as he is and yet they cannot appreciate the frank nature which gives him that individuality which has made him one of the best known young men in the world.

Shy and grinning in the surprises and excitement of his homecoming on Broadway, he is just what the writer and the cameraman love to depict, an individual with the most likeable disposition.

A writer in the New York Times says: "His is the spirit of high adventure in which the American responds most completely, the embodiment of that combination of daring and mechanical resourcefulness which has played so large a part in our progress during the machine age. Even the comforts of a modern ocean liner must have seemed prosaic and tedious to a man who could take a nineyear-old third-hand airplane with a normal range of less than 400 miles, glance at the weather maps of The New York Times and fly the North Atlantic as nonchalantly as most men take the 8:15 for the office.

"Corrigan belongs, despite his youth, to the era of the barnstormers in aviation; those men of ingenuity and rashness who could make any kind of "crate" fly with a bit of bail wire and a wrench. They did much, by way of foundation-laying, for which today's scientific aviation has to be thankful. In so far as they paved the way for ever-increasing private flying they deserve an important place among the pioneers of the air. But they should not stretch their luck. Corrigan has shown that a skilled mechanic and a good flier can make an airplane do the impossible. He will add admiration for sound judgment to the applause for courage with which the country rings today if he will now turn his talents to less hazardous undertakings and set an example to other pilots of leaving ocean flying to establish air transport."

SOL—THE SCORCHER

The extreme heat of the summer is a real danger, says J. W. S. McCullough. Excessive high temperature is a similar danger to those who work in factories, engine rooms and other hot places and who fail to take precautions against heatstroke and heat exhaustion.

Heatstroke and heat exhaustion are radically different in their effect upon the patient and in the treatment required.

In heatstroke the face is red or purple, the skin is dry and hot, the temperature, measured by the thermometer, high, and the patient is unconscious. In heat exhaustion, much the opposite is the rule. The face is pale, the skin moist and cold and the temperature low; the person is usually conscious. Remember the differences. In heat stroke, a dry skin; in heat exhaustion a moist skin.

What should be done in these cases? First call a doctor. Then remember that the hot body should be cooled and the cold body warmed. In headstroke lay the patient on his back in a shody place and remove as much clothing as society will allow. Sponge body with cold water. Apply ice-bag or cold cloths to the head. Give no stimulants, but after the patient has become conscious let him have all the cool water he will drink.

In heat exhaustion lay the patient in a reclining position. Loosen clothing. Keep warm with hot water bottles, blankets or other handy materials. Give stimulants: tea, coffee or one teaspoonful of aromatic spirits of ammonia in half a glassful of water.

In both weather wear light, porous clothing. Avoid unnecessary exposure to the sun or excessive heat indoors or outdoors. Keep your head covered in the scorching sun. Drink plenty of cool water and to each glassful add a tablet of common salt. Eat lightly with or without 5 gr. dextrose. Use a liberal amount of salt food to replace the salt lost through sweating.

Compensation of Faith

Recourse to the Divine Ideal brings to anyone more comforting personal rewards than does all the unflagging worldly endeavor that can be crowded into a lifetime.

Cultivation of the considerate mind is the divinely established approach to refinement of heart.

Attainment in Retrospect

The great ones may bid life goodby
With phrases etched immemorably
On tablets that the world lives by.

But for the hosts of low degree—
Including you, alas, and me,
Be simpler valedictory.

God's summons find our hearts imbued
With meek solicitude
For truth and worth in paths pursued.

NOBODY EVER CALLED HIM "OLD MAN FORD", reads a headline on an article relating to the 75th birthday of Henry Ford, recently celebrated. He is a grandfather, pushing on "over the hill"—but never yet has he been called "Old Man Ford," remarks a writer. In his seventy-fifth year Henry Ford is working on a low-cost tractor, "Harder than he ever worked in his life," he says.

I WANT PEACE AND I WILL FIGHT LIKE THE DEVIL TO GET IT.

SIR THOMAS WHITE ONE-TIME MINISTER OF FINANCE OF THE DOMINION, in a newspaper interview stated that over-taxation of property had slowed up building activities in Canada to a point where the building industry was practically at a standstill, a basic industry upon which much of the prosperity of the Dominion rests, depriving members of many trades of employment. Piling up of taxes on property which should be borne by other sources is said to have strangled the building industry and blighted the most prolific source of prosperity we have. Sir Thomas did not bandy words, but pointed out the foolishness of a municipal system which permits this murder of prosperity, and the more foolish folks who permit the evil to continue and grow worse. Sir Thomas White is saying the same things that Mayor Jamieson Bone has been trying to pound into people's brains, a voice crying in the wilderness for years, but which is now awakening the dormant citizens who have been sleeping on the job and permitting politicians to oil but ham-string prosperity—the chorus of disapproval of present municipal taxing methods is growing, and the eyes of citizens are being opened to the foolishness of permitting an obsolete system municipal management to continue. Many communities are turning to the City Manager system, a system approved by Belleville many months ago, but which the citizens of this progressive community have been prevented from adopting by the politicians in high and low places.

Staying In Bed May Be Partly to Blame For Causing Death in Elderly Persons

A newspaper item some months ago told of an elderly prospector who had died with his boots on; the way he had always said he wanted to die. "Dying with the boots on" is just another way of saying that the individual did not die lying in bed but was "on his feet" when he died.

What about old people who on slight illness or indisposition go to bed and, unless routed out by the family, stay there until they die? Is it true that as one gets older going to bed instead of being an aid to health and recovery may result in prolonged weakness and possibly death?

Drs. L. B. Laplace and J. T. Nicholson, Philadelphia, in the Journal of the American Medical Association state that it is well known that when an elderly patient is confined to bed he is liable to become progressively weaker and die despite the fact that the illness which put him in bed may now have been particularly serious. In order to learn the reason why staying in bed led to weakness at death in elderly patients, these physicians made a study of thirty-four elderly patients, who were confined to bed with joint or other ailments which made it necessary for them to be off their feet. Careful examinations were made, at regular intervals, of the blood pressure, the regularity and strength of the heart beat, time of circulation of the blood from arm to lung and from arm to head, the amount of air in the lungs, complete blood count, the urine, and the rate at which body processes were working (metabolism test).

Of the entire series of 34 patients, 17 died. Ten patients, all of them over 65 years of age, apparently died because of their confinement to bed. An outstanding symptom was the gradual development of a lack of interest in themselves and their surroundings. Lying in bed allowed up the circulation allowing blood to accumulate in the veins so that less blood went back to the heart and less blood was sent from the heart muscle became evident. All the body processes became slower particularly those throwing wastes out of the body, thus allowing poisons to circulate in the blood.

The important part of the treatment is to have patient take exercise of some kind so that the action of the muscles will squeeze the blood, thus improving the circulation of the blood and the removal of wastes.

Hello, Neighbor!

From Your Hollywood Correspondent

FARLEY FAULKNER

Does Bergen fiddle while McCarthy burns? No! But does a friction between Charlie and his former pal, Bergen. "And all because his smart a—tenant can say, eat all places, last night. My ear is still ringing and I'm wearing shorts, lined with asbestos. Don't breathe a word of this to Bergen, but if it weren't for me he'd probably be digging ditches. The ungrateful cad!" The biggest, little man in pictures declared in an exclusive interview today.

"We don't want any scandal. Of course I do carry scars from the fray and I am sweltering in these new shorts. And does Bergen care? Not one little bit! Professional jealousy may be responsible for some of it."

"Take it easy Charlie," we interrupted.

"Bergen may be within earshot."

"No, He's cooped off somewhere reading my fan mail. I was speaking about this jealousy business, wasn't it? Did I let one peep out of me when Bergen dropped me in our picture "I were Single, that new dope he used as a partner? No! I'm not built that way. And the sooner Bergen realizes that the better off I am to have my diary published," threatened the dapper comedy screen star.

"Sorry to interrupt, but is Charlie quitting you with his latest whispering campaign? Or did he ask you to remain a member of his production?" asked Bergen.

"No Charlie didn't quit on our opinion of that picture with Universal, but we did 'catch' it in their projection room last week, and from what we believe everyone who reads our column will enjoy it," he declared.

"Let me see, Adolphe Menjou, Andrea Leeds and George Murphy are good. And of course, although I shouldn't soften up like this, I will say, Bergen rates." So perhaps your friends in Canada will drop around and watch me mow him at the foot of a giant oak, he bursts into a berserk Indian.

To yank the comedian into the air, ropes and wires had been fixed to the tree's highest limbs, and by a block and tackle arrangement to a straight-jacket affair which Carr wore became the cowboy outfit.

In the scene's midst the pulley jammed, the force of the resultant jerk yanking the straight jacket's collar around Bergen's throat, cutting off his wind.

While Joe hung helpless in midair a thoroughly scared troupe hoisted a man into the tree, the rope was cut and Penner, half-choked, dropped safely to the ground.

Chalmers have been buried. Gauntlets have been cast down. The suspense is terrific.

The climax of the challenge-hurling and gauntlet-casting will be held until completion of Deanna Durbin's picture, "That Certain Age." Until then, those interested will just have to speculate.

Recently Jackie Cooper, who fancies himself as somewhat of a swimmer, learned that Peggy Ziegfeld also prides herself on her own aquatic ability.

"Bet I can beat you," Jackie offered.

"Bet you can't," was Peggy's acceptance.

Director Edward Ludwig chipped in with the opinion that they could "take" Peggy in a swimming race, while Melvyn Douglas was enthusiastic about Peggy's chances of victory.

And thus the matter stands.

Except that Jackie is going to put in all his spare time practicing his racing stroke, Emeanwhile.

After his challenge, he learned that 15-year-old Peggy won the Georgia Junior Championship for free-style swimming in '34 and '36.

It happened at Hollywood Park when an official ordered the "Stablemates" company to clear the track where Director Leo Wood was doing a scene with Wallace Beery and Mickey Rooney.

"You'll have to leave," said the official, "Seabiscuit is going to run and he must have quiet."

The company moved to the indoor paddock, and only five minutes the official appeared again.

"You'll have to leave, we want Seabiscuit to get accustomed to the paddock," he ordered.

Then the company moved to the runway leading to the track. And again the official appeared.

"Sorry, folks, but Seabiscuit has to walk along here, you'll have to move."

Finally the mighty Seabiscuit started back to his private stable, and the company is sure that he turned around and gave them a friendly horse laugh!

Robert Benchley made his first stop toward the Taylor honors by acquiring Taylor's stand-in, Redmond Donn.

Director Roy Rowland walked onto the set for the first day's shooting on Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "How to Read", he observed Donn, whom he knew as Taylor's stand-in, standing by in Benchley.

"How did you get him?" asked Rowland.

"Get him, nothing," Benchley replied, "I've confiscated him."

Then, he explained that whenever Taylor was absent from a picture, an actor, he'd reply, "What has Taylor got that I haven't?"

Their answer was invariably, "everything."

"Now I know I can tell them otherwise," the comedian beamed. "Now I have something that Taylor has—his stand-in."

Because Belleville is our home town, and we wish nothing but the best in entertainment for our friends, we step from our role as columnist to advise Belleville theatre managers for the first time in advance, of four pictures that we personally guarantee. These pictures which we have already caught in studio projection rooms are: "The Shopworn Angel," "Garden of the Moon," "Love Finds Andy Hardy," and "Four's a Crowd". These pictures are part of the new deal in picture entertainment.

Sincerely, Farley Faulkner.

Toll on New Bridge $1.25 for Motorcar

Watertown, N.Y., Aug. 6.—(AP)—The scale of tolls for the Thousand Islands International Bridge, which will be dedicated August 18, was announced today by the Bridge authority.

Tolls will range from 25 cents for pedestrians and cyclists and $1.25 for private cars, including passengers, to $4 for large trucks and buses.

The bridge will connect Collins' Landing on the United States shore of the St. Lawrence River with Ivy Lea, Ont.

THEY EVEN HAD TICKLER'S PLUM AND APPLE

IT was like old times for the Canadian National Railways war veterans who travelled to Toronto to attend the Canadian Corps Reunion. One group went in one of the old vintage coaches that brought the boys over 25 years ago. Emergency rations were served for breakfast, including Tickler's jam. The sandwiches were cut with the trays were all old soldiers. Even the waiter, on this occasion and served the bacon and eggs, long the hope of the troops.

By way of contrast, another group of veterans made the trip in an up-to-date Canadian National air-conditioned coach.

A realistic trench was set up in one of the 20-yard coaches. In the photograph, the "Relief" is headed by Col. F. F. Clarke of Montreal. The sergeant-major is Major Alistair Fraser, M.C., Vice-President in charge of Traffic of the Canadian National Railways, while the "troops" are men of the National System who served in many units of the Canadian Expeditionary Force.

Mrs. Douglas Holton attended the Centennial celebration in Kingston, and had the privilege of being present at the opening, by Premier King, of the recently restored Old Henry. During the proceedings a large number of carrier pigeons were released and carried messages of peace and goodwill to many Canadian and American cities.

Time has again rolled around to the Ukelele Banjo Club. Harold Jennings is busy on the lower third at present. A number from here attended the Lemon social at Ameliasburg Church on Wednesday evening, and report an excellent program. A novel and interesting feature of the evening's entertainment was a display of fireworks.

Mrs. Harry Roblin had the misfortune to fall and injure her hoe.d. Friends hope the injury is not serious as at first supposed.

For the next two weeks church services have been withdrawn, but the Sunday school will be held as usual.

Sidney Crossing

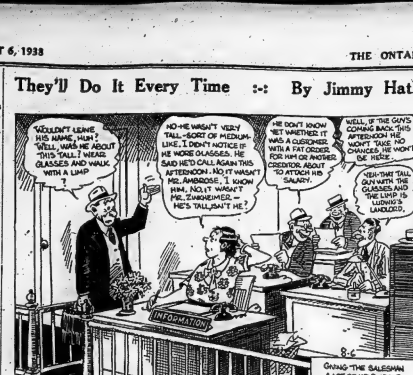
Sidney Crossing—Mr. Arnold Ketcheson and Mr. Melville Dickens spent a few days recently with the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. S. Ketcheson, Belleville.

The picnic held at the home of Mr. Alpert Page was largely attended on Wednesday afternoon. It was held on the lawn of the residence. Rev. H. B. Johnston took charge of the service and Mr. and Mrs. Percy Ketcheson over sang "Sometime and Somehow", interspersed with Whittier verses. Much sympathy is extended to the bereaved family.

Friends are sorry to lose Mrs. O. Allen and family who moved from this neighborhood to Madoc. They take up their abode in Madoc. They will be greatly missed in Sidney Church.



Mrs. G. Dickens and Miss Mary spent Thursday last with Mrs. Bruce Hogle and family.

Alden's Sunday School held their annual ice cream social at the church on Wednesday evening. All everyone did ample justice to the abundance of ice-cream, and tarts at the dining hall, they assembled in the church, where a good program was given by local and outstanding talent. One impressive feature of the program was a presentation to Mrs. Allen and family. Mrs. Urvan Percy and Mrs. Percy Ketcheson presented Marion and Marjorie each with a fountain pen and little Barbara with a skipping rope, all three bearing their initials. Mrs. Allen responded with a purse of money. After the program the church a display of fire-

"AND how is he treating you?" inquired Mr. Picobac, with a great show of anxiety, the genuineness of which was denied by the twinkle in his eye.

"Great," replied Betty, showing a set of even white teeth and a suspicion of a dimple in each cheek. "He dries the dishes at night and kisses me once a day —just before he goes to work . . . and don't be so inquisitive!"

"Well, well," said Mr. Picobac tapping the bowl of his pipe into the palm of his hand, and twinkling at his new daughter-in-law from under his brows, "I'm glad you've got him tamed. Pete's quite a boy. But you feed him well, and let him put his feet up at night and smoke Picobac Burley, and he'll be all right.—You know, Betty, my dear, Picobac's a mild . . . cool . . . sweet smoke. ### AIKENS ICE CREAM SOCIAL

A large crowd attended the Ice Cream Social held at Aikens church on Wednesday evening under the auspices of Aikens Sunday School.

Supper was served in the dining hall where an abundance of ice cream was consumed along with cake, tarts, nut bread, and other good things.

The superintendent of the Sunday school acted as chairman for the splendid programme presented. Orchestral music was supplied by young people from the Second of Thurlow and was very much appreciated.

Following is the programme, Opening hymn; Solo, Mrs. Leon MacMullen; Music on the Saw, by Mr. Bruce Sills of Belleville, with piano accompaniment by Miss Ray Groves, Aikens; Solo, Mrs. Parry Hamilton; Reading, Miss Latta; Accordion music by Mr. Harvey, of Belleville; Solo, Miss Margaret Johnson, Stone Church; Piano duet by the Misses Kay and Ada Groves; Violin solo by Mr. Sills; Reading, Miss Carrie; Piano solo; Music by Mr. Harvey; Vocal duet, the Misses Evelyn and Dorothy Ray.

At this time a presentation was made to Mrs. Thos. Allan and her daughters, who are leaving to make their home in Madoc. The girls were called to the front and Mrs. Urvan Parry and Mrs. Arthur Saylor, on behalf of the congregation, presented Marion and Marjorie with Waterman initialled pens, and little Miss Barbara with a signet ring. Mrs. Allan was presented with a purse of money and the following address:

Dear Mrs. Allan, Marion, Marjorie and Barbara:

Your friends in this community sincerely regret that circumstances make it necessary for you to leave our neighborhood to make your home elsewhere.

We shall very much miss your help in all our church and social events. We have grown to depend very much upon the assistance of your girls, both in singing and in speaking, and your place will not easily be filled. You have also helped in every way possible, and we have particularly appreciated your encouragement of the children, as well as your assistance in the work of the W. A. and W. M. S. Societies.

We feel that this community means much to you, since you have here known a great deal of both joy and sorrow. Your friendships have shared these with you and now that you are leaving we have wished to give you some memento of the friends in Aikens Church and school community; so neighbors, friends and school mates have contributed to the gifts with which we are presented to you by night.

We sincerely hope you will find happiness and contentment in your new home. To you three girls we give every good wish for success and full happy lives. You have made a fine start, may it keep on so you. You have a loving, thoughtful mother, and we remember that you the fine sterling character of the gentleman who was your father. We are sure that you will

Theatres

AT THE BELLE

"Blockade"

Madeleine Carroll, Henry Fonda in star romantic drama!

The most dramatic situation of the present day—the Spanish Civil War—forms the background of the tempestuous love story which is told in "Blockade". Walter Wagner's thrilling romantic drama which stars Madeleine Carroll and Henry Fonda the current feature at the Belle theatre.

This is the romance of a man and a girl drawn into the conflict almost against their will—lovers who were at the same time bitter enemies.

The story opens with the arrival of Norma Basil (Madeline Carroll) in peaceful Spain, where she has come to join her father. She meets Marco (Henry Fonda), a peasant home-living young farmer, and the pair fall in love.

Norma discovers that her father and his life-long associate, André, have been engaged in fomenting war, hoping to profit from future contracts as arms dealers. Realizing the sound of the first guns of the civil war rumbles over the countryside.

Marco joins the army and, having killed a spy, learns that the man was Norma's father. He is obliged to arrest her as an accomplice.

Thrilling Climax

Norma is immediately released by André and the treacherous General Vallejo, engaged in betraying their countries to the enemies, but is forced to become their side in spy work.

Commissioned to deliver a message to confederates at Castelmaar assigned to bring about the destruction of a food ship attempting to run the blockade and bring aid to the stricken town, she again encounters Marco, now fully aware of her activities.

But after witnessing the sufferings of the starving townspeople Norma suffers a tardy revulsion of feeling and determines to do right the wrong she has done.

In a thrilling and highly dramatic situation, she and Marco combine forces and soon find themselves apprehended by Nationalist spies bent on taking the lives of Marco and Norma at a risk of causing action.

"Blockade" though it employs the war only as a background and farces neither side in the conflict, establishes a love story against a remarkably accurate picture of Spanish civil strife. Produced on a lavish scale, its many elaborate settings are outstanding examples of Hollywood's genius for achieving realism in locale and atmosphere.

This unusual picture was directed by William Dieterle. Volume record "Life of Emile Zola" was adjudged by vote of the Motion Picture Academy of Arts and Sciences as greatest picture of 1937. In addition to Leo Carrillo, Gale Sondergaard, Vladimir Sokoloff, Robert Warwick, Katherine DeMille and William Davidson.

The Belle program is rounded out with some excellent short subjects including a Donald Duck Cartoon—"Don Donald" and the Belle World Wide News Events.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Women of Glamour"

"A woman is luckier than she imagines when Dan Cupid shoots an arrow into her heart," says Robert Kalmon, head fashion designer for Columbia Studios. "For in an effort to please her perfect man she studies herself more critically than ever before." This strange alchemy that love inspires has been dramatized in "Columbia's "Women of Glamour" which opens Monday at the McCarthy theatre, in which Virginia Bruce and Melvyn Douglas are featured romantic roles.

"As the picture opens, Miss Bruce is the daring sophisticate of the stage who dresses with flash and line to attract any audience. But when she meets the man, she quickly discards the gaudy flippancy that has apparently made her conspicuous, and she no longer seeks the interest of many men that she may claim one to have and to hold.

"Her thousand suits are scorned for one soft roll, her mask of makeup is removed to reveal the lovable human face that is really is, her blood red nail polish fades into light tans.

"The same changes occur in Miss Bruce's wardrobe as she portrays the role of the actress who falls in love. The cold, hard personality of the sophisticate is definitely portrayed in an evening gown of ice blue shimmering satin with moulded lines, revealing but not vulgar, and a jacket with snow-flake design of sequins.

"When she falls in love, she casts aside this gown in favor of diaphanous chiffon that gently conceals the figure in its soft draperies.

"Her daytime clothes assume a mannish, tailored air and have a tone of smart severity for the woman in love that gives the feeling that she finds do not belong on the street, but are a distinct part of the charm of her home life.

"The metamorphosis that is wrought by love influences every phase of a woman's life. Love offers a means for greater self-expression."

Featured in support of Miss Bruce and Melvyn Douglas in "Women of Glamour" are Reginald Denny, Leona Maricle, Thurston Hall, Fert Kilday and Ann Sothern.

Coming to the above a splendid supporting program of novelties are presented at each performance. Harry Langdon in a comedy entitled "Hollywood Handy-up", a Floyd Gibbons true adventure story and a Pete Smith entertainment entitled "The Candid Kid" and last but not least an all technicolor musical cartoon that is rated as one of the best yet produced and that will be thoroughly enjoyed by all audiences entitled "Isle of Fire".

"The Hurricane"

"The Hurricane", Samuel Goldwyns thrilling smash hit of the South Seas, which comes next to the Charles Nordhoff and James Norman Hall authors of "Mutiny On the Bounty" featuring Dorothy Lamour, Jon Hall, Mary Astor, C. Aubrey Smith, Raymond Massey and a host of splendid supporting characters comes with the presents at the McCarthy Theatre. This not mis this outstanding screen spectacle, it is the most magnificent ever produced and a vivid picture that you will never forget.

Reward Child If Privilege Is Lost

Compensation is Wise If Fault Isn't His, Lisa Tells Parents

(By LISA GRENELLE)

Bill was told one day that he couldn't play baseball in the field behind the house as he usually did because a neighbor's child had contracted a disease.

"Gee, Ma!" Bill moaned bitterly. It seemed to him that his Mother was entirely unreasonable—forbidding baseball for an old disease! What was a disease, anyway? Just some crazy grown-up idea, probably.

Mother waited until Bill was through grumbling, then said quietly, "Uncle Fred isn't working today. I wonder if you'd be flatting with him."

"Me!" Bill grinned at her. "Gee! would he take me?"

Feelings Change

"If you're ready soon he comes by, in about 15 minutes."

Bill's feeling for his parent had undergone a whole change. He hugged his mother, called her an angel, and scampered off to brush and tackle. If there was anything better than baseball, it was fishing with Uncle Fred.

All the Harris children discovered, in time, that if neither told them they couldn't do something they very much wanted to do, and if it was not their fault, she always made it up to them somehow. That is, she made it up to them unless they deserted it when privileges were withdrawn. They knew that unless they'd stuck by it on themselves—in which case good sportsmanship forbade—she—Mother—would have some compensation up her sleeve.

Get Puppy Instead

For instance: Alice had been looking forward to Miss Smith's party. At the last minute Father called up and said he needed the car for business purposes. Therefore, Alice couldn't go! It was too far, Alice cried; she said she hated Father; he was cruel and selfish; she'd never forgive him. She meant it, too—for the time.

Then Mother led her upstairs and opened the door to a wonderful new world. There was the Scotty puppy Alice had been wanting for years. What was a party compared to that? Alice forgot her resentment so completely that she would hardly wait for Father to get in the front door that evening to show him her pet.

A child will accept just punishment, even the withdrawal of privileges, when it is punishment for some fault of his own. But when it is privilege beca se of something beyond his control seems to him unreasonable to withdraw it. Therefore he should be compensated for it.

PROTECT EYES IN SUMMER

PEARLED BROWS

Never strains or neglects her eyes.

(By HELEN FOLLETT)

Look after your eyes; they're prettier to look into. We tone and tweeze eyebrows. Lubricate eyelashes, watch out for crinkles round the eyes, but to the "soul windows" we give scarcely a thought. They're poor little ex-pharis. Hair, complexion and fingernails are considered and petted but eyes are supposed to get along as best they can.

Protect them from strong sunlight. Wear dark glasses on the beach, also when motoring along dazzling white roads. Don't read or sew when the eyes are tired. Rest them by looking out of the window, changing the range of vision.

Night and morning bathe them with warm water, then with cold. Never dig them with your knuckles; that's bad. When using the crayon on the eyelashes, be careful not to let the dust get into the eyes. Don't remove cinders by gouging with a handkerchief. Wash eyes with a boric acid solution instead.

A new shade of fingernail polish is the deep pink of enchanted pearl. It is quite fetching with quaint pastel shades that are so popular.

Bathing beauties who collect upon the beach can use the same shade on the toenails. Hand and foot should match.

During the good old summer time elbows get to looking gray and feeling rough. Massage your arm hinges! Probably not. The skin is coarse there, is always in need of lubrication.

Rub the elbows with a cut lemon to give them a bleaching treatment. When the lemon juice has dried up use olive oil in the place of friction with coconut oil. Don't spare your efforts; the more friction the better. Finish with a light slapping with borated talcum.

For Sunday, August 8

SUNDAY'S HOROSCOPE holds testimony of a rather doubtful day, but one that will have its pleasures in which there may be much interest.

Those whose birthday it is may have a fairly prosperous year, with no unusual ups and downs. They may be behind-the-scenes matters of a helpful nature, but not of glaring publicity.

Children born on this day may be fairly efficient and ambitious, possibly in singular lines. It may be able to write mystery stories.

Pansies for Thoughts

By MARY C. POWER

John Linden signed the little green slip with a flourishing hand. Then, chucking, he held the bit of paper aloft and waved it gently to and fro, a source of satisfaction on his whimsical face. When John Linden chuckled you could be sure that there was something in the wind, for he was not given to promiscuous chuckling.

There was no question but that John Linden was a very successful business man. Financially he was rated high among the big fellows in "bankers' row."

John looked annoyed as Miss Ginn, his secretary, entered and took her accustomed place at her desk.

"Kindly see that this check is mailed by noon to Mrs. John Linden," he said curtly. "South Park avenue, Larchmont, I believe. And by the way, Miss Ginn," severely, "you haven't been very punctual at the office lately."

Miss Ginn flushed and started to speak but thought better of it. Picking up the check, she took it, along with notebook and pencil, from her employer's desk, where she hastily flashed an envelope from a huge pile and jammed it into her typewriter.

Mrs. John Linden . . . Well, what of it? It wasn't her affair. But she had thought . . . He had been so attentive. She looked into her eyes. And John Linden, coming suddenly in from his private quarters just then, saw a tear splash upon the keyboard of the typewriter.

Now, Miss Ginn was a nice little thing, and quite presentable. Maybe he had been too harsh.

"I—er—" floundering helplessly, "where are you going tomorrow?" he asked, with a boyishly coldly, mistress of herself as once

"Home!" with emphasis.

"Then you're not going," sinuously. "To spend the day with mother. Nice little girl," he beamed. Then he noticed a large tissue-wrapped package on a chair. "Ah, flowers," benignly. "Pinks?"

She shook her head.

"Not Roses? Or orchards?" benignly.

She held his eyes a moment, bravely. "It's a pinny-pansy show, and I'm going to take my car."

He laughed at that, quaintly reminiscent of kids days.

"Well, pins are out of date. But, bright, pansies rustle up a few marbles, aggies perhaps." Prisking in his trousers pocket he gleefully brought forth two gayly colored glass marbles. "Found 'em this blessed morning. Now, if that isn't luck!" gloatingly.

She accepted the parcel, exposing to view half a hundred amazing flower faces that nodded to him in the most friendly way. Then she put the basket on the sill of an open window nearby.

"Pansies are for thoughts," said John Linden, quoting. "I'll be busy bringing them home to your mother, er I see."

He seemed surprised. "My mother died when I was born. They're for somebody else's mother. For a dear little old lady whom I've adopted. A lovely lady who is a kin-hungry as I've been at times. I've been thinking of her a lot. She has a son," eyeing him steadily, "but he's busy and can't be here. He never goes to see her out there in the suburbs, though he promised faithfully he would. Once she called upon him at his office on business and was ordered, I'm afraid, out—dreadfully."

The word was very expressive.

"She keeps his baby picture in a little gaudy-enameled frame on her bureau. It means a lot to her, and pansies are her favorite flower. She fared him squarely. "That is why I'm taking them myself, Miss Lindan. She was drooping—they do when they're old—and they have no water."

His face suddenly whitened. "What is he—ailing?" he asked tensely.

"Why, no. Just—just—he didn't know myself until last week when she was taken ill. These big cities," he added, with a shrug of revulge aloft, "they pay her bills, of course, but otherwise they don't mean a thing to her. She is heartshungry for a sight of her grown-up baby."

John Linden tore the enveloping tissue and thrust it into the waste basket.

"Get your wraps, and we'll take the pansies to her—together."

Miss Ginn jumped up, her face radiant. "I knew I could. I—I'm glad this very morning. That you weren't as selfish as you pretended." Then if you knew the ache in her dear mother's heart—" she hesitated embarrassed.

A bee buzzed in through the window and hovered over the pansies. "Look," she said, suddenly, to hide her confusion, "a bee. Bringing his honey song to our own little domestic flowers. Now watch the bold pilferer dip into their sweetness."

His whimsical eyes followed hers to the humming creature busy at the rustling breeze. "They are as sweet as any gone in the field of old romance," he said tenderly.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

(Copyright, 1937, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

You and Your Vacation

Are You Travelling by Train?

In the dining car: On most trains the meal is announced by the porter as he goes through the train. Most fastidious women wear their hats to the dining car, even on a long journey. And they are careful their gloves, or provide themselves with fabric gloves to wear comfortably in their places in the Pullman as well as to and from the dining car.

In a dining car (which is open to all passengers) it is the train waiter gives us a pad on which we write our order. Otherwise what we do in a dining car is what we do in a restaurant. The dining slowly and meets us at the door. If it is apparent that we may have our preference as to seat, we tell him our preference as to the side of the car on which we wish to sit, and so forth. If possible, the "first come" are the ones who are given the seats facing forward. If there is a long wait, we may be the "last" to our turn. When we leave we nod a "thank you" to the waiter, to the waiter, and to the dining steward, as we pass him on our way out of the car.

We should be polite to those at table with us, but never should we regard this as an opportunity to develop an acquaintanceship. The other person may be an experienced traveler, and if well-bred will not welcome our conversational efforts or our lack of poise. Under no circumstances should a woman allow a stranger to pay for her meal.

Always Welcome

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am in a crowded state and I would be most grateful if you will help me out.

I—My cousin is engaged to a charming girl, and lately her parents have invited me to dinner. They told me that I am welcome to come to their home at any time. What do they mean by that? How could I go there without an invitation each time? Those people are of a "higher class" than I am, and I want to do what is appropriate. I am a young woman to contend with, I'm sure I returned his love.

Mary

I—You have been given a delightful opportunity by these people to feel yourself at home in the type of girl that you show yourself to be in your splendid letter to me. Don't allow that idea of "higher class" to enter your consciousness, for that we do in a dining car is what we do in a restaurant. The dining slowly and meets us at the door. ## Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

(Copyright, 1937, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

Parent Object to Her Going Steady

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I just passed my third year in high school with all good marks. I have been going with a boy for a wild type, but do enjoy a little fun. My parents object to my going out with the boy. I live in city of 5,000. I've been making dates with one of the best fellows in town. He is decent and respectable. If I see him more than one night a week, I have to sneak.

It seems to me their objections are without reason. I have always finished for this term. Why shouldn't I be allowed to see a little more? I don't want to see the same boy. In fact, I don't want to go "steady" company with any of them.

Senior

As long as you are living in the home of your parents, economically dependent upon them, it seems to me that you'll have to conform to their ideas. If you go out with different boys, they may not object, but they may not comprehend. Go out with A one week, and with B the next, and your next date will be with a party. Change about this way, and occasionally have for home in your own house. If your parents' main objection is based on "steady" company, it seems natural that you

A Child to be Considered

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I was very young when I married ten years ago, and am now 28, and have a little girl of eight. Many times in the past three years I have thought of leaving my husband, but on account of our little girl, have not attempted to do so. I simply have stopped loving my husband.

He is terribly jealous, and for that reason won't take me to dances, or any place where I can meet people. He insists he still loves me, but I can't believe it as he treats me as he does. Can I keep on like this, or would you advise me to make a break for happiness?

Disillusioned

May I ask you frankly whether or not you give this jealous husband of yours any real reason for jealousy? That may be the reason he doesn't take you places. Are you a flirt? If you are not, and I don't think it, I'm sure you can make something of your married life.

I'm sorry I can't do better I've had from married women close to me, and from single girls. The romance that appealed to you at seventeen or eighteen has flattened out a great deal, and you make a real fight, not so much for your own happiness but because your little girl will be much happier in a home with both her parents.

Sister's Untruths Responsible for Trouble

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I had been going with a young man for about four months when he introduced me to his sister. This young man is highly intelligent and several years older than I am. He confessed his love for me, and I'm sure I returned his love.

Then a sudden ill-will sister grew very jealous of her brother's attention to me, and made trouble between us by telling him untruths about me. For a while he didn't believe her, but she soon built up a story that stopped coming over, and now we seem quite cool and seems to have forgotten me. And when the sister sees me, she passes by without speaking.

Unhappy

How well do you think a young man would stand for what can be whistled off and on by his sister? I get so many letters from the sister as the young-tattling lie which wreck friendships. And I always feel, when I get such letters, that the defamed boy or girl has made a friendship worth while if he or she happens to be serious. The very foundations of love are loyalty and trust, which these lies are gifted with over-time men are incapable of suspecting.

How About Low Blood Pressure?

Folk Want to Know So Dr. Clendening Explains

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

EVERY TIME I write about high blood pressure I get a sheaf of letters from people with low blood pressure.

"When you are talking about blood pressure, why do you never say anything about low blood pressure? Why always talk about high blood pressure?

Well, of course, the answer is that low blood pressure is not a disease, certainly not a disadvantage. When I am asked "What should I do about my low blood pressure?" I have been in the habit of answering, Get down on your knees and thank God for it."

At I said this in a group of this men, one of them a doctor and he said he wasn't sure that I was right about it. People with low blood pressure had symptoms and disagreeable sensations. One of the thin men said that when he rescued the age when his blood pressure went up, his health improved.

I was inclined to believe that this was merely a superstition or prejudice of his, but the doctor said "No". "I am sure I have felt much better since my blood pressure went up, which it did when I was about 50 years old. I was miserable before that—a chronic invalid, but now I feel fine."

Good Observer

The doctor is a good observer and not emotional, so what he said may be true. At any rate, it is a cheerful side to high blood pressure.

But I believe it is not only the rise in his blood pressure which makes the constitutionally thin person happier after 50. Low blood pressure does go with a kind of type of body—the longitudinal type, with long neck, long chest, and long and unusually sagging abdomen. Such persons often are quite miserable in youth—easily fatiguer, dyspeptic and neurasthenic. The dyspepsia and constipation come from their drooping abdominal organs—the dropped, flabby stomach hanging like large intestine. When they have survived to 50 their intestines shorten up, the tone of the abdominal walls is increased, they put on a little fat and their digestion is improved. This makes them feel better, as well as the rise in blood pressure, although that undoubtedly is a factor.

So I suppose my prescription for the low blood pressurists will have to be changed to "Wait until you're 50 years old." It seems a cruel way to treat a person, but this is a harsh world.

PARDON if we inject an autumn note right into the midst of summer gaiety, vacations, outings, etc.

But in just a few weeks the great back-to-school movement will begin. Shops are showing college girl clothes in their junior departments, so better pause a moment and give a look.

Three wool dresses are shown here that are just right for the freshman who must be correct in everything because she must make the right impression.

At left a soft wool 1938 two-piece with contrasting blouse and pleated skirt. The blouse is developed down the front with buttons. It is stone blue in color and the skirt is wine.

Plaids Right for College

The girl in the center is wearing a buttoned-down-the-front wool in a new soft shade called "thunder-of-her-eyes." It has little flapped breast pockets and a brown silk tie at the neck.

Plaids are always right, somehow, for the schoolgirl. The plaid dress, right, is in plaid rabbit's hair and has a pleated skirt and a white pique baby collar.

Here are the things to take to school in your freshman year: One tweed suit; one matching sweater, skirt and jacket; one extra sweater; one afternoon crepe; one plaid jacket; one reversible coat, and one soft wool.

Another suggestion for the college girl is the plaid wool pleated skirt which is topped by a waist-length jacket in black velveteen. One such model fitted the jacket and made it double-breasted by the use of big pearl buttons. It had short sleeves and was very smart.

TODAY'S GARDEN-GRAPH

Written by DEAN HALLIDAY

For Central Press Canadian

Contrary to an old belief grapevines should never be pruned in the summer time since it has been proven that pruning at such time is detrimental to the vines. Grapes fit overfed with plant food are likely to run to vine and foliage rather than fruit. This is also the reason grapes should not be grown in soil overly rich in nitrogenous matter.

If you would have de luxe grapes for table use, resort to "bagging" them as shown in the Garden-Graph. Covering each full bunch of grapes with a paper bag tied at the top, will protect the fruit from birds and insects and permit it to develop into full size without blemish.

Paper bags from the grocery store will serve for this purpose. The bags should be tied securely and the bottom corners snipped off just enough to allow any rain water that may seep into the bag to drain away.

Jealousy Aroused By New Baby

Second Child Often Brings Problems, Says Dr. Myers

By GARRY C. MYERS, PH. D.

Head Department Parent Education, Cleveland College, Western Reserve University.

AFTER THE second child arrives, there appears a series of new problems which first. These problems may grow and continue indefinitely, if no more children are added to the family. They also may, regardless. Though the first has been a model child before, he may suddenly become to be almost incorrigible. He may be stubborn, fly into rages at the slightest provocation, or grow violently destructive. He also may show old, and be particularly naughty before guests.

He may cry readily and often whine. His eating problems may grow worse, wetting may increase, and he may stutter and bite his nails, or do these things worse. In all sorts of ways he may regress in physical and emotional poise, indicating increased "nervousness".

Whereas he once was sunny, he now is morose and glum. He sings and plays less, laughs and smiles less, and probably is less happy most of the time. He may, indeed, be a most unhappy child and his parents may be puzzled at the "awful youngster" on their hands. Even though he is four or five, he may act at times as one or two, begging to be put to bed "like baby".

Despite his occasional tenderness toward the baby, sometimes feigned for approval, he may do serious physical injury to the baby if left alone with him, teasing and bullying him by and by.

Baby Is Cause

The baby brother may have been the major cause of all the change in this older child's behavior. Remove the cause? Hardly. The chief task is to change the parents and the whole environment or respecting these two children. The first step is for the parents to discern the problem. They almost surely see, however, the annoying behavior of the older child and fail to recognize his suffering. Even when an alert parent notes the situation with them they are inclined to admit a possibility of jealousy. Their pride and honor are at stake; and the more highly educated these parents are, the more defensive they may be and closed to reason in the matter. Such is jealousy is to admit partiality, they believe. (Not necessarily so.) Parents with high intellectual training have grown angry at me when I attempted to lead them to see jealousy as a cause of bad behavior in a clearly jealous case. They proceeded to tell me that the older child "loves the baby," and how careful they have been "to avoid jealousy". "I know it can't be jealousy," is a typical reply. At that point I usually resign in up and say, "Well, it is your child."

Suppose it is your child and you suspect jealousy. Then in his presence avoid unnecessary admiration of the baby. Persuade your friends accordingly. Inevitably the baby will command considerable of the mother's attention. Dad should play more with the older child and rest much to him and listen a big yarns of fancy and exploits. Mother, too. Help this older child to win more approval deserved and if only more achievements. Find ways of reducing disapprovals and punishments. The more he is punished, the more jealous he will grow, only to be punished more. Be sure the baby can toddle, for he cannot walk to the older's possessions without permission of the owner.

Singer Writes Autobiography

Miss Geraldine Farrar, once one of the queens of the Metropolitan Opera Co., is now retired, is writing the story of h life, according to the publishers.

"Such Sweet Compulsion" will be the name of Miss Farrar's autobiography. It is taken from Milton's line, "Such sweet compulsion doth in music lie."

When she was three years old Miss Farrar began her musical career by singing in a Unitarian church in her home town, Melrose, Mass. Her mother decided she should be a singer, and when Geraldine was 16 her mother borrowed the money to take her to Europe, family abroad, where Geraldine studied in Berlin and Paris. The $21,000 note given by Miss Farrar's mother to pay for her daughter's musical training was paid off by Geraldine when she became famous.

Miss Farrar received $1 a night from the operatic stage when she was 20, and from the concert stage when she was 50, and has kept her word.

"I am one of the people who makes a farewell and stays farewelled," she said.

For some time she has been making song arrangements of the works of Chopin, Schumann and other composers, and has written the lyrics many of which have been published.

Poems That Live

THE INDIAN SERENADE

I arise from dreams of thee
In the first sweet sleep of night,
When the winds are breathing low,
And the stars are shining bright:
I arise from dreams of thee,
And a spirit in my feet
Hath led me—who knows how?
To thy chamber window, Sweet!

On the dark, the silent stream—
The wandering airs they faint
The Champak odors fail
Like sweet thoughts in a dream;
The nightingale's complaint,
It dies upon her heart:
As I must on thine,
Oh, beloved as thou art!

Oh lift me from the grass!
I die! I faint! I fall!
Let thy love in kisses rain
On my lips and eyelids pale,
My cheek is cold and white, alas!
My heart beats loud and fast;
Oh! press it to thine own again,
Where it will break at last.

Skin Must Be Protected From Old Sol or Severe Burns Result

Ruby Keeler

. . . gives her rules for sun-tanning

By JULIET SHELBY

Central Press Writer on Beauty

Don't tan in lines. For sun bathing avoid suits with high halters, odd strap effects, or you will look very strange in an evening gown.

When oiling your body don't forget to put some around your fingernails and around your toenails.

Protect your eyes. Wear dark glasses or eye pads when you are lying directly in the sun. Use eye cream or wrinkle cream on the skin around your eyes, and bathe your eyes every morning and several times during the day with a soothing eye lotion.

Don't forget to change your makeup — powder, rouge, lipstick, mascara, eye shadow — to keep pace with your changing complexion color.

Body Needs Help

Take a tip from the Roman athletes and anoint your body with a protective oil, cream or lotion.

Protect your hair or it will become brittle and dry. Try rubbing on a peasant bonnet to match the dirndl which goes with your swim suit. They're both smart and effective.

When you have just started exposing your skin to the sun, you should begin with three minutes a day in the sun, and increase to a maximum of one hour.

Miss Lee Ponders On Marriage

Is There Such Thing as a Perfect Match? She Wonders

By VIRGINIA LEE

THERE ARE times when I'm convinced that marriage is all wrong. It seems to me I know of practically no couples who are really happy and perfectly mated.

There is the man and wife who lived together for many years and raised a family of children. They seemed ideally suited, mentally equal, congenial tastes, similar aims and ideals. But were they really happy? After the wife's death the husband wept and told a relative, "sometimes I am sure J. thought I was the worst husband in the world," and when I was with them some time before her death I wondered, too.

A physician says ignorance of the laws of physiology is the cause of much marital discontent and unhappiness.

How Each Influences Each

Whatever it is, it often strikes me as being a fearsome thing—the influence of one person on another when the two live as close to each other as married people do. How many wives have been made miserable nervous wrecks by tyrannical husbands? How many husbands have been negated and their careers spoiled by selfish, scolding wives?

A cartoon I saw the other day was so clever that I laughed involuntarily, and yet it gave me the heartache too—it was too, too true to life. It showed a downcast husband sitting at the wheel of his car, while a policeman was getting a ticket ready to hand him. The wife was evidently giving hubby the proverbial "piece of her mind", making even the officer of the law sorry, for he was saying, placating-ly: "Aw, please, lady, it wasn't altogether his fault."

There is the other side of the picture, thank goodness! There are the middle-aged and elderly couples I've often seen holding each other's hands. Sweethearts to the end. That's cheering.

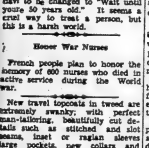
Spread over the areas troubled with superfluous hair and allow paste to dry, then remove with lukewarm water and a soft cloth. You can put a little cold cream on, or some other skin softener if this bleach makes your skin dry. Do not use it if you have a very sensitive skin, or at least put it on carefully a little at a time. It may smart but that is all. It is not a mascara. Repeat as often as needed to not make the hair grow. Quite the contrary.

New Head of Women Lawyers Says World Needs Feminine Aid

By LILIAN CAMPBELL



MISS LAURA M. BERRIEN of Washington, D.C., recently elected president of the National Association of Women Lawyers, believes "women must continue taking a more and more important part in the affairs of the world," she says. "It's an uphill business," she admits, "but there is room in the climb-ing."

Miss Berrien is used to climbing and arriving, it might be added. She was born in Waynesboro, Ga., was an orphan from the time she was a small girl, and had to work to support herself in school.

She studied law at night and between times while employed in the statistical department of the government as Washington. But she was graduated at the top of her class at Washington College of Law.

At that time it was against the laws of her native state for a woman to practice law there. That was all wrong, according to Miss Berrien's ideas, and she began lobbying for an amendment to correct it. She did not stop until the amendment was passed, and she still has the pen with which the then governor, Nathaniel Harris, signed it, although she never went back to Georg a to practice law.

Miss Berrien's father was a Waynesboro lawyer and her great uncle, John Berrien, was attorney general of the United States when Andrew Jackson was president, so she has inherited her love of the law. She is an expert on tax matters.

UNUSUAL CROQUETS

By MRS. MARY MORTON

Menu Hint

Cottage Cheese Croquettes
String Beans Crisp Green Salad
Tomatoes
Sour Cream Cake Coffee

Did you ever make croquettes of cottage cheese and mashed potatoes? Well, try it. The other day I made a very good (if I do say so) cake with a recipe like the following, so if your cream has soured, it makes sweet cream taste like it's up. Your family will appreciate it, unless, of course, they belong in that category of folk who "never eat dessert" of which there seems to be an ever-increasing number.

Today's Recipes

COTTAGE CHEESE CROQUETTES — Two cups cottage cheese (drained), two cups mashed potatoes, two eggs, salt and pepper to taste, fat for deep frying, one cup fine bread crumbs, one egg well beaten. Combine cottage cheese, mashed potatoes, eggs and season'ngs. Form into carrot shaped croquettes, roll in dry crumbs, then in beaten egg and again in bread crumbs. Fry until golden brown in deep fat (375 degrees F.). Garnish the croquettes with parsley tops. Serves six.

SOUR CREAM CAKE—Let one-third cup butter stand at room temperature until fairly soft, then cream, adding one cup of sugar a little at a time, and creaming the two well. Separate yolks and whites of two eggs, and beat the whites stiff; now beat the yolks with the same beater; add yolks to butter and sugar, add two teaspoons lemon extract and a pinch of salt, then sift two cups flour with two teaspoons baking powder and half a teaspoon of baking soda. Add part of one-half cup cream to first mixture, beat in then part of flour, alternating until all are used. Lastly fold in the beaten whites and bake in layer tins. For the frosting, melt two squares of bitter chocolate or two tablespoons cocoa, with one tablespoon butter, add one cup confectioner's sugar and enough cream or milk to make of spreading consistency, flavor with a little vanilla and add a pinch of salt. Spread between and on top of the layers.

Belmonts Eliminated and Corbys Lose; Yanks Gain on Cleveland

Cementmen Cinch Play - off Berth; Nat'l Grocers Rally To Score Ninth Inning Win

Pt. Anne 5, Belmonts 4; Gaulin Saves Pastime For Homesters

ALL EVEN

Nat'l. Grocers Pull up Even With Corbys; Winning 5-4

Making it three straight over the Belmont Juniors, Frank Sedore's Point Anne "Cementmen" eliminated the local runners from the current Belleville and District Softball League shipboard as the "Cementmen" defeated the Belmonts 5 to 4 at Point Anne last evening. While this was in progress Hal Kemp's National Grocer nine sprang a surprise with a last inning rally as Coleman Flale and evened their series with Corbys 5-4 by winning last night by a 5 to 4 score, thus knotting the other "off" of the league pennant with each team having a win. Point Anne will await the ultimate winner of the local series, which continues tonight with Corbys A.C. versus National Grocers.

Errors Hurt

An error of omission and another of commission in the ninth inning gave the National Grocers the tying and winning run, after Chuck Barnett's Corbys A.C. had scored an early-game lead and seemed assured winners. Leading prior to three players in the last half of the ninth, Tuttle was safe on an error, but pinch-hitting for Hall he muffed an attempted sacrifice. Tuttle being safe, Vasil was safe at first. Hunter whiffed for a second out, but Chuck Bartrige kept the National rally in the fight with a single, be and Vasil advancing another base on a passed ball. Hean hit to Reid, at third, who elected to throw the lined out out but the throw was bad and Vasil scored the tying run. Bartrige followed his base nine over the plate as McGuire's throw was wide and the game was won and lost. Reid's hit for the circuit twice and Reid on one occasion.

Combs Curtis hurled seven hit ball for the Corbys nine, while the victorious Hunter was issued nine safeties. Henn's triple in the eighth gave National Grocers two runs and put them within striking distance of the Corbys. Sinfield got three of the seven hits garnered, while McGuire had a trio of hits for the losers. Elder and Chuck Bartrige getting a brace of hits each.

Cementmen Are In

"Bud" Gaulin's fine running catch of Ronsky's foul fly for the last out, saved the Point Anne "Cementmen" from the same fate that befell the Corbys A.C., as the Belmont juniors had the tying and winning runs on the base paths in the ninth when Gaulin made his sensational last out.

Although out-hit at Point Anne, Frank Sedore's home nine outbunched their hits to score two runs in the second and third in the fourth. After the fourth Carson only allowed the homesters two hits, although Point Anne collected ten bingles in all. Gaulin's double being the only one hit by either of the game. "Red" Townsend's Belmont kids pushed Stan Lifford's Point Anne moundsman, for a total of eleven safeties, but they could not pound the moment hit to the ninth when victory was within their grasp. Lifford whiffed nine to Carson's three and was given sterling support in the field.

Moon, Amo, O'Neill and Rowbotham each had a brace of hits for the losers, while Gaulin, Loft and Luffman collected a brace of singles each for the winners. Point Anne now await the winner of the Corby-Sinfield-Grocer series when they meet in the City League finals next week.

By EDDIE BRIETZ

New York, Aug. 6 (AP)—If you want to climb aboard Armstrong at 13 or 12 to 5, you'd better hurry the odds are going to shorten. . . . Fame Dept.: Eight-year-old visitor Jimmy Demaret never heard of Babe Ruth and doesn't know who Joe Louis is, but the boy can tell you about Dizzy Dean from A to Z and back. . . . Armstrong's welterweight title will not be in jeopardy at stake next Wednesday night, but if Armstrong wins he'll climb on Barry MacPhail is doing things at Brooklyn whether you like him or not. . . . Latest reports that Primo Camera is coming back here at an "advisor" may be just a nice way of saying that Primo is comingback as a wrestler. . . . The southern belle whom Ben Budd is said to be out about is parked at nearby Southampton for the summer. . . . Jimmy Jimmy Kipple snaps out of his batting slump pretty quick. Now it's Hank Leiber playing right for the Giants.

Babe Ruth is the kids' No. 1 baseball man except in Woodside, L.I. . . . Out there the head man is Bobby Reis of the Boston Bees. . . . Every time the Boston come to Brooklyn Reis goes out to visit brother Vinnie in Woodside and gets the kids and plays ball with the youngsters, which is one fine way to make baseball fans of the future. . . . Reis has the right suggestion as to who Mike Jacobs can book for a September heavyweight brawl, write him. . . . Louis isn't going to fight again this year, so who's left?

ALTHO' IN CELLAR ORIOLES CASH IN

Baltimore Has Sold Four Players to Mayors This Season

For a Club that's down in last place, 72 games behind the league leading Yankees, Baltimore Orioles have been doing all right for themselves.

One of the few "independent" minor league teams in baseball, the Orioles, who have been in the International League basement practically all season, have turned to the trading marts to bring in the profits.

So far this season, the Orioles have made deals that have sent four players up to the big leagues, with another sold for delivery next season. Bill Cissell and Johnny Wittig were sold to New York Giants, Phil Weintraub to Brooklyn and Norm Richardson to Cincinnati Reds with Dick West, now with Chattanooga of the Southern Association, slated to go to the Reds at the end of the present campaign.

While their luck in the markets has been good, the luck on the baseball playing field still are going against them. They dropped a 12-inning battle to the scorching Toronto Maple Leafs, 5-4, last night to extend their losing streak to nine straight games.

Trailing 4-0 at the end of the first inning the Leafs came back to tie the score in the ninth inning on Bordagaray's double, Lopez's sacrifice and then won out in the twelfth on a circuit smash by little Frank Demaree.

The triumph enabled the Leafs to gain on the fourth place Syracuse Chiefs who split a double header with Buffalo Bisons. The Chiefs won the opener 4-0 but the Bisons came back to win the nightcap 5-2 and break their nine-game losing streak.

Rochester Red Wings boosted their second place lead over the Bisons by stopping Newark Bears 7-2 back Sturdy's homer with a mate aboard in the eighth inning broke a 6-all deadlock and handed the Bears their first defeat in nine games.

SENTIMENTAL DRAW GIVEN ROSENBLOOM

Hollywood, Calif., Aug. 6 (AP)—If that old ring master really meant it when he promised to turn his back on the long dull trial drive to the prize ring at flicker fame, then Maxie Rosenbloom has sufficient save today for a battered and bruised mid-section.

For 30,000 persons who packed Gilmore Stadium last night wildly cheered the semi-bald veteran of fifteen fights-laden years when Referee Abe Roth gave him a sentimental draw with youthful, yet clever, Bob Pastor.

Pastor punished old Maxie severely around the body. As early as the sixth round Rosenbloom's handlers were applying soothing ice to ease his body hurts, but the fickle film folk had no room in their hearts for youth last night.

They were eager to worship the art of a fellow Thespian—to cheer as Maxie stroked his open glove across Pastor's brain and to ridicule the audacious youth when he lashed out at an opponent who had faded from camera.

There were times when it seemed Maxie, who has campaigned mostly attack, yet he called on those tired legs and arms to create a strong enough ten round rally to catch the fancy of the crowd and the referee.

Yesterday's Stars

Bob Seeds, Giants—Hit a homer with one on to beat Pirates 5-3.

Joe Cronin, Red Sox—Hit homer, double and single, driving in seven runs in 9-8 win over Tigers.

Lou Warneke, Cardinals—Blanked Phillies 3-0 with six hits.

Bump Hadley and Joe Gordon, Yankees—Hadley pitched five hitter and Gordon his homer and drove in three runs in 6-1 win over Indians.

Buck McCormick, Reds — Hit double and single, drove in two runs in 4-1 victory over Dodgers.

Fred Johnson, Browns — Pitched a one-hitter, fanning seven, and drove in two runs himself in 9-2 win over Athletics.

Feller is Wild as He Walks Eleven Yankee Batters, Loses 6 to 1; Giants Trounce Pirates

Terrymen Win 5-3 Over Pittsburg to Gain on Buccaneers

SEEDS HOMERS

With One Aboard Seeds Finishes Off Game With Circuit Blow

By SID FEDER

The jury is still out in the Feller case.

For a while it looked as though a verdict had finally been reached overwhelmingly in young Bobby's favor. But recent developments indicate the jurors had come back at that time for further instructions and another quick look.

Certainly young Bobby's work in recent weeks, say since about the first of June, has been somewhat short of being all the Mathewsons and Johnsons rolled into one, so you'll have to believe by the ballyhoo boys during the freshman and early sophomore days of Cleveland's raconteur-baller.

In fact, the record of two victories, (both against the lowly Athletics), four defeats and just three complete games, (two of the three starts since June 30, haven't made him seem close to a Mathewson.

On top of that, he has the same weakness, the same tendencies to throw high and wide when he can't fall asleep with runners on the bases behind him, as he had when they brought him out of the Iowa corn-fields.

Feller Walks Eleven.

That was what was wrong with him yesterday when he dropped a second 6-1 decision to the Yankees which sent Gehrig and Company 3½ games out in front in their relentless pursuit for what certain of returning from their western trip leading the parade. Master Bobby gave up just three hits in the seven innings he worked, but, ten times Feller let runners, twice passing three in a row, and he was the victim of five stolen bases.

There you have Bobby's trouble, and there you have the hopes of the tribe in the pennant chase. For, if Bobby continues off form, the tribe, with only Johnny Allen as a dependable hope (despite Mel Harder's comeback), isn't going places. Feller has given up an average of only nine hits per game since the end of June, but his earned-run average is somewhat between five and six—more than you'll want if the load of ball games. True, he leads the league in strikeouts—but he is also far out in front in bases on balls.

Giants Advance.

While the Yanks were stretching their lead behind Bump Hadley's five hit pitching, the Giants moved up a game closer to the National league pace by knocking off the league-leading Pittsburgh Pirates 5-3 in the first meeting of their series. Bob Seeds' homer with a mate aboard in the seventh finished off the Bucs.

Paul Derringer became the National League's first 16-game winner as he turned Cincinnati Reds to a 4-1 decision over the Dodgers, boosting the Rhinelanders into a tie for third place in the loop. Lon Warneke tossed a six-hitter and the Cardinals whitewashed the Phillies 3-0.

Joe Cronin's homer with the bases loaded festured Boston Red Sox comeback to nip the Tigers 9-8. Fred Johnson, Browns, ace of 41 hurlers, St. Louis Browns to a 9-2 win over the Athletics.

The rest of the outfits in both leagues were idle.

Cash and Carry Pyle's Bunion Derby Once Almost Lured Henry Armstrong

By BILL BRAUCHER

Central Press Canadian Sports Writer

New York—For no reason at all the thought struck his department today that Joe Pyle's Bunion Derby into three parts consisting entirely of blackface performers. Headlining Jeff Ice and the cast of champions looks like a revival of Dan Donnelly's minstrels, and if Hennery Armstrong wins the lightweight championship from Lou Ambers (which is being picked to go), five titles will rest in Afro-American hands. Add Joe Louis' heavyweights and John Henry Lewis in the light heavyweights are the class champs, of course.

All three of the colored champs started their way to the top from humble beginnings, and it would be said of them they have done nothing to discredit the profession they have followed. But the fact remains that Armstrong, the little bull-dogger who came up from the Gary, Ind., streets with encouragement or help. Inasmuch as Hennery fights Aug. 19 for the lightweight title and is said by Joe Gans, some of the highlights of Armstrong's career prepared as Gans was an oyster-shucker in Baltimore before he entered the fistic field. Hennery worked on a railroad section gang before embarking on his professional career.

He Wanted to Run

Little Hennery was born in St. Louis, Dec. 1912, the 13th child, and the youngest of the family. His father died when he was 3 and Hennery worked his way through high school with odd jobs. All his ambitions was to become a doctor. Lacking money, he took a job with a section gang, and it was back-breaking toil with ties and rails and heavy hammers, but the boy developed the boy's shoulders and arm muscles until he was as strong as a young bull.

Hennery was working in a bowling alley when Promoter Joseph Pyle announced his famous bunion derby from coast to coast. The race was limited to 199 starters, and his brother he drove in a battered flivver around the country, fighting fares and there. In 1931 the kid arrived in California. He came under the management of Wm. Ross in Los Angeles, but when Eddie Mead saw him lick Baby Arizmendi, 63 he borrowed $10,000 from Al Jolson and George Reit and bought the youngster's contract from Ross.

Doesn't Train, Just Fights.

In 1937 Mead started Hennery on a whirlwind campaign. The boy fought so often he had no time to train in a gym. He kept in condition by fighting. He won 38 fights in a row, 35 of them by knockouts, 27 of the kayoes in succession, annexed two world titles.

His ring style is unorthodox, but it works. He just wades in continually throwing punches. He can hit from any position, and his best defense is a head-on charge at his opponent across the ring he throws long hooks. His short punches, delivered in close, are his best. He likes with such speed that he seldom takes a step. He goes to the body, another to the head, with what appears to be a continuous slide and stamina seems endless.

He has been nicknamed Homicide Hennery. Homicide Hennery because of his swift and deadly style. Against Ambers he will weigh in at 133, according to Mead, and at that weight he is just plain bichloride of mercury.

There has been no talk of his retirement, but it is no secret the 25-year-old champion is looking forward to the day when he can hang up the gloves on the wall of a ranch in California. He is married and has a three-year-old daughter, Lanetta.

HE COULDN'T AL WAYS DO THIS

Henry Armstrong holder of two boxing titles and out after a third, goes to work on some unfortunate who has just crossed his path and like it. It's a big change from the bill of fare he was accustomed to in his childhood and during his days of working with a section gang. The dusky powerhouse had the right idea, however, in selecting the latter way since an older brother persuaded him to enter the fight game, and on August 10 will try to make history by winning his third crown, and become the first fighter ever to hold three crowns at the same time.

ALLOW FOR GRAIN OF GRASS ON PUTTING GREENS

GOLF FACTS NOT THEORIES

By Alan Morrison

Grain of the Grass

Failure to make the proper allowance for the grain in the first green at the Rockcliffe course in Ottawa is given as the reason for Henry Picard's failure in the recent Canadian Open. After missing his try for a birdie on this hole and then taking a 6, Picard was never returned to the game he played to lead the field for the first two days.

This grain, or way the grass runs on the putting surface certainly is one of the hardest to judge and allow for against the way you are putting it will hold up the ball; if it runs with the ball will add more speed as it rolls along. And a cross grain will affect the ball on the line. This must be allowed for just as you would play more to the right or left if the ball is going to a side hill.

You can always tell which way the grain runs simply by rubbing the blade of your putter lightly over the face of the green. Where there is even the slightest grain this club-head will turn up the ends of the grass. And when you are acquainted with the surface of a green with grain you should make allowance in playing approach shots, particularly when pitching the ball to the pin for the way the grass lies will have an even greater influence on those shots than it has on your putting.

Ken J. Colling

No doubt the proudest boy in Canada right now is Robert "Bob" Wilson, 1938 Canadian "Soap Box" derby champion, and no doubt he will spend many sleepless nights, dreaming of that long-desired trip to Akron, Ohio, and a crack at the World's "Soap Box" title one week from tomorrow. In the meantime champion Bob Wilson is being feted and entertained, last evening being a guest at the Capitol theatre, where the prize winners of the Kinsmen Club-Ontario Intelligencer "Soap Box" derby were distributed.

After an absence of some weeks baseball will be included on next week's sports agenda when the final Bay of Quinte League game of the current season will see the Kingston "Loco" versus the Belleville "Orfans" at the Fair Grounds. This will be the first league contest the Limestone City nine in our fair city since Jack "Chief" Williams joined Jimmy Arniel's outfit. This game means much to both squads, a defeat for the Loco will result in elimination, while the locals must win to clinch the top rung of the league ladder.

Frank Sedore's Point Anne "Cementmen" assured themselves of a berth in the Belleville Softball finals by rubbing "Red" Townsend's Belmont juniors out in three straight in the league semi-finals, they won the third game 5 to 4 last evening. The Belmont kids threw a real scare into the ranks of the Cementmen when they scaled ninth inning rally, however, as they had the tying and winning runs on the runways when Bud Gaulin made a sensational running catch of Johnnie Ronsky's foul fly for the final put out, that spelled victory for the charges of Frank Sedore. The local juniors were in no way lagged in their series with Point Anne and the experience gained by playing versus intermediate calibre nine should prove valuable to the local kids in the O.A.B.A. playoffs, as surprise stickers have been hurled into the laps of the fans in Odessa and Point Anne. The National Grocers staged a belated ninth inning rally to score the tying and winning runs for Corby's A.C. Errors helped Mal Kemp's nine to the game, which evened the series at one-each. They continue their series at Coleman Flale tonight, when a victory will give the winner a big edge in the series.

As the guests of the Capitol theatre, the 1938 Canadian "Soap Box Derby" finalists, were presented with their well-earned gains and honors on the stage of the Capitol last night.

The newly crowned Canadian champ, Robert "Bob" Wilson was presented with the gold-plated emblematic of the Canadian championship, championship and a gold medal. Others to receive second former Kingston Barney Wright, Tony Bellinger and Ken Stapley, Mr. J. B. Boyce of the Kinsmen Club, general chairman "Buster" Labarr assisted in the presentations. It was a gala night for the kids, who are also the guest of Manager S. J. Bloch during the remainder of the week. Before presenting the trophies, Mr. Boyce lauded the work of the Kinsmen Club and their Eye Clinic. "This sponsoring of a "Soap Box Derby" is a wonderful thing for any community. It gives the individual boy an opportunity to prove his own creations at designing his own creations and developing genius," stated Mr. Bgroe as he stated he hoped the venture would be continued for years to come, as it is a great benefit to any community.

When the Hollinger Mines eliminated Porcupine Mines in the Northern League yesterday, two former Belleville ballers were performing for Hollinger, at Scarlett and Dean Ford. Scarlett, playing centre field had a hit, while Ford who is playing second this year, scored a run, had a timely hit, one put out and three assists. Reg Dorey, native of Gananoque and former Ontario junior, pitched for the winners.

The boys in baseball's 'big show' are beginning to wonder what is all about, relative to Bob Feller, Cleveland's boy wonder hurler. Feller walked eleven Yankees yesterday in seven innings and was guilty of a much worse offence, failing soundly asleep with the opposition well populated on the runways. The pace to sleep in is bed, not on the ball field. At any rate the Yankees increased their lead over the Indians by a 6 to 1 victory while Feller visits Chargea. The Giants closed the gap between themselves and the Pirates with a 5 to 3 victory also.

HODGE PODGE—Kingston sports clubs seem to have the happy faculty of getting into the win column now the Locos claim they have designs on the Ontario "crown"; Chuck Barnett and Gerald Barriage tried to "cool off" on Victoria park after last night's game, and Bert Reid says he is ain't true, Pal" Barriage pleaded.

TORONTO STOCKS CLOSE

Toronto, Aug. 6—Trading interest was at comparatively low ebb in the Toronto market for the closing session of the week and prices drifted about, showing a mixture of gains and losses at the close. Golds displayed the usual weakness while the base metals and the industrials maintained a margin on the upside. Aggregate turnover was little better than 300,000 shares.

Wabo Amulet slipped further down to 8.60 in the opening stage but came back before the close to show a net advance of about ten cents. Smelters, Nickel, Noranda, and Hudson Bay retained gains of minor fractions and the cheaper base metals were mainly steady. Eldorado firmed about 5 cents and other silvers were steady to slightly lower.

Medium-price and junior golds were mainly down a few cents here and there with no changes exceeding 10 cents. Lingman and Lake Shore posted losses of small fractions.

Despite a dearth of buying orders, industrials maintained a strong price tone and gains outnumbered losses in the steel, implement, paper and miscellaneous issues. Prairie metals posted a new high price for the year.

WALL STREET CLOSE

New York, Aug. 6 (AP)—Stocks encompassed the investment on another upward climb in today's market.

With motors, steels, rubbers, rails and a wide assortment of specialties in the lead, gains ran to around two points at the best, with new highs for the year or longer plentiful.

The pace was the fastest for a Saturday since July 2. Transfers were in the neighborhood of 2,000,000 shares.

Profit taking intervened occasionally and was a bit more insistent before the close. The result was that the gains were scaled in many cases.

Extension of Wednesday's share recovery, brokers said, was due mainly to the continuance of bright business prospects and to the belief of most observers that a major war, either in Europe or Asia, or both, or in Europe, was unlikely at this time.

Canada closed showed only negligible changes. Dome and Lake Shore were exceptionally lower while Canadian Pacific tipped forward. Canada 4s were ignored. Montreal funds remained at 99.62 1-3.

Resumption of gold hoarding abroad seemed to be the principal factor for the yellow metal being hoisted to a new peak for the rebate—the principal European currency—at ground in terms of the dollar.

New high levels were posted for such stocks as General Motors, Texas Corp., Chrysler, Greyhound Corp., U.S. Rubber, Goodyear, Goodrich, Montgomery Ward, Libbey-Owens-Ford, Dupont, Packard, Dodge and Delaware and Hudson.

2 PARALYSIS VICTIMS DIE

London, Aug. 6 (CP-Havas)—Two children died today in a hospital at Bury, Lancs., as a mild epidemic of infantile paralysis spread. Six other children were under treatment in Hove hospital. At least 36 other cases have been recorded—19 at Enfield, Essex, 8 at Braintree, Essex; 3 at Farnham, Surrey, and four in Wales.

POLICE SHOOT FUGITIVES

Detroit, Aug. 6 (AP)—Police of suburban Dearborn today killed one man and captured another whom they quoted as confessing that both were fugitives from a Florida chain gang after they escaped by slaying a guard. Two Dearborn men with whom they were riding also were held for investigation.

Board Room Gossip

As supplied to Bigger and Crawford By Financial Service

Although the market at times has been acting tired, it is interesting to report that setbacks have been short-lived. This is due to several reasons. First, the market has born an appreciable buying power a few points under prevailing quotations. Second, the public is not yet in the market in a big way and third, considerable funds are still available for the stock market as soon as the majority of traders become convinced that the current advance will last.

The reason why it is apparent that the public is not yet in the market is the fact that, despite the appreciable advance, brokers' loans have failed to rise commensurate with the market move-up. Accumulation is an excellent shape and the technical position of the market is sound. It is for this reason that reaction in the near future does not bring about much nervous liquidation and consequently, this augurs well for the future of the list.

A move-up in some of the local utility stocks is looked for in some quarters. Utility stocks as B. C. Power, A. Montreal Power, Shawinigan, Canada Northern Power, etc., all pay dividends and afford good yields. This group, it is felt, is behind the rest of the market.

GERMANY LOOKS FOR LARGE CROP

100,000 Foreign Laborers, Polish And Italian, Help Meet Unit Needs

Berlin, Aug. 6 (AP)—The Ministry of Agriculture said today reports from various parts of the country indicate Germany again will have a bumper grain crop this year.

To make up for the shortage of farm hands, 100,000 foreign laborers—Polish and Italian—have augmented mobilized Nazi units.

The heavy yield was welcomed especially as a relief to the drained foreign currency chest, which has been paying out huge amounts for grain imports. Some imports for 1938 will be necessary but a considerable reduction will be possible.

Produce Prices Remain Steady

Toronto, Aug. 6—Graded eggs showed the only change on the local produce market yesterday, easing 1c per dozen on top grades.

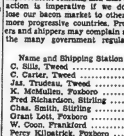
With the advent of hot weather consumption is lower on the egg market, and receipts, while not heavy, were inclined to move stubbornly. One source reported a slight improvement in retail sales brought about by heavier requirements for the week-end trade. Values were again shaded down in the graded section, but other directions maintained steady. Trade was in quiet trading. Graded shipments were clearing at 26c for grade A large, 25c for medium, 22c for B's and 21c for C grades.

The butter market jogged along at steady prices. Traders are buying more closely in view of the increased surplus. Fresh receipts, however, were not arriving in excessive volume, and no accumulation was reported. Offerings of cream were recorded in Western butter for shipments on a price basis of 24¾c. Creamery solids traded at 25½c for No. 1 grades, 23¾c for 2S grades and 22c for 2T score. Prints sold in retail channels at the previous rates of 26c to 26½c for top grades and 25½c to 25¾c for 2T score.

Cheese sales continued light at unchanged prices on the wholesale market. New, large parafined was offered at 14c to 14½c, twins at 14½c to 14¾c and triplets at 14½c to 14¾c.

Montreal Egg and Potato Prices Improve

Montreal, Aug. 6—Lower grade eggs and potato prices improved on local open produce markets today, according to the Dominion Department of Agriculture reports. Trading in cheese and butter continued light, with prices practically unchanged.



Creamery butter prints to retail dealers sold for 26c to 26½c a lb., and solids for 25½c to 25¾c. Western butter delivered here was offered at 24¾c to 25c. Quebec pasteurized No. 1 wholesale price to jobbers was 24½c to 24¾c. Receipts: Nil.

Cheese sold at 14½c to 14¾c a pound for No. 1 Ontario white, 14¼c to 14½c for Ontario colored, 13¾c to 13¾c for Quebec white and 13½c to 13¾c for Quebec colored. Receipts, 4,914 boxes, including 2,226 for export.

Graded egg shipments in carlots or less sold at 27c a dozen for A-large, 25½c to 26c for A-medium, 24c to 24½c and 23c to 23½c for C. Receipts: 783 boxes.

Opportunities in Bacon Hog Production

Previous paragraphs in this series have been designed to point out the opportunities we have in the bacon hog production and to show in what easy if we reap the fullest advantage of those opportunities. It should be clear that much room for improvement remains and that quick action is necessary if we do not lose our bacon market to other and more progressive countries. Producers are looking for the prospects of Massey-Harris Preferred . . . The annual financial statement of the Sherwin-Williams Company will show progress—control of this concern is held in Cleveland and is not for sale—recent approaches were turned down quickly.

A total of 2843 white, and 243 assorted cheese offered on the Belleville Cheese Board this morning, brought a flat price of 14 cents, all sold. Bidding started at 13 3-8 cents and progressed rapidly to the 14 cent mark.

24 Russ Planes Raid Korea?

(By J. D. White, Associated Press Foreign Staff)

Kogi, Korea, (Near the Siberian Border, by Courier to Yuki), Aug. 6 (AP)—Reliable eye-witnesses said today 24 Soviet Russian bombers raided Rashin-Seishin and bombed the Tumen-Rashin-Seishin way, 15 miles northwest of Yuki.

2 Shoot Each Other To Death At Mason, Mich

Mason Mich. Aug. 6 (AP)— A policeman and an estranged husband shot each other to death in the Ingham county section of Mason today.

The victims were Officer James Ray Hinkley 42, and Richard Sand., 43. Hinkley's wife Hinkley was escorting to her home. The wife, Mrs. Blanche Sandweg, said she had asked the officer to ride with her to her apartment because she feared Mr. Sandweg would harm her.

Sandweg stepped from between two buildings, a shotgun at his shoulder, and fired at Hinkley. Hinkley drew a pistol and fired twice at Sandweg before collapsing. Sandweg then fired twice more. Sandweg fell with bullets in each lung.

80-Cent Wheat Price Causes Reactions

Winnipeg, Aug. 7 (CP)—Feature of world grain trade this week was the Dominion government minimum wheat price announcement which pulled world wheat futures out of a month-long lethargic spell. First reaction was a selling outburst crashing Winnipeg futures to near four-year low prices, a full cent for five-year lows.

Nervous longs, interpreting the 80 cents a bushel announcement bearishly and in fear of stiff export competition from Canada, started selling the crop year, knocked futures off 3¾ cents. Chicago, free from export buying, estimated at 300,000 bushels, and other overseas support rallied to outweigh long-foot liquidation.

The week's declines at the close

Smart Police Work

Smart police work exhibited by Constable Dymond of Madoc, finally led to the arrest of the man who was learned following the announcement the Bonarlaw man had been found dead in a search party which have combed the bush and fields of Rawdon Township since last Saturday had about given up hope. Constable Dymond and Constable Grey of Marmora were active in the search.

On Sunday last a visitor from Toronto spent the day at Crowe River fishing. During the day he casually mentioned seeing what he believed to be a game warden seated in a boat, in the middle of a small swamp. Not until later this week was this news related to Constable Dymond. At once the Symonic communication was established with the Toronto man by Constable Dymond, the approximate location of the man, believed seated in a boat, given.

Realization had come to the constable that the man "seated in the boat" could easily be the missing man, trapped in the swamp. Such proved to be the case. It was later found when the search was carried on with renewed vigor by the two constables.

Was Almost 'Gone'

"When we found Mr. Jones yesterday he was just about gone. He was up almost to his chin in water, and he was clutching a section of an old log or stump to keep from sinking. Together, together. He must have been in that swamp, battling for his life since Saturday last. He was sold at the conventional price of 65c for a 2-lb. roll. Eggs brought 28c for grade A, and 24c for Grade B, with pullet's eggs selling slightly lower. A good display of chickens and some young broilers was seen on the inside market. Dressed milk-fattened chickens selling as high as $1.10 each while broilers sold from 50c to $1 per pair, according to their size and weight.

Lawyers Beautiful

To brighten the market a goodly offering of cut flowers and other floral displays added a touch of beauty to the market. All commodities of the market were offered in full maturity on the Belleville market, that is recognized as one of the finest of its kind in the province.

Fine, luscious apples made their first appearance. Harvesters selling at 3 cents and Astrachans sold at 5 a bushel. Long black berries were offered at the box, while red raspberries sold at 15c a box and red currants at 3 boxes for 25c. Blue raspberries, cherries and gooseberries saw no change in the prevailing prices of last week.

Bright, tempting tomatoes were displayed and sold by the pint measure, while potatoes sold for 20c a peck. Green corn, 15c dozen ears. Sweet, juicy beets and tender marrow at a nickel were also offered. Pumpkins, cucumbers and carrots ranged in price anywhere from 5c to 10c according to the size, while wax and green beans saw no variation in price. Beets, carrots, onions, radishes and cabbage all sold at the conventional price.

Although the weather was overcast during the early marketing hours the sun later broke through, making marketing conditions ideal.

Worms Used By Twins Catch Biggest Fish

Fishing has admittedly been poor at Moira Lake during the past week or more. Members of visitors at the summer camps of Mr. Thomas Hallam at the lake this week, including Mr. and Mrs. Hallam, Jr., and twin sons, Robert and Douglas, found it was quite the opposite to the contrary.

In spite of tempting offers of minnows, crabs, frogs, plugs and spoons, it was found that the bass have refused to bite or rise. Then it was decided to use angler with a catch large enough to bother with keeping, it was reported.

But Douglas and Robert, the twins, believe they can fish in the lake, and that the more experienced anglers were going the wrong way about it. In a communication to their grandfather, Alderman Hallam of this city, issued earlier in the week they requested a supply of worms, stating that a number of worms. "We'll catch the fish," they assured the camp-ers.

On Thursday the boys rowed quietly out in their dinghy, baited their hooks with the worms and sat back to await results. Hardly had the hook of Douglas been submerged than a whopping 5 pound bass had caught a fish. A strain on the reel informed him it was a big one.

"Now is the time to use him," appealed Douglas to his brother, Robert.

Carefully manoeuvring the boat, the fish was brought alongside and examined. It was a three and one-half pound bass, one of the largest caught in the lake recently. Again the boys rowed out and baited with worms. This time it was a two and one-half pound bass caught by Robert, and again the boat was beached to land it. A third try resulted in a fish only slightly smaller than the second.

Campers at the lake have now ordered supplies of the dependable worms.

CALLED TO TESTIFY

A few hours before he was scheduled to sail from New York for a tour of England, Germany and Russia, George Sylvester Viereck, ABOVE, well-known author and social leader, friend of Wilhelm of Germany, was served with a subpoena to appear before the House of Representatives committee investigating un-American activities. Viereck cancelled his other reservations to "put the service to my country above every other consideration."

Wants Ont. Wheat Pegged

Following announcement from Ottawa that the price of western wheat will be pegged at 80 cents per bushel, Hon. P. M. Pirie, ABOVE, minister of agriculture for Ontario, communicated with the federal government urging that a minimum price be set also for payments to Ontario producers. He pointed out that the price for Ontario wheat now ranges from 35 to 65 cents per bushel. Mr. Dewan also asserted that Ontario wheat growers were called upon to pay a considerably higher rate for transport of their grain than western growers.

SIBERIAN BORDER

Russia's Attitude.

Litvinoff: "If the Japanese stop shelling and other military operations and withdraw completely from Soviet territory, the Soviet authorities will have no reason for continuing their military activities; they will not then oppose the proposals for the conclusion of a non-aggression guarantee by Japan of the inviolability of the frontier as was established by the Hunchun Treaty (signed by Russia and China June 26, 1886, and establishing Changkufeng as a part of Siberia) and the map attached thereto is the first necessary step."

Japanese Contention.

Shigemitsu: "It is clear according to evidence in Japanese hands that Changkufeng and the other hills are possessions of Manchukuo (formerly Manchuria which Japan supports.) Therefore I can see no grounds for your proposal that Japanese forces be withdrawn from Soviet territory. As a practical procedure the first step will be taken is to stop hostile operations on both sides and open at once negotiations on the dispute."

Conversation Continued.

Litvinoff: "The border line is a thing established by an international agreement. Unless extensive changes are powers concerned and the map annexed thereto. As for a solution of the incident, I am prepared to enter discussions upon a concrete basis. I also welcome your proposal for a cessation of hostilities. Nevertheless, we cannot tolerate occupation by foreign forces of even an inch of territory which we believe belongs to Soviet Russia. If the Japanese government will promise to withdraw troops outside the line shown on our map and cause the Japanese forces to cease shelling Soviet territory, the Soviet government will be prepared to promise cessation of similar armed operations."

The Mountain View Women's Institute held their August meeting on Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Jay Sprague. About 35 members and visitors were present. The meeting opened by singing "Institute Ode" followed by the Lord's Prayer in unison. A number of letters of thanks were read for plants and flowers sent to the sick members. All bills were moved to be paid. The Junior Girls of the Institute then demonstrated "How Cottons May be Smart", showing the colors dresses and different things of cotton they had made. Miss Joan Keeble demonstrated the "Making of a bound buttonhole". The girls mannequined their cotton frocks very beautifully, giving the total cost of each one. Delicious refreshments were served by the hostess assisted by several of the girls. The National Anthem brought the meeting to a close.

Miss Alice Wilson of Toronto spent a few days last week with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Wilson.

Mr. and Mrs. Ross Snider and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Tucker of Sidney motored to Kingston on Sunday and enjoyed the boat trip through the Thousand Islands.

FASTED 55 DAYS

For 55 days—almost eight weeks—43-year-old Mrs. Mae Zimmerman, of Los Angeles, had been fasting when this picture was taken, and she gave no indication of weakness or of a desire to end her fast. She limited herself to four glasses of water daily in tih belief that the diet would cure her of arthritis and she says she will not alter her schedule until the disease is cured. She has dropped from a weight of 134 pounds to 104 pounds during the interval.

Crashing a window pane in Kent, England, a hawk flew into a house, then broke another glass on its way out.

For certain offenses motorists in Sweden are to be fined according to the income of the offender.

"WRONG-WAY" CORRIGAN GETS MIGHTY WELCOME IN N EW YORK

New York opened its arms—literally as well as figuratively—to welcome back home Douglas Corrigan, the "wrong way" flier who started for California and ended up in Dublin, and here are some views of the reception which awaited the grinning, likeable pilot. Those lads at right, hustling Corrigan along are police all right, but he's not headed for jail. He just didn't want to face the cheering thousands jamming the pier so a pair of stalwarts took him in hand. At Lower Left he is seen saying farewell to shipboard and hello America while some of the unofficial greeters who couldn't wait until their hero landed are pictured lining a ferry rail as they steam out to meet the liner.

ARABS FIRE JEWIS H HOMES IN HAIFA

Terrorism against the Jews in Palestine is particularly violent in Haifa, which is farthest in territory in which Arabs predominate. After Jews had evacuated their homes in a suburb of Haifa, the structures were set afire by the more irresponsible Arab youths, while a huge crowd stood by to watch. This is another indication of the crisis which now exists between Jew and Arab in British controlled Palestine.

It's Birling Time —So Better Sharpen Up Your Log-Rolling Technique

WILLIAM J. DUCHAINE
Central Press Canadian Sports Writer

Escanaba, Mich. —Paul Bunyan, the mythical demigod of the lumberjack, is long dead, but others will be attempting to approximate his feats in this one-time rip-roaring lumbering center, Aug. 12-14.

For that's the time for the second annual revival of the world's championship log birling tournament, which already has drawn an entry list of 40 birlers from the middle west, Pacific coast, Maine and eastern and western Canada.

Last year at Escanaba, Joe Connor, of Cloquet, Minnesota, 28-year-old University of Minnesota forestry student, won the coveted title of "King of the White Waters" from Wilbur Marx, Eau Claire, Wisconsin, who had held the crown for 10 years.

The Girl Again!

Four daughters of old-time lumberjacks also competed in a tournament of their own, and in a spectacular exhibition of the he-man sport, Laura Marchand of Cloquet won the "Queen of the White Waters" honors by ducking Marietta Phipps, 17-year-old schoolgirl of Ladysmith, Wisconsin. Both champions will be back to defend their hard-earned titles.

Birling is a sport with many breath-taking thrills for contestants and spectators alike. A log is floated in open water and the two contestants take their places — at either end. At a signal from the referee, each begins to tread the log in such a manner as to cause it to roll or spin in the water. Spiked boots give hold. Each man tries to roll the log so erratically that his opponent will be spilled into the drink.

Now fast, now slow, the log rolls. When one gets it spinning at a rate which keep the feet of both at a running pace, he will snub or cuff the unstable cylinder. This provides a chance to treed the log in the opposite direction.

In early days, birlers kept on a log for a surprisingly long period, but in the Escanaba tournament the sizes of the logs used have been greatly reduced to speed up the action.

Now You Tell One:

There is a record of birlers rolling for several hours, but the greatest marathoner of them all is Paul Bunyan, that mythical giant of the north woods. At a date which is a tifle uncertain, the mighty Paul engaged in a birling contest with Satan. They rolled for three weeks and three days before Paul was victorious. It is said that when, finally, the devil was spilled into the water, a cloud of steam arose of such extent that the entire countryside was enveloped in a hot fog.

For many years birling was a casual sport, evolved from the work of loggers. At the end of a hard days' work, the loggers would crave a little after-dinner exercise to soothe them for the night's rest. They would leap upon logs in the stream by the camp and joyously birl each other down.

It was not until 1898, on the occasion of the Lumbermen's exposition at Omaha, that the first world's championship tournament was held. Tom Fleming of Eau Claire, Wisconsin, won the title. A crowd of 36,000 persons watched the match.

Tournaments were held in 1900, 1901 and 1902, and then, for some reason, there was a suspension, although many local contests were held. One lumber camp would birl against another, and there were inter-county contests. Off and on tourneys were held and finally were officially revived last year.

TALKS AUSSIE TRADE

SIR EARL PAIGE

With arrival of deputy prime minister of Australia, Sir Earl Paige, in Ottawa, inter-empire trade discussions will commence between the two dominions. Sir Earl who has been in England with a trade delegation, is minister of commerce in his country's government. Australia is watching closely negotiations for trade treaties between Canada and United States and Britain and United States.

NEW POLICE CHIEF

Back in England after their successful aircraft flights across the Atlantic, the crew of the pick-a-back airplane Mercury, which landed at Bouchervville near Montreal to complete its flight from Foynes, Ireland, received congratulations of the designer, and a fellow officer with 18 years' experience on the Toronto police force, was selected by nearby York township police commission to head the township force, a position left vacant by removal of former Chief John Faulds. The position carries a salary of $3,350 yearly. The appointment which must be approved by the provincial department of municipal affairs, may be opposed by a section of the township council which favors a chief promoted from the ranks.

NEW MAURETANIA LAUNCHED IN ENGLAND

A mighty successor to the famed ocean liner S.S. Mauretania, slides down the ways at Birkenhead, England, as the second ocean giant of that name is launched by the Cunard-White Star line. A crowd of 10,000, including high government officials, witnessed christening of the new ship at the Cammell Laird shipyards at Birkenhead. The 33,000 ton ship is here seen slipping toward the ocean while the crowd roars its approval.

Armstrong Won't Know What Ambers Will Do, While Ambers Won't Know Himself, So It Looks Like a Great Battle For The Lightweight Championship

By BILL BEAUCHER
Central Press Canadian Sports Writer

New York—There have been great champions in the lightweight division—McAuliffe Lavigne, Ketchel, Leonard and Tony Canzoneri—and by comparison with these men Lou Ambers doesn't look so good. But there is one department of boxing in which he doesn't have to give any of them an edge. In the matter of heart the little Italian hitter from Herkimer is the equal of them all.

The courage of Ambers is what makes forecasters wonder when they weigh the lightweight champion's chances to keep Little Henry Armstrong from snatching his crown, Aug. 10— That, and Lou's unorthodoxy. Ambers is a slambang fighter, always bouncing around, tossing punches from all angles, offering a hard target by reason of his activity. Hennery is an unorthodox fighter, too, always boring in, hurling hundreds of punches, possessed seemingly of endless stamina, and depending upon it in a big way. Hennery knows what to expect from orthodox fighters, but he is at a disadvantage against Ambers. He doesn't know what Lou will do Lou doesn't know what he will do himself. So it ought to be a wale of a fight.

Both Came Up The Hard Way

Both boys have come up to the top the hard way, overcoming chances that were overwhelming against their success. A few years ago both were hunting their way on trains around the country, fighting for pork and beans in this club and that. Lou's father had some money before prohibition, but the amendment wiped him out. Lou worked in mills and factories, but couldn't wait until their hero landed as pictured lining a ferry rail as they steam out to meet the liner. of the money home where his mother, father and nine children always could use a few dollars.

His first recognition came when he beat Frankie Wallace, out of Cleveland, at a time when Wallace was regarded as a contender for the lightweight title. Fights came a little easier after that, and Lou fought more often because his father died about that time (four years ago), and back home they counted on Lou as a life-saver.

The Big Chance

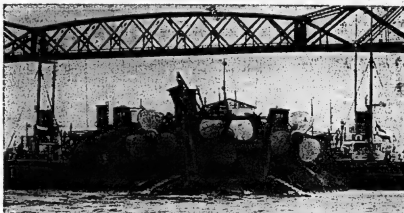
Three years ago Lou got his big chance. Barney Ross left the lightweight throne vacant because of inability to make the weight, and an elimination tournament was staged to select his successor. Ambers was tossed in against Tony Canzoneri in the final bout, and though Lou Ambers lost, he looked like the coming champion that night.

Ambers literally stormed his way to another championship bout, beating Frankie Klick, Baby Arizmendi, Pete Mascia, Orville Drouillard, Joey Crum and knocking out Tony Herrera, Eddie Marks, Tony Scarpati, Buster Brown and Lou Jallos. He got a return battle with Canzoneri in the fall of 1936, and won in 15 rounds. As champion he has lost some fights, but whenever the title was on the line, he has fought like a tiger to keep it.



Whatever else Armstrong is expecting to get from Ambers, he can depend on that —the Herkimer Hurricane will fight with him from gong to gong. Lou is not going to lose easily.

LOU AMBERS, WORLD'S LIGHTWEIGHT CHAMPION

Lou puts his title on the line, August 10, when he meets the sensational Henry Armstrong, already possessor of the featherweight and welterweight titles. Hammering Hennery is noted for his unorthodox style, but the champion's rest as bad as that game himself, and it should be a fight every minute they're in the ring.

SALVAGED GERMAN WARSHIP HEADS FOR THIS SCRAPHEAP

The glory of her war days vanished, the rusted hulk of the German battleship Grosser Kurfuat, a 25,000-ton vessel which was scuttled along with a gressier part of the German war fleet at Scapa Flow, is towed upside down under the Firth of Forth bridge on her way to the Rosyth, Scotland dockyards. She will be broken up for scrap metal. The former battleship was salvaged from 23 fathoms of water.

Why the Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

Weather Forecasting! Many who read the weather forecasts up in the air of their newspapers have no way of knowing how forecasts are made. It takes in the United States and Canada about 300 observation stations to make a good forecasting service. At these stations observations are made regularly four times a day which observations are sent to all forecasting stations. Four weather maps and other auxiliary charts are made from the observations twice or more daily and are ready about one hour after observation times. The forecaster must then study all the charts, the data and issue forecasts covering every corner of his district.

THE WEATHER

Toronto, Aug. 8 (CP)—Moderate showers have occurred in many parts of Manitoba and Saskatchewan and heavy rains in Alberta. Light showers have also occurred in the Lake Superior region and near Georgian Bay, while in other parts of eastern Canada it is fair and warm. It has been quite cool in Alberta and the Peace River district with moderate temperatures in other parts of the west. Tonight it is high over MacKenzie Valley, Ontario and Quebec, and low over the Western States and in the eastward of Newfoundland.

Lake forecasts—Moderate easterly winds: mostly cloudy tonight and Tuesday with local thunderstorms; not much change in temperature.

Manitoba—Cloudy and somewhat cooler today and Tuesday with showers in many districts.

Saskatchewan and Alberta—Cloudy and cool today and Tuesday with showers in many districts.

Mock Air Warfare of Britain Greatest in History With 900 Planes

London, Aug. 8—(CP)—Military experts checked over data and examined many photographs today seeking to determine the precise score in the greatest air defence manoeuvre of Great Britain's history.

Six lives were lost and four warplanes were wrecked as more than 900 first line fighting machines participated in the two-day exercises through heavy rain and fog, demonstrating, according to critics, that London and eastern England are safe from serious air attacks.

An air ministry communique said the invading "Eastland" bombers, flying in small attack formations with London as their chief objective, had inflicted theoretical damage that would destroy and Knightsbridge district.

The attacking squadrons, however, were intercepted successfully at many points by the defensive "Westland" fighters.

The communique said that in "real war" few of the raiding squadrons would have escaped without loss.

Five members of the R.A.F. were killed when a bomber, attempting to land in the fog near Bury St. Edmunds in Suffolk, struck a tree and caught fire. They were: Flying Officer John Adams; Pilot Officer Albert George Gillespie; Aircraftsman Edward Raymond White; Patrick Joseph McGovern and Charles Carter Broom, all belonged to the 17th bomber squadron of Feltwell, Thetford, Suffolk.

War Minister Leslie Hore-Belisha and Air Secretary Sir Kingsley Wood inspected the mock warfare.

Driver of Car Said to Have Told He Tried to Avoid Woman

Madoc, Aug. 8 (Special) —Lancelot Vader, 38, of Massassaga, was instantly killed when he was thrown from an automobile on the Bellleville road, one mile south of this village yesterday afternoon. Mrs. J. Murphy, Madoc, who was walking along side of the road at the time, escaped laised a general shaking-up and bruises when allegedly struck by the car in which Vader had been riding and which was driven by G. M. Morris, 67, Massassaga, a neighbor of Vader's. Morris was arrested by Provincial Constable Arthur Dymond, laid charges of driving carelessly and negligence and lodged in the Belleville jail.

Fatality Walking by Roadside

Vader was riding with Morris, who was carrying Mrs. Madoc when they came upon Mrs. Murphy and three children, who were walking alongside the road. According to police it is believed one of the children wandered across the road and when Mrs. Murphy saw the approaching automobile she turned it across the highway to protect the children. Vader jumped and struck Morris, who was driving, swerved back as he saw the woman directly in front, but the car struck Murphy, crushed down, but not seriously injured.

Vader Buried Out

The swerving automobile careened across the road and struck a telephone pole, the force of the impact hurling the younger Vader head-foremost out of the car, where he crashed his head on the roadside.

S. B. Beatty and E. Eglleson, Madoc, were summoned to the scene, but Vader had died instantly as the result of a fractured skull and a broken neck. The accident occurred about 12.30 p.m. yesterday.

INDIAN'S BODY FLOATING UPRIGHT CREATES MYSTERY

Dr. Frankish Says Henry Riley Did Not Die of Drowning

3 DROWNING CASES

By The Canadian Press

Science was given today to aid police in investigation of the death of Henry Riley Jr. The death of the 20-year-old Mohawk Indian Reserve Indian was the only one of 14 that occurred, during the week-end in Ontario that presented a mystery to authorities.

Riley's body was found floating upright in marshland water on the reserve Saturday, the posture one of defence as though the Indian had died with his head cut off a blow he knew he had not been drowned, as were three other persons in various parts of the province. Eight people died in automobile accidents while two met death in other forms.

Was Not Drowned

Vital organs in Riley's body were sent for scientific examination to Dr. E. R. Frankish, medico-legal expert of Toronto, by Dr. Frankish, General's Department who has been prominently identified with many criminal cases. "He definitely did not die of drowning," Coroner Dr. L. R. Smith said yesterday after an autopsy. "I never saw a case like this before and certainly Riley did not drown."

The reserve is located near Wallaceburg, two men fishing netting nets in the Chemalygren River found the body, went to the shore and on the chest, as if made by the lighted end of a cigarette, pushed close. Two Indians, Lloyd Clyn Greenbird, 27, and Charles Isaac, 43, were taken into custody as material witnesses.

3 Japanese Warships are Sunk, 4 Crippled in Yangste River

Shanghai, Aug. 8—(AP)—Chinese announced today their bombers had attacked and sunk three and damaged four of an estimated 90 Japanese warcraft concentrated in the Yangste River 110 to 150 miles down river from Hankow.

Furthermore, the Chinese said, the Japanese advance up the river had been "definitely halted" by counter-attacks and floods.

Hundreds of Japanese were reported killed on the north bank of the Yangste. Fighting on land around Hankow, the provisional Chinese capital and goal of the Japanese campaign, raged.

Despite the Chinese list of successful attacks, there appeared no major change in positions. Japanese planes bombed Nanchang, the Chinese air base, and reported two direct hits.

Chinese sources reported they had discovered secret negotiations indicating a plot to set up an independent south China government in close cooperation with Japan. Neutral sources had no

CADET D. A. G. BIRD SCORES POSSIBLE AT D. R. A. OPENING

Const. Wm. Beatty, Belleville, P. O. Gordon, Trenton, Score 48

HIGH SCORES

Connaught Rifle Ranges, South March, Ont., Aug. 8—(CP)—Cadet D. A. G. Bird of Trenton, attending the Royal Military College at Kingston, today posted a possible at 200 yards to win the Tyro match, opening the annual Dominion of Canada Rifle Association annual meeting.

Five others posted scores of 48. They were CSM W. A. Harris and Pete. D. H. Gibson, both of Hamilton, Ont., Trooper G. L. Calkin, Kentville, N.S., Sgt. G. C. Hersey, Lage, Toronto, and Miss M. W. MacLennan of Charlottetown.

Thirteen marksmen turned in scores of 48, including Pilot Officer Gordon Reardon, Trenton, Ont.; Corp. C. S. Rilgore, Toronto; Const. W. M. Beatty, Belleville, Ont., and R. Mackenzie, Ottawa.

The Essex Scottish Regiment of Windsor, Ont., won the team prize in the Tyro match when its four-man team scored 184 of a possible 200 points, after the Royal Canadian Air Force team of Trenton, Ont., and the Royal Hamilton Light Infantry team. Members of the winning team were CSM. J. Halliburn, Pte. C. Ellwood, 446, and Pte. A. Dixon, 47.

Last Lutheran Church Closed In Moscow

Moscow, Aug. 8 (AP)—The last Lutheran Church in Moscow has been closed.

Members of the Church of Peter and Paul thought a final farewell service would be permitted yesterday but when the worshippers arrived they found the doors padlocked.

While they waited in the courtyard, government trucks arrived to cart away the altar and other fixtures, presumably to a museum.

The church has been standing on without a pastor for eighteen months. The congregation, nevertheless, assembled faithfully each Sunday.

The members mostly were descendants of German colonists who came to Russia in the 18th century.

GOLD GUSHES FROM SHAFT ON PLUM ISLAND

200 Years' Quest For Gold Has Been Going on at This Place

IS IT PIRATE GOLD?

Miner is Inclined to Believe It Marks Dome of Rich Ore

Halifax, Aug. 8 (CP)—A treasure hunt in Oxford Plum Island, 50 miles from here, has resulted in the discovery of free gold gushing from a 6-foot shaft, James Nolan, leader of the expedition that for 200 years has searched for pirate gold said to have been hidden by Captain Kidd, Nolan, 76, said yesterday buccaneer, declared today.

Whether the gold coming through the pumps was deposited there by pirates or was a "dome" of rich gold bearing ore was not known yet, Nolan declared, but he was inclined to believe the latter theory.

200 Year Search

The present men have been searching for treasure hidden by Captain Swede more than 200 years ago. Returning from West Indies, the pirate was believed to have hidden the gold he plundered from Spanish towns on the Shag Bay Island to prevent it from falling into the hands of the British. Swede was captured and hanged before he was able to reveal secret to England.

The drills were believed to have encountered the precious metal last week, but it was not until a careful routine examination of soil in the discharge gully by Nolan that the yellow metal was found to be full of fine and coarse gold.

Granite to Quartz

Nolan declared that while gold had been often found in granite, he had noticed for some time the character of the rock appearing to be changing from granite toward quartz.

Nolan has "a gold-finding machine in which he places great faith, and the machine indicates in 1936 that there was gold in the shaft. He is pleased to have found some support for it.

He caught a rich, sweam, bought a stamp and a package of cigarettes, swore and ran a foot race with a friend, all offences under the acts. He was a leader in attempts to have the act abolished and was instrumental in having the city council urge the Dominion Government to wipe it off the statute books.

LOST BOY FOUND, TAKEN UP WITH NEW TRICYCLE

5 Year Fernand Tessier Runs From His Searchers

BERRIES EATEN

Sturgeon Falls, Ont., Aug. 8—(CP) Fernand Tessier, five-year-old French-Canadian boy who pedalled joyfully on a brand-new tricycle during his father's and neighbors' search homestead today "sound as a whistle" and unharmed after five days missing in the bush and desolate bush country as Northern Ontario can produce.

The tricycle wasn't the toy wagon Fernand's aunt Yvonne had promised him, but it was matched little to the brown-eyed boy whose disappearance in the wilderness prompted one of the most extensive searches ever undertaken in this large Nipissing district — 15 miles north west of North Bay, Fernand, Sturgeon Falls, builders, and more fun out of the tricycle.

Nothing Spared, Now Hungry

Lost last Wednesday while on a berry-picking expedition with his mother, Fernand disappeared as the Tessier homested 13 miles north of Sturgeon Falls. Hungry for thirty-six late yesterday and brought back to parents who had given him up for dead. Neither hunger nor thirst, the boy apparently was none the worse for his experience.

BOLT KILLS 3, STUNS 15 BATHERS IN 80,000 CROWD

Five Still in Hospital Recovering at New York

AIR ELECTRIFIED

New York, Aug. 8 (AP) — Five bathers, injured by a freak lightning bolt that killed three other persons and stunned fifteen in a crowd of 80,000 at Jacob Riis Park Beach, remained in a hospital today for treatment.

The condition of two was serious.

The bolt struck yesterday and razed 300 yards along 12 thronged beach front, downing thousands of bathers into a panic.

"There was a blinding flash and smell of electrified air," said Ruth Mellon, 20, who was injured. "People all around me began toppling over like ten-pins and I felt myself falling, too."

The dead, all from Brooklyn, were Maxine Cole, 26, Peter Cava, 28, and his wife, Mary, 24.

4,000 ARE KILLED, FLANK WIPED OUT

Insurgents Claim Victory On Catalan Front

Hendaye, France, Aug. 8—(AP)—The Spanish insurgents reported today the government's entire northern flank of the Catalan front had been wiped out in one of the most powerful single assaults of the war.

Dispatches from Zaragoza said 4,000 government militiamen had been killed and an equal number captured in four thousand others would be unable to right their way out of a trap, the dispatches said.

The insurgent offensive was reported to have cleared the west bank of the Ebro river of government troops from Mequinenza to Payon, 20 miles to the south.

A government communique admitted the loss of Les Aixis Heights north of Fayon, declaring all other attacks on the northern flank had been repulsed.

Grain Records Broken in Western Ontario

LONDON, Aug. 8.—(CP)—Grain records that stood for years are falling by the wayside right after another in the Alisa Craig District.

Alex M. Stewart, world oats king, reports that 80 to 90 bushels per acre have been taken off oats fields in that section, and the Barley yield has run as high as 65 bushels to the acre.

One farmer harvested a field of wheat that average 50 bushels to the acre.

MILE - SQUARE ROLLING PLAIN IS IDEAL SIGHT

Lake Plantin Reported in Most Favorable Light

ELLIS BAY SURVEYED

Results of Surveys Are Reported to Department of Defence

Port Menier, Anticosti Island, Que., Aug. 8 (CP)—By air and by land, Royal Canadian Air Force officers still searched today for possible air and naval bases giving the best strategic command to the St. Lawrence River approaches to Eastern Canada.

To date, it was disclosed, a mile-square rolling plain near Lake Plantin, on the east end of Anticosti Island, offered the most ideal site for an airport and air harbor. The lake is near the point where the St. Lawrence Channels are the narrowest.

While an air detachment of Royal Canadian Air Flights over the island, H.M.C.S. Venture, carrying other members of the Air Force and Naval Expedition, was anchored in Ellis Bay, maintaining wireless communication with officials at Ottawa.

Possibilities Investigated

Studied as a possible airport site, Ellis Bay proved unsuitable because of its many limitations and huge boulders which menace seaplanes, even at high tide. The bay, however, offers a protected basin for naval craft.

The land, Lake Plantin, with good road communications, Ellis Bay, a special haven and motor transportation are being provided by Officials of the Consolidated Paper Company, owners of the island.

JONES' CONDITION IS STILL SERIOUS

Recognizes Relatives And Friends, But Speaks Little

Although Hugh Jones, Rawdon Township farmer, who discovered in a bog on Friday night near Marmora after being missing for six days from his home, showed consciousness, he is still in a serious condition in Belleville Hospital, Dr. C. B. Stobie, attending physician, stated this morning.

Refusal of Jones to eat has resulted in a condition from lack of nourishment, Dr. Stobie added. He recognizes relatives and friends but thus far has spoken to any extent. Being of a naturally reticent nature however, this condition is regarded as a direct result of his ordeal in the cone and alimentary canal.

While several lacerations were apparent on Jones' hands and legs, he is not suffering from loss of blood, physicians stated, although his condition is at present regarded as being "pretty serious."

COUNTY JAIL NEARLY FILLED

It may be a search for relief from the heat and humidity, with the cell-blocks affording a cool resting place, or it may be an increase in petty crime, and gazing on the wine when it is red, but the fact remains that the County Jail is at present housing forty inmates, a decided increase over midsummer numbers of former years, Magistrate C. H. French stated this morning.

"This condition is not local," the Governor added, "for I am given to understand that the majority of provincial gaols have more than their regular summer quota."

Note on Fence Rail Contains Dollar For Corn

Perhaps Diogenes should have included the Oilsed, Prince Edward County, district in his search for an honest man. At least so thinks a prominent farmer of that district, who desires to wait his name mentioned. For the other day while writing through his kennels, he happened to notice a piece of paper fluttering from a fence-rail, examination of which revealed an envelope with a U. S. one-dollar bill neatly tucked inside, and a note, to the effect, "Thanks for the corn."

Apparently, tourists happening by, had glimpsed a few tender ears and could not resist the temptation to satiate their appetite for the corn. They paid well for what they partook of. This is what they stated, "they took an awful chance on the owner receiving his pay."

Whirr of Thresher Heard in District

With the whirr of the binder humming a harvest symphony throughout the district, as golden wheat is cut in the fields and heavily fall beneath the onslaught of keen knives, a resonant accompaniment is now being heard with the staccatos of the roar of each separator denoting the advent of the threshing season.

For the past two weeks, grain-fields of the district have been undergoing a rapid transformation, changing overnight from undulating waves of golden grain to yellow-stubbled surfaces dotted blekly with what appear to be an abundance of stooked sheaves.

From the "crack o' dawn" to late evening, farmers have been busily engaged in the harvesting of their grain, intermittent rains it is claimed, as ye have caused but little damage to harvested crops, although in some cases farmers who believe in "stook-threshing" will find some slight damage done.

George Sailley, prominent Prince Edward County thresher, who has been at work for the past week in the southern portion of the Ontario Intelligencer do Saturday that each separate yields are holding up well in his particular district of Hillier and Wellington. Oats are averaging from forty-five to forty bushels to the acre according to the field, while some places well over forty bushels.

"Farmers are rapidly changing from the old style of cutting by their grain, to the new mode of stook-threshing, which saves the grain from the field direct to the machine. This works splendidly if the weather holds, but should constant rain come, damage to stooked grain will ensue," he said.

21 BATT. CLUB TO BE HERE IN '39

Tentative Plans Made at Reunion at King-ston

Belleville was tentatively decided upon as the location of the 1939 reunion of the 21st. Battalion at the concluding business meeting of this annual reunion held at the local pavilion in Kingston on Saturday.

Attended by a large number of Belleville members of the 21st, the reunion was a success, official records at the of the most successful held recently.

Election of officers resulted in Padre, the Rev. Major W. E. Kidd, D.S.O., of Kingston, being elected president for the coming year. General Sir Pierre Hughes, honorary president and Col. H. R. Pearkes, D.S.O., honorary vice-president. First vice-president Lewis Madden of Belleville, was unanimous choice for re-election, and Fred Hart of Belleville, was named second vice-president. Secretary-treasurer is H. Harry of Ottawa.

Unless other important dates conflict, this city of the location of next year's annual reunion, an event which will attract hundreds of former members of the Battalion from all sections of Canada and the United States.

POLICE COURT

How long will it take you to get out of the city?" asked Crown Attorney R. C. Donnan, of a man in court charged with vagrancy.

"Oh, about two hours or so, I suppose," replied Lancelot, who said he was enroute to Quebec to visit relatives.

"Well, I'll give you exactly fifteen minutes to get out of Belleville and remain away," warned His Worship as Latour accepted the suggestion and made a hasty exit.

William Thomas, Belleville, was convicted of reckless driving and fined $10 and costs. "Any damage in this case?" asked Mr. Donnan.

"I don't know, but I do understand there were no personal injuries sustained," replied Acting Chief Constable Arthur Harman. The accused was given until the 15th instant in which to pay the fine.

Norman Perry, who entered a plea of guilty in writing, was assessed the minimum fine after being convicted of speeding. Today's court proceedings were short and abruptly to the point.

Over 4,000 Boxes Of Raspberries To Acre

Establishing what it is readily conceded to be an alltime district record for yield with an average of slightly over thousand boxes to the acre, Messrs. Bailley and Munday, prominent Wellington raspberry growers, completed the current harvest on Friday with a grand total of 36,500 boxes from a seven-acre field.

One hundred and ten pickers were needed to harvest the fruit that in its heaviest "picking" yielded over 400 boxes. Under less bumptious work, however, was necessary as 4564 berry workers were employed rushed ripening of the berries.

One picker turned in 136 boxes one day, said to be a record for one day, said to be a record for one day's work of this kind. On Friday the conglomerates turned over the patch to their labor, presenting them with a harvest festival. They cared to pick. Ice cream and other refreshments were tendered the "help" following the cessation of picking operations to celebrate the end of the heaviest berry harvest seen in this district in some years.

23 Pound 'Lunge Captured by Wellington Man

Wellington fishermen need no longer suffer the good-natured jibes of their county friends with with regard to their apparent inability to catch the elusive maskinonge. For on Saturday, William Davern, prominent local hotel owner and amusement merchant, landed a twenty-three pound beauty from the waters of adjacent Lake, that measured 49 inches over all, and had an 18-inch girth.

Davern, in company with a friend, Jack Kidd, of Galt, landed the hinge after a short but fifteen-minute battle, that reflected upon the skill of the anglers in view of the fact that the latter type of fish in this lake, it was three years old, and was of 15-pound size.

A red-eye wiggler was used as bait for the fishing trip. The fish will be mounted and added to the already extensive Davern hunting and fishing trophies.

Reeve Quits Post To Be Treasurer Of Monteagle, Hershel

At the regular meeting of the townships council of Herschel and Monteagle, held at Maynooth, the resignation of township treasurer T. B. Robinson, who has held that office for the past two and one-half years, was accepted. Following the treasurer's resignation, Reeve Anderson, who has been head of the municipal government for the past twelve years, immediately tendered his resignation and accepted the appointment of treasurer for the balance of 1938. A nomination meeting will be held in the O.M.B.A. hall, Maynooth, on Monday, August 16, and in case a poll is demanded, an election will be held on August 23 to fill the vacancy caused by Reeve Anderson's resignation.

MORE APPLES WILL BE GROWN

Crop This Year Will be Larger Than For Years Past

More apples will be grown in orchards in this central section this year, according to estimate by C. H. Stevenson, inspector of the local office of the Dominion Department of Agriculture, following a first of the season survey of fruit conditions locally. The crop this year is expected to top fruit production for some time past, due to the fact that many new trees planted since the year of the "big frost" some years ago will this season bear their first fruit.

Earl A. Phillips at Air Demonstration at Kingston Scores 795 Out of 800

Air distinction was gained by one of Belleville's youthful aviators, Earl D. Phillips, son of Mr. and Mrs Joe. Phillips, 155 Church St., at an air demonstration and competitions held in Kingston during the latter part of last week.

Aviator Phillips was credited with the highest number of points during the demonstration flying period, piloting a total of 795 out of a possible total of 800 in classes of spot landing, bombing and the proficiency competitions between members of the Kingston Flying Club. He was also awarded the Bishop Trophy given by Vice-Air Marshal Wm. Bishop.

In the proficiency tests Earl gained second place among members and two firsts in spot landing and bombing.

Obituary

LATE MRS. JAMES QUINN

The funeral of the late Mrs. Jas. Quinn, Tweed, was very largely attended on Saturday morning to St. CaThagh's Church. Requiem Mass was celebrated by Very Rev. Dean Wallace, Rev. W. Healey, Napanee; Rev. P. Quinn, Kingston; Rev. J. J. Collins, Belleville, and Rev. A. L. O'Donnell, Tweed, were present in the sanctuary.

Interment took place in St. CaThagh's cemetery, the pall bearers being Messrs. Joseph Hoshkiss, Jos. Collins; Charles Collins; Mitchell LeSage; James Ryan and John Murphy.

GEORGE H. COWAN

George Henry Cowan, at one time a resident of Trenton, Ont., and late resident, 342 Sterling Road, Toronto, died on Sunday morning, Aug. 7, in his 74th year, at St. Joseph's Hospital, Toronto. The funeral will take place on Tuesday, Aug. 9, at Toronto.

ARTHUR LYONS BIGGAR

The death occurred in the Private Patients Pavilion at the Toronto General Hospital on Saturday, Aug. 6, of Arthur Lyons Biggar, son of Mr. Justice Biggar, and the late Mrs. Major-General Lyons, whose death occurred was born in Belleville and was a nephew of the late Judge Deroche. Old friends will regret to learn of his death. For the past few years he resided in Sarnia, Ont.

Surviving him are his widow, formerly Miss Edith Lucas, and his mother.

Mrs. R. A. Bull, Charles street, Belleville, is an aunt of the late Mr. Biggar.

The funeral, which was private, took place at Toronto on Saturday, Aug. 6.

Police Blotter

Two bicycles were reported stolen in Belleville over the week-end, Jack Carson, 30 Moira street east, reported the loss of his bike, while Mrs. Emile Whittle reported a similar incident on Saturday morning.

The management of Nickolson's service station, Dundas street at Pinnacle, reported the theft of a new tire from their premises. The tire was used for demonstration purposes in front of the premises and had been inadvertently left outside when the station was closed on Saturday night. The tire was gone when attendants opened the place of business early Sunday.

An automobile stolen at Toronto last Tuesday was recovered in Belleville by city detectives, when it had been abandoned on Dundas street. Provincial Constable William McBrien stated that the vehicle was returned to the Queen City authority.

Lorne Haig, 41-year-old Seymour Township resident, was being sought by district police authorities today. Haig is known to have come to Belleville on Saturday, where his automobile was today found abandoned on East Dundas street. Haig is believed to have wandered away after parking his motor car. Provincial and district police are notified of the disappearance of Haig by Acting Chief Constable Harman.

5-YEAR BOY FOUND

Wandering into the bush near Sturgeon Falls on Aug. 2, five-year-old Fernand Vadeboncoeur, ABOVE, of Field, Ont., had not been seen since until fireman Hebert found him during the weekend. Today the boy is ridin ga tricycle as if nothing had happened. This picture was taken two years ago.

LOST BOY FOUND,

Dr. R. F. Malo, physician in the lumbering settlement of Field, three miles from the Trealer Pome, said he was "amazed" after examining the boy at his office. "He's a good health. Only the youngster's legs were scratched and his legs and feet were swollen somewhat from exposure with this boy," Dr. Malo said. "He's as sound as a whistle."

Thanksgiving Masses

End of a search that brought industry and farm work in the district virtually to a standstill came at 5 p.m. Sunday when Fernand, 5-year-old lumberman, bushman and mill worker, and a farmer, Rene Vellette, stumbled across the boy 3 1-2 miles south west of the Trealer Pome. Vellette is to be credited as served as a modern miracle in thanksgiving masses held today.

Four-hundred men and an Ontario Provincial Police airplane were engaged in the search yesterday. The number of searchers—bush workers, mill hands, merchants and farmers—grew to that figure from the first party of 28 that started out, lanterns in hand, Wednesday night when the boy's disappearance became known.

Bears And Wolves in District

Bears and wolves abound in the bush in Ontario. Bears and wolves abound. So does the bush Veli. Vellette was forced to build a camp which Morrison carried the rescued boy when they left the breeding grounds of myriads of insects. But berries are plentiful in this section and the marsh water alaked Fernand's thirst.

The boy declined a drink of water when he was found. At his home he said he had eaten berries and drank water from a hole he had found in a swamp close to the spot where he was picked up last night, Fernand said as he told his story in French, "I slept in the grass in my little bed."

Morrison said later the only thing the lad was interested in when he and Vellette came upon him was a bottle of milk which Vellette had brring him. No wagon was available but when the bush and mill hands and townspeople of Field heard of it they promptly opened a hardware store and bought him a tricycle.

How the hundreds of searchers joined forces after they combed a 24-square-mile area puzzled many "professionals" who were brought in from North Bay, Sudbury, and other points to watch the search operations. But Sergeant, veteran bushman, knew the reason. He was "hushed."

Bushman's Explanation

"When one becomes lost, adult or child, he loses a grip on himself and tears around in circles, climbing hills unnecessarily. Most lost searching dully with no particular object in mind," Morrison said. "Instinct and logic vanish and the lost person becomes something like a trapped animal.

"After a while he runs away from searchers, hides from sounds. That's why the lad moved off when we called him. Our sounds were strange to his ears. He was 'bunked' and didn't realize rescue had come. It is probable that in the past five days scores of searchers passed within a few chains of the boy, animal like through loneliness, had hidden in fright."

First clue to the boy's presence came Saturday when a small patch of red wool torn from a sweater he wore, was picked from a branch of a bush. More than a mile further later, near that spot, Morrison and Vellette caught a splash of red on a rock. The party of four began to run and Morrison had to fell Vellette to keep him 50 feet before he caught him.

Farents Overjoyed

Mr. and Mrs. Valmarre Tessier were overcome when their son was returned to them. They thanked the searchers and said "Let Le Bon Dieu bless them as He has blessed me." Though crippled with a bad leg, Tessier had spent almost the entire time Fernand was lost in the bush with the search parties.

The boy quickly shook off his harsh confinement once he was back with his family. To a French-speaking reporter he said he was "scared" when the men were moving through the bush called him.

The questioning was difficult as Fernand was too fascinated with his bicycle, brought immediately from Field as soon as it was learned he was safe, to answer questions.

Fernand's Brief Story

"Tired?" asked the reporter.

"Non."

"Hungry?"

"Non."

"Where have you been sleeping?"

"Dans le lit dans un bois."—In bed in the bush.

"How did you miss your father?"

"Je ne sais pas." (I don't know)

"Were you frightened?"

"Non."

"Did any bears or wolves scare you?"

"Non."

That ended the conversation as Fernand whirled off on his tricycle."

LANCELOT VADER

of the late Lancelot Vader opened here yesterday before Coroner Dr. Eggleson and following identification was enlarged until August 15. Police stated today that the Morris car was a total wreck.

Says He Swerved Car

When interviewed by the Provincial Police, Thomas Morris stated he was not travelling more than 20 miles per hour when he saw some around a curve just in time to see Mrs. Murphy and the children on the road. He swerved to avoid them into the ditch in an effort to miss them, and could not avoid hitting and doing collided with the tree. It was "all over in the equal time it took what happened," Morris is said to have told police.

Mrs. Murphy en route to Madoc where he expected to procure the services of a housekeeper to look after his family of seven children, was thrown from the car and killed when Mrs. Morris died a short time ago.

Vader, who once resided in Bancroft, accompanied Morris, who is a neighbor of the Vaders, residing near Massassaga.

Provincial Constable A. V. Dyment, Provincial Constable John Danford conducted the investigation.

The late Lancelot Vader was born in Faraday Township, Hastings County, his parents being Mrs. Cordelia A. Vader and the late Robert Vader. For some years he resided at Bancroft, Ont., and for the past three years he made his home at Massassaga. Before coming to Canada, where he was engaged in farming, Lancelot Vader served in the war. A widow, who prior to her marriage was Miss Amelia A. Shannik; his mother, Mrs. Amelia A. Vader; one daughter, Jean, age 10 years; four sons, Clinton, 16 years; Jack, 15 years; Lorrene, 13 years and Dean, 5 years; four brothers, Roderick Vader, Balfourd Vader, Merle Vader and Moyse Vader.

The funeral announcement is made elsewhere in this paper.

Fighting Fire Athlete Overcome By Smoke, Fumes

Guelph, Ont., Aug. 8 (CP)—When assisting to fight a fire which had destroyed a local meat packing plant on Elizabeth Street, Norman Lavergne, well-known Guelph wrestler and athlete was overcome by smoke and fumes. Lavergne had come from his country home to help firemen fight the blaze. Later, however, when he collapsed. He was taken to Guelph General Hospital but later released.

Damage to the Barber Packing Plant was not considered heavy. The cause of the fire is unknown.

Reassessment May Be Handled By Research Bureau, Says Mayor

If Bureau is Empowered to Act, Work May Begin in December

BUREAU'S WORK

Belleville's reassessment, and complete revision of the tax lists of all city properties, may be handled by the Citizens' Research Bureau of Canada, it was announced today by Mayor Jamieson Bone and members of the special reassessment committee of council, following a visit to the city by Dr. Horace Brittain, Toronto, a member of the Bureau during which time a preliminary talk on the problems of municipal assessments was given by him.

The Bureau, it was stated is at present in charge of the reassessment of the City of Kingston, and of Halifax, Nova Scotia.

If the Citizens' Research Bureau is empowered with the task of Belleville's reassessment, it is expected that work will be commenced early in December and will be completed some time in February.

"We were much interested in Dr. Brittain's remarks when he was here," stated Mayor Bone today. "For the past twenty years he has been preaching the same thing, that mayors and municipalities of the country are at last beginning to realize, that the present system of taxation is outdated and needs drastic overhauling and changing. This reassessment is a big job, and while the work may be a benefit to everyone, owing to the fact that some properties may be given an additional tax, and others a reduction in present taxes, it is a necessary thing, and one for which council has been fighting for some time. We need the equal basis of assessation, however, to avoid placing hardship on those who have been carrying the heavy burden in the past."

The Citizens' Research Bureau, it was pointed out by the mayor, is an independent corporation whose work in the past has been highly recommended by the Ontario government.

Constable Beatty Will Compete In Rifle Shoot

Constable William Beatty, of the Belleville detachment of R.C.M.P., left today for Ottawa, where he will compete in the Dominion Rifle Association annual shooting matches in the Capital City this week. Constable Beatty is an outstanding marksman with both rifle and revolver. During his absence Constable Sam Beazin will be in charge of the Belleville detachment of the R.C.M.P., with Constable Spindler, Ottawa headquarters, as assistant.

Two Injured In Collision Near Roblin

Mrs Pero, Tweed, and Adard Grace, Plevna, were injured in the Kingston General Hospital over the week-end suffering from injuries sustained near Roblin, twelve miles north of Napanee, when they are is said to have collided with a loaded coal truck driven by Ernest Jackson. The latter was uninjured.

Pero received head injuries, a fractured arm, and hip lacerations, while Gregg was injured about the head and chest. Dr. J. W. Willoughby, Napanee, attended the injured and has ordered them removed to hospital. Both car and truck were damaged. Police are investigating the cause of the accident.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Aug. 8 (CP)—Prices began to firm mildly at early afternoon, following a sluggish three hours of trading on the Toronto Exchange in which only 257,000 shares changed hands. Action in all groups suffered from the holiday spirit but the golds moved in greater volume than other lists. Lake Shore sold in quantity at a drop of a point. Action said Preston was fairly active around 1.70, practically unchanged from the last close.

Noranda posted a fractional gain and Waite-Amulet bulged to the $7 mark but failed to hold. Western oils were quiet and a bit weak. Okalta and Calgary-Edmonton dropped 3 to 8 cents each.

Industrials posted more losses than gains but recessions were narrow. Utilities and foods eased and the senior oils were steady to strong.

TORONTO LIVESTOCK

Toronto, Aug. 8 (CP)—Cattle trade was slow on Toronto Livestock Market today with prices about steady on good sitters. Calf prices were steady to strong. Sheep and lambs were steady while no hog price was set or early afternoon. Cattle holdover from Thursday was 1,000 head.

Receipts reported by the Dominion Livestock Branch were: Cattle 2,860; calves 830; hogs 1,300; sheep and lambs 500.

Fresh cattle receipts included 1,100 from the West, mostly steers. A few weighty steers landed at $7 to $7.25. Medium to good butcher cattle sold at $5.75 to $6.50. There were no sales on common steers or heifers.

Butcher cows moved at $2 to $4 and a few light cows at $4.25. Some good butcher bulls brought $3.75 to $4. Choice fed calves were priced at $8.75 to $9.50, medium downward to $7. Stockers were $4.25 to $5.

Choice veal calves brought $8 to $8.50 with a dozen tops reaching $8.75. Common and medium ranged down to $4.

Packers were bidding $9.25 off-trucks for bacon hogs.

Good ewe and wether lambs traded at $9.50. Bucks were $8.50 and culls $7 to $8. Sheep ranged from $3 to $4 cwt.

Money, Permits Taken, Pants 'n All

Hamilton, Aug. 8 (CP) — Gordon Knapman of Stoney Creek reported to Detective Joseph Duffy yesterday that, while he was bathing in Lake Ontario near the beach road filtering basins, a thief raided his car and stole his trousers which contained $100, motor vehicle permits for two trucks and his driving permit.

Board Room Gossip

As supplied to Bigger and Crawford By Financial Service

The market last week was an interesting affair for the reason that despite the lack of public interest, many people staying away from the financial district on account of the heat, prices held well and the week closed with the majority of stocks not far from their recent highs. The past week also witnessed a considerable demand for gold in the London market and some of the Canadian gold stocks were in good demand at higher prices.

A rumor was promulgated last week that the English interests who had placed orders with Dominion Steel and Coal were endeavoring to break their contracts and were willing to pay the company a premium if this could be arranged. It is understood that when inquiries were made at the company's offices, the rumor was categorically denied, an official stating that there was absolutely no truth in the report. It would appear, therefore, as if the rumour was put out for a purpose, the nature of which is not known.

A report was heard last week that there is a likelihood that the mines will be stabilized shortly at a slightly higher level than exists at present. This would prove a very bullish card for the shares of Brazilian Traction. Some good buying has been going on in these shares for some little time and the security could move ahead sharply on announcement of any good news. The security is well regarded in a number of quarters in the Street, as offering good appreciation possibilities.

Slight Drop in Produce Prices

Toronto, Aug. 8—Weakening of cheese prices provided the most noteworthy action on the Toronto produce market Saturday.

Little or no business was done in cheese locally in the course of the past week's abbreviated closing session, but quotations as low as 13 3-4c per pound were made, off 1-4c from the lowest in the previous day's range, although some dealers still reported the 14 1-4c price.

Values were left unchanged in all parts of the egg market after an inactive session here Saturday. Large graded eggs were quoted at 25c and ungraded A-large at 24c. The retail trade paid 30c. Receipts in Toronto continue to be light, but consumption is low, resulting in demand still being met with the result that buyers are keeping their stocks at a minimum.

In connection with the current egg situation, it is interesting to note that storage egg statistics for Ontario, including Toronto, showed approximately 34,000 cases less on Aug. 1, as compared with the same date a year ago. A month before a shortage of 22,000 cases, compared with July 1, 1937, was revealed. Offsetting this, a Toronto authority has pointed out are a more than ordinarily large number of young birds in the country at the present time.

The butter market was steady with Ontario No. 1 creamery solids offered at 24 1-2c and would-be buyers bidding 24 1-4c. A little business was reported to have been done at the higher figure but none at the lower. Some Western butter was sold at 24 3-4c in Toronto.

Buying for storage purposes which has been evident over the past few weeks at Montreal, largely disappeared during the week-end market there, and the decline in prices did not appear to encourage purchases. Advices from the Quebec metropolis state that dealers both in Eastern and Western Canada, are near decidedly nervous at the present time, and it seems likely from the point of view there that prices will be further depressed.

NEW WHEAT TO HAVE BIG YIELD

British Professor Has Discovery After Ten Years of Effort

Cambridge, England, Aug. 8 (CP-Cable)—A new type of wheat yielding at least ten per cent. higher than the best existing British varieties has been evolved after lengthy research, it was announced today.

It is rust resistant and able to withstand heavy storms because it grows short. The cross-bred grain has not yet been named. It is the result of intensive research for ten years by Professor F. L. Engledow of the Cambridge Plant Breeding Institute.

Grown on test plots four feet square on the frounds of the National Institute of Botany at Cambridge, the new wheat was cut today. Its color has not yet been fixed by the eye, and will be released for commercial production once whiteness is assured.

The discovery is considered to be a valuable contribution to the campaign to increase the production of home-grown food in the United Kingdom.

FLAMES DESTROY HUNGERFORD BARN MEN ARE INJURED

Wm. Vance And Son Burned in Efforts to Extricate Thresher

IGNITED FROM PARKS

Treed, Aug. 8 (Special)—Igniting from the sparks of a threshing outfit which was in operation on his farm, the commodious barn on the farm of Melson Conkwright, fourth concession of Hungerford were completely destroyed by fire late this morning. William Vance, owner of the threshing apparatus, and his son Horace, sustained minor burns from the blaze in their successful attempts to get the threshing separator, that was facing the raging inferno at close proximity.

Threshing activities started at the Conkwright farm early today, with the Vance threshing machine in operation. Shortly after 10 a.m. sparks were seen emerging from the separator and before anything like harnessing of "fire" could be issued, the light straw was a roaring blaze. Fanned by a light breeze the blaze made rapid progress and it was only with difficulty that the workmen managed to haul the threshing separator to safety.

The barn and contents were a complete loss, there being no insurance, Mr. Conkwright related.

GREATEST NAVAL TASK IN HISTORY IN FULL SWING

British Admiralty Has Ordered 118 Ships Built

THOUSANDS AT WORK

1938 Program Has Not Yet Reached Shipyards

By J. F. SANDERSON

Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, Aug. 8—(CP)—Thousands of workmen on Great Britain's shipbuilding yards are engaged today in the biggest naval construction program in world history.

The Admiralty is building or has ordered 118 ships, ranging from mighty battleships to tiny torpedo boats, submarines and mine sweepers. In addition, 31 other ships are projected for this year, enough to increase the tonnage of the British fleet by one-third.

Every rivet driven into a hull, every gun mounted, represents another step forward in Britain's rearmament program, designed to make this country invulnerable to attack and restore the navy to a paramount position on the seven seas.

The list of vessels already on the dockyard stocks or which will be built makes a formidable fleet in themselves: Five battleships, five aircraft carriers, 17 cruisers, 54 destroyers of different sizes, 15 submarines, five escort vessels, seven mine sweepers, four patrol ships, two surveying ships, two depot ships, nine torpedo ships, three river gunboats and many small craft—650,000 tons in all when complete.

The 1938 program, which hasn't reached the shipbuilding yards, is as follows: Two battleships, seven cruisers, one aircraft carrier, three submarines, four minelayers, two river gunboats, two depot ships, one repair ship and many small craft, such as tugs, torpedo boats and boom defence vessels.

Before next March, delivery is expected of one aircraft carrier, five H.M.S. cruisers, four submarines, 12 submarines and two submarine depot ships.

Scottish Ex-Mayor Asked to Present Gifts to Quints

Five engraved silver shoulder brooches, a gift from Callander, Perthshire, Scotland, will be presented to the Dionne quintuplets at Callander, Ontario, next month, by Mr. M. R. Fenton, Callander, former Provost of the Scottish burgh, according to advices received today from the Prince Edward County town.

While plans for the presentation are not as yet complete, it is expected that Premier Mitchell Hepburn will take part. The gifts will be brought to Canada in care of Canadian Pacific Railway.

Mr. Dow, who was born near the Scottish burgh, has served as councillor of the Council in 1920 and later chosen as Mayor or Provost by his fellow councillors. His position he held for five years until 1935 when he retired. Justice of the Peace for Perthshire, having been recommended for that honor by the Duchess of Atholl, his wife, during his native heath a year ago, he was approached by civic officials with regard to making the presentation.

Callander, Ontario, was named after Callander, Scotland, by a former native town, Mr. McIntyre, who made a large loan to the C.P.R. at the time of its construction through the district country. Going to the north himself, McIntyre named the then little settlement in honor of his native Scottish Callander.

STANISLAVSKY DIES IN MOSCOW

One of Greatest of World's Figures in Drama Passes

Moscow, Aug. 8.—(AP)—Konstantin Sergeivitch Stanislavsky, founder of the Moscow Art Theatre and one of the greatest figures in the modern world of the drama, died yesterday of heart disease.

Stanislavsky, who practically had been ill since June 13 when he collapsed during preparations for staging "Carouche" a work of the 17th century French playwright, Moliere.

Stanislavsky formerly was a wealthy manufacturer whose love of the stage led him from amateur theatricals to the position of world-renowned pioneer of the modern theatre.

NEW YORK GIVES CORRIGAN TICKER-TAPE WELCOME

In a blizzard of ticker-tape greater than any that has showered Broadway since Lindbergh got back from Paris, greeting Douglas Corrigan of flight-to-Dublin fame, came back to New York and an official reception that would make him a most vociferous greeting. At right, Corrigan seems to be waving all ways at once as the ticker-tape descends and the welcome clamor rises. Actually the effect is produced by double exposure.

WINGS FLUTTER QUITE USELESSLY

Girl Fails to Descend Impressively on Tight Rope

Montreal, Aug. 8 (CP)—While the wings strapped to her shoulders fluttered uselessly, an 18-year-old girl who recently tried to "descend from heaven" on a tight rope, was stranded thirty feet above ground when a wire jammed.

The girl, Miss Louise Lucasco of Mimico, Ont., and her decorative wings passed at least half an hour dizzily attached to the wire by a safety device encircling her waist.

Beneath her Diane who had gallered at a downtown church to celebrate the feast of Notre Dame de la Defense milled about, while the white-faced girl alternately closed and opened her eyes to slant at the crowd.

Although the rope stretching from the roof of the factory school continued to sag and the jammed pulley creaked steadily, the safety device did not give away. The girl was released and brought down when firemen arrived with a ladder.

Minister Rides 350 Miles To Substitute

Toronto, Aug. 8 (CP)—It took three days for Rev. A. Hinton, Points Claire, Que., minister, to ride a bicycle from his home a few miles west of Montreal to Toronto where he substituted for a sick preacher. He started the 350-mile return journey today hoping to cover the route in less time.

Mr. Hinton, 56, took up cycling five years ago to improve his health and claims to have covered about 15,000 miles on his bicycle since.

He preached the sermon yesterday at Newmarket United Church, replacing Rev. R. R. McMoth, ill with a throat ailment.

BRITISH ARMY CHANGES

The British Tommy, always one of the outstanding figures in the world of military training, is seeing a rapid transformation in some of the aspects of his life. Life is being made far more attractive, the retirement age has been lowered all along the life for officers, schools of training have been set up and those already existing have been increased to Woolwich and Sandhurst.

In fact it is the aim of the new Secretary of War, Mr. Leslie Hore-Belisha, to make the army younger and more democratic.

The change is a great one as the news at the weekend indicates, there have been more than two thousand officers promoted since the last announcement. There are changes in customs and other things.

As the phase of possible war has changed so change is necessary in the armies of the world.

AN ENDANGERED TRADITION

The circus industry has stuck in some mudholes this season out of which even the biggest elephants couldn't pull it. One show folded up after a strike, the merits of which were determined by the NLRB but whose results were shocking to all who were once small boys. A Wild West outfit had to be sold at auction, gilt, horses, feathers and all. These things, as the Circus Fans of America have just resolved, must not be. Their re-elected president, Melvin D. Hildreth of Washington, declares that prompt action is essential if the "big top" is not to follow the route of the small-time opera house, and a committee has been appointed to take the required action with the essential promptness.

A circus, of course, is subject to economic law. If the public will not pay for it, the outcome is bankruptcy. It cannot live on free passes—which, incidentally, the Circus Fans do not accept. It cannot live on sentiment. It must have bread and butter, ham and eggs, hay and oats. But it would be a sad day for the United States if economic law condemned this enchanting form of entertainment to extinction. One cannot suggest that the WPA take it over, for the circus is individualism in its most virulent form. Discipline and order it must have, but a single unwise crack the whip, but regimentation and standardization would kill it dead as a doornail.

The circus, at its best, is a first-class example of the old American way of doing things—romance, drama, with color, rolling all history into a glorious hodgepodge, smelling of prairie earth and New England barnyards, yet redolent of the perfumes of Araby. We didn't invent it, but it is steeped in our traditions. Streamlined out of it may it recover from its slump and once more come into its own—the delight of youth, the solace of old age. We need circuses as well as bread.—New York Times.

MORE ADVERTISING

Dealing with the value of newspaper advertising, Will H. Hays, czar of the motion picture industry, says:

"We need more, not less, advertising. Newspaper advertising is essential to this end.

"You who direct motion picture advertising richly deserve the appreciation and congratulations not only of the industry, but of all who are interested in the improvement of the screen.

"It has been said that business, like a wheelbarrow, does not get anywhere unless it is pushed. Advertising is the pusher.

"Much is being done by business and by government to bring us out of this recession. It is necessary, but it is all futile unless the public is told about it. That is the job of advertising. The advertising of every business must be stepped up. I believe it is the essential of today. Advertising not only sells what is already produced but creates the demand which results in increased production."

Mr. Hays is president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America. He has been the "Judge Landis" of the industry for many years. He knows that it has been built up through constant use of newspaper advertising. That is why he urges the consistent use of large space to sell pictures to the public, comments the St. Catharines Standard.

There is nothing so wretched or foolish as to anticipate misfortunes. What madness it is in your expecting evil before it arrives!—Seneca.

It is in length of patience, endurance and forbearance that so much of what is good in mankind and womankind is shown.—Arthur Helps.

IF YOU LIKE YOUR WORK, it isn't work, just pleasure. If you don't like your work, if you find no pleasure in it you can qualify for sympathy as we sometimes hear about. Men who have been active in business retire, and sometimes, unless they have some powerful hobby, leisure palls, the light goes out of life and frequently life goes out with it. A writer in the Montreal Gazette who evidently finds work a pleasure, explains his feelings in the following verses:

COMFORTABLE FETTERS

Along the Boulevard, down the hill
To Sherbrooke street I go,
In the gladsome days of the summer-time,
In the winter's dazzling snow.
Dominion Square shall know my trails
And Place d'Armes my smiles.
As I swing to the tune of the "Wagesslave's Song."
For four entrancing miles.

There the cheery round of the brisk "hellos,"
That make up my daily treat,
Shall spread till the warmth of friendship glows
From a bustling city street
And sweeten the hours which I willingly sell
For the wherewithal to live.
If this be the life of a shackled slave,
What extras could Freedom give?

ROGER BABSON, "EXPERT STATISTICIAN, is a religious rebel. He takes a great interest in religion, az is, and is very critical of the management and methods of the church organization to which he contributes. All churches also, come under his fire of criticism, and his latest utterance intimates that churches are just so much encumberances and expense. He suggests that ministers cease trying to fight against radio, automobile, golf, and indifference, and take the Gospel message to the people direct in house-to-house canvas, carrying their sermons in printed form to leave with the family instead of their leisure. Babson is a bit slow on his suggestion, for one religious organization not only carries the message into the homes of the people but even carries gramaphones with religious records which they use by permission to play in the homes. That there is the loud speaker truck which broadcasts sermons on the street corners and assures the world at large and that section in particular that millions now living will never die. Babson may have another thing there but he is not the first to suggest it and even practise it.

Mr. J. H. Flewelling, editor of the Daily Ontario, severed his connection with the paper today in Peterboro. The result of the change is that Mr. C. A. Abraham will be promoted from the position of reporter to the editor's chair and Mr. Fred Abraham, now in Toronto, will return to Belleville and take on the reporting job.

Mr. James Vannorman reports that he has had a good haul in seining. Its return will be appreciated.

Mr. George Dulmage hooked a 22 pound muskinonge in the bay near Massassaga yesterday. The fish was the largest to be caught in that vicinity this season.

The Low Starch Diet for Rheumatism

For years, it was taught that the eating of meat was one of the principle causes of rheumatism; in fact there are still many rheumatics or scientifics who avoid meat entirely. While the avoiding of meat may be necessary when complications are present, it is the starch foods as pointed out by Dr. A. A. Fletcher, Toronto, and Ralph Pemberton, Philadelphia, that are now reduced in amount in the treatment of arthritis. Apparently those afflicted with chronic rheumatism do not get rid of sugar from the system as rapidly as those free of rheumatism.

Unfortunately, as the eating of less starch foods brings some relief, many patients are apt to depend much on this dietary factor and not use the other necessary parts of the treatment—removal of any infection (teeth, tonsils, large intestine), application of heat in various forms, light exercise and massage, and the reduction of weight.

The following diet, low in starch foods, is recommended by Dr. Pemberton:

Breakfast—1 apple; 1 egg; 1 slice of bread; 1 1-3 squares of butter; 1-3 cup of milk; 1 cup of tea, cream full of sugar.

Lunch—1 cup bouillon; 1 egg; 1-2 cup string beans; 1 to 2 ounces of lettuce; 1 tablespoon mayonnaise; 1 slice of bread; 1 square butter; tea.

Dinner—Small serving steak (3 ounces); 1-2 cup beets; 1-2 cup lettuce; 2 tablespoons French dressing; 1 tablespoon oil; 1 1-2 squares butter; 1 slice bread; 4 teaspoons sugar; 1-2 cup milk; 1 cup tea. Add above diet of 2000 calories is for those rheumatics of normal weight.

For those overweight, reduction of weight is necessary, the following diet of 1000 calories is suggested by Dr. G. A. Harrop of Philadelphia:

Breakfast—5 large stewed prunes with cream; 1 poached egg; 1 slice toast; 1-2 glass milk; 1 egg; 1 slice Graham bread; 1 square butter; tea or coffee with 2 tablespoons milk.

Lunch—Clear broth; shrimp salad with 1 egg, lettuce, 1-2 cup of shrimps, chopped celery, 1 tablespoon mayonnaise; 1 slice bread; 1 butter; tea or coffee with 2 tablespoons milk; about 20 Mazda grapes.

Dinner—Sliced broiled liver with 2 sliced onions; dandelion greens; 1 saucerful with 1-2 square butter; 1 saucerful carrots; 1 tomato; 2 lettuce leaves, mineral oil mayonnaise; 1 slice Graham bread; 1 square butter; tea or coffee with 2 tablespoons milk; about 20 Mazda grapes.

THERE'S HOPE FOR EVERY WEEK

Less work and more play has been prescribed for King George VI, who is suffering from nervous strain and an attack of gastric influenza. This, it is hoped, is the opening wedge of a shorter working week for the English hour week. All the surviving sovereigns of Europe, except the Czar of Zog have worked hard, thereby accomplishing a great deal of good for their subjects if not for themselves. It is time their industry was recognized and rewarded by shorter hours and lots of days off, if they are going to do good business and most of them could now retire on pension.

The real difficulty is with the dictators. They are just as industrious and indefatigable as monarchs, and fond of mischief not only in their own countries but in other nations as well. If Hitler, for instance, could be persuaded to go on a fortnight's holiday, from 9 a.m. Friday, Saturday and Sunday off, what a boon it would be to Europe! A famous British week-end might become!

As it is now, there isn't an official in Downing Street, who dares to take a week-end off, except when he retires for his weekly holiday. Even the golf-links seldom are satisfied to watch his Lieutenants jump through fiery hoops and over political precipices on Sunday golf, but has to go down himself, slightly to the detriment of his stance in the wheat fields.

Perhaps the news doesn't even take Sunday off, doing most of his work while others sleep. He is wholly responsible for the policy and the purge at a moment's notice. The Chicago Tribune prints a reply to a manufacturer who sent letters to Congress begging them to demand nothing but "constructive" and optimistic news on the theory that this would be good business. The reply is interesting and more productive.

The Tribune's statement was this: "Lots of people would like to see nothing but optimistic news in their papers. That kind of a paper, they think, would help sell more goods. That is the kind of the newspaper which withheld for a long time news of banking policy wouldn't long hold the confidence of its readers That would be bad for the economy and equally bad for the advertisers.

"Some publishers may be short-sighted enough to ruin themselves for the sake of a temporary increase in advertising revenue. Others will continue to publish the truth as they see it and depend on the news.

"One other point may be stressed. The publisher has a responsibility in perverting the truth in the direction of optimism. It is also a responsibility in the direction of pessimism. If it is proper to withhold unfavorable news it is proper to bring unduly optimistic, if not actually false news to the public.

"The function of government is not to create a false impression of prosperity by withholding unfavorable news from the people. It is the function of government to make prosperity. It is the function of the press to report the news.

"Newspapers have a clear duty to their readers and that duty is not to print bad or good news and to withhold bad or good news for the benefit of any advertisers.

This Shrinking World

Within the space of two weeks we have witnessed four spectacular achievements of that new species of humanity—the flying man. Howard Hughes and his companions have circled the globe in less than four days. Douglas Corrigan has proved that a daredevil temperament and a "crate" can carry a man not only across an ocean but into the hearts of an admiring public. The flight of the Pan-American seaplane Mercury across the Atlantic in less than fourteen hours is another demonstration of what good engines, good instruments and competent fliers can do. Finally, on Friday morning, almost unannounced, the German seaplane Nordmeer, under the command of Capt. Wiedenhagen, a little less than 18 hours out from Foynes.

For a hundred years the world has been growing smaller. Now this shrinking has been enormously speeded up. Measured in travel time the globe is coming down to the dimensions of a pastille. Theoretically we don't have to let this happen. Practically we can't help it. Make drive to conquer space is as much a force of nature as the earth's inexhaustible energy under the sun. We can say with perfect truth that the air services of the future will be safer, will go faster and will have a longer flying radius than the ones we have now. Generations of men had dreamed about it. We had it. We were happy to live in an age that could produce such marvels. But now another thought is pressed. Some of the planes were carrying Hughes around the world, Corrigan to Ireland, Donald Bennett westward over the Atlantic, other aeroplanes employing similar principles of flight, were engaged on quite different errands. The marvellous machines invented by the Wrights, the engines the switch a small aeroplane into a lorry might claim credit, the delicate instruments that guide planes in flight, were being used in China and Spain to kill civilians. At any time they may be used for the same purpose in other countries. The military value of such killings is doubtful. Nevertheless, we have to expect them in any future war.

Beaver Spoil the Fishing

Before us as we write, there are several books, a temperature indicator, and several pencils and pens, but we are not seeing any of these things this morning. Our mind's eye sees and hears a beaver dam that is in a trout stream in the north.

Funny thing about this trout stream. It is not a big stream of water, neither is it very wide. But when one looks at the north in every other part of that country we invariably come back to this creek and we shall tell the reason why we care to take.

Nature has been most kind to this stream. It is bordered on both sides by alders for several miles. Remember the time we stepped into this water and waded every inch of it from a dense woods at the north to where it enters a dangerous black-bottomed lake. No one could wish that creek downstream today. The alders have spread over the surface of the water, thus preventing sun rays that would prevent man from wiping out every last trout in that stream.

Two or three times we have been on this stream this year and it has not failed us yet. The other day we were somewhat amazed to know why the water level of the lakes below was down so low. There came across the work of the greatest engineer in the world, the Canadian beavers.

This beaver colony has created a lake and above it, flooded a narrow valley for over half a mile. And as the path to other lakes further northwest crossed this valley we decided that something should be done to it. Therefore we went down to the beaver dam and opened it up a bit. The beaver had been busy preventing the trout in the two hours we spent on the dam. The water level had not dropped more than half an inch.

But we knew darn well that the beaver would be back in the marsh knew what was going on, knew that some person was interfering with their newly constructed dam and that long before we had put on the nightie and had turned out the light in the tent for the night that they would be busy undoing any damage that we had made.

The week-end we go back again to the same place. The same companions will be with us. We have work to do. In damming up this creek they are preventing the trout from getting from one lake to another and are driving them out of the lower lake.

Yes, we are not seeing very much forecasting this morning. The beaver are not worrying us any. They must not be injured in any way. We are human for that —but they must be kept in their place. Every March is up the path that crosses the valley they have floated and our big boots leak pretty badly back of the knees. And in Whitney Marsh, according to our timmy Manager, there are trout that are really and truly wild and hard to take. If there is anything left in the north country that is wild and hard to take we intend on its trail.—Harry Moore in Trenton Courier-Advocate.

Rendezvous in Copenhagen

The popular name for the main thoroughfare of Copenhagen is "Strøget"—an untranslatable word which means roughly a meeting-place, a rendezvous, a street where one walks both to see and to be seen. In other words, a "strolling street." In the narrow part of the long street most old and new Copenhagen, from the quaintly old to the largest shops, some built in modern style, some in the graceful 18th eighteenth century with heavy masonry and overhanging eves.

Above the shops overhanging hang trade signs, relics of the days when the guilds, which were very powerful emerged in the trade unions, flourished. Nevertheless the ancient signs still swing above the shop doors, as they did in the fourteenth century. Here is the rolling pin of the cobbler, the high hat of the hatter, the golden boot and the gilt plaited cake in a figure-of-eight) of the baker, the many-colored barber's pole, and many others, some two large neighboring windows in a modern shop front, and in the case can buy "all-day-suckers" as large that they must weigh at least half a pound. Each bears an inscription, suitable for some special occasion.

At Amagertorv, one sees the colorful blue glazed tile portals of the exhibition rooms of the Royal Copenhagen factory. They are filled with the mistly greens and blues of the beautiful models.

Almost in the square is one of the prettiest sights on Strøget—the flower market. The variety of these large stalks standing on the edge of the road from end to end, from beyond is a glimpse of Hofvorgiads, the flower market. The scene is bright with "flower and fruit women" in their bonnets and green aprons, and the fruit with masses of blossom.

Strøget continues up Celergade (Cast Street), where are some of the older portions of the city, and a short distance from the end of the small side streets bearing such names as Fiolstraede (Leather Street, and so on. The busiest hours are between two and four in the afternoon, when the shopping crowds comes less as the shoppers make their way to various restaurants.—E. A. K. in Christian Science Monitor.

CLAMOR FOR IT

Joe Louis did not foul Max Schmeling in the fight.

The kidney punch which sent Schmeling to the hospital is legal, and Referee Donovan says all, although formerly it was frowned upon by the boxing commissions.

The great majority of people who like to witness youthful scuffles are not content with clever and masterful boxing.

They clamor for the "frill."

The more blood is spilled he better they like it.

As in the days of Rome's gladiatorial colosseum, the spectators want to see a drawing-room show.

Joe Louis fought cleanly, according to the "rules of fighting" which run in this country, and only took advantage of an opening which Schmeling gave him to land a blow that determined the fight before the lightweight bouts get under way.

Any complaint which Max and his friends may have is not against Louis but against the spectators and the demand of the populace for blood and slaughter, which is back of the rules.—Detroit Free Press.

Superintendent Geo. A. Stokes Recently Moved to London, Is Feted by His Friends Here

Wired regrets of many officials of the Canadian National system who stated their inability to attend the gathering received from prominent Canadian National officials from points as far as New Brunswick, and were read by Mr. Logie.

"I have been given this job as chairman this evening, not through any wish or desire on my part, but simply because I have had the privilege of long association with our guest of honor," stated Mr. Logie. "During that time our relations have been as harmonious as those with other men of the division Mr. Stokes has been in charge.

Depended on His Help

"We of this division have had our ups and downs, the same as other divisions. There are times when we have been in the slump, call it depression, if you wish, and when that pressure was on, when the going was heaviest, we always leaned on Mr. Stokes. When we talked over our problems in his office, somehow, after the talk, they didn't seem so bad.

"When Mr. Stokes came to Belleville to take over the division ten years ago, he was a happy bachelor," remarked the chairman, humorously, "and he just was happy a bachelor. And he has shown strong signs of becoming an amateur photographer since the recent addition to the family."

On behalf of the maintenance of Way employees of the local division, chairman Logie again expressed the deep personal loss felt upon the removal of their former fellow worker, and conveyed the hope that his new promotion would be one of success of future attainment.

Mr. J. F. Pringle, General Superintendent, of Toronto, joined in the tributes so aptly expressed by the chairman. "We are all glad to be here and do honor to our friend and fellow worker, Mr. Stokes," he assured. "He does not like to leave Belleville any more than any one of you here. But in addition we are expressing the hope that he will find a new home, one such as he has made here.

Gathering Indicates Affection

"Your large presence here this evening demonstrates the regard and affection in which you have held him. From my fifteen years' acquaintanceship, I can understand this popularity he has deserves. May you find his successor, Mr. Duff, as capable and as popular as his worthy predecessor."

J. G. Murphy, Superintendent of Transportation, Toronto, pointed out that few were the chances given railroaders to compliment each other. Often, he added, such compliments were back-handed ones. On an evening such as Saturday's however, such compliments were well-deserved, paid to one who had justly earned them. "This transfer to the London division, one of the heaviest, comes as a result of recognition of ability. We of the system can only wish Mr. Stokes every success and a full measure of prosperity in his new field."

C. I. Warren, General Chairman of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, assured the gathering that the loss felt by the removal of Mr. Stokes from Belleville was a personal 'one on the part of every employee. Like good soldiers, however, officials of the line must be prepared to accept orders without question. "This is a trade at which there is bound to be moving and transfers from time to time, and though it means the starting of life anew in some other field, such orders must be obeyed," he declared. On behalf of the men of the "running trades" Mr. Warren expressed the hope that only friendliness and success would be the result of the transfer to London.

Workers Pay Tribute

"Any of us who have been associated with Mr. Stokes on this Belleville division can subscribe most heartily to all that has been said in tribute to him," assured Mr. E. A. (Abe) Saunders, Master Mechanic of the local division. "As an officer and a gentleman, he has proved his worth. As a golfer, however, in his new field at London, Mr. Stokes may be able to gain a few pointers, before he comes back here again, for in London he will play only two or three doors from the great Sandy Somerville.

"During the three years I have worked with Mr. Stokes, I have found him an inspiration, so has everyone else. Any time anyone who I ever went to Mr. Stokes always got the best of advice, friendliest help. Belleville's loss in the removal of Mr. Stokes will be London's gain."

Mr. F. Stinson, C.N.R. agent at Millbrook, was happy to add his tributes to the others that had been tendered the popular former superintendent. "And I'm glad to be here and visit with Mr. Stokes and the rest of the railroad family in a social nature," he added.

Introduced by Chairman Logie as a "man who had served the railroad faithfully and well in many many years of service which have recently ended with retirement," Mervley P. Duff, former senior clerk, declared he could only second all the remarks made by previous speakrrs in regard to the sterling qualities exhibited by the former superintendent. "I hope the new office will be one of success and further advancement," expressed Mr. Duff. "Upon this occasion I can only go back in memory to the days when we of the division and the office were all together."

Ability Is Recognized

Robert L. Johnston, Yard Master of the local division, declared the news of the promotion of Mr. Stokes was one which had been received by him with mixed feelings of regret and pleasure. Regret that Belleville and the division was to lose one of its most popular officers and citizens, pleasure that ability had been recognized and rewarded.

It was of the Belleville division ever have the opportunity of again serving him in the future, you may rest assured it will be with the same faithful work we have been privileged to give him in the past. We of the division can only pledge that loyal support to our new incoming superintendent,' stated Mr. Johnston.

Mr. R. W. Burns, assistant superintendent of Lindsay added his appreciation for the acquaintanceship of Mr. Stokes in the past, and expressed his hope for success in the new field. He referred to his friendship with Mr. Stokes over a period of many years, reaching from the time of his superintendency of Terminals at Toronto "when we had more scraps than on the Belleville division", declared Mr. Burns, "I, for one am sorry to see Mr. Stokes go, and in this I speak for all officers of the system down here. To the new superintendent, Mr. Duff, we can only give the assurance that we will co-operate to the same extent we have in the past."

Presentation of Chairs Made

Mr. H. Walter, representing also the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, conveyed his respects to the former superintendent and expressed the hope for future success and advancement. To all former workers of the local division the news of the transfer of Mr. Stokes had been received with a heaviness of personal loss.

To Newton Thompson, popular chief clerk of the local office, fell the honor of the greeting of presenting Mr. and Mrs. Stokes with an order representing two expensive easy chairs, which will help outfit the new home in London. Tiny replicas of the chairs, the work of some master craftsman of the division, were first presented the superintendent. Mr. Thompson also expressed deep regret at the removal of Mr. Stokes, declaring a loss that had its personal implications.

"I followed Morley Duff into the office as chief clerk, and I know the duties I took over were onerous ones. But from the first day I was in the office I was helped. My feet were put on the floor by Mr. Stokes. He has ever been of the nature of one wanting to help even the most minor employee," stated Mr. Thompson.

Following the presentation of the order, the speaker expressed the wish that in the future in his new field, Mr. Stokes would carry with him the respects, the regards and the regrets of his many friends on the local division.

Overwhelmed by Tributes

Mr. Stokes, apparently overwhelmed by the tributes which piled one upon the other as successive speakers were introduced, found the occasion difficult of utterance.

"This is an embarrassing position for me," he finally managed to say. "Words, if they come tonight from me, must come slowly.

"I don't know how to express my appreciation for the generous tributes you have paid me this evening. I know you have been sincere in everything that has been said, and I appreciate deeply the expressions which tend to show the esteem in which I have been held.

"I came to Belleville ten years ago last May. I knew only a few in this city, Jack Reid, Sandy Burrows, a few others. I came into a strange town and strange people. That was ten years ago, and in this ten years I have formed acquaintances and friendships I value most highly. Ten years ago I was younger; now I don't care to be reminded in later years they do when young. But in London I have more friends, and that city, like other cities of its size does not differ from any one of them.

Friendly Personal Chat

"In saying goodbye this evening I'd like to have just a few moments of friendly talk. Superintendents of the various divisions do not have to confine their talks officially as we can easy life. They find it necessary to be more stern disciplinarians. They are charged with the enforcement of rules, the issuing of demerit marks, the dismissal of employees when these marks reach a certain total.

"Rules, it is often said, are made to be broken. But that does not apply on the railroad where a lapse of memory or a forgotten act may cause heavy accident, loss of property or life. Those who work on the railroad must keep everlastingly on their toes. Eternal vigilance is the price of safety. Rules of the road do not rest with one fellow, but with every one who works on the line. When you handle the mail, the switches, make sure they're closed; engineers and conductors, make sure you have your terminal clearances before you go out. You yard men and conductors on way freights, remember when you are asked to have a car make a certain move that that move may mean considerable revenue for the company. Remember that competition is keen these days and is becoming keener still."

Mr. Stokes in a reflective mood, speaking slowly and in low tones, expressed again his regret a severing the ties of friendship in Belleville. "Railroad work, however, like soldering—one must be prepared."

"In London I'll not forget you here. There we have several old Belleville men working on that division. They're getting pretty well scattered out in the west. So the change will not be too great. And if you ever need me, call on me. If you are ever in London, look me up", invited Mr. Stokes, amid friendly Friends Take Over

At this point the meeting was handed over to the Belleville friends who had enjoyed the friendship of Mr. Stokes in the various fraternal organizations, the golf links, the Country Club and elsewhere. Mr. Fred Deacon, Jr., officiated as chairman.

"Skeet" (Burrows) asked me to do this job," informed Mr. Deacon. "And I speak for George Stoke's friends when I say I am happy to be here and hear the loyal remarks that have been made and expressed by fellow workers of the division. We who have been associated with Mr. Stokes at the Bay of Quinte Country Club have appreciated his friendship and his help as director of the Club. We can only express those good wishes we feel to Mr. Stokes and his good wife and express the hope that they will be happy in their new location."

Expression of regret at his inability to stay longer at the gathering from Mayor Jamieson Bone was read by Mr. Deacon.

In a dedication of fact to a similar friend and fraternal fellow, Mr. J. O. Herrity described the career of Mr. Stokes as one of inspiration for those who would follow.

"Geo. Stokes is the superintendent, the man at the top. He was the one to issue orders and enforce them. In spite of all that we have had testimonies here tonight from fellow workers of the harmony of appeal that has been evident, and we have had also those many expressions of regret at his departure from Belleville and the local division.

"In a career like that of Geo. Stokes there is inspiration for all of us. He has adopted as his motto 'I Strive Against Adversity.' In early days he did strive against adversity.

The Test of Ability

"Geo. Stokes has received promotion. Responsibility naturally falls on the shoulders of one big enough to carry them. The test of the man has always been what he is able to do. Rhinestones glitter, but they don't cut glass.

As an instance of the man himself, Mr. Herrity told of the time when on fraternal business in the city of Kingston, Mr. Stokes received himself for a moments, word to the telephone, and over long distance had a quiet chat with his mother, assuring himself that she was all right during his brief stay away.

"I always thought a lot more of Mr. Stokes after that act," confided Mr. Herrity.

Dr. Geo. Stobie in his eulogy declared that of the many addresses made, a chord appeared forgotten. "The proper note had not been struck in his opinion, "Geo. Stokes as I know him was a devoted son, and had a devoted mother. I have found than heredity has been a greater influence than almost anything else. What George Stokes has accomplished has been through his mother, one of the most lovely mothers a man could possess. That's what Geo. Stokes made his mark in life.

Two Citizens Lost

Belleville, pointed out Dr. Stobie, had lost two of their finest citizens recently, Geo. Ellsley and Geo. Stokes. Both took long and active part in the life of Belleville and in its institutions. "We hate to see these men go, but when called upon we must be content," he said. "Both men have received promotions from which we hate to part, but was the comforting thought, it was further pointed out.

Mr. W. H. Graham declared members had heard and witnessed the spirit of the gathering impossible. "In fact so glowing have some of these tributes been to Mr. Stokes that I'd like to rise up and pinch myself to look at this bird to see if it is really him," stated Geo. Graham.

"George has been a good fellow and we all like him immensely. We have been proud of him as a citizen in this city, and we are sorry to see him go. All we can hope is that the worst that can happen to him from now on is that he will come back and stay with us for a while.

As Past President of the Belleville Rotary Club, J. B. Boyce merely wished the opportunity of extending on view observations" when called upon unexpectedly. "We have heard Geo. Stokes extolled here tonight, and there are some of the things with which I agree. Mr. Stokes has come in one of their experiences, but their education won't be complete until they have been through the 'Devil or the Yerrow speak", stated Mr. Boyce.

Belleville Premier Division

"It has been said here that the transfer of Mr. Stokes to London was a promotion. The gentleman who said that should reconsider his remarks. Belleville division has always been the premier division of the Canadian National, and it always will be". (Applause) For an "extemporaneous or ambidextrous speaker", Mr. Boyce informed his listeners, he advised railwaymen present that when they received comfortable, dependable transportation, "they should come and look me up".

Friend of years of standing, Mr. Sandy Burrows, declared his sincere regret at the loss of Mr. Stokes and Mrs. Stokes. "We can't afford to lose those fellows," he added, mentioning Mr. Illes.

At this point Mr. Burrows delved under one of the tables and reappeared bearing an expensive looking golf club bag. "As a token of the esteem in which we, your Belleville friends, have held you, Mr. Stokes," added Mr. Burrows, making his way to the head table. "We wish you to take this bag as just a little remembrance of us when you are up there in London".

In a brief address of acceptance, Mr. Stokes once more with deep feeling voiced the sense of loss that would be felt following his removal from Belleville. "Any success I may have had in this division has been due to the co-operation and support that has been given me by my fellow workers and Belleville friends," he stated.

New Superintendent Speaks

Mr. O. W. Duff, Divisional Superintendent, who succeeds Mr. Stokes in Belleville, introduced at the gathering declared that though his stay here had been only for six or seven weeks so far, his acquaintanceship is being extended gradually. "I thought when I was in St. Thomas I had the best friends in the world, but here in Belleville I have met same very fine people. As time goes on, my stay here will be made the more enjoyable. At this time I can only join with the rest in wishing Mr. and Mrs. Stokes every success in their new field. George Stokes has been and will be an acquisition as a citizen and to the railways as an officer," stated the new superintendent.

During the evening Mr. S. R. Burrows acted as song leader, assisted by Phil Huffman and at the piano, Mr. Chas. Spalding acted as unofficial master-of-ceremonies.

Don't let them spoil your Summer

It sometimes seems as though those spiteful Rheumatic twinges in your joints bring you up with a jerk deliberately—just when you're specially enjoying yourself. How often the prods of pain catch you the very minute you bend over at work or play. Don't listen to those who say there's no relief from Rheumatic trouble with its Uric Acid crystals like prick and pain. For can help dissolve these crystals, and curb Rheumatic pain.

Wealthy people "take the waters" at some European Spa. Nothing better for those who can afford it; for those who can't there's a simple remedy of a similar nature. Fynnon Salt is the name—known gratefully by many Rheumatic sufferers.

Take a 3/4 teaspoonful in a glassful of water every morning. It liberates Sodium, Potassium and Lithium—a combination of "Salts of the Earth" that help disperse Uric Acid and remove from your system the poisons that cause it. Take Fynnon Salt, the enemy of Rheumatic pains, and see how fine you feel, how pain goes. Large bottle of Fynnon Salt, 75c at all druggists.

Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Tisdale left last evening on a trip to the Pacific Coast and will visit Vancouver, Victoria and Seattle.

Miss Mary Carmichael has returned to the city after spending two weeks' vacation in Detroit and Stoney Point, Mich.

Mrs. Russell Richards of East Bridge Street, left by motor for Vancouver with Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Grant.

Miss Prudence Reid and Miss Stella Ray of Norval are spending their vacation with friends and relatives in the city and district.

Mr. and Mrs. George McIntosh and daughter, Jean, have returned home from Toronto, after spending their holidays with Mr. Salt, Bank of Montreal.

City Engineer Charles A. Mott, Mrs. Mott and Miss Evelyn Tilley left on Sunday for a week's motor trip to Niagara Falls, Buffalo, Rochester, Syracuse and other New York cities.

Mrs. Percy Crawford and baby Joan, left for Dartmouth, N.S., to spend two months with Robert Crawford, who is in the Air Force there.

Chief Constable Alex Kidd and family are spending their vacation at their summer cottage at Crow River. Sergeant Arthur Harman is acting Chief Constable during the absence from the city of Chief Kidd.

Miss Frances Sullivan and Mrs. K. A. M. Dyson are holidaying at Wasaga Beach.

Mr. and Mrs. E. F. Pickers, 179 Ann Street, are today celebrating their Sixty-first wedding anniversary.

Miss Synder, of Kitchener, Ont., is the guest of her sister, Mrs. Arthur Jones, John Street.

Mrs. Steele of Toronto, is in the city visiting her father, the Rev. A. L. Geen.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Chown of Calgary, Alberta, are the guests of Mrs. Chown's sister, Mrs. Florence Moon, Highland Avenue. Mr. and Mrs. Chown are both former popular residents of this city and they are being welcomed by many old friends.

Visitors from Toronto, London, Peterborough, Kingston and Trenton, mediate points gathered in large numbers on Sunday to assist in the celebration of the birthday of Mr. Sam Pappas, 153 Charles Street. Mrs. Pappas was also feted by the many friends among whom were many Belleville people.

Weddings

COONEY—SILLS

A quiet, but pretty wedding was solemnized on Saturday night, August 6th at the Trenton United Church parsonage, when Marjorie Donna Pearl Sills, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Sills, Trenton, was united in marriage to Orval Stirling, (Special)— An event of social importance took place last Friday at the summer home of Mrs. Mabel Burch, Oak Lake, when she entertained at a trousseau tea in honor of her daughter, Miss Betty Burch, whose marriage takes place shortly. The many articles of Miss Burch's "hope chest" together with lovely wedding presents and shower gifts were attractively displayed throughout the pretty rooms of the cottage, while the tea-table set for the bride-to-be was the last word in charm and daintiness.

A dainty buffet tea was served during the afternoon, the assistants being Mrs. Hiram Mellon, Mrs. Frank H. Pedley, Miss K. Mundy, and Mrs. Jas. Lagrow all of Stirling.

Out-of-town guests included Mrs. W. Wiggins, Campbellford; Mrs. Jos. Wilson, Wooler; Mrs. A. E. Dobbie, Smith's Falls; Mrs. (Dr.) Wilkinson, Toronto; Mrs. Blanchamp Payne, Mrs. Ross Alford, Mrs. Clara Hill, Belleville; Mrs. Gordon Smith, Mrs. Meadows, Irwin, Johnson, McCrary, and Waite of Madoc.

Little Benny's Note Book

We were eating supper being as it was in honor of Pop's boss, and I said, Us fellows had a relay race in school and I run the fastest of any of them, because my side won and it was the last one to get home. Pop passed a payments behind when I started, so that proves it and Mamma is the champeen.

Be careful of that saucer of beets, he said. I am not sure that it is safe trembling when Nora makes pickled beets, because one drop of beet juice certainly creates a damn Havoc on a tablecloth, she said, and Pop said, Shiney Martin tried to be his own boss and he is in a private race. So I had some beets on my plate and him easy as a bean, so I guess I'm pretty good of a runner.

I will not make a moderate demand on that ability the next time I send you on an errand, instead of giving an immitation of an athlete in a slow motion picture, Pop said, and I said, I will, if you jump the furthest from a stand, too because I can do that.

Then for land sakes try to jump in attention when I try to tell you something, instead of giving me a blank faraway look that's perfectly disgusting, she said.

Me thinking, Aw heck what's a girl and ma said, Well of all things, I do want to congraduate you after the fight Willyum, he's got a perfectly strate left in the 3rd, she said, and pop said, By golliss so he has, the human man let me have your hand.

Maybe he reached over and did.

Proving the only time you're libel to get credit is just because you did something unexpected.

INDIAN'S BODY

Ontario. W. Borland, 30, fell into Wolf Lake near Kingston while bathing, and Alonzo Chamberlain, 16, went dow in the St. Lawrence River while swimming near Cornwall.

Five children were among the week-end's victims. William Wilmot, 5-year-old son of Mrs. Stanley Wilmot, 5-year-old son of Mrs. Stanley Wilmot, was struck by a truck at Stoney Creek, near Hamilton; and 7-year-old Emilio Gasparini was hit by a motor car as he rolled a hoop on a St. Catharines Street; May Brophy, seven, was shot fatally by a car near Wallaceburg and 21-months-old Mary Morris died of burns received when her clothes caught fire from a kitchen stove.

Doreen Adams, 18-months old, managed to reach a kitchen cupboard in the home of her parents in Cornwall and swallowed a pill. She died after eating about a dozen tonic pills. Suffering a broken back in a fall from a heavy load of hay, Joseph Lamoureux, 60, died in Hawkesbury hospital.

Mrs. Cooney and the late James Cooney of Stockdale. Rev. Mr. Campbell officiating.

The bride was attired in a white silk dress with navy blue jacket and accessories. Mrs. Gerald Curry, sister of the groom, acted as bridesmaid and wore pink crepe with white accessories.

The groom was attended by Mr. Stanley Sills, brother of the bride.

The young couple left on a short motor trip and on their return will take up residence in Picton, Ont.

WESTFALL—DUTTON

A pretty wedding took place at eight-thirty this morning at the Church of St. Michael the Archangel, when Thelma Mary, second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Austin Dutton, became the bride of Mr. Walter George Westfall, son of Mr. and Mrs. Westfall, Mt. Hope.

Rev. J. P. Nicholson, V.G., officiated.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a lovely frock of beige and British tan, with matching hat and accessories and corsage of roses.

Miss Phyllis Dutton, sister of the bride, was bridesmaid and wore navy blue and yellow with corsage of roses.

Mr. Jack Bean was groomsman.

Mrs. James Grant played wedding music and during the signing of the register, Mr. Jack Fanny sang.

A buffet luncheon was held at the bride's home following the ceremony. The bride's mother, wearing navy blue sheer, and the groom's mother in a flowered Independence blue gown, received with the bride and groom.

Later Mr. and Mrs. Westfall left on a wedding trip, the bride travelling in a royal blue knitted suit with white accessories. Upon their return they will reside in Belleville.

You and Your Vacation

Are You Traveling by Train? (IV)

Some Do and Don't For Train Travellers

Don't monopolize an entire seat when you see that other passengers are looking for seats. If you wait until you have to move you may not draw such an agreeable seat-mate!

Don't put your feet on a seat cushion.

Don't monopolize (with your group) the conversation in an observation car, or the radio in a lounge or club car, or the mirror or bowl in the dressing room.

Have a considerate regard for people's nostrils. Don't pack a lunch-box with odoriferous foods; don't eat bananas or juicy foods in day coaches; and don't use heavy perfumes when you are travelling.

Don't smoke at times or in places when you are not supposed to. When you have finished smoking, press your cigarette or cigar . . . don't leave it smouldering. And in the dining car, use an ash tray, not your plate or saucer, for the ashes.

Don't greedily turn a seat over and place your belongings on it.

And when you make inquiries, make them of the proper official or attendant.

Children on Trains

We cannot expect children, when they are travelling, to remain contentedly cozy in their seats . . . to be entertained for long just "looking out of the window". We should not expect them to abide by adult trip behaviour, but, on the other hand, they should not be allowed to be noisy or to dash boisterously up and down the train aisle. Keep them amused and contented (plan to provide them with a book (most happily a book with pictures), or a simple toy or game, or an engrossing puzzle.

Announcements

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am going to be married soon and I would like some advice. I am going to be married in a very quiet way, and have a wedding breakfast for the immediate family only, then leave soon after the breakfast. Do you think it would be proper to send out invitations to my friends, even if we are not having a reception? Or do you think it better to just have the announcements sent out after the wedding?

D.

This is all a question of your own choice and plans. If you are having comparatively few guests to the ceremony, it is not at all necessary or appropriate to send out formal invitations. The most appropriate way to invite relatives and friends to a small wedding is either by verbal invitation or by a note written by the bride's mother or by the bride in the name of her mother.

If you are inviting only a few guests to the ceremony and have a wide list of relatives and friends near and far, whom you wish to inform of your marriage, then the sending of formal announcements is a great convenience. These should be all ready before the ceremony . . . engraved, addressed, stamped . . . so that they can be mailed immediately after the ceremony has been performed.

Sylvestri died at Copper Cliff, Northern Ontario, Saturday.

Harry Nichols, 75, was injured fatally near New Liskeard when struck by a car that did not stop.

Two persons died and five others were injured in the Kingsmere lake car crash near Newmarket, south of Toronto, Saturday. The dead were Frank Williamson and a companion, Thay Kendall. Both were Toronto residents. The 16th fatality was that of Launcelot Vader, killed in the traffic mishap near Madoc, in Hastings County. A woman was injured.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

(Copyright, 1937, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)
Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

A Young Girl Commands Attention

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'm 16 and in my third year high school, having just finished second. I love athletics and always spend all the time I could in the gymnasium, and now play out-of-doors, tennis and swimming being my favorites.

A certain young man of about 21, who lives near my home, comes over and sits on our front porch and talks to me almost every evening. I think he's quite nice, and he always says flattering things to me, but has never asked me to go out. I hear he has a very good job.

Shall I try to win him, or shall I just stick to my athletics and be friends with him?

Iola.

I think for a young lady of 16 you're making very fair progress indeed, in having a nice young man sit on your front porch and say flattering things to you. Just keep to rush things too hard; and why should you limit your giving to athletics? Perhaps that's one of the things he admires about you most.

A Matter of Economy

Dear Miss Fairfax:

How much cash on hand should a young man have before he asks a girl to marry him? I have a regular job and have been given to understand by the man for whom I work that my job is permanent, and there is prospect of a raise.

Still, it's very hard to save anything, because my girl likes to go places almost every night. We go to the movies, and then have refreshments, or we go for a swim at the beaches and we go to dances. But try as hard as I will, there's nothing left over to start a savings account.

William.

Have you ever discussed the matter of economy with your girl, and told her how hard it is to get ahead if you spend every cent you make on amusement? Some girls are positively dumb when it comes to this question. They're in love, and want to be married, but never think of encouraging the boy friend to save a penny.

Some girls want to be on the go all the time, and sometimes expect some fairy godmother—like Cinderella's—to appear on the scene with the necessary cash to enable them to marry. But alas, the day of the fairy godmother has passed!

A Difference in Ages

Dear Miss Fairfax:

After three years of widowhood, I met a young professional man in his early thirties. He is handsome, brilliant, and all the girls rave about him. He told me he believed in free love. He also said he would like to marry me, but could not on account of the difference in our ages.

There has been a lot of gossip about us, and he said he had to keep away to protect his reputation. Should I encourage him? He says that I try to find companionship and love which no man can bear my own age. Since I've known him I've lost all interest in others and he just heartbreakingly fascinating.

He won't even come over and call, and I still can't see why he should let gossip worry him so much if he really loves me as he says.

Widow

While I think this young man's advice that you become interested in someone nearer your own age is probably excellent, I don't see a possible thing to do. When girls all "rave" about a man, he is probably thoroughly spoiled and is not worth wasting time on.

The "free love" argument has been used more than once as a convenient excuse for love affair. Please try to take an interest in someone more worthy.

The autobiography of Lincoln Ellsworth, explorer in both Arctic and Antarctic, conqueror of both poles, is told in his book "Beyond Horizons". This book is important not entirely because of the author's account of his explorations but because it is something of a departure from the usual type of success story. Lincoln Ellsworth was born rich; his father was one of the world's wealthiest citizens, an art patron of great means who has as his guests most of the world's prominent artists, writers and musicians—among them Paderewski who played for him privately. It is thus remarkable that record in finance, as author should choose for himself, in spite of parental opposition, a life of perilous adventure and hardship in the uncharted wastes of the world. He twice accompanied Amundsen on polar expeditions; twice flew with explorers to the Antarctic and at other times explored Baffin Land, Labrador, Colorado and California. "Beyond Horizons" is a valuable record of great scientific contribution but it is also a story in personalities. Exploration's expeditions are not all sweetness and light and differences arise when nerves are taut and rations are low. For all these things the author says "Exploration—the contest of mind and physical powers with the blind forces of nature—is the greatest sport."

The well-known author of travel books, Richard Halliburton, describes the wonders of the Western Hemisphere in his new book, "New Worlds to Conquer". Representing the cream of his adventures in North and South America and Europe, readers may travel with him to the ruins of the ancient and modern world. No dramatic incident or fascinating legend has been omitted, and the book is enriched with numerous large photographs to make the story complete.

"Trials in Burma" by Maurice Collis explores the conflict of principles which bests a British member of the Indian Civil Service. Mr. Collis appointed in 1928 District Magistrate of Rangoon. Important in the story is the Burmese mind in the midst of discontented Burmese waiting only to throw off the yoke which British imperialism was put to a severe test. Told with admirable humor, the author weaves his personal history of the exotic Burmese scene. Because of the precarious state of the world, the author feels that it is today the obligation of himself and anyone in a similar position to do so, to underline the unworthiness and futility of "snatch and grab" in human relations. "We have not yet completely grown out of our earlier passionate and dominating view of empire," states Mr. Collis, "If this record can help to bring us close to what I believe to be our right mind, it will have done all that was written to do."

Readers of Gordon Brinley's delightful book of song "Away to the Gaspe" and "Away to Cape Breton" will welcome his latest volume in which Dan and the Duchess explore Alberta and the Canadian West. "Away to the Canadian Rockies and British Columbia" is a charming book as was the others. Readers will Enroute they visit the West's largest rodeo, make a long pack trip through the Rockies by the Indian tepees, fish for trout in mountain streams, live on a dude ranch in Valley and Vancouver. It is a book to give any reader wanderlust and the many beautiful water colour illustrations by Putnam Brinley are in the tradition of pictorial record of Canadian beauty spots. —K.G.

Theatres

AT THE McCARTHY

"Women of Glamour"

Sparkling comedy, with undertones of human, emotional drama, portrayed by a cast of brilliant artists, makes of "Women of Glamour" at the McCarthy theatre, one of the most entertaining photoplays of the season.

The cast is headed by Melvyn Douglas, whose gift for mingling comedy with subtly illustrated drama "She Married Her Boss" and "Theodora Goes Wild," playing opposite Virginia Bruce, in the role which gives the best role of her career in this Columbia picture. Gordon Wiles, credited with the direction has done a fine job.

"Women of Glamour" tells the story of Melvyn Douglas, as a wealthy young artist who becomes fed up on the sham and greed of the social set. He is engaged to marry a prominent socialite, played by Leona Maricle, who has posed successfully for the newest painting representing sacrifice. The painting lacks something, and Douglas, to show his contempt for those about him, purposely sits at a party at which the canvas is unveiled.

He runs away from the party and under the influence of too many cocktails, drives reckless up the river road. He meets Virginia Bruce, a night club girl who has fled from ashes from another party taking place on a yacht. Both become unconscious when she drives him to his home.

Douglas is attracted to her, a girl who comes from a world outside his own, because he sees something good in her. She becomes his model and he starts to repaint his masterpiece. Unconsciously he begins to mould her into the type of girl he wishes to marry. In the moulding, complications set in that makes excellent entertainment, sending comedy, drama and pathos.

Melvyn Douglas, Virginia Bruce and Leona Maricle all give excellent finished performances. Reginald Denny as Douglas' playboy friend whose intentions toward the girl are honorable, if debatable, delivers an excellent portrayal as Lowell Nelson, also of the night clubs and hard boiled life, gets many laughs. Others in the splendid cast of "Women of Glamour" are Thurston Hall, Clarissa Selwyn, Mary Forbes, Charles Cass and Mitzi Mortis. It is a sure fire romantic-comedy that never lets up a single moment in dialogue, gay humor and all other ingredients that combine to make good, clean entertainment.

The same subjects that have been arranged to precede the above are without doubt the finest yet shown at this modern, up-to-date and are sure to please all patrons who have become regular attendants to the McCarthy.

An excellent Harry Langdon, Bermuda.

Following dinner the President, Mr. Chas. A. Ostrom extended a hearty welcome to those present attending. He also expressed sympathy for those families who had suffered bereavement during the past year.

The minutes of the 1937 meeting were read by the secretary and accepted.

The same officers were re-elected for the coming year and Miss Gordon and Mr. Ralph Rutherford of Campbellford were elected as a sports committee. The date of next year's picnic was set for Aug. 3rd and it is again to be held at Scarlet Beach. A vote of thanks was extended to Mr. Yeates for the use of his very suitable picnic grounds.

AT THE BELLE

"Woman Against Woman"

The age-old triangle of a man and two women still finds novel and up-to-the-minute treatment in "Woman Against Woman" at the Belle theatre, in this instance the man, Herbert Marshall, is a band; and the women, Virginia Bruce and Mary Astor, are his sister and his wife, respectively, with the first determined that his marriage to the second shall not be a success. In the hands of this trio of stars and their fellow players in the film, with Marshall turning in a performance that rivals that of his father-in-law in "Mad About Music."

Miss Bruce is more charming than ever and continues the steady dramatic advance she evidenced in "The First Hundred Years," and Miss Astor gives a skilful interpretation of a most sympathetic role.

A picturization of Margaret Culkin Banning's national magazine story, "Women Territory" the film presents a group of equally sparkling and featured characterizations among them, Janet Beecher as Marshall's mother, Marjorie Rambeau, Joseph Crehan and Juanita Quigley.

"Beloved Brat"—Added Treat

Another film that once shone brilliantly in front of thousands of movie-houses is Dolores Costello— makes her appearance on the screen when that lovely and capable young actress will be seen in "Beloved Brat" in which she is featured with the "Toronto Star" of Miss Granville, whose performances in "Stage Door Canteen," "Maid of Salem" and most recently "It's Love I'm After" have won her her world-wide acclaim as one of the outstanding child actresses on the screen today.

Other notables in the cast include Donald Crisp, Henry Mowbray and Lucille Gleason.

The Belle latest World News Events round out this well balanced program.

Madeleine Carroll and Henry Fonda in the season's timeliest screen hit "Blockade" will close its engagement at the Belle theatre, slap-stick comedy, entitled "Dogone Minnow" a Boyd Gibbons' true adventure story entitled "Dear, Old Dad" that tops the preceding one of the series, shown a few weeks ago, entitled "Shop Girl Evidence." Josephine Hutchinson, radio and screen artist in a Broadway musical-comedy "The Lambs Gambol". The a clever all technicolor musical carnival that is held as the first yet produced this year "Isle of the Dingo Pongo" all combine to make up a splendid bunch of worthy entertainment in addition to Melvyn Douglas and Virginia Bruce in "Women of Glamour."

winner of a crisp new dollar bill was Mr. Art. Grier. Suitable gifts were then presented to the oldest and youngest present, Mr. Joe. Bell, 86, of Oshawa, to the oldest lady, Mrs. James Grills, 76, of Thurlow, to the youngest baby Beatrice Pearl Craighead, 10 weeks old, of Campbellford, and to Mr. and Mrs. Garnet Grills, of Hamilton, Bermuda, for travelling the farthest distance.

During the afternoon a sports programme was carried out with the assistance of Barry Townsend and Mr. Fred Scott. Prizes were awarded the winners in the races and for the small children there were candy and peanut scrambles.

Water sports were enjoyed by many during the remainder of the afternoon. Others spent the time renewing old acquaintances and making new friends.

Why Child Destroys Property

By GARRY C. MYERS, PH.D.
Head Department Parent Education, Cleveland College, Western Reserve University

THERE HAS gone abroad a curious doctrine about destructiveness in children, particularly in pre-school children. Ernest Mannimg for example, in "Common Sense and the Child", says, "The destructive impulse in the child, whether of his own or of another person's possessions, always has its roots in some psychological conflict; it is never the thing in itself the child seeks to destroy, but some idea associated with it, or something for which that particular article stands —such as adult authority or interference." She would have been nearer the truth, in my opinion, if she had said "sometimes" for "always" and "not always" for "never."

Douglas Thom comments on this matter more wisely, I believe, in "Everyday Problems of the Everyday child." P. 186, though he seems to give adequate place to habit; most psychiatrists don't, it seems to me. "Destructiveness may be due to jealousy, anger or perhaps some vague, intangible mental conflict, deep-seated and of long standing, or possibly to some new and rather trivial environmental situation in which the emotional reaction has been excessive."

Look for Annoyances

If you find your child of eight or six, or even four, noticeably destructive, do look for possible annoyances of the child which you may have been a party to. Nevertheless, you can be pretty sure that when undue emotional strain upon child seems deliberately to destroy his own or other persons' property, he is resorting to some earlier bad habits as an outlet; that somewhere along the line of his training he has failed to acquire desirable regard for property; has lacked training in being careful with it, has failed to acquire wholesome inhibitions. Whereas you need to be very cautious in the handling of the present case, you will know that you have ahead the task of cultivating in the child at once the most desirable emotional, wholesome attitudes and habits in regard to property.

Those of you who have younger children, just beginning to toddle, may well begin now to exercise great thought and effort in training these young children to handle properly with care, and to learn that deliberate destruction is accompanied with immediate satisfaction.

You are also going to strive to prevent unnecessary annoyance in your children. One of the best ways is to establish a few essential inhibitions in the child which he learns to accept automatically without any doubt whatsoever; then to lead him into a wide, wide range of activity in which he will be safely free to do as he likes to find rich enjoyments. But don't fool yourself to believe that nearly all destructiveness is due to conflicts. Rather conflicts are the means of setting off bad habits of destructiveness which you have allowed the child earlier to develop.

Dance Frocks Are Frilly

Fluffy Baby Types of Organdie and Lace With Ruffles Are Preferred for Gala Nights on Roof Gardens, at Country Clubs and Resorts

By LISBETH

THE FRILLY baby type of dress is the summer favorite this season. To a certain extent we are going sleek and slinky for the autumn and winter, but just now we are definitely feminine—definitely.

The gay young things who haunt the roof gardens, the country and yacht clubs, resorts and all the places where frivolity reigns, are wearing organdies, nets, laces, etc., to dance the hours away before they go back to business or school.

At left is an August dance frock designed by Patricia Perkins of Los Angeles in sheer cotton baby blue lace trimmed with a deep ruffled flounce of organdie. Tiny organdie ruffles outline the square decolletage. The corsage is an old-fashioned bouquet fastened to a royal purple velvet sash.

"True" "Baby" Type

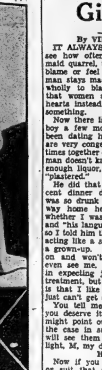
On the right is another dress from the same designer. It is the true "baby" type, in pastel organdie with diagonal bands of narrow Val lace. And in true baby dress fashion, it has a full flounce edged with the lace at the bottom of the skirt, a similar ruffle around the square neckline, and a velvet sash tying with streamers at the back.



For later, when the fall season opens, these same girls probably will wear somewhat the same type of dress in taffeta or crepe—taffeta being a perennial favorite with the debs and co-eds. The rayon taffetas are also very smart for the new dance frocks they are showing.

A charming dress of taffeta, called Blue Danube, shown for the college girl, has a wide, flared skirt and peplum, the latter faced with a contrasting color and a wide laced girdle of the gay sash.

Heim's evening dresses for the younger set suggest the Louis XVI influence. They have close-fitting bodices and skirts that are held out slightly by stiff petticoats.

The fluffy silhouette is also used by this couturier and his dresses of this type are given romantic names like "Danube Blue," "Rubis", and "Snow White."

The polonaise is revived in a quaint dresse of his called "Josephine."

Left, summer dance frock of sheer cotton baby blue lace trimmed with organdie ruffles, purple velvet sash. Right, plaid organdie dress with organdie and lace frills, velvet sash.

"Nice Boy" Is Angry, Girl Says

By VIRGINIA LEE

IT ALWAYS pesters me a bit to see how often when a man and maid quarrel, the girl takes all the blame or feel apologetic when the man stays mad, even though he is wholly to blame. It must prove that women are built with their hearts instead of their heads or something.

Now there is M, who met a nice boy a few months ago and has been dating him since. The two are very congenial and have grand times together except that the young man doesn't know when he's had enough liquor, and proceeds to get "plastered."

He did that little thing at a recent dinner dance they attended, was so drunk that M. says on the way home he 'didn't even know whether I was in the car or not,' and "his language wasn't very nice, so I told him that I thought he was acting like a small child instead of a grown-up. Now he's got a mad on and won't call me up, won't even see me. I feel I was right in scolding just a little better treatment, but the awful part of it is that I like the boy so much, I just can't get over it."

You tell me to bawl you out if you deserve it. You don't, but I might point out a few things—put the case in such a way that you will see them in a little different light, M, my dear.

Has a Flaw

Now if you had bought a dress or suit that you liked very, very much, but that had a flaw in it, you would take it back and regretfully decide it was not for you, wouldn't you? With this young man has a flaw and a serious one. He don't seem to be drinking so much as his whole attitude. He thinks at high time you girls took a decided stand on this business. No girl is safe with a man who has had too much to drink, and when he insists upon driving a car, her life is in danger.

He was not responsible for what he said and did while drunk. He probably doesn't even remember it. But he was responsible for getting into that state and he isn't the little boy of boy you should be running around with—no matter how nice he is otherwise—if he lets himself get into that condition when he is responsible for your safety, to say nothing of your good time. "He sure is gentleman," you may say in melodrammer."

Scolding him when he was drunk didn't help any, because he was in no condition to take it. But don't you think that he is fully aware now and that it would be better for you to put him out of your life? No matter how well suited you are you don't have much time with him while he has this fault.

J. B.—I haven't the address or correct name of the girl you ask about, as I am afraid I cannot get in touch with her. Maybe she had intended to drive before this, or is learning.

STYLE WHIMSIES

Easy front fullness is important in the new fall skirts, although they do present a narrow appearance. Gores, unpressed, flares and rippled flares are important, too.

High necklines are in distinct favor in the new fall dresses.

Fashion still approves the dirndl style for informal frocks, for daytime and evening frocks.

In this high style again for early fall wear is the white satin overblouse with closed neckline and long sleeves, having some sort of draped effect brought about by shirring.

REMOVING WHITE RING

To remove white ring from a mahogany table, rub it gently with a cloth dipped in piece of chesterfield which has been saturated with spirits of camphor. Let the camphor evaporate first, so that the article is barely damp, not wet. Later, polish the table with any good wax furniture polish.

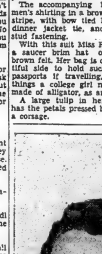
ROSALIND RUSSELL



By Central Press

THE TWO-PIECE suit is a 'must' for travel, and also for the co-ed going back to school.

This suit, worn by Rosalind Russell, film actress, is made of imported brown wool. The skirt's small box pleats are stitched at the hips to retain a slim line under the jacket. The jacket has one patch pocket and is belted.

The accompanying blouse is of men's shirting in a brown and white stripe, with bow tied like a man's dinner jacket tie, and tiny pearl stud fastening.

With this suit Miss Russell wears a saucer brim hat of matching brown felt. Her bag is on the bountiful side to hold such things as passports if travelling, or all the things a college girl needs, and is made of alligator, as are her shoes. A large tulip in her buttonhole has the petals pressed back to form a corsage.

Bananas Are Good Foodstuff

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M.D.

THE BANANA bears fruit but once. When it is garnered, the tree is cut down.

Such want of her usual prodigality on the part of nature would seem to argue that the banana has special virtues. And this argument is upheld by the suffrage of mankind for five centuries or more, and by the considered verdict of modern dietetic science.

The original home of the banana probably was Asia. The Arabs, in the course of their traffic in slaves and ivory, moving across Africa, gradually carried it from tribe to tribe. Historically, it emerges into documentary recognition in 1482, when the Portuguese found it on the Guinea coast of the Atlantic.

To America, this fruit was brought by Father Thomas de Gerlanga, in 1516. He planted a few banana roots on the island of Santo Domingo. Its introduction to the United States was probably as late as 1850.

But our grandfathers had no experience of this delicacy, because not until 1899 did the banana industry assume any proportions here.

Advantages as Food

As a food it has many advantages. It has more foodstuff and less water than any other fresh fruit. It contains 22 per cent. starch or sugar and thus is high in energy requirement. It also contains considerable protein. Its vitamin value is good. It is also palatable, appetizing and highly digestible.

For these reasons and others, it has deservedly become popular as a form of reducing diet. Several years ago Dr. Harrop of Baltimore, suggested the milk and banana diet for reducing. Milk and bananas make up a fairly balanced ration, combining together all the food elements and most of the vitamins and minerals. Besides, bananas are "filling" and satisfy hunger better than most foods.

When used as a continuous diet, one or two large bananas are used with a glass of milk for breakfast and lunch. For the evening meal, the diet may be modified by serving a clear soup, a slice of lean meat, one or two portions of a green vegetable, a slice of bread and butter and a portion of uncooked fruit.

QUESTIONS FROM READERS

D. B.—Here are the symptoms of lead poisoning, and some of the causes. Is it curable; if so how? Can you prescribe a simple home treatment?

Answer—The symptoms of lead poisoning are cloel, tremor, constipation, lead line on the gums, postulating of a line of minute blue dots), paralysis and albumin in the urine. Causes are absorption from paint, water in lead pipes, and, in fact, any way in which food or drink may be contaminated with lead. Sometimes it is absorbed through the lungs—a strange epidemic due to using battery casings as fuel in domestic stover having been reported.

Poems That Live

"GOD SAVE THE KING"

God save our gracious King,
Long live our King!
God save the King!
Send him victorious,
Happy and glorious,
Long to reign over us,
God save the King!

O Lord our God, arise,
Scatter his enemies,
And make them fall.
Confound their politics,
Frustrate their knavish tricks;
On Thee our hearts we fix,
God save us all!

Thy choicest gifts in store,
On him be pleased to pour,
Long may he reign.
May he defend our laws,
And ever give us cause,
To sing with heart and voice,
God save the King!

Singer Gives Opera at Home

By LILLIAN CAMPBELL

THE LITTLE THEATRE, always a big highbrow, has gone into grand opera, this summer. For in Bethel, Conn., Mme. Queena Mario, for 15 years has sung leading soprano roles with the Metropolitan Opera Company, is putting on acts from opera at her farm home.

The whole thing started because of the paucity of openings for young singers who are ready to make their debuts," Mme. Mario told reporter. "The Metropolitan, of course, engages only finished artists. The same is true, in lesser degree, of other opera organizations.

"Now I believe there are many embryonic Flagstads and Lily Ponselles in this land of ours, girls standing on the border line between the well-trained amateur and the professional, who are ready to step out into the operatic world if given a chance. And that is just what I plan to do—to give a few talented youngsters the opportunity to sing a few arias with finished artists who are well established in the operatic and radio field."

Experienced and distinguished singers from the Metropolitan and other professional opera companies are taking parts with amateurs in these performances, at Mme Mario's home in a reconditioned barn, and all the season is by Joseph Novak, of the Metropolitan Opera house staff.

French Chocolate Cake Layers Filled With Orange Cream, Topped in Chocolate

By MRS. MARY MORTON

Menu Hint

Iced Fruit or Tomato Juice
Cold Sliced Meat
French Fried Potatoes
Mixed egetable Stuad. Spinach
French Chocolate Cake
Iced Tea

I am giving you another good cake recipe. This menu may give you a hint what to serve to some guests at dinner or luncheon. You can use bottled milk in the cake and icing recipes just as well as you can the evaporated. The latter is easy to keep on hand, especially in the summer time, to use in place of the fresh milk, or to conserve your supply of fresh milk.

Today's Recipes

FRENCH CHOCOLATE CAKE — Two-thirds cup cocoa, one cup boiling water, two cups sugar, one cup shortening, two cups sugar, one and one-third teaspoons vanilla, two and two-thirds cups cake flour, one-fourth teaspoon salt, one-half teaspoon baking soda, two-thirds teaspoon baking soda, two-thirds cup granulated evaporated milk, scalded with two teaspoons lemon juice; four egg whites. Mix boiling water and cocoa together until smooth then shortening and sugar. Add vanilla and cocoa mixture, flour, then measure. Resift with salt and soda. Add alternately to the shortening-sugar mixture with the scalded milk. Beat thoroughly, then fold in stiffly beaten egg whites. Pour into three eight-inch layer cake pans that have been well greased. Bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees) 45 minutes. Cool, spread orange cream filling between layers and cover cake with chocolate frosting.

ORANGE CREAM FILLING — Three tablespoons sugar, one tablespoon cornstarch, one-half cup evaporated milk, three egg yolks, one-half cup orange juice, one teaspoon grated orange rind. Mix sugar and cornstarch on top of double boiler. Add milk, milk until smooth and cook over boiling water until slightly thickened, stir until thick. Cool. Spread between layers of cake.

CHOCOLATE FROSTING — Six tablespoons evaporated milk, one-half cup sugar, one tablespoon butter, one-half cup chocolate bits, one teaspoon vanilla. Boil milk, sugar and butter together for three minutes, stirring constantly. Remove from heat, add chocolate bits and vanilla. Beat until cool enough to spread.

Veal Paprikash

One pound veal, one onion, one tablespoon lard or similar fat, one teaspoon paprika, salt to taste (one-half teaspoon), one cup sour cream. Slice veal very thin. Fry onion until tender, as free from slivers as possible. Cut in cubes. Chop onion, cook to a light yellow in melted fat, add paprika, mixing it in well. Put in the meat and brown on all sides. Add salt, cook at simmering until meat is tender, about one hour. Water may be added, but only a small amount, one cup, not more than one-fourth cup. When meat is tender, sprinkle a little flour over it, about one tablespoon, stirring it in well. Just before serving add cream, stir well, heat through and serve.—Miss Florence O'Leary.

Washing Chintz

Unless you have bought the new permanently glazed type of chintz it cannot be washed, as the glaze will come out. The permanently glazed type may be laundered as you would any washable drapery. The first kind mentioned must be dry cleaned.

ALL WOMEN'S FACES BENEFITED BY THESE GENTLE EXERCISES

By JULIET SHELBY

Central Press Writer on Beauty

TODAY'S girls are going to give you some exercises for your face muscles. Don't think that you are either too old or too young to have these gentle little motions benefit you. If you are in your teens, then they will prove to be wonderful preventive measures. If you are in your forties, then you will find these exercises will strengthen and tone muscles that have begun to sag and droop.

Women need to give their face muscles a workout much more than men do. A man's face gets its daily dozen every morning when he shaves. If you don't believe us look at your husband on the first day next time he is shaving.

The lines, creases and wrinkles that you see in people's skin are the result of motion. Muscles are attached to the underlying structures of the bones and are constantly expanded and contracted. In so doing, the skin is pulled and stretched. This is what produces facial expressions. Late in life wrinkles appear as the muscles, unable to stretch the skin, weaken and become relaxed. When you skin has lost support it begins to sag.

So correct exercises will do much it does not eradicate lines it will tend to make them fainter and less conspicuous.

LEAH RAYE

Puff Cheeks

First—Close your mouth and puff. Your mouth will pucker and your cheeks will fill out as though you were playing a bagpipe. This pulls the muscles around the mouth and helps to make them firmer.

Second—Roll your eyes. Start with your eyelids wide apart. Then rotate your eyeballs very quickly. First do it ten times to the left and then do it ten times to the right. This will strengthen your eye muscles.

Third—Look into your mirror. Place the first finger of one hand under your eye and the middle finger of the other hand over your eye. The object is to hold down the lower lid gently while you try to close your eye. In closing it your fingers offer resistance. This makes the muscles work harder and consequently strengthens them.

Fourth—Look into your mirror. Clasp your forehead, near the hairline, between the thumb and index finger of your left hand. Now try to stretch the forehead downward by voluntary muscular effort. This helps support the brow and helps to

Yanks and Pirates Increase Lead; Cochrane Fired; Corbys Have Edge

Ruffing Hurls Two Hit Ball, Hubbell Shelled Out, Giants Collapse; Cochrane is Retired

Pirates And Yankees Fortify Top Rung Positions Over Weekend

DEL BAKER SIGNS

To Manage Tigers in Place of 'Mickey' Cochrane Who Was Dismissed

By HUGH S. FULLERTON, JR.
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

One reason why the old argument as to what is "press" when an irritation force meets an immovable object never has been settled is that one or the other always fails to live up to advance notices. That's the case in the "press-circuit" tilts in which New York Yankees and Pittsburgh Pirates, currently the fastest-moving forces in Major League baseball, met up with the clubs that were supposed to be the strongest barriers ahead of them—Cleveland and the Giants. Yankees, by routing the tribe 7-0 yesterday made a clean sweep of the series and stretched their lead to 3½ games. The Pirates, after losing the opener, scored a decisive double triumph yesterday over the Giants 8-1 and 13-3 to gain a 4½ game margin.

There were other interesting week-end developments, notably the sudden dismissal of Mickey Cochrane as Detroit manager and the elevation of Coach Del Baker to his post Saturday night and Rock Newsom's unsuccessful iron man pitching effort for St. Louis Browns, but they aren't likely to have much effect upon the pennant races.

Giants Collapse

More to the point were the collapse of the Giants and the way the Yanks rode the Giants' mistony 10 hits all told, including two homers by Joe Gordon and the usually reliable Carl Hubbell was belted out in the seventh inning of the doubleheader for his second decisive defeat within a week. Red Ruffing held the Indians to two hits while Lou Gehrig, whose hitting hasn't been of the best, virtually settled the game when he hit his 162d homer with Joe Dimaggio aboard in the fourth.

The Tigers, with Baker at the helm, walloped Boston Red Sox 7-2 as Hank Greenberg connected his 36th home run with two aboard in the first inning.

Cincinnati Reds, with a chance to oust the Giants for second place by sweeping a doubleheader from Brooklyn, lost two tough ones instead 11-10 and 5-4 and finished tied for third with Chicago Cubs, who first trimmed Boston Bees 7-1, then yielded 9-0 for Dizzy Dean's five-hit flinging.

The Reds had a five-run lead in the first inning of the opener, but Johnny Vander Meer gave out three walks in the same inning and the Dodgers eventually won with three in the ninth. Ernie Lombardi and Babe Ruth objected so strenuously to a decision that he was benched for the first time since he became a Brooklyn coach and later Manager Durocher suspended him.

Newsom couldn't even draw a crowd, only 5,810 turning out for his double effort. He beat the Athletics in the opener, 3-2, going up eight hits, fanning nine and receiving the support of two homers by Harland Clift. The A's knocked him out early in the second game, and went in to win 8-5.

Sox, Senators Split

Washington and the White Sox split a pair of slugfests, Chicago taking the first 14-5 and the Senators the second, 12-3. Claude Passeau pitched for Phillies to a six- hit 6-3 win over the St. Louis Cardinals, but the Gashousers took the rain-shortened nightcap 5-1.

The Yankees defeated Cleveland 7-3 Saturday while Boston walloped Detroit 14-8. Washington won 7-1 from Chicago and Philadelphia defeated St. Louis Browns 8-4.

In Saturday's National League games Cincinnati defeated Brooklyn 11-4 and Boston shut out the Cubs 1-0. St. Louis Cards won from Philadelphia.

Yesterday's Stars

(By The Associated Press)

Red Ruffing, Yankees—Blanked Indians 7-0 with two hits.

Jim Tobin and Dutch Brandt, Pirates—Tobin pitched four-hitter to beat Giants 8-1. In opener, Brandt allowed one run, four hits in seven inning relief trick to win nightcap 13-3.

Hank Greenberg, Tigers—His homer and drove in three runs in 7-3 win over Red Sox.

Roy Rosen, Leo Durocher and Fred Fitzsimmons, Dodgers—Rosen's ninth inning triple drove in tying and winning runs in 11-10 opener over Reds; Durocher's homer with one on led to winning rally in 9-8 win; Fitz pitched six-hitter for 6-3 win.

Chet Bryant, Cubs and Jim Turner, Bees—Bryant allowed seven hits in 8 1-3 innings, hit triple and two singles and won opener 7-4; Turner's vie-hitter took nightcap 5-0.

Claude Passeau, Phillies, and Bill McGee, Cardinals—Each pitched six-hitter in doubleheader split.

GOLF FACTS NOT THEORIES
By Alex Morrison
Tournament Confusion

A short time ago Henry Picard was reported to be many points ahead of the field in the golf event at Cincinnati. The day following this report word came that Sam Snead had won the event. The reports sent out failed to explain how the points were won and lost. It seems that there were 15 of the leading players and during seven rounds every player had to play every other player in the tournament.

The individual matches were staged on a match play basis with the full 18 holes being played out in each case, the winner being credited with a point for every hole he was ahead at the end of the round. The boys went around in threesomes and the points were computed at the end of each day. The event brought out some mighty interesting dope on the relation between match and medal play. Picard finished the seven rounds with a total of 480 strokes, Snead took 487 and Sarazen had 497. Other players ranged from 500 upwards. In spite of his lower medal score, Henry finished back of Snead and Sarazen on account of points.

Among other things rome mighty fine nines and eighteens were turned in. Billy Burke was out 34 only to be four strokes to Picard who did the nine 30. Tony Penna had a 36 on the first and one day with a short putt for a 64.

Keep Arms Below Shoulder

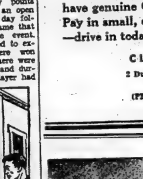
My dentist occasionally gives me a chance to get even with him, by asking for help about his golf. I say that matters are somewhat even because he seems to be about as unfomfortable with a club in his hands as I am with one of his drills in my teeth.

One of my instructions has bothered him a lot, it has to do with a point about the swing namely, the position of the arms and hands at the top of the backswing. As the average golfer gets the hands of many good players appear to be much higher than their heads and this position seems to be a contradiction of my advice about the height to which the hands should be limited.

I tell all my pupils to try to keep their arms and hands below the level of the left shoulder at the backswing and the right shoulder at the finish. The object of this is to help them bring about the right relation between the arms and the body. Upon this relation depends the co-ordination between body and hands.



The arms are raised above the shoulder level there is no correct relation in order to be successful. Sometimes level seems arbitrary because action pictures of players with hands appear to be well above the level of the head. This is but an illusion as you would see if the player stood up straight.

Sports Roundup

(By Sid Feder, Associated Press Sports Writer)

New York, Aug. 8 (AP)—Note to C. McGillicuddy, Philadelphia: Why not have Mickey Cochrane come back to the Athletics....He could help a lot with those young fellers down your way....And he's too grand a guy to be out of baseball....I'd and when Don Budge turns pro, watch Joe Pred Perry and Ellsworth Vines to put on a holdout unless they get just as much do-re-mi as the redhead....which sends his check to Uncle Sam.

Fitzsimmons photographers want one of those hee-haw shots of Greybound, the-trotter, his trainers give him a chaw of tobacco....And the hoss-laugh comes right out.

In spite of that double kicking around they handed the Giants yesterday, the Pirates look all tired and pooped the front office isn't making it any easier for 'em....Even though the souks have been playing a heavy schedule the last couple of weeks, the boss won't give 'em a day off for exhibitions....One reason the Red Sox are sticking up there—they're played six extra-inning games this year, and won all but two of 'em....It's exciting Elwood Cooke the classy Portland tennis prospect, $1,000 to play into the eastern net circuit this summer....He's one of the few making the tour at his own expense—and won't quit until he makes the Davis Cup squad.

Ought to be a contest to find out why Joe DiMaggio's hitting is 10 to 20 points heavier on the road than in the Yankee stadium....Ground rule wise boys are barred!....Mickey Cochrane is writing a book on the down and whys of baseball....But he (and about 1,000,000 other guys) still don't know why the Tigers let him out.

The Milwaukee public courts Polish lad, who won the Canadian singles tennis championship in straight sets on Saturday and is now seeking a place on the United States Davis Cup team.

A long streak of injuries at second base on Connie Mack's New York Giants resulted in another fling at the majors for Chalmers Cleveland (ARCHIE). Whitehead went out early with injuries, Chiozza was erratic, Ryan failed, Kampouris was purchased from Cincinnati but didn't click, Coscarart came back but was injured, and then Manager Terry bought the veteran Cleveland infielder. Hopes his worries for the second base sector, at least, are over for the season.

CORBYS WIN HANDILY 15-2 OVER GROCERS

Losers Use Three Hurlers; But Fail to Stop Slugging

ONE GAME UP

In an abbreviated eight inning game, that was terminated by impending darkness, the Corby's A.C. not only downed National Grocers 15 to 2 at Coleman Plats on Saturday, but took a commanding lead in their play-off series in the Belleville and District Softball loop semi-finals. By virtue of their one-sided victory on Saturday, Corbys have a one game advantage having won two and lost one in a best-three in five series. The other two games on Tuesday with the ultimate winner meeting Point Anne in the City Championship.

Pounding the offerings of three National Grocer hurlers for a total of 17 safeties, the Corby's A. C. romped home in a 15 to 2 victory. The potent bats of Coach Chuck Barnett's aggregation spoke with renewed authority, Barnett himself batted at practically even terms un til Corbys came with a big rally of three runs in the fourth and scored in each subsequent inning to rattle home nine runs in the last two frames of what resulted in a lopsided player contest.

Every member of the Corbys crowd punched out at least one safe single, Hamilton of disrupted Art Cole, the first sacker. Sinfield was the only National Grocer lad to man to get over one hit off Harold Dracup, his contribution being two hits. Dracup eased off although he did strike out nine. Robson starting on the losers, being replaced by Hunter in the fourth, who in turn gave way to Vasil, who continued, although hit-hard, until the umpires called the game on account of darkness in the first half of the ninth.

Punching out hits with abandon, the Corby's A. C. softball squad proved to these too skeptical, that they are still a powerful machine after watching them wallop National Grocers 15 to 2 on Saturday evening many are ready and willing to concede them not only the right to advance into the O.A. S.A. playdowns, but the city softball title at this time. "They're too tough on us pitchers," bewailed Freddie Vasil, number one hurler for the National Grocers. A sizable amount was "put down" on Corbys on Saturday at odds of 2 to 1, with many of the so-called "smart guys" of softball taking ample chunks of the small end. No doubt the desire or hope for the defeat of Chuck Barnett's nine prompted the takers, rather than the expectations of winning.

Corbys A. C. are one up with two to go. Another win will entitle them to meet Point Anne in the city finals. The boys within the softball realm appreciate the ability of Pitchers Johnnie Bawden and Stan Loffler. Point Anne's two tried and proven moundsmen, but still the boys from the upper district in the City Corby's bats. Frankly speaking it should prove an interesting series, that is unless Hal Kemp's charges kneel their current seven, a feat which is only hoped for, but fits, expected, say veteran softball mentors. Point Anne annexed the Belmont kids in three straight and it is expected the Corbys gang will win their series with National Grocers in four games, but it is conceded the series is far from over, however.

Oshawa drew first blood in the C.O.D.L. playoffs downing Peterboro' 10 to 5 in the Motor City on Saturday. The lion's share of the victory went to Jake Biddle, Oshawa's southpaw hurler. The Peterboro Kids failed to solve the initial frame, an advantage that seemed sufficient for Frank McNally. Perch Perch imported hurler from Boston, to cling to and coast into victory, but the Oshawa potent bats spoke in the second when they clipped McNally for many a base hit and four runs. Two runs in the third saw McNally cerricked. Incidentally we hear McNally will never be as popular in Peterboro as was Al Heckler, the old baseball maestro. That is, unless he changes his manner of being.

In the second and third inning Biddle punched out two timely hits, that started Oshawa on the road to victory. It was an exceedingly hot day in Oshawa on Saturday and Biddle was all in except his shoe laces along about the eighth, but he had had three hits. As the Peter jammed the bases in the ninth, "Tip" Miller, Oshawa skipper was wed to his dugout and said—"Get in there and pitch, you big hunk. You haven't had anything on the ball all day."

Yes, and I'm failing of my hitter," replied Biddle, for a quick come-back, that left Miller speechless and without a chance of retaliation.

On Wednesday night Lou Ambers will defend his lightweight title against the hard-hitting Henry Armstrong, now holder of the featherweight and welterweight crowns. It is seldom a fighter handles two classes as did Armstrong, when as featherweight champ, he hopped over to the welterweight class to battle for the welterweight crown this spring. Now Armstrong returns to meet Ambers for the 136 pound crown. Incidentally we doubt if Armstrong will ever again make the featherweight class of 126 pounds, although he still holds that title. Both Ambers and Armstrong came up the hard way, overcoming a chance against their future success, it seemed. Ambers is an unorthodox fighter and has never been knocked out since gaining ring prominence, the Armstrong supporters should bear that in mind, even if Armstrong is a remarkably hard hitter possessing seemingly endless stamina. The result of Wednesday night's scrap will be eagerly watched by all fight fans.

Remember when Joe Louis registered his 20th k. o. in professional fights just three years ago last night. He floored King Levinsky, the Chicago fish-peddler, in one round. Louis won the world's championship two years later.

The announcement of the retirement of Gordon Stanley, "Mickey" Cochrane as manager of the Detroit Tigers came somewhat as a surprise over the week-end. Proving there is no sentiment in baseball the once dynamic Cochrane, who led Connie Mack to the first American League pennant and world's championship in ten years, broken in health has retired to a Wyoming ranch to rest. Cochrane has go down in baseball annals as one of the game's great catchers and outstanding ball player.

HODGE PODGE—The Cubs and Pirates did right good jobs over the week-end, as they respectively downed their nearest opposition to make substantial gains in the major leagues.... It took the Lachine Canoe Club of Montreal to bring back the paddling honors to eastern Canada at the C. C. A. Championships in Kingston on Saturday.... There is talk of an $85,000 artificial ice rink in Toronto, reported to be erected by the city and used also as a community hall and agricultural exhibition building.... to Leafs won two o.. of three over the week-end, snatching off a winning streak for the Queens City blisters.

Canadian Paddlers Win Seven Events

Alexandra Bay, N.Y., Aug. 8 (CP)—Canadian paddlers, winning seven of 11 events, captured major honors yesterday in the first annual international St. Lawrence River canoe regatta.

The Winnipeg crew of Stewart Weir, Bob and Douglas Groff and Jack McDowell, raced home in the senior four-man single-blade event, one of the feature races of the day.

John McFeer and Harry Vourakis of Ottawa combined to win the junior tandem single-blade race, while Doug Groff captured the senior single-blade, and later combined with Weir to win the senior tandem single-blade race.

Doug McDowell and Bob Groff captured the junior double-blade tandem, and Barry Behan of Sudbury, Ont., won the junior one-man single-blade race.

Willard Jackson, George Dundas, Johnson and Nichols Peoples of Montreal won the men's four-man junior single-blade race.

CHINESE JUNKS ARE JAP WAR TARGETS

A few hours before this photo was taken, the Chinese junkman and his brother were peacefully purusing their way down the winding Hai river, not far from Hankow, China. Suddenly a Japanese bombing squadron sailed overhead and rained explosives on the defenceless junk fleet believing—according to an army communique—that they carried arms and ammunition. The brother now lies seriously wounded in the bottom of the sampan, bomb fragments in his chest, while his civilian relative frantically seeks the safety of the shore. And the Japanese army is no nearer Hankow.

TEMPLE RECOVERS, R ESUMES HER TOUR

Shirley Temple, recovered from an illness that hospitalized her for seven days in Boston, rejoiced when permitted to visit historic points that city before leaving to resume her interrupted tour. The gun Shirley is handling is really a cannon from the famous U.S.S. Constitution, more affectionately known as "Old Ironsides." She put her hand injured during the tour of the Charleston Navy Yards—but not from playing with the guns. An automobile door banged on her finger.

COOGAN, MOTHER SHAKE—SUIT GOES ON

Meeting again when the youthful actor gave a deposition in connection with his suit for an accounting of film earnings which he estimated at $4,000,000. Jackie Coogan is shown clasping his mother's hand for the first time since they became embroiled over his income as a child movie star. Mrs. Bernstein, Jackie's mother, kissed her son — but it was indicated that the suit will go on.

AGED 102, CLIMBS 387 STEPS

Des Moines, Ia., Aug. 8 (AP)—For John Jones, who is 103 years old, it was a busy day. The centenarian who vows he's made up his mind "to live to rest of his life," came here with his grandchildren to do the town. As the grandchildren pleaded for rest periods in the 90-degree heat, Jones climbed 387 steps to the State Capital dome and relished through the various rides at an amusement park.

AUTO COLLIDES WITH SHIP

Buffalo, N.Y., Aug. 8 (AP)—When an automobile and a ship collide, that's news. The ship, the coast guard patrol boat Crawford, was anchored at the foot of a waterfront street. A car smashed through a fence and plunged to the dock. Two occupants of the car were arrested on misdemeanor charges.

Children of Royalty Start Their Holidays

The royal kiddies don't look very happy about it all, but actually they are vacation bound. Prince Edward, left, and Princess Alexandra, children of the Duke and Duchess of Kent are shown here as they left their parents' home in Belgrave Square, London for Bloody Point House at Sandwich, to spend the holidays. The Duke and Duchess expected to join them there on returning from Europe where they attended the funeral of Queen Marie of Roumania.

'Mickey' Cochrane Removed as Manager of Detroit Tigers

Detroit, Aug. 8 (AP) — Gordon Stanley (Mickey) Cochrane, who managed the Detroit Tigers to American League pennants in 1934 and 1935, was removed Saturday night as the leader of the club, a victim of what Owner Walter O. Briggs termed "Baseball."

Announcement of his dismissal was made by Briggs, who said he and Cochrane had reached the parting of the ways at a conference following Detroit's 14 to 8 loss at the hands of Boston Red Sox Saturday.

Delmar Baker, a native of Sherwood, Ore., and a member of the Tiger organization since 1916, was to be joined the club as a catcher, was named the new manager by Owner Briggs. He was given a contract for the remainder of this season and one for next year.

Owner Briggs said Cochrane, reputed to have been the highest paid manager in baseball with an annual salary of $45,000, would be given his pay for the rest of the season.

"There is nothing that I can say at this time except that I am out," Cochrane said after Briggs had announced his dismissal was made by Briggs, who said he and Cochrane had reached the parting of the ways at a conference following Detroit's 14 to 8 loss at the hands of Boston Red Sox Saturday.

Cochrane indicated that he would take a vacation for about a month before seeking a new connection and taking another crack at baseball.

"I haven't had time to think of anything" Cochrane said. "I was notified after the game that I was through. I want to get my bearings before I say anything."

Later Mickey said he would leave Tuesday with his family for a month's vacation on a ranch near Cody, Wyoming.

"After that I'm going back to take another crack at big league baseball," he said.

A statement issued by Briggs said he and Cochrane conferred, and "it was agreed he would no longer continue his connection with the Detroit Baseball Company."

"I regret sincerely," the statement said, "the termination of our baseball relationship, both from a personal standpoint and because of the contribution which Mickey Cochrane made to Detroit and the club when he came here as manager and catcher five years ago."

WITH THE LAWN BOWLERS

GEO. E. WATKIN

No doubt the members have been wondering where my notes have been for the past week. I have been spending a week's holiday at my summer home on Cedar Street and am now ready to go to work again.

Our mixed doubles last week were well written up in the paper by Claude Tice, but there are one or two comments I would like to make.

It was, I think, one of the best tournaments held on our greens since I have been a member.

There were some real teams from outside points and the games were very close.

The surprise was that when the totals were counted all three first places were taken by Belleville teams and in each case the skips were using new players.

Special mention must be made of Mrs. Sandercock, Mrs. Jobson and Mrs. Neste, they all deserved to win.

Our secretary and chairman at games are back; now let's go to work.

There is a meeting of the executive, tonight at seven sharp. Be on time.

The ladies hold their tournament on Thursday this week. Let us hope we have the weather. Charlie Sulman will be behind the plate, with myself on bases. The refreshment team ahead of him.

Some members will be pleased to hear that Mrs. McLean is doing nicely after his accident.

On Wednesday, last week, Charlie Sulman went down to Kingston to cheer a cup he won last year. He not only succeeded but went one step further and took first place and took the larger vessel. Charlie and his team are to be congratulated. The best teams in Eastern Ontario enter this game. They say youth will tell but Charlie is bad medicine for any team. The team consisted of John Shaw, E. Calcher, Rod Mitchell and Charlie, skip.

Abe Wonacott, I was there too.

On Friday night we had a real good game of trebles. The winners were: Mrs. Chambers, Mrs. Jobson, Mrs. Ward, Mrs. Hyde, Harry Thompson, Russ Woodley, Harold Cross, John Kikus, Harry Hales, Bill Harden, Clarence Clapp and Frank.

Frank and Mrs. Correll are on holidays for three weeks. Here's hoping they have an enjoyable time.

Mrs. MacIntosh had a slight accident on the greens on Saturday afternoon.

There'll Be a Hot Time in the 'Ol Town
THIS WEEK!

Many people will suffer unnecessarily from heat this week. They will fuss and fret and fan themselves as they scurry from counter to counter and store to store, looking for something.

Save steps, these hot days. Sit down in the shade of a cool porch. Glance through the advertisements in the newspaper. Find what you want before you go to buy it.

That's what advertisements are for. You can trust the advertisers to tell you about bargains in the ads. You can save money and minutes and many a headache if you read the advertisements — and HEED them.

The DOCTOR" by MARY ROBERTS RINEHART

All in all, life was not too comfortable for Chris that summer. Lily, without Katie about, had slumped into a comfortable lethargy, and the house was in chronic disorder. The heat was terrific in the mill district, and men were drinking water from a river which, as Ted Lawrence said, was too thin to plow and too thick to drink. And Chris's tea too many sometimes even to see Beverly at all.

Then one day out of a clear and boiling hot sky Jerry Ames came back from where he had been arriving armed with flowers for the sick woman and a ring in a box for Beverly — to learn of her engagement.

"Engaged?" he said, white-lipped and incredulous. "To whom "

"To Chris Arden."

"The doctor fellow! I don't believe it. You're not serious, are you?"

"Very serious."

"I don't get it," he said finally, "It isn't you. What sort of life will you have?"

"The sort I want, Jerry."

"How do you know what you want? I suppose this is your mother's work. She never liked me. Anybody else, but not me."

"What do you mean by that?"

He laughed. "Listen," he said. "Are you telling me that this fellow without a nickle to his name simply walked in here and asked you to marry him? I don't believe it."

She sat very still for a long time after he had gone, striding out of the house, his face still rigid with anger. And it was true, Beverly Chris had come to her because he loved her. Jerry was angry, jealous, was also hurt and humiliated. What did Jerry matter, or what he said?

Down in his room Chris, preparing for sleep, found that Lily had put a book, a book of Henry's on his table, and carried it to bed with him. It was "Trabajo," and on his eyes fell on the line Harry had quoted:

"The Worldly Hope men set their Hearts upon

Turns Ashes, or it prospers; and soon,

Like Snow upon the Desert's dusty Face,

Lighting a little hour or two — is gone."

He put the book down and stared for some time at the disfigured wallpaper.

He was more cheerful the next morning, making his rounds contentedly enough, walking in the heat, although he lamented rather that the air fail like a hot stove. And toward evening he turned down the overtime from so feverish child to examine some faint pink spots on the abdomen, and then straightened with a set face.

It was typhoid again.

Katie had become Miss Walters. She had done so as easily as she had drifted between the clean sheets of her hospital bed that first night and ultimately gone to sleep.

In her closet were hanging her striped uniform dresses, the skirts made for Mrs Barker to escape the floor by two inches; below them sat her high black shoes with rubber heels, and on the closet door hung a paper bag marked "Laundry." The room was hers, the furniture new, also, since this was the new, Lewis Nurses' Home for the training school. A bed, a bureau, a table, and two chairs furnished it, with a scrap of rug in its exact center.

She was excited and more than a trifle suspicious of her surroundings. The glimpses she had caught of the nurses had showed her a sober and efficient group, and the appointing each of everything rather disturbed her. But already that first evening she had decided on several matters: one was that she disliked Miss Simpson, sitting behind that desk of hers with her black silk dress swirling about her, and keeping her standing while she inspected her through her glasses.

"You will be given three months, Miss Walters," she had said "In that time you will have to show whether you will be competent to run your course or not. The work is exacting. We can afford no mistakes. You will be given a trial, and it is your duty to carry them out."

"That's all right with me."

Miss Simpson eyed her carefully. "Your name is Elizabeth, Miss Simpson."

"Not — Miss Simpson," said Katie suddenly meek.

"Another thing. I have accepted you on probation, young as you are, because doctor Arden thought you would do well here. I hope you will live up to that, but you understand that there are very rigid regulations as to intimacy between the staff. No former acquaintanceship can stand them means anything while you are here. The doctors are your superior officers, nothing else."

"If you are referring to Chris Arden—"

"Doctor Arden. No. I refer to all the men connected with the hospital."

But she had meant Chris. Katie knew that and writhed under it. She was to let Chris alone, was she? She liked the manner of the Nurses' Home as little as she liked Miss Simpson: a short, heavy woman with her hair parted and drawn back into a tight knot on her neck.

Nevertheless Katie, lying in her bed that warm summer night, felt a faint pricking — of excitement. They did not like her, those two old women, but she would make good in spite of them. She would work and learn, and some day she would be accepted. Then Chris would see that she was. She closed her eyes and thought of Chris.

By noon the next day Katie was dropping on her feet. She had endured innumerable days, bed pans, and feeding cups. She had been taught to change a bed without lifting the patient. Her back was aching from leaning over, and her head was teary from hospital odors. But she was young and quick.

It was a hot and wilted Katie whom Chris found when he came in that afternoon. Long before he came she had recognized that slightly arrogant step of his in the hall, and had hastily run her hands over her hair. Coming into the ward, he went directly to his case, and only nodded to her. When he had finished, he stopped for a moment.

"Well, Miss Walters, how does it go?"

She flushed at his impersonal tone. "All right, Doctor. It's pretty busy, but I'm learning."

"Good," he observed, and went out again, leaving her resentful and hurt.

He had kissed her good-bye, and now she was Miss Walters and a stranger to him. She went back to her work, her mouth set and her eyes misty, but that night was almost the first time in her rather detached young life she shed bitter tears alone and in silence.

It was within a few weeks of that time that the typhoid hit and hit hard. The heat had continued and the cases crowded in, after that first case of his had carried a bottle of city water to Dickinson and the hospital and so infected it. It was a grim one and he took it hard, personally.

"Looks like a problem in arithmetic to me, son. What's it about?"

"Typhoid. Not a case, but many."

"Well, tell 'em to boil their water. That's the idea, isn't it?"

"They won't do it, Jenkins."

"Then they deserve what they get. Can't you quarantine them?"

Before he left, however, Chris had decided in a way. He sat and wrote on the wall. "Boil all water," it said. "By city order."

Jenkins read the last three words.

"I'm part of the city," Chris said, "and I order it. What's wrong with that?"

"You won't be part of it long if you raise a fuss, son. Get this, Chris. Either you're with the crowd, or you're not."

But there came a time when even the Lewis papers printed daily the order that the city water be boiled. A major catastrophe was threatening, and Lewis and the machine were beaten and knew it. The opposition press was bitter and outspoken, pointing out again and again that the river was a sewer, that the city had no proper filtration plant, and that the houses in the mill district were largely dependent on wells and had no sewage system whatever.

Cases poured into the hospital. Katie, rushing from this to that, had to make her way around cots which sat everywhere, even in the halls.

For Chris it was merely a repetition of the year before, coupled with a fresh indignation. It was hard to face Lewis those days, or even to conceal his resentment from Beverly.

Days went by when Beverly never saw him, or when he dashed in to hold her for a moment and then dashed out again. When he came in an hour with her, he was worn and haggard, too tired to talk, too tired even to notice her increasing aloofness. Actually he lost the battle during those weeks, although he did not know it until later. For Beverly needed him and needed him badly. She was worn to a thread, high-strung and taught. Her mother, rousing out of a stupor in the middle of the night, would find her beside the bed, a haggard young figure of despair in a dressing gown over a thin nightgown, and try to send her back to bed.

Annie herself was only half-aware of her, occupied as she was with the tedious business of dying. She had no curiosity now, only an infinite patience. Sometimes Staunton sat by her bed, but it was rather late to make much difference, now that it was interesting to see him at last under something that he could not dominate. She would have preferred a son at her side. Some one, for instance, to say:

"See here, old girl, snap out of it. Where's that hand of yours? Hiding out on me, aren't you? Such a pretty hand, Mother. Nobody has hands like yours."

Once or twice she asked for Chris with some miracle he found time to see her. She would doze off and rouse to find him sitting quietly beside the bed, big and dependable. He had very little to say but sometimes he would reach over and take his hand over hers; and once he said that she had beautiful hands. It was like her dream come true.

There was no time for love-making during those days, no time even for sleep or for decent living. People were dying like flies in hot tenement rooms, in shabby little houses. The end of September saw Chris worn in body and mind. He had hardly seen Beverly for a fortnight. He worked furiously, as always with a sense that the battle was lost before he began. Then on a hot day there was a call, and he rose from sleeplessness, and revolt in his very soul. Chris found a bright young man in his office, who asked she said. "That's true, isn't it?"

"No! No! NO!" he said violently. "But it's got its place."

She stood looking about her uncertainly, at the dust, at the mail he had had no time even to open, at that wretched plate on the desk; and from there she looked back at him, and anger rose in her again, that she should care so much, and that he should be looking at her with eyes that were hard and uncompromising.

"Life," he said, "has been easy for you, my dear. It isn't all like that. It won't be easy with me. But I'm prepared to put into it all I have, if that's enough."

"I'm not sure that it is enough, Chris. Maybe I want too much. Maybe I'm selfish. I don't know. But this last month or so, and with father and you feeling as you do—"

She went on. She had not thought it would be like this, especially as things were at home. She had thought that he would at least have some time for her. Perhaps she was jealous of his work. She didn't know. But in that case she was not cut out for a doctor's wife, was she? Anyhow her father would soon be alone, and he would need her. When she married, if she ever did—

Chris heard her through, his jaw set hard. He needed no defense, helped her not at all. Only at the end he sat up in his chair and smiled at her across the desk.

"My dear girl," he said, "you needn't either attack or defend yourself. You are right as you see things, and maybe I am right, too. I'm never sure of that, of course. But if you want to be free, darling, you are free."

Perhaps she had not expected that. She went rather white again and got up, and Chris, leaping to his feet said,

"Only if you want it, my dear."

She stood quite still, and he had the feeling that there was something she had not said and that should be said. But she did not say it. Instead she said,

"I'm afraid I do want it, Chris."

She gave a curious, almost a heart-breaking glance around the room and then turned and went out. Chris followed her, but he found nothing to say. When he had closed the door behind her, he bolted it. His face was trembling. He shut himself into his back office and sat down there. His head would not hold sleeping. He tried again from a drugstore later in the morning, but without success. He was still with her mother and not to be disturbed. He sent a scribbled card and left, nothing to tell him of that short, sharp interview between father and daughter in the night before.

Holmes answered the door, and one glance at his face was enough.

"Things pretty bad, Holmes?"

"I'm afraid she's going, Doctor." He did not ask to go in, and as Annie Lewis died that day without him. She went very quietly at the end, only once she muttered something that sounded like his name, and tried to hold out her hand. Beverly, a white wraith beside the bed, had gone even paler. And then it was all over, and Annie had gone probably to the same heaven as little Jake the tailor, although she lay in state for two days under a pall of orchids, whereas Jake had been worth, all told, only five hundred dollars to the traction company.

On the day after Annie's death Chris resigned from his city job, at least saving himself the stigma of being ousted, and two days later he sat in his office and faced his successor, a heavy young man named Barrett. Chris did not like him. He was cocksure and arrogant, and there was nothing in that meeting to show that their lives were to be mixed in any fashion whatever. Barrett at once stated that he was not in medicine for his health, and Chris, as for the city they were dirty and thirstless, and so what could you expect?

Chris, who had expected little and received rather less, listened to him patiently, his face slightly averted. He had done this to them, handed the city over to those youth his children of the shadows.

"You'll find they're not all bad, Doctor Barrett,"

"Well, they are good clinical material, anyhow," Barrett grinned. "Jenkins says you spotted them!"

"I treated them like human beings, not scum."

But Barrett was unimpressed. He went away still smiling. The shabby office had not been lost on him. That fool back there had no idea of public psychology. Look, Chris fell rather lost after that, prosperous and you became prosperous. Already he had furnished that new plant handsomely on the installment plan.

As if he had suddenly changed the open road for a cul-de-sac and confronted a wall; and he had a sudden feeling of detachment, as if Annie and not Beverly had been the one to be thrown over. It seemed he had been for a time the son she had never been and she the mother he had lost so early.

It was perhaps a week after Annie's funeral when Katie came home from the hospital for her half day, to sniff the musty odor of the house as she stood in the hall, and to see on the table a small black-bordered envelope addressed to Chris. She stood looking at it; then she wandered back to the kitchen and surveyed it with distaste. Lily was not around, but the stove was gotten a kettle hissing on it.

She took off her hat and called up the back stairs: "Mom! Hey Mom!"

There was no answer, and after a moment's hesitation Katie went back to the front hall and picked up the envelope. It was lightly sealed and with a little steaming— She went cautiously back to the kitchen and held the flap of the spout of the kettle; she was still holding it there when she heard Lily on the back porch.

She was frightened, for Lily had her own code, such as it was, and there was no time to escape. She did the only thing she could think of, jerked the kettle aside and dropped the black-bordered letter into the fire. She was putting the kettle back when Lily came in.

What Do You Mean GOOD OLD DAYS?

YOUR GRANDMOTHER PROBABLY LIVED IN A HOUSE LIKE THIS... PERHAPS YOU HAD MANY A GOOD TIME THERE AS A CHILD. BUT WOULD YOU WANT TO GO BACK TO GRANDMOTHER'S HOUSE — TO LIVE THERE NOW?

THE 'GOOD OLD DAYS' WERE NOT GOOD; NOR WERE THEY EASY. THEY WERE CRUDE, INCONVENIENT AND UNCOMFORTABLE. THEY WERE MARKED BY A WAY OF LIFE THAT MAY HAVE BEEN SATISFYING TO THOSE WHO LIVED IT, BUT SCARCELY BROADENING, HYGIENIC OR ENTERTAINING.

GOOD OLD DAYS? THE TOWN'S RICHEST FAMILY LACKED THE SAFEGUARDS AND CONVENIENCES WE ALL NOW TAKE FOR GRANTED: ELECTRIC FANS, ADEQUATE REFRIGERATION, RELIABLE DRUG PRODUCTS THAT THE DOCTOR CAN PRESCRIBE WITH SAFETY, CHEAP TELEPHONE SERVICE, DAY AND NIGHT, NATIONALLY KNOWN DEPENDABLE PACKAGED FOODS, AUTOMATIC CENTRAL HEATING, CHIC POPULAR-PRICED APPAREL, AND THAT GLORY OF MODERN ART, THE MODERN BATHROOM!

MANY THINGS HAVE MADE THESE BLESSINGS POSSIBLE — INVENTIVE GENIUS, PLENTIFUL CAPITAL AND THAT INSATIABLE DESIRE FOR "SOMETHING BETTER" SO PECULIAR TO CANADIANS. BUT ONLY ONE THING HAS MADE THEM AVAILABLE TO EVERYBODY, NORTH AND SOUTH, CITY AND COUNTRY, BANKER AND WORKINGMAN ALIKE: LOW COST MANUFACTURE AND DISTRIBUTION CREATED BY ADVERTISING.

WHEN YOU LOOK AT THE ADS IN THIS NEWSPAPER CONSIDER THIS FACT: ALL OVER THE COUNTRY MILLIONS OF OTHER INFORMED MEN AND WOMEN ARE READING ADS IN THEIR OWN LOCAL NEWSPAPERS, CHECKING VALUES VERY SIMILAR TO THOSE BEING OFFERED YOU BY ONTARIO INTELLIGENCER ADVERTISERS. They ARE VISITING THEIR OWN LOCAL STORES.....THEY ARE VIEWING AND SELECTING STYLISH CLOTHES, TASTEFUL FURNITURE, SMART SHOES, DELICIOUS FOOD PRODUCTS AND MANY, MANY OTHER THINGS, ALL HAVING THE SAME HIGH QUALITY AS THOSE YOU, YOURSELF, BUY!

AND IT IS THIS UNIFORM, NATIONWIDE DEMAND, CREATED AND FOSTERED BY NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING THAT HAS MADE IT POSSIBLE FOR YOU TO BUY THESE LUXURIOUS NECESSITIES AT THE LOW POPULAR PRICES EVERYONE CAN AFFORD TO PAY.

CONSIDER THIS, TOO! GRANDMOTHER HAD TO BE A SHREWD TRADER. NOT EVERY MERCHANT WAS TRUSTWORTHY IN HER TIME. BUT BECAUSE NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING IS UNIVERSALLY ACCEPTED AND BELIEVED IT HAS ACTUALLY BROUGHT ABOUT HIGHER STANDARDS OF BUYING AND SELLING. LONG AGO ADVERTISERS DISCOVERED THAT UNLESS THEIR GOODS WERE "AS ADVERTISED" THEY COULD NOT HOLD PUBLIC CONFIDENCE AND STAY IN BUSINESS. IN THIS WAY NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING PROTECTS EVERY MAN AND WOMAN WHO BUYS. TODAY THE WATCHWORDS OF EVERY ADVERTISING MERCHANT ARE "DEPENDABILITY AND SERVICE . . . FIRST, LAST AND ALL THE TIME".

DO YOU WANT PROOF? THEN CHECK EVERY AD IN THE ONTARIO INTELLIGENCER! YOU WILL FIND THAT EVERY ITEM ADVERTISED IS A REAL VALUE CALCULATED TO MAKE YOUR BUYING DOLLAR GO FARTHER. MORE IMPORTANT, WHEN YOU PURCHASE ANY ARTICLE ADVERTISED IN THIS NEWSPAPER YOU WILL FIND BACK OF IT A REAL PLEDGE OF DEPENDABILITY, DEPENDABILITY THAT YOUR GRANDMOTHER OFTEN SIGHED FOR BUT SELDOM FOUND.

NEWS ODDITIES AND BRIEFS

HARD-BOILED EGGS HARD TO BREAK

Peterborough, Ont., Aug. 9 (CP)—Three hard-boiled eggs can do much to block progress of science. At a demonstration at the exhibition grounds here, an exhibitor was attempting to prove eggs can be fried in a cold pan. When he tried to break an egg, it was unbreakable. He tried another—the same result. Only after he had tried four eggs would one break. The grocer who had sold the eggs explained he had mixed hard-boiled eggs with fresh.

LADYLIKE CROQUET GOES ROUGH

London, Ont., Aug. 9 (CP)—Croquet used to be a ladylike game, I generation or so ago, but apparently those days have gone forever. Jack Tiede 10 was admitted to hospital here last night with a severe concussion of the head. He got it when a whim hit him with a mallet in a "friendly" game of croquet.

WOULD LEAVE WIFE AS SECURITY

East Hampton, Conn., Aug. 9—(AP)—A customer who bought five gallons of gasoline from Michael T. Wall, filling station manager, couldn't find his wallet —and offered to leave his wife as security. Wall took name and address instead and waved the couple on their way.

LOCKJAW VICTIM ASSURD OF FINANCES

Omaha, Neb., Aug. 9 (AP) — Three offers of financial assistance today assured continued treatment for Harry Cass Cade, eight, lockjaw victim who lies unconscious in a hospital.

For two days $180 worth of antitetanus serum has been on hand to keep him alive. He must have $25 worth more each day for the next seven, physicians say.

TROOPS UNDER CANVAS

Camp Borden, Ont., Aug. 9 (CP) Western detachments of the Royal Canadian Army Service Corps were under canvas today at Camp Borden, bringing to about 800 men and 110 officers the strength of Canada's permanent force concentrated here for training and manoeuvres.

Why the Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

Weather and airplanes! When Mr. Hughes and his companions drove his airplane 300 miles an hour across the Atlantic Ocean, he could easily have overtaken and passed all the cyclones in the Atlantic. These cyclones, or storms, can travel in summer the average rate of 24 miles an hour over land and 17 miles over the Atlantic. The "kick-a-back" plane encountered this way against the eastward movement of the storm would pass more than Mr. Hughes.

THE WEATHER

Toronto, Aug. 9—(CP)—Showers have occurred in many parts of the Prairie Provinces, and it continues quite cool in Alberta. It has been fair and warm in the Lower Lakes Region and the Maritime Provinces, and moderately warm with scattered showers in Northern Ontario and Quebec. Pressure continues low over the Northwest State, and a very shallow depression is centred south of Nova Scotia, while the barometer is high over Alaska, Alberta and British Columbia.

Lake Superior—Moderate variable winds; fair, Wednesday, moderate winds; partly cloudy with much the same temperature; probably showers over west portion.

Manitoba—Fair, cloudy and comparatively cool today and Wednesday showers or thunderstorms, chiefly in southern districts.

Saskatchewan—Cloudy with showers in many districts. Wednesday, partly cloudy and comparatively cool; probably showers in southeast portion.

Alberta—Partly cloudy and cool. Wednesday, fair and a little warmer.

British Mediation in Russo-Jap Dispute Mooted

French Alpine War Games Take on Unusual Significance

Briancon, France, Aug. 9—(AP)—Annual French army manoeuvres in the Italian frontier assumed no more than usual importance today, with plans made for President Albert Lebrun to interrupt his vacation to attend.

The Alpine war games originally were scheduled as only regional exercises, but gradually were expanded in scope since French efforts to negotiate a friendship pact, with Italy broke down after Chancellor Hitler of Germany visited Premier Mussolini last month.

Stripped of technical military language of the time-honored alpine terrige of "red and blue opposing armies," the problem designed by the general staff is one of counter-attack against an invader from the east—which would be Italy.

The games confirmed to the strategic situation which the great mountain chains within her borders give to France. Military experts, backed by past experience, long have held any invaders quickly would wear themselves out trying to force French defences on her mountain passes.

According to this theory, invading forces would suffer decisive defeat within French territory and then would be easily pushed down on to the broad savoy plain, hard to defend but easy to attack.

The current French war problem follows exactly that pattern in tendency that a year ago was been defeated 18 miles inside France, in the vicinity of St. Jean de Maurienne, and has retreated almost to the frontier.

It has established a strong line from Mont Thabor, southwest Modane, Chamber to Albi as either to hold the main passes and protect its extended lines of communication.

BRITONS GIVEN CHEAP WEEK END LEARNING TO FLY

Cheapest Way to Learn Aviation in Civil Air Guard

'IN AIR CHEAPLY'

By GUY ROBADES
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, Aug. 9.—(CP)—Britons in large numbers hope soon to discontinue from driving motorcars and automobiles and take to the air in Britain that may raise the largest aviation reserve force in the world.

During the first week after Air Minister Sir Kingsley Wood announced formation of the Civil Air Guard more than 2,000 persons wishing to join applied to officials of 1,000 aerodromes and civil flying clubs. So great was the response to the recruiting bid the Air Ministry decided to advance the effective date of the scheme if possible from Oct. 1 to Sept. 1.

Civil Air Guard

Men and women rushed to sign their names for membership while it will make them part of the reserve defence force if war comes, and will give them a chance to get into the air cheaply whether war comes or not.

Theoretically applicants of either sex must be over 18 years old and will be able to obtain flying tuition in ultra-light planes for 40 cents

'PUBLIC ENEMY NO. 2' IS CAUGHT

Armed U. S. Detectives Say He Admits He is Fugitive

Baltimore, Aug. 9.—(AP)—A young man and his attractive young wife arrested here last night were identified as the fingerprints today by Charles Bird, midwest desperado, and his wife, Barbara, police headquarters said.

After armed detectives seeking the couple in several robberies here had captured them, Captain of Detectives John J. Mooney said Bird admitted his identity.

Bird is the last of the notorious Bird gang that broke out of Oklahoma's county jail Sept. 22, 1927.

J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, ranked the fugitive Charles Bird on Nov. 6, 1936 as "public enemy No. 2."

NAVIES REVEAL HOW WEST COAST MAY BE GUARDED

Premier Pattullo Sees British And Canadian Ships Manoeuvre

DESTROYERS IN ACTION

Victoria, Aug. 9.—(CP)—While Premier Pattullo and members of the British Columbia cabinet watched yesterday from the deck of the New York, one of the British and Canadian navies demonstrated how the Dominion's west coast might be defended in part from invasion.

Vice-Admiral Sir Sidney Julian Meyrick, Commander-in-chief of the British Pacific squadron, was on the bridge of the York, his flagship, when the assigned Canadian Esquimalt to participate in manoeuvres with the Canadian destroyer St. Laurent, Fraser and other minesweeper Armentieres.

Shanghai Fight Started Big War One Year Today

Shanghai, Aug. 9.—(AP)— One year ago today a fight in Shanghai transformed the North China conflict with Japan into a big war.

The shot struck down a Japanese naval sub-lieutenant and his chauffeur engaged in a pistol battle with Chinese airdrome guards while motoring along the west border of the Hongkew International airdrome. The two Japanese and two Chinese were killed.

Angus Buchanan To Enter Business In Windsor

Angus Buchanan, community secretary of the Joint Young Men's and Young Women's Christian Association at Windsor for the past three years, has tendered his resignation, effective Sept. 1, to enter business in that city, it was announced today.

Former Director of the Broadview Boys' Fall Fair in Toronto, Buchanan spent 19 years in Y.M.C.A. work, starting at Belleville. Later he went to Brantford, where he organized Camp Ruddy at Port Ryerside. The organization seven years he was with Broadview Y.M.C.A., Toronto.

Father Divine Has New Gospel Of Economy for Poor in Pocket

Krum Ehow-on-the-Hudson, N.Y., Aug. 9.—(AP)—A new economic gospel for the poor in pocket preached here today.

The prophet of the new gospel was Father Divine, bald and dusky lord of nearly a half hundred "heavens" who will lead his children today in a promised land on the 500-acre ancestral estate purchased from Howard Spencer.

More than 2,000 of Father Divine's "angels" left New York yesterday on 50 excursion trains to inspect the new Canaan. While they waited at Milton for a three-hour feast of boiled corn, fried chicken and pie, Father Divine told them:

"There is no reason for the depression, no reason for the welfare (relief.)

"Why should our country's land be landless? Be impractical? Be improvident? Be good for nothing; because those who should be working are getting relief?

"They don't want to work! Many millions are living on relief missions if there is relief from taxation. We mean to lift our standards of living in this country for business, for labor, for trade."

2 HUGE CARS READY

Bonneville Salt Flats, Utah, Aug. 9.—(AP)—Certain doom for the world's land speed record of 311.42 m.p.h. was predicted today by the racing fraternity that frequents this shimmering salt expanse each summer.

The would-be executioners are Captain George E. T. Eyston and John D. Cobb, both Englishmen-hatred grooming of their machines—one a mechanical monster that looks like an airliner without

PILOT SUFFERS MINOR INJURY

E. F. J. Charles Makes Forced Landing in Small Field

Trenton, Aug. 9 (Special)—While trying to set an R.C.A.F. plane down in a small field in Sidney Township, after the engine of his plane had failed, E. F. J. Charles, 20, Pilot Officer Provisional of the R.C.A.F., sustained minor injuries and was rushed to the Belleville General Hospital shortly before noon today.

P. O. Charles was flying solo in the Trenton area as one of the British and Canadian navies demonstrated how the Dominion's west coast might be defended in part from invasion.

P. O. P. Charles was born in Lashborne, Sask., and was completing his course as a Pilot Officer Training Officer flying solo. Dr. G. H. Stobie, who attended the injured man at the hospital today stated the most serious injury sustained was an injured back. The officer is suffering from lacerations of the head and face, abrasions of the arms and chest and the back injury. There were no major injuries. Dr. Stobie announced. The damaged plane was later towed to the Trenton Air Base by R.C.A.F. employees.

BOY VISITOR DIES OF HIS BURNS

Explosion of Coal-Oil Can Fatal to Ernest Gough

Simcoe, Ont., Aug. 9 (CP)—Ernest Gough, 12 year old son of Joseph Gough, Toronto, died in hospital early today from burns received when he was shrouded in flames after the explosion of a coal-oil can. The accident occurred yesterday while the youth was lighting a fire.

The boy was spending holidays at the farmhouse of friends who moved recently from Toronto to a farm in Charlotteville township, seven miles southwest of here. He was rushed to the Norfolk General Hospital in Simcoe. The burns had seared the greater part of the skin from his body.

BRITAIN TO TAKE NO STEPS UNTIL INVITED TO DO SO

Halifax Has Talk With Russia And Japanese Representatives

POSSIBILITY SEEN

Report Says British Officials Have Undoubtedly Talked of Affairs

London, Aug. 9—(CP)—The possibility of British mediation of the Russo-Japanese border dispute was seen today in talks Viscount Halifax, Foreign Secretary, had with both Russian and Japanese representatives.

An informed source in discussing the Russo-Japanese dispute on the Siberian-Manchukuoan border said:

"The question of mediation undoubtedly has been discussed by British officials but they will take no steps in this direction unless invited by either the Soviet or Japanese governments."

Ambassador Sees Halifax

Lord Halifax returned only today from his Yorkshire home and Ivan Maisky, Russian Ambassador just back from a lengthy visit to Moscow, went to the Foreign Office to see him.

A representative of the Japanese Embassy also called on the Foreign Secretary.

GERMAN PRESS IS VERY BITTER

Death of Sudeten German in Saloon Quarrel Opens Strife

Berlin, Aug. 9.—(AP)—The controlled Nazi press levelled a barrage of invective today against Czechoslovakia, charging that the slaying of a 24-year-old member of the Czechoslovak German minority.

Hostile conditions in Czechoslovakia have reached the limit of what is bearable" said the Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung. It said the killing of Wenzel Jaksch after a saloon political quarrel was 'outstanding" among the "great number" of Czech crimes against the Sudeten German people.

Protest to German Democrats

Balerie and two companions quarrelled with several German socialists Wednesday evening in the Sudeten German party. After being ejected from the tavern they continued their argument, and Balerie was stabbed.

(An official Czech report of the slaying yesterday near Olszenwald, Bohemia, mentioned only that a number of constables in remote districts had been ordered to investigate lies exist of heated political arguments).

Czechoslav Hitler's newspaper, Voelkischer Beobachter, called Czechoslovakia a "lawless" country "where people in the streets are attacked and even killed" and "a country in which soldiers and gendarmes fire wildly about them without being punished."

Remanded on "Leaving Charge"

Windsor, Ont., Aug. 9 (CP)—The Polish motorist charged here in nine days with leaving the scene of an accident, Joseph Gara, 40, of Windsor, was remanded in custody until tomorrow. Gara was arrested only a few hours after William Simcoe of Pembroke, Ont., complained to police that another auto struck his car, then ran on the sidewalk and continued away without stopping. No one was hurt.

World Highway Forecast, Only Antipodes Left Out

Fairbanks, Alaska, Engineer Says it is No Pipe Dream But as Feasible a Publication—World Tour by Motor is Possible, He Declares

Seattle, Aug. 9.—(AP)—A world highway linking every continent except Australia was forecast yesterday by Donald MacDonald, Fairbanks, Alaska, engineer and supporter of the proposed United States-Alaska Highway.

MacDonald, "outside" for the first time in many months, told interviewers the idea of travelling over the world by automobile "is entirely feasible and as natural as evolution. It's no pipe dream."

MacDonald said a motorist some day would be able to travel from Cape Horn in South America up the west coast of that country, across Central America by the Pan American Highway system, through Mexico and into the United States. Using the proposed Alaskan highway through British Columbia, the Yukon and Alaska, the future motorist would cross the Bering Sea into Russia, travel on into Europe and across the Suez Canal to Africa.

Lie Detector Wrong, Says Corrigan, To Doubt His Story of Flight

Boston, Aug. 9—(AP)—Douglas "Wrong Way" Corrigan, who insisted a lie detector was wrong to doubt his now celebrated story of his wrong-way flight to Ireland, said today:

"I wouldn't say it was exactly correct," said the grinning Irishman from California when Dr. William Moulton Marston, New York psychologist, announced last night at a dinner in Corrigan's honor that the machine showed the aviator had "fibbed."

The New York to Rize flier had been asked, "did you really start for California?" and answered "certainly." His votes were weak, however, and Dr. Marston noted a "slight rise" from normal in Corrigan's blood pressure.

STEAMSHIP LINE, SEAMEN'S UNION SIGN AGREEMENT

Effective Sept. 1st, Document Calls For $5 Wage Increase

DETAILS GIVEN

Toronto, Aug. 9.—(CP)—Details were received here today of the agreement signed yesterday between Canada Steamship Lines, operators of nearly 50 ships on the Great Lakes waterways, and the two-year-old Canadian Seamen's Union. The details, as received here in a telegram from J. A. (Pat) Sullivan, C.S.U. President, are:

C.S.U. is granted exclusive bargaining rites for all C.S.U. employees.

The union is granted the right to appoint a delegate to each boat.

Deckhands who work more than 12 hours in one day are to be given time off for compensation for additional hours.

Monthly rates of $6 a month granted all around.

No tuinecessary work is to be done between midnight Sunday to holidays, or on any day between 6 p.m. and 6 a.m.

Seamen are to do longshoremen's work when necessary, and then at 40 cents an hour extra.

Villagers Prepare To Abandon Their Homes

St. John's, Nfld., Aug. 9.—(CP)—Forest fires raging in Bonavista North, on Newfoundland's east coast, have forced Westgrove and Brookfield today as residents of the two villages prepared to abandon their homes.

Although no houses have been burned, the only desperate fight has prevented buildings in the two places from being destroyed, Brookfield has a population of 1,100 and Brookfield, 250.

Portable pumps were being rushed to the coastal points and the lumbermen Clyde and Malakoff were ordered to the scene to aid in fighting the flames. Residents of Brookfield have been busy all day driving in boats also to give assistance.

The fires broke out following a week of intense heat, the temperature reaching 90 degrees yesterday. A change in the wind from west to north at 5 o'clock last night threatened to force the flames back from the settlements, but the danger has not been dispersed.

TESTIFIES AS TO THREAT TO BURN CONVENT

Quebec, Aug. 9 (CP)—Threats that if she complained to police she would get fire to the convent were made to Mrs. Alice Lamb of Sudbury girl, to a companion, some days before the blaze which razed the convent at Lac Beauport, Mrs. Lamb told the coroner's jury today.

Mrs. Lamb testified when the trial of former nuns resumed in Quebec Court here today. The convent was burned early on July 22, when its residents were at Mass.

RUSSIANS BUILD NEW DEFENCE, DECLARES TOKYO

Concentration at Possiet Bay May Mean Extension

CIVILIAN CASUALTIES

Tokyo, Aug. 9.—(AP)—The Japanese war office today declared Russian forces were constructing new defences on the southwest shore of Possiet Bay and were concentrating cavalry, artillery and tanks there.

Possiet Bay is several miles east of the disputed Siberian-Korean border zone where Russian-Japanese fighting has been going on since July 11 and said to be one of the Soviets' strategic naval and airplane bases.

The army communique said two battalions of Soviet infantry attacked Sullivan, a hill mass north of Shachofeng, which the Japanese occupied July 29 and lost again July 31. This was the first time the fighting extended to Sullivan.

A war office spokesman expressed belief the concentrations at Possiet Bay did not mean the abandonment by the Soviet politburo that Changkufeng, the disputed border hill which Japanese took from the Russians, was not Shachofeng.

Extension of Whole Front

He said he believed it meant extension of the whole front, although he said Soviet forces were withdrawing some troops from Changkufeng. Japanese said the Russians had lost 1,500 men in fighting for Changkufeng since July 29.

Yukl. Korea (near the Siberian frontier), Aug. 9.—(AP)—Japanese officers reported today fresh Russian reinforcements were being brought into the disputed border zone after heavy shelling of the Schachofeng sector, northeast of Changkufeng.

Moscow, Aug. 9.—(AP)—Japanese said today Foreign Commissar Maxim Litvinoff and Japanese Ambassador Mamoru Shigemitsu were expected to meet soon in this afternoon to try to settle the Siberian-Korean border trouble.

Plane Leaflets Promise 10 Days Of Bombing

Canton, China, Aug. 9 (AP) — Japanese warplanes, which dropped leaflets promising 10 consecutive days of bombardment, showered explosives today that killed at least 102, and left 1,500 more injured, counted scores of persons.

The first of the raids yesterday left 121 dead and nailed and 180 injured. Today's attacks lasted three hours and were part of widespread bombings throughout Kwangtung Province in which many centres and railways suffered. Officials of this south Chinese city said Bay and Shameen, site of the raids the rest of the week.

The missiles were mostly 500-pound bombs which, besides inflicting widespread casualties, destroyed industrial districts, demolished hundreds of flimsy houses. Two acres of rice fields wellings were laid waste by five 500-pound bombs in Taiping-shan.

40-Day Fast Banishes Hay Fever, Says Detroiter, Weighing Only 90 lbs.

Detroit, Aug. 9—(AP)—With the hay fever nine days old, George McKenna hasn't sneezed since Wednesday morning.

It means, according to McKenna, that the 40-day fast he endured last spring was not in vain, for its purpose was to rid his body of "impurities," and evidently he's escape hay fever from which he suffered each August.

At the conclusion of his great experiment, when he had dwindled from 150 pounds to 90 pounds, he issued a challenge to scoffers.

"Come around and see me in August and if I have hay fever then, you can say that I was just plain crazy."

A week ago, he told inquirers that he wasn't certain yet whether congratulations were in order.

"I am fairly certain now," he said, "that I will never have hay fever again. Last year at this time I was suffering terribly and not able to do any work. You can see that I am not suffering now."

THOROUGH STUDY MADE AT BORDEN AND AT TRENTON

Capt. J. M. Robb May Extend Enquiry to Western Canada

TRAINING SCHOOLS

Cadets Will be Taken on Strength of R.C.A.F. And Transferred to R.A.F.

Ottawa, Aug. 9—(CP)—Tentative plans covering the training of pilots for Canada's new Royal Air Force are believed here to be taking shape in consequence of the survey conducted by Group Captain J. M. Robb, commandant of the Central Flying School of the Royal Air Ministry.

Already he has made an exhaustive study of the situation at Camp Borden and Trenton. It is understood he will extend his enquiries to Western Canada, and probably the Maritimes.

Authorities Reticent

The authorities here continue reticent, but the Defence Department is according complete cooperation to the British envoy. While nothing official could be gleaned, it is believed tentative plans are in the making which contemplate the establishment of a training school at Camp Borden, with others to be established elsewhere throughout the country.

It was indicated last week there would be at least two Pacific coast, and two more in Eastern Canada. Monctons was named as the location of a school in the Maritimes, with the other situated on the St. Lawrence and the Great Lakes.

Capacity of Schools

The capacity of the schools will be governed by the character of the training and the length of the course. Nearly all pupils will be limited to the numbers that can be accommodated, it is handled. At present it takes about a year in Canada to train a pilot for the air force, and the likelihood is that this may be the length of the probationary training.

Cadets will be taken on the strength of the Royal Canadian Air Force, probably as provisional units, and transferred to the British air service at the end of the training.

Period of Engagement

Their period of engagement in the R. A. F. will likely be the normal five years required at present, at the close of which they may either re-engage or go back to reserve list. Those who return to Canada at the end of their service will probably be transferred to the Canadian Reserve.

Many Canadians will be drawn in large numbers from among British R. A. F. men who will also be given opportunities. But in all cases the British Government will be reimbursed the Canadian Government for all out-of-pocket expenses incurred.

Advantages Indicated

Those concerned with aviation see in the plan many features of advantage to both the British and Canadian Services. On the one hand, the Royal Air Force will possess in this country a source of pilots in training, and, consequently, some what more favorable than exist in England. On the other hand, the Royal Canadian Air Force will be placed in possession of greatly extended facilities for, in due course, will be built up a volunteer reserve of well trained pilots against any emergency.

These two circumstances are regarded by the Government as complete justification for its insistance that the training schools be established and operated as an integral part of Canada's defence forces.

The matter has not yet reached the stage of final negotiations between the two Governments. These must await the report which, in a few weeks, Captain Robb will render to the British Air Ministry.

BAY WEED GROWTH THICKEST YET SEEN

Believed due to a combination of excessively hot weather and warm water, a weed condition exists in the bay and Moira river this season which never before has been reported so bad. The thick growth which attracts a large portion of scum and debris of the waters, stretches in heavy patches from above the mouth of the Moira to well past the lighthouse, with only here and there a break of open water. South of the lighthouse a regular island of weeds exist, and after dark trap for visiting craft whose propellers become fouled with the clinging stalks. Several new islands have also been formed through the growth which impedes the natural currents.

PARKS BD. WORKERS IMPROVE AG. GROUNDS

Centering their activities on the Agricultural Park during the past week or more, employees of the local Parks Board this season have been carrying on extensive changes and remodelling the grounds and, building-ups in preparation for the coming fall fair. In order to prevent the yearly threat of danger to spectators along the track, a new fence has been erected in front of the grandstand near the bigger box, and at present a plumbing system is being placed in the poultry building. Lawns and flower beds have been given the same thorough attention and are producing in new greenness and color.

MUSHROOMS COMMON ON FAMILY TABLES

Warm weather and rains have had one effect on the diet of local residents lately. Due to the combination, mushrooms have been abundant heavily in city parks and on boulevards and in many homes this delicacy has formed an important part of the daily fare. Local searchers on Victoria Park, Corby's Park, and even on the fringes of former garbage dumps report the fungus plentiful.

FIRST FISH CAUGHT NEAR RECORD SIZE

On her first fishing expedition, Mrs. Hilton Lewis, Lewis street, this city, in company with a party of local friends, managed to land this week one of the season's record bass taken from the bay. Her catch, the first this season, was duly weighed and was checked at a weight of three and one-half pounds. Though plenty of advice was tendered by friends on the best manner in which to land the fighting fish, she managed to haul it into the boat safely. Location was near the old cement bar at Point Anne.

CLEAN BILL HEALTH STILL GIVEN CITY

With only minor summer ailments reported and no serious threat of summer term contagion free and apparently perfectly healthy, it is reported by the local Board of Health. No cases have been admitted to the Isolation Hospital for some time past, and no houses are at present under quarantine, it was stated.

MARKET SQUARE GETS THOROUGH CLEANING

Considerable improvement in the condition of the Market Square and city hall buildings has been effected lately following the appointment of Patrick Webber, assistant city hall caretaker, of who has been constantly on the job of cleaning and polishing since his appointment by the chairman of Market and City Properties, Alderman Thos. Cushing. Compliments on the work have been tendered the chairman by residents. Piles of spoiled vegetables and other debris which formerly constituted an eyesore to the square are no longer found in the wake of market days, and a neater appearance is evident.

HOUSING ACT BOOKS AVAILABLE AT C. OF C.

Considerable literature which is available for local distribution on the new amendments to the National Housing Act which were passed at the last session of the Dominion House, then proclaimed about one month ago, and now in effect, have been received at the local office of the Chamber of Commerce and may be had by residents upon application there. The literature describes the steps necessary in order to procure loans under the act, and also gives the proper standards of construction.

HEAVY WHEAT GROWTH REPORTED

One of the phenomenal growths of fall wheat in this section is reported from the farm of Col. W. G. Fetcherson and son Lawrence of the fifth of Sidney where threshing this week reveals that an average of 40 bushels to the acre has been obtained. Eight acres of the wheat were sown.

UNABLE TO SHOUT TO GUIDE POSSE LOOKING FOR HIM

Friends' Questioning Reveals Some of Incidents of Days in Bog

STORY PUT TOGETHER

More Than Four Days in Water, He Nods When Questioned

Hugh Jones during his interminable hours of imprisonment in the black ooze of a swamp bordering Green River, from which he was rescued on Friday last after six days and nights of terrifying helplessness, watched silently, unable to shout at volunteer searchers who at times passed by a few yards away from the spot where he clung to the end of a protruding log. Almost suffocated by the gripping mud the mired man was able to follow with agonizing eyes the appearances and disappearances of those who came so close. It was learned by questioning of friends at the Belleville General Hospital last evening.

Slowly Recovering

Today he was slowly recovering from his battle with death. Unable yet to eat properly, intravenous injections have been resorted to in order to build up his weakened state.

He still remains the man of silence, unable or unwilling to recount any of his experiences since the hour he left the home of his brother-in-law at Rawdon Creek, to take the short distance to the family summer camp, and was found nearly a week later in the swamp.

To questions addressed to him as he lay in his bed at the hospital, the man could only nod at those which placed the enemy during the time of his imprisonment in the mud and in the affirmative answer. Asked whether he was able to shout to them, no answer was forthcoming.

Though physically weak and in an emaciated condition, Jones did not reveal any external injuries such as would have necessarily been suffered by one subjected to such exposure. Exposure was the cause of death. It is believed the mud which trapped him when he wandered into the swamp acted as a preservative, and prevented the water from breaking the skin or causing his limbs too greatly. This is the opinion expressed by his physician in attendance, Dr. G. S. Stobie.

Jones was reported in slightly improved condition today. He is still weak and sleeps much of the time, but for recovery are greater.

Another incident which last night for the first time since his rescue, cheering his physician, Dr. G. S. Stobie, who had expressed concern at Jones' lack of interest in food after his ordeal.

C. MARSHALL, 45, DIES OF INJURY

Was Engaged in Highway Construction North of Consecon

Redneersville, Aug. 9 (Special)—Clarence Marshall, 45, of Bloomfield, and former Ameliasburgh Central Road superintendent, died in the Belleville General Hospital last night as the result of injuries received when struck by a truck here, while he was employed in the construction of a new road along Highway No. 33, north of Consecon, late yesterday. An inquest was ordered to be held this afternoon by C. S. Lighthall at Picton, this afternoon.

Mr. Marshall was employed as a material checker on the construction of a new piece of cement pavement on Highway No. 33 from Carrying Place to Consecon, when he was struck by a truck being backed for unloading by J. Sovey, Midland trucker. It is said he was also employed on the construction of the road. Sovey's truck was laden with five tonnes of gravel and was backing along a piece of the newly-constructed highway when, it is said, the rear struck Marshall who was standing. It was said, with his back to the oncoming vehicle.

Marshall was knocked down and pinned beneath the dual wheels of the truck for some little distance before the alarm was raised and the truck stopped. Both the injured man's legs were crushed, necessitating the amputation of one upon his arrival at the Picton Hospital early last evening.

Dr. VanLuven, Consecon, rendered first aid to the scene of the accident and the injured man was removed to the hospital in Hick's ambulance.

Physicians held out little hope for the man, as besides the crushed limbs, internal injuries as well as the badly crushed chest, were sustained. He died while receiving first aid, but lapsed into a state of unconsciousness early today and died about 10.45 a.m.

A widow and family are residing at Bloomfield, survive.

Motorcycle Patrolman Caldwell of Trenton, investigated.

TRENTON MAN SUFFERS INJURY

Harold Young Reported to Have Run Into Side of Moving Car

When he walked directly into the side of a moving automobile, Harold Young, Trenton, was thrown to the pavement sustaining a broken collar bone, one mile west of Trenton late yesterday afternoon, according to the Belleville General Hospital where the injured man was removed by Dr. G. S. Cronk.

Motorcycle Patrolman Caldwell, Trenton, investigated the accident and found that a motor car being driven by Adam L. Onderdonk, Chicago, was proceeding westerly when Young commenced to walk across the highway directly into the side of the vehicle with the result that he struck the front left side door handle and hurled to the pavement. Young's proceeding into the path of the investigating officer stated at the conclusion of the accident. No charges were preferred.

WORK ON CHURCH IS ON SCHEDULE

95 Per Cent Local Labor Employed on Renovations

Work on the interior decoration and renovation work of Bridge St. United Church is keeping to the schedule, officials of the committee in charge stated this morning. Ninety-five per cent. of the labor on the auditorium has been completed and the remainder is now under the decorative work. Seventy-five per cent. of the installation of the building units of new heating with operations being started on the erection of the chimney. Everything school room decoration is now under way.

Part of the electrical fixtures have also been installed, although in the main the electrical work will be put in place until the removal of the scaffolding is complete.

Ninety-five per cent. Belleville labor has been utilized by contractors in the various phases of renovation and decoration, officials declared today. Only in the exception of one or two decorating experts, who were brought here from Toronto to do special work, practically all labor has been drawn from the city," it was added.

As the present rate of operation, the church will be ready for services on the scheduled date which falls early in September.

2 S. A. Bands to Play Request Program

68 YEARS WED, COUPLE LIVE ON ACRE OF LAND

Mr. And Mrs. Courtland Frankle Do All Their Own Work on One Acre of Land at East Lake, Prince Edward County.

The relief question would be settled forever if people had one acre of land in Ontario, and a home to live in, is the opinion of ninety-two year-old Courtland Frankle and his wife, who recently celebrated the sixty-eighth anniversary of their wedding in their modest home at East Lake, Prince Edward County.

They have one acre of land and on it is grown a variety of fruits and vegetables, a small colony of bees, and other forms of edible producing life.

The only tobacco grown in Prince Edward County is seen in a wellkept row in the Frankle garden. Mr. Frankle takes great pride in the cultivation of this "weed" but if his genial spouse had her way it would soon disappear. "I hate to see him planting it and would rather he did not smoke," she smiled.

Mr. Frankle, however, has been growing tobacco for some years. He claims it himself, makes both other tobaccos and enjoys his pipe, smoking can't harm one to very, he claims.

The Frankle home is practically self-supporting. The aged couple reside alone and do all their own work. A flock of hens contributes eggs and meat, while the bees supply honey. Mrs. Frankle preserves chicken, fruits, and vegetables, and makes a few clothes each morning to do her "chores."

Four children were born to this union, Mrs. Frank Rowell, Demorestville; Mrs. Luther Leavitt, Oshawa; Mrs. Eldon Scott, and Mrs. George Woodward, who reside on nearby farms.

CHERRY VALLEY CAR IS WRECKED

Occupants Fortunately Escape With Few Injuries

West Lake (Special)—A touring car driven by Mr. Ed. Fraser of Cherry Valley, was badly wrecked on Sunday afternoon at Roy Crawford's bridge, when the car struck a piece of stone and left the road, ploughing up the ground for a considerable distance and turning over twice. Mrs. Fraser and two young children were in the car also, but beyond bruises and cuts from broken glass, no one was seriously injured. Mr. Fraser attended

Hits Fresh Gravel And Car Overturns

Marmora (Special)—While driving a light truck from Marmora to Madoc on Saturday, Mr. William Leonard lost control of the car when he hit fresh gravel with the result "that the truck overturned. William Fisher, a passenger in the truck, suffered head injuries and was rushed to Belleville General Hospital. The passenger and another passenger in the truck received only minor injuries and cuts about the hands and arms.

an hour compared with the present rates for private instruction of $4.75 to $11.25. In addition, they may buy a private pilot's licence for about $6 instead of $100 to $200.

The Air Ministry's scheme took the breath away from Harry and Harriet, who trundled through weekend traffic aboard duel control bicycles, wearing blushing costumes and manifesting one of British's courting rites. If they are poor they pedal; if they are not so poor they motorcycle.

Planes Bought Up

An hour's flying is all they could manage a week—or all the flying clubs could manage to give them. Now, at two-and-six (about 60 cents) applece it would cost no more than a cycling weekend, what with food, drinks and all.

Before Sir Kingsley Wood made his announcement there were 100 light airplanes, for sale in England. A week later there were none. They had all been bought by flying clubs starting air guard sections. Civil aircraft manufacturers received orders that will keep them busy for months.

"Designers of "baby" planes scrambled to find working models of firms which already had blue prints of air "flivvers" launched plans for mass production.

target in tow the destroyers took up positions forming an anti-submarine screen for the cruiser. Paravanes, a defence against mines, were dropped over the York's bows and an amphibian plane was catapulted from the flagship to observe gunfire and speedo flying.

The cruiser's four forward eight-inch guns blazed at the target from 6,000 yards range, kicking up white spouts of water around the objective. After the York came about she poured 15 rounds directly into the target.

From within 5,000 yards the destroyers launched a four-torpedo attack on the York, the missiles adjusted to travel deep enough for safety to the ship. Observers watching the torpedoes' wake reported three direct hits.

An exhibition of anti-aircraft firing from the high-angle four-inch guns completed the day's work. Barrelling the range they peppered exploding forming a square at high altitude.

INJURES BACK—TAPES HIS CHEST

since he made that famous trip to Ireland after "starting out for California", Douglas Corrigan seems to have taken on a turned-around complex. Here he is at he displays the bandage on his chest, which was taped up when it was found he was injured as the result of too much back-slapping. It seems the heroflyer's attempt at displaying his enthusiasm in a physical way displeased a certain lady in the young fller's breast bone.

Belleville Residents See Welcome Given to Corrigan

All Races Join in Reception in Lower Broadway to Youthful Flier

STREETS JAMMED

Breath-taking in its enthusiasm and high pitched fervor, the home coming celebration offered Douglas Corrigan, the flight to Ireland made world history, was a revelation to Mr. and Mrs. I. Lindenberg and daughter, Vera, and Mrs. T. Tobe, of this city, who happened to be visiting New York on Friday, the day after the Irish aviator's return.

Downtown New York was a packed, dense jam through which it was impossible to move. In the vicinity of the City Hall square, cheering thousands of Irish, Hebrew and other races of the great metropolis gathered in even denser throngs. From the windows of the tall buildings lining Broadway streets, ticker tape, torn telephone directories, and newspapers fluttered down in a colored blizzard. Every block of the eight miles line-of-march was crowded to utter impossibility.

"It must have been an even greater reception than that given Lindbergh," stated the local residents today.

Arriving to view the ship upon which Corrigan returned to America, the Osbornes, Mr. and Mrs. Lindenberg set out for the East River docks. But they were forced to turn back. The crowds even in that section of the great city were too dense to penetrate.

Quinte Beach Development Marked During Year 1938

But Larger Program Remains to be Carried Out, Says President

BEACH DESCRIBED

Gentle curves of wave-washed sand mark the city's newest and most popular recreational centre.

Green trees, youthful yet in their fresh, green bloom after their recent planting in landscaped effect, frame the setting of sand and water of the Civic Beach just at the eastern limits of the city, south of the hospital on the Bay of Quinte shore where hundreds daily gather to enjoy the fresh breezes, cooling waters and deep tan from a summer's sun.

Three hundred some days, nearly four hundred on other days when the sticky, city heat drives residents to the open from hot kitchens, and sitting rooms almost as hot. That is the daily average registration of those who enjoy this new centre of health and open air relaxation.

This Year's Big Efforts.

This summer is revealed the result of even greater efforts of the Quinte Bay Beaches Association to further the project of affording Belleville residents a place in which to bathe and play, a breathing spot on the shore of the bay where country toddlers may splash and shout in perfect safety and abandon. A location where expert swimmers may find conditions to their liking.

At present much of the beach proper has been filled in and covered ankle deep with soft sand. Trees of all varieties have been planted with the assistance of members of the Belleville Horticultural Society.

Where existed a weed-grown section of bay front now stands a smooth, level beach from whose shores the depth gradually shelves for a considerable distance into deep water. On the outer fringe, into the deep water is placed the swimming raft with diving board. In shallower water are the slides for the juvenile bathers whose merry shrieks and shouts liven the day from early morning until dusk. At one end of the beach, the west side, has been constructed the stone breakwater, and centrally located is a pier at which boating parties may enter or leave their craft. There are but preliminaries for what is to Work To Be Carried On.

The work will be carried on to its completion. It is assured by President Reg. Moncrief, chief sponsor of the project and advocate for this better recreational center for relaxation and pleasure. Unflaggingly he has devoted his time and energy since the task was first started, assisted by a host of citizens and workers of the Association.

Much remains to be done. It is pointed out. At the present time filling in of the soft section of the east end of the beach is being carried on with broken material left in the wake of concrete workers now engaged in repairing downtown walks. But other fill is badly needed and appeals have been broadcast for material of any description with which to carry on.

"We had hoped to do more this year on the beach than we have done, but seemingly we are able to get little help in the matter," stated President Moncrieff. "City council apparently does not regard this beach as a necessity which has proved itself over and over since work was first begun. Our appeals for help have gone for the most part unnoticed. It would pay some of our councillors to drive down to the beach some day and see for themselves how popular this place is."

Tourists Recognize Beach.

Tourists passing through recently have been quick to avail themselves of the facilities of the waterfront following the posting of signs on the highway pointing the direction of the beach. But it is of Belleville residents, users of the association are concerned, the thanks of whose efforts have been feelingly expressed for the opportunity of water and beach thus afforded.

FEW CALLS FOR HELP ON FARM

Although harvest is in in full swing throughout the district, very few calls are being received at the local Employment Office for help in the fields, officials stated today. Wages at the rate of one dollar per day and board are being offered by farmers, with very few takers being noted

RUSH FOR GOLD PUTS UP PRICE 41-2PENCE TODAY

Hoarders Resume Buying And Absorb Over 11 Millions

FRANC EASES

Fear Held That Franc Will be Further Devalued

London, Aug. 9.—(AP)—Today's gold price was fixed at 142 shillings 7 1-2 pence an ounce, an increase of 4 1-2 pence over yesterday.

The dollar-pound sterling rate at the time of closing was $4.97 8-16 to the pound, making the gold price equivalent to $34.76.

Hoarders resumed their buying after a temporary lull, absorbing £2,356,000 ($11,600,000).

Causes of Gold Buying

The rush for gold was ascribed in financial circles to three factors:

1. Continental interest disturbed by the Russo-Japanese border dispute and the situation in Czechoslovakia are sending their funds to London and converting them into gold for safe-keeping.

2. The fall in some quarters that, despite official denials, there is going to be a readjustment of the dollar, franc and pound sterling under the agreement among the United States, France and Great Britain. Such action, it was believed would be followed by an increase in the gold price, thus enhancing the value of hoarders' holdings.

3. Fear the French franc will be devalued further before the end of the year.

Future of Franc

(Under the agreement completed Sept. 26, 1936, Britain, France and Great Britain pledged to consult each other before taking any steps affecting currencies or to change values and to "maintain the greatest equilibrium in the system of international exchange."

France's last action with regard to the franc was June 4 when the value was announced devaluation and stabilization. A day later she fixed 2.79 cents, or 35.80 francs to the dollar, as the bottom level for her currency.

(In Paris today the franc slumped on the Bourse, quoted at 34.67 to the dollar. The rate the close yesterday was 34.50.)

Slump on Bourse

Paris, Aug. 9.—(AP)—The franc slumped on bourse transactions today, following a drop in bank quotations, and ended at 34.67 to the dollar.

This was a drop of 17 1-2 centimes from yesterday's closing.

The closing quotation against the pound sterling was 179.90, a drop of 40 centimes from yesterday.

Today's slump accentuated weakness manifest during the last week which bankers said was the result of heavy buying of food and other supplies from the United States.

Theft of Dynamite Brings Jail Term

Isaac Wright, Maxmore, was sentenced to serve from five to six months in the Ontario Reformatory when he appeared in County Police Court, held before Magistrate J. L. Lloyd at Madoc yesterday, charged with the theft of a quantity of dynamite.

Wright was convicted after considerable evidence had been adduced by Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, K.C., of Belleville. There has been considerable dynamite stolen from the power houses of construction companies throughout the northern part of Hastings County. Perhaps it was considered that one or the two this practice would discontinue. It is a serious offence to steal dynamite in itself, but when the stolen dynamite is sold by the person who steals it, as is the case in son why the maximum sentence should not be imposed. Goodness knows into whose hands this deadly dynamite might get,' stated Mr. Donnan.

His Worship sentenced Wright to six months determinate and a further indeterminate sentence of three months in the Ontario Reformatory, following a conviction on a plea of guilty.

Police Blotter

Local police today received a communication from Washington, D.C., seeking the possible whereabouts of Mr. C. C. Tobe of that city who is touring through Ontario at present. Mr. Tobe is reported to have gone due to the illness of a relative. The report received stated he was driving a 1938 model Chrysler Royal bearing District of Columbia licence plates number 60404. Mr. Tobe is believed to be between Toronto and Montreal at present.

Kingston police reported last night. The vehicle was equipped with Ontario licence plates number 92 J 85.

An automobile, the property of Vernon Weir of this city, which was reported stolen last Friday off Front Street, was later found parked at the rear of a Front Street business house. The car had been taken by mistake and was left in the parking lot for some time before being found. It was returned to Mr. Weir over the week-end.

Transients continue to seek lodging at the police station despite the bundilty prevailing, but their numbers are diminishing nightly.

The cell block at the police station is being renovated and whitewashed today.

Gets a Job, Then Barley-Beard In the Neck

Faith in that fickle jade, Lady Luck, has been badly shaken, at least by one member of the unemployed of the city.

Out of work for a period of three months, he finally secured a job with a farmer for a day working in the harvest fields. Securing his remuneration of one dollar for services rendered, he acquired another week's work when a neighbor offered him a half-day's work.

Resting in the city he noticed a small pimple on his neck. Irritation increased until the pimple assumed proportions. Swelling continued until he was forced to seek the services of a doctor who removed a barley beard from beneath the skin of his neck.

Drives Too Close To Side of Road As Fire Trucks Pass

The sight of city fire apparatus racing toward him over College Street this early sight proved far too exciting for an unidentified motorist, in so far as to give rise to rapidly approaching fire-trucks the right of way, he drove his motor car too far to the side of the road. It plunged into the ditch where it remained until the fire men and Constables Douglas Ellis and H. Taylor extricated it from its precarious perch.

The fire apparatus was enroute to a smoke fire at the corner of College and East Moira Streets where old tree branches, leaves and other refuse became ignited in a mysterious manner. Flames leaped to a height of fifteen feet, as the blaze swept rapidly through the dry pile of debris. Firemen extinguished the blaze with water, and returned to the scene where the hapless motorist was vainly endeavoring to extricate his car from the ditch.

Largest of 'Lunge Has Been Caught? 40 1-2 Pounder Taken

Ole Grandpap has been caught! There have been lunge, lunge and still more lunge taken from the waters of the surrounding district and these have been of varying weights from twelve to high as thirty-one pounds. And many and varied have been the newspaper reports of the struggles between man and fish before the ultimate surrender of the latter.

But these apparently fade into piscatorial oblivion with the news of the latest addition to fish records and taxidermical backgrounds. For Johnny Allan, Adolphustown fisherman, hooked the grandaddy of them all (until great-grandpappy comes along, which is quite likely), the other day when he landed a lunge weighing forty and one-half pounds. Allan caught the big fella off his native village, after a brief struggle.

The head was cut off and placed on a pole where it is now displayed on the Adolphustown side of the Glenora ferry, where it will likely remain until the abutments are ready for a much-needed bridge at this point.

ROTARIANS ENJOY LAKE BREEZES

Meeting in Wellington is Addressed by Principal H. Brown

Belleville Rotarians to the number of fifty or more visited Wellington Monday evening as the result of an invitation extended by Rotarian Jack Hartwick, who lives and labors in Wellington, and is a member of Belleville Rotary Club. The meeting was under direction of Past President Fred Douglas, chairman of Intercity Committee, and was a success in every particular. The weather was ideal and the heat-wearied Rotarians found coolness and breezy along the shores of Lake Ontario and in Wellington's beautiful community park. Wellington's Consolidated School which carries the pupils along through High School courses to matriculation, and is a handsome structure with an efficient staff and splendid equipment, was admired, together with the Public Library, community skating rink, and other evidences of the progressive spirit and community cohesion which prevails in this, one of the most beautiful communities in Ontario.

In the Town Hall the visiting Rotarians were entertained with a number of Wellington citizens as guests, and everybody had a jolly collation served by the members of the Women's Institute of Wellington. This was followed by an enjoyable session of music, speech and story, directed by President MacLean Hall, of the Belleville Rotary Club, with Sandy Burrows reading the community singing, and only Sandy can, while Robert Mitchell, principal of the Wellington United Church, presided at the piano. Vocal solos by Jack Deacon, of Belleville, featured the program and were greatly appreciated for splendid voice and fine rendering. Charles Spaulding, in his inimitable manner, also contributed to the hilarity of the occasion.

Rev. Mr. Grant, rector of St. Andrew's Anglican Church pronounced the invocation, and the civic welcome was extended by Mayor Harry Clemenson, introduced as "Pablo" Clemenson by the community, a citizen who had held many civic offices and who ably conducted greatly to the stability and progress of Wellington. He was one of the first graduates of the Consolidated School, of which Wellington citizens are justly proud.

Bert Boyce, Past President, of Belleville Rotary Club, a native of Wellington, told some incidents of his early life in school and at work in Wellington, which were as well interesting.

Lloyd Hicks, of Belleville, was introduced as the Baby Rotarian, and given the usual salute. Bernstein and Charlie Spaulding were honored on the occasion of birthdays coming their way in the immediate future. Fred Deacon acted as sergeant-at-arms and fined every offender heavily caught talking more than five pieces of pie.

Speaker of the evening was Harry Brown, principal of the consolidated School at Wellington, introduced by Bert Boyce, Mr. Brown made a very fine address on the subject of education, old and new, contrasting methods of early days with those at present in use, and showing conclusively that present day teachers were ten times as efficient as those of half a century or more ago, on account of intensive training, better equipment and advanced thought. Various problems of present day education were discussed by the speaker with special emphasis on character building. His address was very interesting and thought-provoking, and outlined what may be expected in the near future in changes for the better in school curriculum.

Appreciation for the very fine address of Principal Brown was ably voiced by Owen Heritz, Manager Belleville Chamber of Commerce, and Past President Belleville Rotary Club, himself a former school principal, and willingly acknowledge that the world is moving on even in educational methods.

Captain Eyston, King of high speed drivers, is ready with his record-holder, "Thunderbolt"—a 32-foot long, 14,000 pound juggernaut that set the 311.42 m.p.h. mark last November when it was relatively untried.

With slight changes in streamlining and minor mechanical difficulties ironed out during the winter, Eyston predicts the youngest appearing racer will hit 330 m.p.h.

Eyston gets the first crack at his record. He's ready to start anytime the course is in shape.

The racing fraternity likes the turtle-shaped car—Cobb's "Railton"—a 20-foot long, 7,000 pound creation. Both cars have 24 cylinders.

Reason for favoring "Railton" is that Cobb trundled the button-shaped machines onto the flats yesterday and in a trial run made a speed of 250 miles per hour.

ADDING PHRASE TO LANGUAGE

When a man—and a young man at that —can make the people forget their discomforts in the heat to cheer him, he is more than the usual man of note. Such a man was that youth Corrigan and, by the way, Corrigan is on the way to adding a new word or at least phrase to the language. So far he has been called "Wrong Way Corrigan", rather a striking phrase, perhaps as striking as that of the late Calvin Coolidge who said "I do not choose to run." The late President's phrase has lived for years now though he has passed. Corrigan's ways and words will live to lighten the wit of the United States nation. Another phrase already in use is "the Corrigan way."

If they coin a word on the name Corrigan, Douglas Corrigan has merited it, for being one of the chief reasons there has been so much humor with so much wit in the world in the last couple of weeks.

Leave it to the irrepressible youth's friends—some of them with a flash of wit will produce the word or the phrase commemorating his great act of flying to Ireland when he thought as he said he was flying to California, and marking the find of wit which will remain in the people since they have learned of him and his ways. His spirit, it seems, will incorporate itself in living words which will sum up the sum total of reaction of the world to his deeds and his character.

MORE AND MORE GADGETS

How many a man has thought during these sweltering days of a summer which has been marked by the extremity of heat and humidity of the new devices science is putting in his control. Montreal Star says there are those which will bring comfort against heat and cold in season. Here is what one of the reporters of the Star was able to envision when talking with a scientist at McGill University. Only finances are necessary, it is pointed out by the scientist consulted:

Light—The manual operation of switches would be eliminated through the use of photo-electric cells which would switch on artificially the proper amount of artificial illumination upon the diminution of daylight below the eye comfort level.

Sound—to avoid noise, with its great impairment of work efficiency and production of nervous troubles, he would redesign buildings and utilize sound absorption materials and baffles to bring the noise level under 40 decibels.

Germs, pollen and dust in the air. These would be filtered through ultraviolet radiation, and the use of electrostatic and mechanical filters.

Humidity—this would be controlled through the utilization of cold surfaces on which excess moisture would condense, with a special mechanism to add moisture where necessary.

Heat and cold—The temperature would be kept at the proper level through heating-giving and absorption surfaces in rooms so that the human body would give off heat at the rate of 400 British thermal units per hour, found scientifically to be the comfort rate.

The control of odors, the introduction of the proper amount of oxygen and the elimination of carbon dioxide would be accomplished through the use of special machines and control instruments.

With these gadgets man is going to have more comforts and less distraction. When he gets all these he will be seeking new means of conquering conditions.

WAR, FOR JAPAN, IS—THIS

A "Certain activity" of the Russians in the Manchoukuo area cannot be good news for the Japanese people.

These activities have consisted of a number of border actions which carry the threat of another major campaign.

A few years ago Japan would not have hesitated over the prospect but would have relished enjoyed the opportunity of showing the Russians and the world at large her power and invincibility.

At home the people are finding what it means to wage war. The nation has embarked on the most amazing program of retrenchment. Not even blockaded Germany of the Great War days was as tightly laced.

Match sticks have been shortened to save wood. Rat skins are being tanned as a substitute for leather.

Major commodities, such as metals, oil, wool, cotton, leather and chemicals, long ago fell under the rationing system or were marked for removal from the market. The private citizen may buy only two gallons of gasoline a day.

From Kobe comes the news that everybody is at a standstill and that everybody the Japanese military elements are facing rebellion, so it is small wonder then that the Chinese have taken fresh courage in their hands and are well on the way to sweeping the invaders from the land.

The future for China is particularly promising. It is almost as promising for the world, for the failure of the Japanese to effect a conquest would serve to act as a deterrent to other countries who might be tempted by the same ambition—unlawful annexation of territory inhabited by peaceloving people.—Port Arthur News Chronicle.

TWILIGHT

Twilight has a secret door;
We have found the way;
Mocking shadows arise before,
Serpentining more and more,
Like the echoes on a shore,
Locked in play.

And the shadows, silver-tongued,
Leading far away
Where the piping trees are thronged,
Seem to mock the many-songed
Hills and hollows, each prolonged
In its lay.

Twilight tells his mystery
To us on the way;
Opens wide for us to see—
Sombre though their music be—
Shadowing in harmony
On toward day.
—H. Heller, in the Montreal Star.

SADDEST SIGHT OF THE HOT WEATHER is the poor policemen perspiring in rivulets and rivers on account of the heavy helmets they are compelled to wear and heavy clothing. Humane Society should take this matter up ere mortality among policemen becomes a scandal.

x x x

HORNS HONK LOUD AND LONG, in season and out of season, in the daytime and in the night time, mostly entirely unnecessary and a breach of the peace which should be subject to penalty. London, England, set the pace with silent night, making the motor traffic drive with brains instead of horns, also applying pressure to pedestrians to use their brains and not cross at certain safe places instead of jay walking all over the road to their own great danger and danger to the motorist. Hore-Belisha, Minister of Transport, even had to build fences down the centre of the street to make pig-headed pedestrians cross at designated places—so motorists are not the only reckless ones. Silent nights are spreading and ban on motor horns is being agitated in United States and Canada. Among the many horn nuisances is the fellow who blares out a hideous blast in a person's ear when walking quietly on the sidewalk near the curb. Hanging is too good for the wretch. Starting of cars are stopped by a red traffic light, and someone way back starts to toot his horn, presumably to hasten the changing of the light, soon the whole line of cars are tooting in mass—why not all horns and thus qualify for better citizenship.

SEEING OURSELVES AS ITHERS SEE US is sometimes good for the system. Visitor to Belleville recently commented favorably upon this as a fine city with progressive and friendly citizens. You lack a beach said he, with so much fine waterfront, but are in a fair way of getting one with the Beaches project, which has made a fine start. If you had a picnic grove or more trees for shade close by it would be a great asset and add attractiveness to the surroundings. I understand that is being taken care of. Victoria Park is a nice breathing space for folks, and an ideal picnic spot, which should be improved from year to year as it is so convenient to the centre of things. Another good civic improvement would be an instructive one for all dog owners to repeat. They might be surprised, as Dr. Funk was, at how long a list would be made up. Moreover, dogs are natural linguists. They learn French, German, Spanish or Russian as readily as English. Chinese dogs are even said to understand Chinese. Thus a foreigner or a chow on his native heath will show more savoir faculty with the latter language than the most accomplished American, who seldom gets beyond "yiddis" English.

"Is somebody trying to be funny? Turn those lights back on!"

LOOKING BACKWARD

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

Aug. 9th., 1918.

Miss Ruth Carr, of Rochester, N.Y., is visiting Mr. and Mrs. William A. Lasier in this city.

A barn belonging to Mr. John Traverse, Prince Edward County, was struck by lightning recently and totally destroyed together with contents.

Mr. John Leigh has been appointed superintendent of the Quinte County Home, to succeed Mr. Wilson, who resigned a short time ago.

Mr. Roy Bell, of Montreal, an ex-Belleville boy, is visiting his grandfather, Mr. C. F. Draycott, in this city.

Miss Jean V. Nicholson, who has been a National Service Worker at Hartford, Conn., returned in her home here on Geddes Street, as the camp has been closed.

30 YEARS AGO

Aug. 9th., 1908.

The heart of Stirling village was destroyed by fire on the night of Aug. 8th., and the morning of Aug. 9th. eight stores, a large building and two private residences fell prey to the flames. The fire is alleged to have been caused by the explosion of an acetylene gas tank. The following places were burned: Fred T. Ward's two stores, dry goods and men's furnishings; George Reynolds, boots and shoes; Brown & Mackechnie, boots and shoes; Hadley's jewelry store; Stickle's drug store; dry goods and millinery; T. Eggleton's photograph gallery; Boldrick's store; J. Ward's furniture store; Bank of Montreal; Mrs. Elliott's residence and Dr. Zeeks' residence. Citizens of Belleville will unite in expressions of sympathy for the terrible disaster. Let us hope that before long the burned places will be rebuilt and the pretty village enjoy prosperity once more. The population of Stirling is about 850.

40 YEARS AGO

Aug. 9th., 1898.

The steamer Merritt brought a large excursion from Trenton to Belleville and on to Twelve O'Clock Point today.

The cricket match between teams representing Oxford and Lydford Lodges, Sons of England offered a few pleasant hours to the sport loving sons of old England. The result was a win for Lydford Lodge by 33 runs and an innings. The following scores: Oxford Lodge: Capt. W. Walker, E. T. Austin, Ged. Morgan, John S. May, Fred Peck, John Neate, George Evans, Albert Hale, W. Pascoe, Greig and John Bedsor. Lydford Lodge: A. Gill, John Harker, E. Palin, J. Noyes, W. Waymire, F. Ketchenon, A. Bird, W. Stringer, Walley, George Hill and R. Myhat.

Mr. Walter Preity, of New York formerly of Belleville, is visiting friends here.

Mr. Joseph Meiden, an old Belleville boy, now of Montreal, is spending a few holidays in town.

Miss Minnie Lloyd, Chatles Street, is visiting friends in Bloomfield.

Mr. C. B. Scantlebury left today for Winnipeg on business.

50 YEARS AGO

Aug. 9th., 1888.

The Rev. Mr. Mihell, pastor of the Baptist Church, had returned after a holidaying trip. He did most of his travelling upon a Premier safety bicycle.

Mr. Gilbert Jones has sold his steam launch, "Vera" to Mr. Clapp of Picton and accompanied the new owner on a cruise to the Old Islands yesterday in order to initiate him into the way to operate the craft.

Manager Smeaton, manager of the Fairville Mair, states that there is a brisk demand for space in the main exhibition building. This time last year there were no applications for space. The indications are that the building will be filled this year.

The 32 pairs of shop windows is fast disappearing from Front Street and is being replaced with fronts made of plate glass. So far this week Mr. L. Grills has put new windows in his building and by J. Lutton, grocer, and St. Elvins, grocer.

Mr. Sibbitt, proprietor of the hotel at Massassaga Park, has had a number of orchestras in for the use of guests at the hotel.

The Dog's Dictionary

By Ed Read

How many words does a smart dog know? Dr. Wilfred J. Funk, the lexicographer, who has been conducting an investigation of the subject, reports that the average house pet responds to about sixty words, representing the vocabulary range of a year-and-a-half-old baby.

Trick dogs, Dr. Funk finds, can learn more than 250 words, while a thoroughbred will somehow pick a vocabulary of ten words out of the air. Some of them, possibly, are not fit to be repeated. Dr. Funk found by writing down the words which his own sic dog, Wolf, knew that experiment would be an instructive one for all dog owners to repeat. They might be surprised, as Dr. Funk was, at how long a list would be made up. Moreover, dogs are natural linguists. They learn French, German, Spanish or Russian as readily as English. Chinese dogs are even said to understand Chinese. Thus a foreigner or a chow on his native heath will show more savoir faculty with the latter language than the most accomplished American, who seldom gets beyond "yiddis" English.

When it comes to the dog's own natural language, there is scarcely a human who can bark convincingly, although Dr. Samuel Johnson was described as having an excellent bow-wow manner.

Dr. Funk made a little dictionary of dog language—nothing exhaustive, of course, but a serviceable lexicon for beginners. In listing the words he first known to dogs he offers some alternates, as follows:

Tail, speak or bark; 2, quiet or hush; 3, walk or stop; 4, heel, down or sit; 5, beware or stand; 6, good-bye or bye-bye; 7, quick; 8, bed; 9, eat; 10, bicycle. He also added a category of words to the vocabulary of most pet dogs the words "sic," "shame," "scratch" and "no cross." One dog we know is not only familiar with "ice cream," but is the first dog we know to recognize the distant chimes of the ice-cream man's tinkling bell. A trouser leg until the purchase price is forthcoming. Where ice cream is concerned she won't take "no" for an answer. It is curious that Dr. Funk in his list of ten basic dog words should have overlooked what is probably the most often spoken to a dog and most readily understood by it in fact, that is probably what makes it a dog's life.—New York Times.

The Invisible Eyeglasses or Contact Lenses

You may be hearing and reading about the new "invisible" eyeglasses or contact lenses as they are called. Perhaps you dislike wearing glasses and think that because you lose them at times, they get in the way, are dangerous when playing any game, or because they "spoil" your appearance. You may therefore get the idea that you would like to try these "contact" lenses.

They are called contact lenses because the outer portion rests upon or is in contact with the white part (the centre or sensing part) of the eyeball. The centre or lens part is made so that it magnifies or gives ground to suit or fit your particular type of defective eyesight (short-sightedness, farsightedness, astigmatism (rays of light do not reach a single point), presbyopia (eyes moving from side to side) and aphakia (no lens whatever in eye).

Before purchasing the contact lenses you should have your physician refer you to one possessing the knowledge and technical requirements skilled in the fitting of these particular glasses.

Dr. Alexander G. Fyvell, Philadelphia, of the Pennsylvania Medical Journal states:

"Contact glasses must rest on the sclera (white part of eye) so comfort and no pressure is produced. When too tight the eyeball becomes injured and the following may be caused by tears (epiphora). If the fit is too loose, the air bubble will not exist and the lens has been filled before placing it in the eye, leaks out and bubbles form in the lens. Solution.—The centre or corneal part must not rest on the centre of the eyeball.

The length of time that contact glasses requires time, patience and perseverance. Fyvell points out the first tested by the usual methods. The head is test forward and the shall is grasped by a small rubber suction bulb and lifted from the eyeball. The lens are separated by thumb and forefinger of the left hand and shell removed by pulling beneath lower lid and then the upper lid. The bulb is then removed by release of suction. The patient soon learns how to do this.

A great disadvantage at the present time is Mr. Fyvell points out is the price. Each lens is priced at fifty-five to fifty dollars depending on the correction and the type.

HEPBURN HITS 80 CENT WHEAT

Says Federal Action Will Cause Irreparable Damage

Toronto, Aug. 8 (CP)— Premier Peter Heburn, who returned to his home in fighting mood from a 9-weeks' air, today criticized members of the sub-Arctic, termed "absolutely asinine" last night the Dominion Government's plan for guaranteeing a minimum price for wheat.

"It is the most asinine thing I ever heard of," the Premier said. "Trying to interfere with the laws of supply and demand is absolutely asinine."

(Prime Minister Mackenzie King announced yesterday that a floor or minimum price of 80 cents a bushel for No. 1 Northern Manitoba wheat on the prairies, basis head of the lakes.)

Asked if he agreed with the action of Agricultural Minister P. M. Gardiner, Premier Hepburn replied: "Certainly. If we're going to be crazy let us be crazy all over the country."

Pool About Memorial 10 Inches Deep

Toronto, Aug. 9 (CP)—Art, some what ungracefully, has bowed to science in the dispute between Dr. Colin Campbell, Ontario Public Health Minister, and Walter Allward, Toronto artist who designed the William Lyon Mackenzie memorial in the west end of the legislative buildings.

Dr. Campbell ordered the pool around the memorial drained early this morning. He has been criticized for playing in the water. He explained a child could drown easily in the 10 inches deep of water there and the department would be responsible.

Mr. Allward protested, declaring the water was an integral part of the memorial, designed to reflect the memorial.

The solution satisfactory to Mr. Campbell has been reached. A pool was filled with gravel so there is only 3 inches of water at the deepest point.

Mr. Allward pointed out the pool now fails to reflect the memorial as stones are visible through the water.

Noted Author Gives Driving Tip to Son

Always Assume "Other Drivers" is Crazy, J. P. Mc-Evoy, Noted Satirist and Novelist Says in Letter—Premium Today is Placed on Agility Rather Than Civility

Toronto, Aug. 9—J. P. McEvoy, noted satirist, novelist and feature writer, recently wrote a book called "Father Meets Son," published by J. P. Lipincott Co., in which a modern father, patterned after the famed Lord Chesterfield, wrote a series of letters to his son who had just entered the business world after a rather hectic college career. The letters discussed every aspect of the young man's future life — questions of employment, marriage, social responsibilities and so on.

On one occasion the lad, who was working at the time as a private chauffeur, took his employer's car out one night without permission and "wrapped it around a lamp-post."

Letter Written to Son

Father McEvoy, when he heard about the incident, sat down and wrote his son a letter containing a great deal of food for thought which should be thoroughly digested by everyone who drives a car. Here is what he wrote:

DEAR SON:

You used up a lot of paper explaining how the accident was not your fault, and I can believe you. But you are going to continue to drive cars, and a few words on the subject won't do any harm. In the 25 years that I have been driving automobiles, I have never known any one who had an accident through his own fault—it was always the car, the road or the Other Fellow. Mostly, the Other Fellow.

'The Other Fellow'

This Other Fellow is worth some study. There are two types I am escaping him.

To look at him, you would think he was harmless, but that is the way they get you. He is generally he doesn't look like a killer. Sometimes he is a young, fresh-looking boy. Sometimes he is a mild-looking, middle-aged man. Sometimes he is a woman. He is gentle sweet little woman like your mother, but that only goes to show you can't judge by appearances. He's a killer, and no mistake. Learning a lesson from him is done about it—or it is?

Some time ago, the champion safety driver of one of the largest bus companies in the world was going to lecture and, as usual, he had completed half a million miles without an accident. When they started to ask for speech, he rose and said: "I ain't much of a hand at making speeches. I suppose you want to know how I got away so long without an accident? I just got one rule. I drive like the other fellow was crazy."

As if the Other Fellow Were Crazy

So that seems to explain it. The Other Fellow is crazy. If you cut out of line on a two-lane road, don't expect him to let you push him into the ditch, so you can cut in again. If you send a car on a blind curve, don't expect the other fellow coming the other way to be sensible, too: it and just get off the road and cut into the field to let you by. He's just crazy enough to run right into you because you are on his side of the road. If you speed through a main intersection, you will meet a lot of people who are crazy enough to think they have the right of way but because they are on a through street and you are coming in off a side street. If you like to pass on a hill, don't be surprised if a car comes over the crest and the driver doesn't leap over you or crawl under you. That would be the sane thing to do, of course—but you see, he's crazy.

Take it easy, but you are rude —and that's what makes him crazy. It doesn't matter as much if you are walking down the street and you are rude enough to push someone aside, but if you are rude enough to push him aside when driving a three-ton vehicle going 60 miles an hour, you'll kill him. You can elbow your way through traffic with your bad manners stepped up to a hundred horsepower, you'll only have a lot of damage to a lot of innocent people.

Accidents and Breeding

For every accident caused by high speed, there are a thousand caused by low breeding. Is it coincidence that the continent which leads in high speed is Australia's less? We may not be the most mannerly people in the world, but certainly are the prize terrors on four wheels. My boy, you may have to be a heel in life, but kiss a kin on a warm cheek is worth more on a cold one.

Today we put a premium on agility rather than civility. Each year the accident records worsen as our gasoline bo'mes more, reckless driving tests won't prevent accidents, so long as they continue to fill up with narrow people. Good brakes on cars are no protection against bad brakes in behavior. When the family car has become idle fatalities will not be solved around the drafting board but around the family hearth. Then we can have a monster under the bed, because that will be a gentleman at the wheel.

Affectionately,
Father.

Flier and Plane Are Sighted Safe on Hillside

Fairbanks, Alaska, Aug. 9 (AP)— L. F. Barr who disappeared Thursday on a flight from Fairbanks to Nome was reported safe today on an open hillside along the middle of Bear Mail River.

Pilot Jimmy Dodson said he sighted the Canadian airman during a late flight but that he could not land.

In the light of the "midnight sun" Dodson said he saw Barr walking beside the plane.

On the fuselage, Dodson said, was printed "Joseph's Village," the name of the Indian village he flew to that village about 20 miles from Bear Mail River, he said.

A plane was loaded to fly supplies to Barr.

VESSEL TIE-UP AVERTED

Montreal, Aug. 8—(CP)—A major tie-up of Great Lakes grain vessels has been averted by round-table discussion between Canada Steamship Lines, operating a fleet of ships on the 1,000-mile inland route, and the two-year-old Canadian Seamen's Union.

Ministers' Children Do Well

Recently a great deal of publicity has been given to the fact that Franklin Delano Roosevelt, confidential kidnapper and murderer who figured in the Cash case in 1932, was a minister's son. Lately the death of Queen Elizabeth's mother, Countess of Strathmore and Kinghorne, called attention to the fact that the late Rev. William Cavendish-Bentinck, and the defenders of Buckingham Palace, were at pains to affirm that from the manse to the royal pavilion of Queen of the Realm in two generations was nearly precisely a matter of supply of His Excellency Baron Tweedsmuir, Governor General of Canada, have pointed out also that he was a son of life manse. His father was the Rev. John Buchan of Scotland.

The old theory of the children of ministers not doing well has been effectively exploded in recent years. Bishop Weldon, one time Dancon of Westminster Abbey, startled through the self-imposed task of examining the whole matter in an article which he entitled, "The Children of the Clergy." His investigated the parentage of every clergyman listed in the Biographical Dictionary of Biography, confining himself strictly to persons of the Reformation. The significance of his studies appears in the fact that of 1,000 sons of clergymen and of men and women distinguished for their services to the Church, and to the nation, 1,270, or sixty per cent., were the children of clergy. This extensive article the writer goes on to prove his assertion that "the clergyman's son is not one of numbers only, but also of degree. Proportionately he is more aspiring sons more distinguished, and a larger number of more distinguished sons, than from the ranks of any secular profession."

The most conclusive answer ever offered to the charge that clergymen's children do not do well. It proves that the entire atmosphere of the home from the beginning of life is a favorable and literary culture contributes enormously to educational service.—Brantford Expositor.

Lightning Destroys All But One House

Nelson, B.C., Aug. 8—(CP)—Forest fire incidents were numberless today after a fire started by a week-end electrical storm destroyed all but one house in their community across the Columbia River from Castlegar, Nelson suburb, and here.

Eleven cottages and a large boathouse were destroyed Sunday night, British Columbia Forestry Branch officials reported. A small fire started when a bolt of lightning struck a hay barn in the rear of one of the large dwellings.

FIXING OF PRICES FOR LOWER GRADES PROBLEM FOR BOARD

Winnipeg, Aug. 8—(CP)—Machinery of the Canadian Wheat Board proved its worth after today to handle all or part of the 1938 wheat yield.

Biggest immediate problem before Chief Commissioner George McIver and his colleagues, Dr. Sedgwick and Dr. Tory, is the fixing of prices on lower grades on the basis of 80 cents for No. 1 Northern at Port William. Fixing the spreads— the difference between the No. 1 price and that price on other grades—will be completed shortly.

TRENTON and DISTRICT

Special to The Intelligencer:-
Trenton, August 9th—Brownied and apparently well pleased with their holiday in Belleville, nearly nine hundred infantrymen of three non-permanent battalions entrained from Kingston on Wednesday morning and returned to their respective homes at once. Included in the camp were the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment from the local area, the Midland Regiment from the counties of Northumberland and Durham, and the Stormont, Dundas & Glengarry Highlanders from the Cornwall area. This year's brigade camp was a very successful affair and was much improved over that of last year, and officers of all ranks were greatly pleased with the response given by the men.

Commanding the 9th Infantry Brigade is Col. the Hon. Angus L. Trenton, and throughout the camp Col. Sherrard expressed himself well pleased with the affair He particularly complimented the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, commanded by Lieut.-Col. R. C. Donnelly of Belleville, on several occasions, and they won the competition and line prize for the majority of the days they were in camp.

Trenton's Contingent

Trenton's contingent of officers and men returned home particularly well pleased with the camp. "A" Coy., centered at Trenton, made an especially pleasing show, and many are hoping that the company will win one of the challenge cups. Officers of the company are Major H. D. Graham, Lieutenants A. V. Hutton, A. E. Redick, A. H. Norrington, H. S. Campbell and 2nd Lieut. H. S. Fonnes. The company, numbered about thirty-five men, while the signals, under Lieut. Graham of Sherbert, comprised some twenty men.

Tourex 12 — Wooler 6

Tourex Billiards settled the Wooler push in a match played on Bayshore Park here the other night when they blasted the last chance of the visitors to reach the play-off berth by downing them 12-6 in a six-rail game started out as a close struggle but ended with the Billiardmen going on to take a commanding lead. The visitors turned out to see the game and for four or five innings the score was close enough to please the most critical fans. Wooler went on ed in the second to the tune of Tourexites to tally two, but came right back in the third and third and ran in three runs to put the game on comparatively easy terms again. From then until the end of the fifth the struggle was close, and was featured by some fast fielding play. Toward the end of the game, however, Stacey on the Wooler mound, began to weaken, and was finally yanked in the seventh by Bert Ward, who finished done by that time, however, a Tourex had taken a lead in the fifth and six in the sixth.

Sparkling fielding plays were supplied by Ellen Wooler and Dunn in the Wooler outfield and on the shortstop while Ward and Lane made all season most of the local fans can see no good reason why they should not be able to make some considerable headway in the Intermediate C league play-downs which they expect shortly to enter.

Meanwhile Tourex's are comfortably ensconced at the top of the heap, and with Wooler eliminated from further league competition

They'll Do It Every Time :-: By Jimmy Hatlo

the play-downs locally will begin on Monday evening when the second-place team's George nine meet the R.C.A.F. crew, who battled it out with Wooler for third place position. In view of the fact that so little time remains before school-town competition must begin it is quite possible that teams will have to play every night during the week of August 8th. According to O.A.S.A. rulings a winner must be declared and ready to play by ugust 15th and in order to make this possible the local teams will really have to get busy. It is unfortunate that so many ties and postponements occurred this year for it has made it necessary to play them off at the end of the season to determine the final standing of the various teams.

Softball fans of the town and area are looking forward to a final Saturday when the smart Bonita Theatre team of the Wilbrow League in Toronto come to town to play two games, one in the afternoon against an all-star team, and one in the evening when they tangle with the local league-leading Tourex Billiards nine.

Grumman "Baby Clippers"

Local R.C.A.F. officers and men received a first view of one of the new Grumman "Baby Clippers" when it made a fast trip here from Ottawa on Friday for a few hours stay. Two of these new amphibian planes are said to have been recently purchased by the R.C.A.F., and it further reported that they will be used for transportation of senior air officers from various air bases. There may be some foundation in reports that these new planes are among the most modern owned by the Canadian force, for they are thoroughly up-to-date in every way. The "Baby Clipper" is a monoplane with two powerful motors mounted on the wood wing-surfaces, and her hull is a marvel of aeronautical engineering. Retractable wheels may be brought into use for service use, and when a water landing is preferred they fold neatly back into special recesses in the hull. Pilot and copilot sit forward and the cabin has space for six to eight passengers. Pilots said the craft flew here from Ottawa in the teeth of a strong head wind, and it was felt that she could return in a half hour. Top speed of the craft is considered miles an hour, and cruising speed is about 170, when returned to Ottawa the same night.

Lot Is Levelled

The levelling of the old lot next the brewery warehouse on Front St. has resulted in the formation of one of the finest parking lots in town, and it is noticeable already that many people are preferring to leave their vehicles there off the main street than to take them further into town.

An event of particular historical interest to parents especially was performed east of the Trent River when first sods were turned to mark the beginning of the construction of the new school which is to replace the College Street structure, so long condemned. Dr. Mrs. Annie Hardman went the honor of turning over the first pastoral of earth, and it was only fitting that her long years of faithful service in College Street school should be recognized in this way. Construction contracts it is reported, have been let to the Hill Construction Co., and a number of sub-contractors.

Bell Telephone workmen are very busy at the air station wiring the various buildings for the installation of dial telephones, a system which will operate only within the port but which will tend to decrease the tremendous amount of work falling on the shoulders of the operators there. Previous to this the operator at the switch board has been about the busiest man at the station, and the coming of the dial phones should do much to relieve his worries. Installation will take some little time, and it is hardly to be expected that they will be ready for use until several weeks have passed.

Picton

Picton — Quite a number from Picton attended the Kid Kar Derby on Thursday evening. Young local boys have eagerly been reading all information regarding the race by the Belleville Intelligencer, many are at work on cars for the race which the Kiwanis are sponsoring here in a few weeks.

Workmen are rebuilding the home of Mrs. James Branscomb, recently gutted by fire. Friends and neighbors have given generously towards the re-building fund, and have also donated furniture and equipment for the new home.

Lange fishermen are making strikes these days in nearby waters. Jack Allen, of Adolphustown, is the new king of the sport. He captured the beauty near Adolphustown on Thursday afternoon that tipped the scales at 40 1-2 pounds. Milton Van Dusen secured one at the same place on Friday morning. Clarence Jones landed one near Glen Island, and George Yerex one weighing 19 1-2 lbs at West Lake on Wednesday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Gay Welsh and Carol Ann are spending the week-end at the home of Mrs. Welsh's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Mouck, at South Bay where the annual family re-union is being held on Sunday. Twenty-five are expected to attend from Belleville and different parts of Prince Edward County.

Bob Hill, jr., who was bitten on the chin and cheek on the neck and body on Wednesday by a Russian wolfhound is making a good recovery.

Miss Grace Irwin spent one day last week visiting in Belleville.

Mr. and Mrs. James Fox accompanied by Mrs. J. Fitzgerald and Jack, motored to Belleville on Friday.

Shannonville

Shannonville—An incident that occurred on the Mohawk Beach last week which might have taken a tragic turn, little Indian girl named June Brant, about two years of age, was prevented only through the presence of mind of her seven year old brother who related to the Ontario Intelligencer correspondent on Sunday by Mrs. G. Stevenson who was also one of the large crowd that saw the incident.

It seems that the little girl was wading if the water unattended and her seven year old brother was farther out in the water when the little girl apparently stumbled and fell headlong into the water. The first inkling Mrs. Stewart had of the accident was when she saw, and in the direction of the children and saw two little feet sticking out of the water. She immediately rushed to the scene, but before she arrived at the spot the little brother looked around and saw the plight his sister was in and he hurriedly grabbed his little sister and rushed her ashore where Mrs. Stewart rendered first aid and afterwards sternly admonished the children for going into the water unattended. Mrs. Stewart said to this correspondent, "that little boy certainly showed a remarkable presence of mind for a little fellow. As soon as he saw his sister he realized she had immediately grabbed her and rushed ashore where I rendered first aid; the reactie was not too soon either as the girl was already gasping for breath."

Weddings

INSLEY—BUTLAND

Point Anne, (Special)—A pretty wedding took place on Saturday, August 6, 1938, at Canterbury Hall, Trenton, when Gladys Marion, youngest daughter of Mrs. Knight Butland and the late Mr. Butland of Trenton, became the bride of Leonard Frank, second son of Mr. and Mrs. William Insley of Point Anne. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Robert Bovik of Cardinal, who has charge of the parish of Trenton in the absence of the rector, Rev. F. Arthur Smith.

The bride looked charming in navy sheer over taffeta with white accessories and was attended by Miss Phyllis Butland, who was attired in navy, sheer over taffeta, with white accessories. The groom was supported by Mr. Russell Kempster of R.C.A.F., Trenton. After the ceremony a supper was served at the home of the bride's mother with about twenty-five guests present. A toast to the bride was given by the groom's father Mr. William Insley and responded to by the groom. Mr. Percy Akey also gave a toast to the young couple. Following this the bridal couple left for a short motor trip. They will reside in Trenton. The bride received many lovely and useful gifts.

BAILEY—MUNDY

Napanee, Aug. 9—With a profusion of floral and other out-of-full summer flowers decorating the church, the marriage of Miss Kathlene Maude Mundy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred E. Mundy, to Mr. Gordon W. Bailey, son of Mrs. Annie Bailey and the late Truman Bailey, both of Shirley, took place at Grace United Church, Monday morning. Rev. E. W. Rowland, pastor of Mark Street United Church, Peterborough, officiated. The only attendants were Mr and Mrs. R. S. Wales of Napanee. The bride is a graduate of Victoria University.

Immediately after the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Bailey left on a motor trip to Lake Placid, the Adirondacks and Rochester, N.Y., and on their return will live in Stirling.

FAIR—RESTRICK

A very pretty wedding was solemnized at Bethel Church, Saturday, August 6, when Phyllis Lillian, only daughter of Mr. James Restrick and Mrs. Ida Jane Restrick of Chapman's Corner, became the bride of Bennett O'Neil, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Fair, of Belleville.

The bride given in marriage by her uncle, Mr. Arthur Dresch, looked lovely in a floor length gown of baby blue and pink silk tulle over taffeta with accessories in pink and carrying Talisman rose. Miss Mildred Dresch, cousin of the bride, was bridesmaid and wore a floor length gown of blue silk tulle over taffeta with matching accessories and carried Talisman roses.

Mr. James Ketchum of Kingston, acted as groomsman and the Messrs. Robert Fair, brother of the groom, Russell Fair and Arthur Dresch of Belleville, were ushers.

Timely Treatments Ward Off Wrinkles

(By HELEN POLLETT)

Massage and soothing creams, combined with ice friction are a great disposition, are an insurance against wrinkles. Watch the diet. Nutrition is important; without it the tissue cells become depleted.

It is easier to prevent facial skin things than to remove them. Deep wrinkles borrow into the underlying fibres. It is doubtful if any treatment other than plastic surgery will erase them.

Drawing the eyebrows together causes frowns, squinting puts crows-rays around the eyes and the "down-in-the-mouth" expression causes a saggy under-chin. It seems a pity that every woman hasn't kept her face behave. When that is done, the portrait area will keep smooth until life's autumn comes.

Every ardent beauty seeker should have her 10 minutes of face washing and face creaming every night. The skin love, attention, responds quickly. Neglect is the source of many a complexion ill. When the skin is dirty, it is confused with friction. fed with oils. It functions normally, stays young.

It isn't just how one looks today but how one will looks ten years hence. That thought must be kept in mind.

When facial tissues have softened, show signs of wrinkles, not water should never be used. Have the bathing water warm enough to fluff up a suds, no warmer.

Cold water should be used freely. It brings a reaction of the blood streams, helps to restore tissues.

Pressure and strain on the feet throw the nervous system out of gear. Though women's feet are getting bigger and better and bigger and better shoes are being worn, booties are not always of the right contour. It takes time to select shoes that conform to the outline when "hurry" feel have quieted down.

give wriggling room to the toes.

Beware of fresh diets. The human body requires a variety of foods, the greater the variety the better; then one is sure of getting all the elements that are necessary for health and a sense of well-being.

We need meat, poultry, fish, eggs, vegetables of all kinds, fruits, green salads, milk, cereals, bread and cheese. Butter-fat is an excellent food for those who would slenderize; so is cottage cheese.

Many women have deformed feet and don't know it. All they know is that there's no fun in walking. They should consult a foot specialist, a wear proper shoes. The current of a fretful life will change when "hurry" feel have quieted down.

A delightful reception was held at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Restrick, mother of the bride, receiving in navy sheer and white accessories, and wearing a corsage of Sweetheart roses and sweet peas; Mrs. Fair, mother of the groom, receiving in printed navy sheer, and wearing a corsage of Sweetheart roses and lilies-of-the-valley.

Later Mr. and Mrs. Fair left for their honeymoon trip by motor, the bride travelling in a navy pin-point tailored suit and wearing a shoulder length veil of white pin-point crepe. On their return they will reside in Tweed.

GEROW—GREGORY

Shannonville, (Special)— At Trinity Church Rectory, Shannonville, on Friday evening, August 5, the marriage took place when Olive Ida Jean, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Gregory, Belleville, became the bride of Mr. Norman Anth.ny Gerow, son of Mr. and Mrs. Francis Gerow, Belleville. Rev. A. E. Pepper performed the ceremony which took place at eight-thirty.

The bride, who wore a powder blue frock with white and navy accessories, was attended by Miss Helen Germain, while Mr. Gerald Langman was groomsman.

Mr. and Mrs. Gerow will reside on Herchimer Avenue.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

(Copyright, 1937, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

You and Your Vacation

Let's Take a Cruise

There are many reasons, all delightful, why cruises are so popular, and so increasingly popular. The very words . . . "I'm going to take a cruise" . . . conjure up the spirit of adventure, romance, of change-of-scene. In a day or two of delightful voyage, we arrive in "strange places" in which we may either be adventurously energetic, or if we are tired from our yearly work, may relax. The cruise may be, usually is, a trip to Europe "in miniature", and gives us a feeling of being far off, even though, in reality, we are comparatively near.

Also it is easy to plan and save for our budget for the trip for the expenses, the main expenses, are indicated in the initial arrangements. Not only are expenses planned, but time and "entertainment" are planned as well—what to see, how to see it, what to do.

And then . . . seeing new faces, people who are "in the spirit of humor", having time and opportunity of having a happy time.

But the spirit of adventure, of romance, of change-of-scene, of seeing-new-faces, of having-a-happy-time leaves your manners on the pier from which you sail. Supposed is that is one small, concentrated world, and in this small world your manners are even more important than they are in a larger world! There you, alone, stand "against the sky", and what you do and how you do it, and what you say and how you say it, are what judge the person you are. What you garner from the cruise, new experiences, new acquaintances and new friends, should be on the plus side, not unattractively negative, substantial in your memory-treasury.

Your woman should not say "Let's take a cruise", with the chief and oh-so-apparent object in their trip the "striking up an acquaintance" with men passengers, so to further vague (or definite!) romantic plans. Men are wary of such girls . . . especially on cruises . . . and label them immediately, and label them unattractively.

The object of a cruise is to have a good time, to enjoy the companionship of your fellow cruisers, to enjoy the dancing and the games and the sports. And the cruisers that are the most successful socially, comely, cooperatively, casually, show themselves to be well-bred women and men.

To-Morrow: More About "Let's Take a Cruise

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My girl friends and I have been friends for a number of years. A little over a year ago she married brother became very good friends. and they are to be married next month. Would it be proper for me to give her a shower? If another girl friend of mine would be proper to have it at my apartment where my two brothers and I live?

Future Sister-in-Law

Although it isn't supposed to be very good form for a close relative to give a bride-elect or a bride-groom-elect to give a bridal shower, I think that, in this case, this rule does not apply. I think it would be a very pre-wedding festivity!

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

(Copyright, 1937, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

Common Sense Best Cure For Love

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Through jealousy, I lost my first husband. I was afraid of accusing of being friendly with other men or women, and he told me he might as well have been guilty as innocent. So he gave me my divorce, and I have never really been able to forget him.

I married again, a man a good deal older than myself, because I thought there would be less cause for suffering from the besetting sin of mine. It couldn't help if it He has been married before, and, I was jealous of his former children, none of whom lived with us

I was jealous of his golf game, his card club, his business, his books he read. I wanted him to be with me wherever he was, and in his office, and I wanted his sanctuary there was no one else in the world but me. After four years of marriage, he asked me if I would not like my freedom, and we separated while we are happier apart. Since that time he has made his home with his older daughter and has remarried. I am truly unhappy. Can anything be done for this malignant type of jealousy?

Maybelle.

Perhaps a psychiatrist could be able to help you, and bring from the depths of your subconscious mind the reason why an intelligent woman should deliberately torture herself and those she loves with such abnormal possessiveness. There may have been some influence in your childhood—a broken home, parents accusing each other of infidelities—which has brought about these groundless fears.

Unless you are able to conquer your abnormal jealousy, I certainly would not advise you to try to become reconciled with your husband. It would mean only unhappiness for you both.

Why Let Your Friends Choose Your Friends?

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'm a young girl just out of high school, and I care a good deal for a certain boy who likes me, too. But my friends say he's not the sort of person for me to go with. Though I must say he has always treated me like a gentleman and is very kind to get from.

We've had several dates, and have had gone in for "good, clean fun". But these busy bodies of friends are trying to stir up something. Should I give him up?

Marietta

You tell me this boy has always treated you in a gentlemanly manner whenever you've had a date with him. Then, why should you consider giving him up at the suggestion of friends, who may be jealous? If he should get "fresh", as you say, that will be time enough to drop him. This will also answer "Thoughtful".

Movie Once a Week Good For All

Dear Miss Fairfax:

We've been married ten years. We have two children and they need to be a good husband and father, and I know that my wife's well-planned economies helped to buy our home, and that she is one of the best mothers in the world. There's just one thing that we wrangle about—the movies.

She claims that she does all the housework, that she should go to the movies at least once a week, as she hasn't time during the day to keep up with her friends or belong to any social functions. And when I get home from my work I hate to have the car out of the garage again that day. I like to read and smoke. But my wife holds out for the movies once a week. For whom should I vote?

Anti-Movie

My vote is cast unqualifiedly for your wife's outing one evening a week. And I suggest that you treat her to some refreshment on the way home. If you and your "Movie" could swap jobs for a week, you'd find hers is the harder. If every dog should have his day, every hard-working wife is entitled to a movie once a week.

Being Trusted Gives Child Confidence

Beat Not to Help Him Do Things He Likes to Carry Out Alone

(By LISA GRENELLE)

For almost a year Eddie had been allowed, after his week-ends with the family, to go off alone to school.

"Goodby, Pelish, good luck." Father would say, but go no farther than the apartment house door.

The rest was up to Eddie—catching the bus to the station, catching the train from the station, buying his ticket, etc.

And for almost a year Eddie had treasured this particular privilege. It had given him a much-needed sense of importance—a delightful feeling of adventure.

Great and satisfying pride Eddie took in doing everything right—never missing the bus, the starting up there and asking for his ticket, "one way, please," and getting on with dignity, as if he were a grown man like Father, instead of just a tall boy.

That he could do it, that he had proved he could do it, to both himself and his family, that he was always now trusted unquestionably to do it, was not only Eddie's pride, but also was the foundation of his new chief pleasure—at least day by school, difficult hours when or a sport—when some quicker, exciting was to be had. A lesson brighter boy made him afraid and inferior.

Went With Him . . .

And then, because Eddie was going off on a week summer vacation to camp, Father and Mother, out of season and because Eddie, they thought, might feel hurt if they didn't, went to the station to see him off.

Father bought Eddie's ticket and checked his trunk. Mother hovered over him as if he were a little boy, and didn't even trust him to find the right train.

Eddie was not appreciative. Eddie was not even pleasant. Eddie wouldn't talk or smile.

Mother and Father were hurt, and worried, and puzzled. Before the train pulled out, Mother was in tears. Father was tense.

"It's as if he didn't care whether he ever saw us again."

"Last time he goes away" from the office. Ungrateful, disrespectful puppy. He was a bad, home again—"

But Eddie was not an ungrateful, disrespectful "puppy". He was a very hurt, angry, puzzled, little boy feeling "left out" and "let down" by a touching show of affection on his parents' part, but, in hurt, angry pride, proving only that they intended to demote him to babyhood again—and that they had lost his respect of pride and confidence.

Both parents misunderstood and are unnecessarily hurt by our children. We forget that what has become a matter of fact still a precious privilege to them—buying tickets, getting on trains, packing a bag. • By relieving Jimmie or Janie of such chores, we insult their dignity and rob them of their birth-right of equality that they have waited so long and worked so hard to earn.

Tunic Dress For Dinner Dates

TOWNSEND — MCMULLEN RE-UNION

The eighth annual re-union of the Martin — Townsend — McMullen families was held at Crescent Beach, Oak Lake, on Thursday July 28th.

After dinner was over the secretary passed the registration book and 65 were duly registered. The president, Mr. Herbert Townsend, called the gathering to order. The treasurer's reports and minutes of the last year were read" Mrs. Geo. O'Neil spoke of the four members of the families who passed away since the last re-union, Mr. Wilson McMullen, Chicago; Mrs. Nancy Kelly, Hallway; Mrs. Fanny Wilson, Airways, Alberta; and Mr. Jim Martin, Campbellford. A minute's silence was observed in memory of them.

Just beyond deaths flowing river,
Just beyond the swelling tide,
Blooms the tree of life immortal,
And the living fruits abide
In that happy land of spirits,
Flowers bloom on hills of gold,
And our loved ones will be waiting
When the heavenly gates unfold.

It was decided to meet next year at Crescent Beach, Oak Lake, the last Thursday in July.

Races were enjoyed by all, with good prizes being given, the results being:

Children 1 to 6 years — Edna O'Neill.

Girls 6 to 12 years — Beatrice O'Neill.

Boys 6 to 12 years — Gordon Martin.

Grandfather's nail driving — Mr. Sam Townsend.

Ladies nail driving — Mrs. Kenneth McMullen.

Bean contest — Kenneth McMullen.

Relative who came the farthest— Mrs Effie McMullen, New York City.

Oldest lady present — Mrs. Jane Wagner.

Youngest baby present — Eric Francis Emerson.

Lace Dinner Dress.

A Tunic Dress for dinner rates in very distinctive, especially for dining in those smart outdoor places, with the moon-or electric lights, as happens.

A horizontal patterned lace in scallop effect is one of the popular lace patterns chosen for daytime as well as evening fashions.

This gown, which is an excellent choice for cruise and summer dinner dates, is made in two pieces with the tunic-length jacket top. The pastel color of the lace is set off by the bright contrast of the velvet collars and little cuffs. It was designed by Patricia Perkins of Los Angeles.

Can Agnes Learn to Drive Car?

By VIRGINIA LEE

Agnes has money enough to buy herself an automobile, but hesitates to do so because she is nervous and afraid of traffic. She asks my advice.

"How do other girls learn to drive and get driving experience?" she asks. "I have tried to perfect myself in other sports so that lack of a car would be overlooked, but I really feel it is necessary to be able to drive, and am developing an inferiority complex because I cannot drive. It really seems as though the girls with the cars receive all the attention and friends. They are the most popular ones."

I have one friend who was very nervous, Agnes. She was not young like you, but quite middle-aged. Her doctor asked her if she and her husband had a car, and when she said they did, he told her to learn to drive, as it was the best thing in the world for the nerves. She did, and the only trouble now is that she thinks she is a better driver than her husband, and drives from the back seat when he is at the wheel.

Another woman, also not young, very small, not very strong and quite nervous, has just taken a course of lessons through the Automobile club, of which she is a member. She isn't yet a proficient driver, but thinks because she hasn't at present had enough experience. She handles the car splendidly, however. The latter comes merely through use. The first year that anyone drives is a time of making many takes, but that needn't embarrass anyone. Young and old have the same experience.

I advise you very strongly to get a car and take lessons. One of the best women drivers I know took lessons of a man who made her do everything right away — drive in traffic, drive up hill and back down, etc., and she thought he was awful. You may not get or need that type of teacher, but overcoming your fear at traffic and the inferior feelings you are now experiencing is certainly very much worth while. Get your car as soon as possible, learn to be a good driver—of course you can —and let me know what fun you have.

FLORENCE: I imagine that your father's dislike of the boy has only couraged him about going with you. It isn't very pleasant for him to come to your home, you know, when your father shows his dislike so clearly. Too bad you can't change him. I suppose it is a case of waiting most what you can't have. Keep on going out with other boys and see if his image doesn't fade a bit after awhile.

* * *

LONESOME: I imagine your boy friend is busy, and as you haven't seen him for some time, is, of course, possible, that he has met someone else who interests him more. I think he very best advice I can give you is not to write him any more, and to try to interest yourself in other things. The matter may clear up or you may see him again and get an explanation.

Wider grow the hats seen on the streets of cities, towns and resorts. But fashion listens! has fled from summer chapeaux, and is concerned with the hats to be worn for autumn.

Shops are festuring summer apparel, and many a girl is rushing in to pick up a desirable frock and hat to make her look like a Mrs. Millionbucks for the rest of the season.

The large-brimmed straw in white, black or yellow—the color of ripe wheat — seem to be the favorites with the ladies right now. They are very simply trimmed with ribbon band and bow or scarf with long ends. Lace in black or pink is lovely for the formal expression of these "picture" hats. They create a cool effect and are most becoming.

When the tiny doll-sized chapeaux appear on the scene it will be a jump from one extreme to the other.

Smart and Practical.

Two smart and practical hats are shown worn by two Hollywood glamor girls. Gloria Dickson, above, has chosen a hat that smacks of the influence of debonnaire Robin Hood. It is in powder blue felt with a Robin Hood block. The peaked crown is set on the brim with hand stitching in navy blue while a fringe of the fabric is set at the side.

With a dress that combines a gold color with a bright print in hem band, cuffs and collar, Virginia Bruce wears a rolled-brimmed hat with tall crown; wide grosgrain ribbon band and a veil. The brim of the hat flares high on the left side to allow a genuine bow to appear above the ear.

A Robin Hood hat with laced crown and upstanding quill effect soars into the blue, is new. That, too, is of blue felt with the laced detail at the tip of the high crown, and the gay quill in brown and tan.

Flexied Brim.

Maria Gay has a felt hat with an indented pedestal crown and flexible brim in the back and front, plain on the sides. A ribbon ornament is the trimming.

For fall ever designer has chosen velvet in a great variety of colors for small, gay hats. Feathers in various guises are used for trimmings, and the hats usually have gloves and handbags to match.

Precaution.

You can't go wrong in buying slacks for your August vacation. You have a wide range of materials from which to pick your slacks, however, seersucker, lisp-packing, and roughly woven cottons and simulated linens, sailcloth in bold colors and white, smooth shantskin.

Precaution.

It may be that beaver will succeed Persian lamb as the favorite for trimming for autumn and winter.

Precaution.

In South American countries, natives always avoid crossing the street cross-wise, fearing an early death in the family, says the Division of Consumer Information, New Jersey State Department of Agriculture.

Gloria Dickson wears a powder blue felt hat with Robin Hood block, hand-stitched trimming; below is Virginia Bruce wearing a print-trimmed dress, and hat with ribbon and veil trim.

FRESHEN ROLLS BY HEATING THEM, ALWAYS, COUNSELS MRS. MORTON

By MRS. MARY MORTON

Menu Hint.

Baked or Cold Sliced Ham
Potato Chips or Creamed Potatoes
Hot Rolls Buttered Butter Beans
Radishes
Raspberry Meringue Coffee

If you bake the potatoes and the meat, or the latter alone, you can pop the rolls into the oven for a few moments, just to freshen them, especially if they are bakery rolls. Heating rolls improves them in such an extent that I often wonder why restaurants and hotels don't make a point of always serving them thus. One restaurant I know of does, and in the south, you always get hot bread—and is it good? The potatoes may be creamed on top of the stove, if you wish, then placed in an oven proof serving dish and put into the oven for ten minutes or so. It improves them.

Today's Recipes.

RASPBERRY MERINGUE—Three egg whites, pinch salt, one cup of granulated sugar, one-half teaspoon vanilla extract, one pint raspberries, one cup heavy cream, whipped. Beat the egg whites and the salt with an electric beater at high speed or hand beater, until almost stiff. Add the sugar gradually, continuing to beat until the mixture is very stiff; add the vanilla, and blend. Turn into a nine-inch layer-cake pan which has been lined with waxed paper, and spread evenly. Bake in a slow oven of 300 degrees F. for 45 minutes. Remove paper by placing on a wet towel; place meringue on serving plate. Fold raspberries into cream. Heap on centre top of meringue. Serves six.—Good Housekeeping.

STYLE WHIMSEES

Large black hats are trimmed with greater profusion and originality in Paris. Green and cyclamen feathers and fuchsia flowers were trimmings used on one by a smart milliner.

Teacher Helps in Canning

By GARRY C. MYERS, PH.D.

Head Department Parent Education, Cleveland College, Western Reserve University.

You and I have known some wonderful school teachers. I married one of them twenty-six years ago, and she still endures me. Last June, while conducting demonstration public forums in Warren County, New Jersey, for the U.S. Office of Education, on family problems and citizenship, I discovered something I must tell you about. In a consolidated rural elementary school I visited, I learned that the principal each summer, helps the upper grade girls can fruit and vegetables in the school building. The farmers of the community contribute the raw fruit and vegetables, the teacher, her time—bless her soul. The simple equipment was donated by a rural club. This canned material is stored in the basement of the school building and is used during the winter for school lunches. The majority of the children are Polish, their parents being onion farmers on the Great Meadows.

This service by the teacher enables her to get close to the children who help, and into the homes of the community. She is looked up to as a kind of model by the whole neighborhood. Good education is afforded the girls, in addition to the wholesome school lunches for the children, many of whom would have little or no food at school otherwise.

Here is an idea that could easily be carried out in many other rural communities. Giving the fruit and vegetables may mean no great sacrifice, since many of them otherwise would merely go to waste.

Enterprise Is Challange.

Such an enterprise should be a challenge to those organizations looking for something worth while doing for their community. Besides, it is wise economy and should appeal to those organizations who contribute school lunches to indigent children.

Indeed, one wonders why similar programs should not be effected in schools of smaller towns, even of large cities. The equipment is there. Many children would gladly volunteer, and fruit and vegetables could be bought in large quantities during the summer at a low price. It might be worth the consideration of the home economics department in some places. They might train their students at canning in September.

As a rule, however, the canning should be done during the summer. Would it not be a proper service of the rural agricultural agencies, the instructor and, in some instances the fruit and vegetables, in order to furnish substantial food for needy, indigent children? What do you think? Why not write me? Why not write your opinions to the editor of this paper. He might choose to print them.

Sundae at the Joneses.

One-half pound marshmallows, one and one-half cups milk, one cup coffee cream, one teaspoon vanilla, tablespoon vanilla. Melt marshmallows in half a cup milk, over low fire, stirring constantly until smooth. Cool, add remaining milk, cream and vanilla. Freeze in refrigerator to a mush, remove to chilled bowl and beat until smooth. Put back in tray and continue freezing. Serve plain, with fruit or with chocolate topping made by cooking two cups sugar, half a cup cocoa, a pinch salt and one cup boiling water to boiling stage, stirring constantly. Simmer gently without stirring carful that it does not boil over. Cool, add vanilla.

This is our favorite ice cream, and the easiest I have ever made. — Aliene Jones.

Vitamin B Deficiency Brings Ills

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M.D.

Recently we referred to Vitamin B as the adult vitamin—the vitamin which advanced medical thought is pointing to as being particularly likely to be deficient in the adult dietary.

Particular researches which suggest this conclusion are as follows:

Nervous system—changes in the peripheral nerves believed to underlie neuritis may be produced according to Wolbach "by means of a diet adequate in all respects except in Vitamin B and this is accompanied by enlargement of the heart, dropsy and atrophy of muscles. These nervous degenerations are the same whether they are actually called human beri-beri, such as is observed in Oriental countries from eating milled rice, or in human alcoholic neuritis, or in human neuritis due to digestive disturbances which min B in the diet. These symptoms prevents the full utilization of Vitamin B and they disappear when the vitamin to the diet.

Heart symptoms — Animals on a Vitamin B deficient diet develop a slow heart according to the work of Cowgill and Drury. The signs of heart failure which accompany beriberi have been mentioned above.

Digestive system — Sherman has noted that lack of Vitamin B immediately affects the appetite, and when the vitamin is added the appetite returns with a rush. Cowgill and Gilman found lack of stomach secretions in animals deprived of the vitamin and Sure and Kerr-sson found the pancreas secretion in man diminished. Mcarrison reports correction of atony of the colon by means of feeding Vitamin B concentrate.

Siddall has used Vitamin B1 in the toxaemia of pregnancy in expectant mother and believes that it operates by stimulating the pituitary gland. In fact, his experiments indicate that the vitamin is essential for the normal function of the pituitary gland.

Upon the skin and hair, Lepkovsky has found that in animals Vitamin B will cure a dietary deficiency. It was also found that using crystalline Vitamin B would prevent the natural graying of the hair in rats. It also has the action of restoring the normal pigmentation to gray hair, equaling eight weeks for the change in rats the process would require five years in man, according to estimate.

In anemias due to liver deficiency, it is now so regularly used as not to require any particular reference to the literature.

It can be obtained in yeast and cereals best among common foodstuffs but is now available in concentrated form as well as in crystalline form.

Author of New Novel Has Had Many Jobs

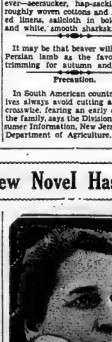
By LILIAN CAMPBELL

Kathryn Hulme, author of a recent popular novel, has had many jobs in her life.



"I've been everything, from a runner in a Los Angeles shirtwaist factory, to a high-class vitecrone around Acropolis Rock in Athens," she states.

She was born in San Francisco, in which town she laid the location of her book, "We Lived As Children". She was educated in the public schools of that city and at the University of California at Berkeley, and the Columbia University School of Journalism in New York.

Extensive Traveler.

The book concerns three children, their mother who had divorced their father, who filled a great part in their lives. It shows the complications that arise when father and mother part, also the situation created if said father attempts to return to their home, and the uncertainties of life with a father who was a ladies' man and likely to marry again at any time, filling his children's lives with insecurity. The way the children learned how to read their father—the devils that rode him—and how they realized that although they resembled him in many ways, the part of them that came from their mother was their safety, is charmingly told.

Miss Hulme is an extensive traveler, and she reports having been "almost everywhere". She lived many months in North Africa, months in Mexico and years in Paris. It was in Paris that she wrote "We Live As Children". She says:

KATHRYN HULME
. . . writes popular novel.

"I sat for nearly two years in a small moldy hotel on the Paris Left Bank writing this story, staring at a frightful wallpaper, alternate stripes of mustard and bands of red roses, with the tree leaning down the narrow street under my window, shaking my ancient hotel, and occasionally discharging the fruit-stand opposite and sending Oregon pears and California oranges rolling down the gutter. There wasn't much other excitement. But I could walk 100 yards in a corner cafe on the Place Saint-Germain-des-Pres and sit in the sun and look at the world in the making of my favorite church there on the square and feel richer than I ever felt in any other place in the world. Nothing stood between me and my material, the perspective was absolutely perfect."

Lovely Maid Takes Time by Forelock When a "Heavy Date" Is in Offing

By JULIET SHELBY

Clock watcher:: do not make good employes and the girls who are numerous with their eyes on the job are almost certain to inherit a smile from the boss. But how often have you, my pretty office worker, rushed home just in time for a 'date' and found yourself a "wreck"—nails in a state of speckled, blistered enamel; hair grouting unlovely wisps instead of sleek curls; eyebrows on a bushy spree of their own; complexion dry and hair limp?

A beauty schedule, a budgeting of your energy, is what you need in your scheme of life. Spend a little time each day on upkeep, and you can take that precious ten minutes just before your big moment arrives to cream your face, go on fresh make-up and emerge as if from a beauty salon.

To get the best out of this system, however, take a rest cure and a beauty session all at once, one that uses up two evenings, let's say, before the special date.

Let us imagine that your heavy date is for Friday night; begin this beauty routine on Wednesday evening. First step after dinner is a hot bath, a luxurious half-hour repose with all the bath refinerties these clever cosmetic men think up for us. Sweet-scented oil or salts, or mountains of frothy bubbles—or any type of bath after the other, there is no law against it. But don't take a cold plunge following your bath, keep a film of cream over your face, laid on after you have wiped the day's make-up away. Immediately after your bath, give yourself a pedicure at the time when the feet is soft and workable, and your body is as pliant as possible so that you can reach your toes.

Then give yourself a complete manicure, paying attention to the cuticle, the texture of your nails, the shaping of your nails and the application of your nail enamel. This is no quick job if done carefully; it takes time and skill to get excellent results. Have your nails are all in order, brush your hair vigorously, put a slight dose of cream on your face and climb into bed.

On Thursday night, get your hair shampooed and set. When you take your bath, be sure that the new coiffure is protected from the bath vapors, and don't put on a rubber cap if you intend to wear it for a long bath. Perspiration will start up and dampen your waves from the scalp. A quick bath and a rub-down with body oil and a friction lotion is a good treatment.

Put some night cream on your face, work some hand cream into your hands and arms, arrange a thin net carefully over your coiffure, and then get a good night's sleep. When that ten minutes' grace is allowed you, just before your date arrives, a facial massage and a pat to your hair is all the dressing table attention you will need to make you radiant.

CITIES AND THRONES AND POWERS

Cities and Thrones and Powers
Stand in Time's eye,
Almost as long as flowers,
Which daily die.
But as spring puts forth
To glad new men,
Out of the spent and unconsidered Earth
The Cities rise again.

This season's Daffodil,
Comes up like hours
What change, what change, what chill,
Cuts down last year's:
But with bold countenance,
And knowledge small,
Esteems her seven days' continuance
To be perpetual

So 'Time that is o'er kind,
To all that be,
Ordains us e'en as blind,
As bold as she:
That in our very death
And burial sure,
Shadow to shadow, well perpetuates, still,
"See how our works endure!"

Greenberg 15 Days Ahead of Ruth's 1927 Home Run Record With 38

Baseball History Hinges on Greenberg's Chance to Break Ruth's Home Run Record

"Big Hank" Has 38 Today; Some 15 Games Ahead of Ruth's '27 Record

TERRIFIC CLIP

(By Hugh S. Fullerton, Jr., Associated Press Sports Writer)

If you're convinced the Major League pennant races are practically over, even though there's an important third of the season left, it might be well to look into another of the season's interesting developments—whether big Hank Greenberg has a chance to break Babe Ruth's home run record.

For a while it looked as though the burly Detroit first sacker might turn the trick. He was batting out four homers at a terrific clip, eight or them in six games one week. Then he drew a blank for a week—including Sunday—a day for his 38th of the season.

That wallop put Hank 15 games ahead of Ruth's 1927 pace when the Babe set up his all-time mark of 60 homers, Ruth's 38th came Aug. 17th in the 114th game of the season while Greenberg's came on No. 99 for the Tigers.

Greenberg, of course, is likely to need all that leeway, for Ruth's big peak came during the month of September when he smacked 17 homers in 27 games. The setup this year is so much the same that Hank's chances look pretty good.

In 1927, of course, the Yankees were so far ahead that they didn't have to worry when the Babe spelled off a homerle whiffing in an effort to sock one out of the park. The Tigers now are down in fifth place and there's not much their new manager, Del Baker could do but haul them up into the first division. So they're not deeply concerned over the end stretch.

Then Hank, too, has a long stretch on the home grounds starting September. Of Detroit's 55 remaining games, 27 are to be played at home and 28 away. And from just after Labor Day until almost the end of the season they'll be playing in Briggs Stadium. So far Greenberg has connected 24 times there and 14 in other parks.

WITH THE LAWN BOWLERS

GEO. E. WATKIN

Twenty-eight teams of trebles entered into competition last night and some real games were the result.

Bill Whitty came in sixteen strong from Stirling and Joe Searles came from Trenton with five of his boys.

Charlie McGuire made a name for himself as good boy Charlie.

Tomorrow Stirling hold their men's rinks, they have real good greens and are looking for a large entry from our club.

The winners in the trebles were Bill Whitty (Stirling), Mrs. Chalmers, E. Hyde, Trenton. Dr. Carleton (Stirling), Mrs. Mills, H. Lemarr, Vanner, Mrs. Shaw, Mr. Shaw, Mr. Ormston (Trenton), C. McGuire, Mrs. Scott and A. Rogers.

Our thanks to Mrs. Backus and Mrs. R. Vanner for their help in the diet kitchen.

There will be no Jitney on Wednesday night on account of the ladies' tournament, but greens will be open if anyone wishes to bowl.

The Rev. Wayley one of our old members was a visitor to our greens last night.

Playground Notes

According to a score card left at The Ontario Intelligencer today the East Belleville and West Belleville playground midget baseball clubs battled to a three-all tie at the West Belleville grounds yesterday. It was the fourth game played with the West Hill winning two, the East Belleville nine one and yesterday's tie game.

The game was marked by some exceptionally good fielding on the part of both clubs, Wright of the home team and Deitz of the visitors starring in that outfit. The East Hill were forced to come from behind and score the run in the ninth with the count.

Greatrix scored two and Keegan one for the West Hill, while Denike scored two and Cooper the other for East Hill nominees. Batteries played under the handicap of only getting eight players.

The line-ups:

West Belleville grounds—Greatrix ss; Meagher 2b; Wright 1b; Tompkins p; Strand, lf; Keegan c; Martin 3b; and Pattison, rf. East Belleville nine—Denike, Wilson 1b; Noise c; Bunton p; Jones ss; Cooper lf; Parrell cf; Bockus 2b; and Deitz rf.

The two opposing moundsmen, Bunton and Turner, gave some convincing displays of hurling and although given fine support by their team-mates, both pitched sterling ball.

Golf Divots

Rochester, N.Y., Aug. 9 (AP)—Patiently George Millham, 23, coached Miss Helen Kramer, 20, in the fine art of swinging a golf club. Finally, George stepped away to the front. Keeping her eye on the ball just as she had been told, Miss Kramer swung at the pellet. George went to a hospital with a fractured skull.

Scottsbluff, Neb., Aug. 9 (AP)—Bud McKinney, golf pro here, saw two fellows poking a flashlight around the rough at night. It was H. D. Wells and Guy Hayes trying to find two balls given the second extra hole on their tied match. McKinney offered to postpone the finish until daylight.

Kewanee, Ill., Aug. 9 (AP)—Selling golf hazard insurance appeared much easier than golf to C. Palmer, but his sales talk wasn't very convincing. Palmer's chauffeur was smashed to bits when he was struck in the mouth by a golf ball. He was among the competitors in the local city open golf tourney when he was stymied by the physical hazard.

LOU AMBERS IS QUITE CONFIDENT

"Don't Worry About Me Just Yet" He Advises

New York, Aug. 9 (AP)—It must be admitted that Lou Ambers, the lightweight champion, does not look nor talk like the popover he is supposed to be for Henry Armstrong tomorrow night at the Polo Grounds.

In his final training spasm yesterday the 135-pound king looked as tough as a smoked boot and his conversation was to the effect he knew exactly how to take care of the fierce little negro once he got him in the ring.

"Don't worry about me," he advised. "Wait until we've gone 15 rounds and then ask Armstrong how he liked it."

Lou isn't the first one to adopt that attitude toward "Little Dynamite." Barney Ross felt the same way before Henry started bouncing him around last May. He couldn't express much of an opinion afterward because his head was scattered in three layers of toweling.

Still Ambers makes it sound pretty convincing. At least, you gather that Armstrong is going to have to demonstrate to him, personally, that he is the better man.

All that's wrong with this fight is that I ought to have fought Armstrong first," he complained. "Then the winner would have whipped Barney Ross for the welterweight title. As it is, some of them are trying to say I won't be welterweight champion after I lick Henry."

The climax of the competitive season in Canadian canoeing circles was reached with the holding of the Dominion championships in Kingston. The most coveted title, the mile war canoe championship, was captured by Carleton Place, paddling its way to its first win in C.C.A. competition since 1920. After one false start, the winning team took an early lead and were never headed, winning in 6:46. The conquering 15-man crew is shown ABOVE. Alongside is their model of Toronto Canoe Club who turned a neat trick by winning both the junior and intermediate singles titles. He was left at the post in the junior event but stormed through to nose out Bekan of Sudbury.

CHIEFS TO CASH IN ON PLAYERS

Johnny Geen, Ace Hurler, is Tagged With High Price

Syracuse Chiefs can't expect to do much more in the International Baseball League race than get into the playoffs—possibly finish as high as second—but they may wind up by sending as many players up to the Major Leagues as the mighty Newark Bears.

They have, of course, Pitcher Johnny Geen, who has been tagged already with a price mark high enough to take care of this season's expenses. Then they have a couple of Cincinnati "farm hands" playing in the outfield who look as if they might be good enough to stick next season.

Anthony Bongiovanni (Nine Bongy) was rated a fine prospect when he came from Portland in the Coast League last spring, but the Reds decided to give him another year's seasoning with Syracuse. Then there's Jimmy Outlaw, a former infielder who is patrolling the centre pasture and powering the ball at a .350 clip and Joe Mac, now at first base and hitting better than .300.

Bongy showed his value last night when he provided the wallop that beat Montreal Royals 3-1, although the Chiefs were limited to three safeties by Bob Porter and Bill Chapman.

The victory gave Syracuse a full game margin over the fourth-place Buffalo Bisons. The Buffalo-Baltimore and Rochester-Jersey City games were rained out while Toronto and Newark had an open date.

GOLF FACTS NOT THEORIES

By Alex Morrison

Grasp the Club Properly

A number of players have taken notice of my advice about grasping, taining a firm hold with the left little finger. One of this number recently came to me with marks on this finger which he claimed were caused by holding the club firmly. When he showed me how he took hold of the club it was easy to see where the marks came from.

He made the common mistake of placing the left hand on the club when the clubhead was on the ground. By so doing one has to lift the full weight of the arm and the little finger alone. This was never intended. As I have often stated the clubhead should be resting on the ground when the hands are being placed on the shaft, then, instead of having to lift the club with the little finger, you can exert a firm pressure with the palm of the left hand and simply press the shaft into the palm with the little finger. If you do this there should be no sign of a callous on any of your fingers.

Furthermore, this method of placing the left hand will put the left wrist into the proper bent position and there will be no reason for it to remain more or less relaxed, and ready to perform properly during the swing. You can demonstrate the advantages of exerting this downward pressure on the left hand that is first placed on the shaft simply by letting the whole club rest against the wall as you take hold of it.

That yarn about the cross-eyed pitcher down in Caston County, N.S., sure started the boys talking. Some of the letters we got plug..... Ray C. Cox, Chief of Pensacola, Fla., says they ought to put a team in Pensacola and let pitcher's left orb.... Henry J. Ledoux of Monroe, La., says it happened to be Pumpkin Ed'd just yell, "Quit crossing me up, big boy," and let it go at that....

with Ken J. Colling

Belleville baseball fans saw their first nine hit no-hit baseball game last night, as a matter of fact neither team advertised to play scored a single run—the reason being there just wasn't any baseball game played the Kingston "Locos" failing to put in an appearance. Naturally the "Orfans" took to the field with Weeks and Scott as the battery, Umpire Don Thomas called "play ball." Weeks threw three strikes and Belleville walked off the field claiming victory by a 9 to 0 score.

Last night's incident marked the first time a Belleville baseball crowd were disappointed by the refusal of the opposition to keep a scheduled date and the incident is to be regretted, even though Rodeville does claim a win thus assuring the locals of first place in the Bay of Quinte league standings. The rivalry started some weeks ago when Kingston refused to play a postponed game with Napanee. Late in July Belleville agreed to play their return game versus Kingston on Civic Holiday, but it rained. Later the locals agreed to play this game in question in Kingston on Aug. 5th, but when the Bay of Quinte League held a meeting in Napanee on Aug. 3rd, the local management decided they would not play their remaining home game in Kingston, but rather on the home diamond and they notified the Locos to that effect.

The Bay of Quinte League schedule terminated on Aug. 4th, after which the league executive has power to order the playing of all postponed games and also the replay of tie games, if the latter affect the final league standings. The league executive met at Napanee last week and drafted a schedule to include the completion of all postponed games and possibly the replay of certain games. All of these scheduled games was mailed to each team by Secretary Lou Crossman, but Kingston refused to play their postponed game until such time as a new game, that had been played with Napanee, had been replayed. This is ridiculous as the league constitution distinctly says that postponed games must be played before any replay or tie games.

This ruling is very fair, as one team has already had the opportunity of gaining a gate receipt, so naturally any postponed games should be played before the replay of a tie game. Incidentally the Kingston "Locos" are scheduled to play a postponed game at Napanee tomorrow and the locals expect to meet a team that is a credit to the baseball game they have displayed to date.

Belleville baseball fans saw their there's softball at the Flats to boot.

Picton and Napanee fulfilled their league scheduled date at Napanee yesterday following which the Gibbards moved into second place in the Bay of Quinte League standings, displacing downed Picton 4 to 1. They are now only one-half a game ahead of Picton, however, but have a mathematical chance of tying Belleville by winning three games this week. Sprat hurled for Napanee and Dannard for Picton.

When the Kingston "Locos" ignored the league schedule and failed to put in an appearance in Belleville last night, they lost their league deposit, which Belleville is claiming, according to league regulations, today. As proxy of the Quinte loop we can see a rough stormy sea ahead for the Quinte skiffs. Twas ever thus.

The draw for the minor series in the O.B.A. was released by Secretary Billie Snyder, from his Hamilton office today. As Belleville and district is not interested or rather does not sponsor any class of baseball below the junior series, there is no use in making mention of such draws. In the junior series, however, the winner of the corset Belleville-Napanee grouping will meet the winners of the Lake Shore junior loop, with the first game scheduled to be played on Aug. 20th. The contenders named were Max Swanston, Hales Barker, Jack Samis and Ken Colling. The Napanee and Belleville kids play tonight here in Belleville.

HODGE PODGE—Lou Ambers says not to worry about him, but rather ask Henry Armstrong how he liked it, along about the 15th round tomorrow night.... Goody Rosen, Toronto gift to the major leagues, is still blasting the spheroid, even if he is with the "darkness boys" of Brooklyn.... Already the baseball men are figuring a managerial berth for the disposed Mickey Cochrane—the game can't be afford to dispense of them.... They do say Frank Sedore and his Point Anne henchmen are hoping for the Napanee and Belleville kids play tonight here in Belleville.

NAPANEE DOWNS PICTON 4-1 TO ADVANCE IN LOOP

Napanee, Aug. 9.—Napanee Gibbards defeated Picton 4 to 1 last night in the Bay of Quinte intermediate game to take sole possession of second place in the league and practically clinch a play-off berth. It was a tight round duel between two good right-handers, who each allowed eight hits, but homesters bunched up their bingles to better advantage and to produce the runs that won the game. Doubles by Spratt's clever second baseman and Sandy were the best hitting features. Spratt shaded his rival as he scattered his hits over seven innings, struck out ten and did not issue a free ticket. Dannard had nine strike-outs and passed one. Curry led the Napanee hitters with a pair of safeties.

Picton ..... 000 100 000—1 8 3

Little Benny's Note Book

Me and pop were taking a walk for pop's health and an abroptiate we went passed about a mile up in the air, and I said, O, opp, that reminds me, there's a new Paul Peppy book valled Paul Peppy Among the Birdmen, I hope I can get it at the lyberry.

Dont you ever read anything but Paul Peppy books? pop said, and I said, Surr, pop, O, I often read other books while I'm waiting for the next Paul Peppy one to come out.

Very broad minded of you, I'm sure, pop said. I dont doubt that Paul Peppy is a noble character and that his exploits in the clouds and on the ground and under the sea are shining examples of courage and level headedness in the face of almost insurmountable difficulties, but after all he is purely fictitious and never were really existed, so these great deeds are comparatively nay for him, he said, and I said, Do you mean i ought to read more about live people?

That's precisely what I mean, live people about people who have lived their lives, pop said. History is filled with them in other words. What man has done man can do again, so the lives of famous men are the best and most practical lived for a boy than the life of an imaginiarry Peppy, coss you saree well me? he said, and I said, Surr, and pop, then he go passed the news stand will you? he said, me the latest edition of World-wide Comics? imminy, pop, what could be more famous than funny pictures from all ofer the world like in Worldwide Comics? I said.

Yee gods what's the use, I ask you? pop said. And when I more, I tell you, there isn't any, he said.

And he bought me the new edition of Worldwide Comics to prove

"BOSS" IS MERRY

This is the picture of a "political" boss in his hour of rejoicing. Edward H. Crump, Democratic political boss of Memphis, Tenn.,—and of all the state—had just been informed that his nominees for governor of Tennessee and for the state's senatorial post had been successful in the primary elections and he couldn't control his jubilation any more. "The ticket" had unseated both Governor Gordon Browning

Wins Unique Golft Bet

With half a $30,000 plantation, plus $2,500 in side bets, at stake, J. Smith Perkins of Chicago watched his ball after a drive in the solo golf marathon he staged at a Windy City course. Perkins bet his business partner a 50 per cent. interest in their farm that he could play eight rounds of golf in succession, each of 18 holes, without scoring less than 95 on any round. He completed the 144 holes in a little over 15 hours and collected.

AMELIASBURG WINS
6-1 OVER BLOOMFIELD

Redersville, Aug. 9 (Special)—In an exhibition game last night the Ameliasburg nine won over the highly heralded Bloomfield squad by 6 to 1. The score however, does not indicate the play as the game was never won until the last inning was over. The Ameliasburg batters only tallied two hits more than the boys from the Canadian factory village". The biggest factor in Bloomfield's loss was Hood the pitcher who seemed to lose control at times, walking five during the game, Talcott for the Robbins' Mills' crew pitched a steady game allowing seven hits striking out three and giving no free passes. Thompson and Talcott each had a double for the only extra base hits of the game. Although every batter for the Ameliasburg nine was on base at least once by virtue of a hit or a free pass.

The lineups:
Ameliasburg: D. Jones 2b; H. Farley 1b; P. Dixon cf; H. Wannamaker 3b; G. Thompson ss; Talcott p; T. Ferguson lf; C. Stinson rf; M. Black ss.

Bloomfield: Mann as; S. Bowerman 2b; Pike 3b; Walker 1b; Irvin rf; A. Cook lf; Hood p; R. Cork c; C. Bowerman cf.

The postponed games in the Consecon and District League are not going to be played it was decided at a meeting of the executive last week since their result would not effect the league standing to any great extent. The only difference that they could make would be that instead of Amelasburg being in second place Wellington by winning over the Ameliasburg crew and Ameliasburg losing their game to Consecon. However as Wellington are now in third place and Ameliasburg in second they would meet in the semi-final anyhow as Consecon are definitely out of it. Tomorrow night Ameliasburg are to meet Wellington at the latter's diamond in the first game of the semi-finals. The winner in a three game series to meet the first

"WOMAN AGAINST WOMAN"

A new screen triumvirate of Herbert Marshall, Virginia Bruce and Mary Astor made its first appearance in "Woman Against Woman", at the Belle Theatre. Robert Sinclair directed and Edward Chodorov produced from his own screen play.

Marshall has the role of the insane band in this picturization of Margaret Culkin Banning's national magazine story, "Enemy Territory", following his outstanding success in "Mad About Music". The story tells of a divorced man who takes his second wife and child home. The second wife finds the town leagued against her and the first wife bent on making trouble, but her love for her husband gives her the strength to see the situation through. Miss Bruce plays the second wife, stepping her role in "Yellow Jack". Miss Astor is the first wife, disappointing the triumvirate of stars are James Beecher, Marjorie Rambeau, Juanita Quigley, Zeffie Tilbury, Sarah Padden, Betty Jane Graham, Dorothy Christy, Morgan Wallace and Joseph Crehan.

Added Feature Hit

Warner Brothers again demonstrates its talent for combining real entertainment with social problems of significance in the picture "Beloved Brat" the companion feature. Woven around the life of a young girl, Roberita Morgan (Bonita Granville) the picture tells a dramatic story of parental misunderstanding and disinterest, which drive the girl into the path of life which few ever retrace—the path which usually ends in stark tragedy. Roberta, the only child in a wealthy home, has been brought up by a governess and the household servants. She is bad-mannered, tempestuous, and thoroughly hateful to everyone in her father's lawyer who is wise enough to realize that she is not to blame. Circumstances involve her in a fatal automobile accident for which the boiler is sentenced to prison. Finally Roberta discovers that she is really to blame and the judge plays her on probation to a school run by Dolores Costello, who is bringing her talent and beauty to the picture after an absence of several years. The events which follow are highly interesting and dramatic, bringing the picture to a smashing close. The film deals straightforwardly with a problem that is close to the hearts and minds of all of us. And without flinching, it places the blame for youthful misdemeanors squarely at feet of the parents, poignantly, it presents a plea for better understanding between the generations. The picture is one in the family can afford to see. Miss Costello is supported by an excellent cast including Dolores Costello, Donald Crisp, Natalie Moorhead and Donald Briggs.

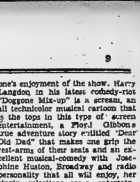
AT THE McCARTHY

"WOMEN OF GLAMOUR"



A superbly enacted comedy drama, rich in romance, pathos and emotional power, completely captivated yesterday's large audiences both at the matinee and evening performances, at the McCarthy theatre, with its straightforward, daring tale of a story that reflected the conventions of a society too smug to be realistic. The film is Columbia's "Women of Glamour", written by Lynn Starling and Mary C. McCall Jr., with Virginia Bruce and Melvyn Douglas in the leading roles. Supporting the stars is a large cast including Reginald Denny, Lynne Maricle, Thurston Hall, Pert Kelton and Mimi Morita.

Taking a serious theme, and infusing it with bright flashes of tender romance and sharp-witted comedy, Director Gordon Wiles has painted a screen picture that approaches entertainment perfection.

Melvyn Douglas' fascinating actor whose flair for the modern touch was so well illustrated in "She Married Her Boss" and "Theodora Goes Wild", comes through with another brilliant performance as the society artist who, disgusted with the sham and selfishness of his own set, finds the honesty and human qualities of his ideal woman in a girl of the night-club set, living on easy luxury.

Virginia Bruce has her greatest dramatic opportunity to date in the role of the lady of the evening, and to her credit, the character remains as one of the most pulp-an thropic of such annals. Jeanne Martin is seen as Melvyn Douglas' socially prominent fiancee and display, an ability that should carry her a long way in Hollywood. Reginald Denny, as the playboy friend of Douglas, comes through with his usual splendid performance. Portrayals of the lesser roles are unanimously to the film's strong appeal.

Preceding "Women of Glamour" a strong programme of interesting and entertaining featurettes are presented, which nicely balances

"The DOCTOR" by MARY ROBERTS RINEHART

"What's all the fire for, Mother?"

"I was going to have a cup of tea. Better have one."

They sat together at the kitchen table and have their tea, and within a day or two Chris saw in the paper that Beverly and her father had sailed for Europe. It was the first time he had really believed that his love affair was over.

It was about that time that Chris ceased to be called "the young doctor" by the neighborhood and became Doctor Arden, or often merely, "the Doctor." The youth had gone out of him, for a time he thought that. Beverly would surely write to him, and he would hurry home from wherever he had been to look at the mail table. No letter came, however. And in time he stopped looking for any. Katie, coming home from a day's work, watched him uneasily.

"He looks sick, Mother. Is he still worrying about her?"

"I don't know. All I know is there's no pleasing him. He'll have the cellar light burning the other morning, and he shouted so you could hear him back away. Now are you getting on?"

"All right, I guess. This kitchen is a sight, Mother. Don't you ever wash the dishes?"

For Chris was a new Katie, not only a Katie who had, so to speak, burned her bridges behind her, but a Katie who was frightened at what she had done and secretly ashamed. Probably neither she nor later did she know the full extent of that infamy of hers. What was a letter? But then, what was anything now that Chris was free again?

She was a new Katie in other ways also, although Chris hardly noticed it. She familiar with neatness and even cultivating it, a Katie who took pride in her body and death in a variety of forms, but a Katie, too, very cheerful and with a new hope springing in her practical young breast since Chris's engagement was broken.

CHAPTER XXV.

It was during that early fall that Katie said she had a talk one day. It started innocently enough, for Katie was ranting some clothes. Yet that talk with all it implied was to change the entire course of more than one life.

"I've got to have a suit, Mother," Katie said. "I can't go around naked."

"Well, what are you going to do about it?" said Lily indifferently. "Ask him for it? If you'd gone to clerk in a store—"

"Well, I didn't, and that's that. If Dick was worth anything, he'd help us. But he's too busy helping himself to anything that's handy!"

It was a moment before that registered with Lily. Then she turned on Katie a terrible face.

"Just what do you mean by that?"

"You know as well as I do. Where do you think he got that money that spring? If you believe he earned it, I don't."

"He's your own brother, Katie. You ought to be ashamed."

"Well, I'm ashamed all right," said Katie. "He got out good and early the next morning, didn't he? And when did he ever do that before?"

"If you're saying that he took—"

"I'm guessing, but that's my guess."

Katie was frightened after that, but it was too late. There was something ominous in her mother's face. She moved about like a woman in a dream, and she ate no dinner that night. If she had wept, Katie would have understood, but her usual facile tears were dried up, her eyes and face staring.

"Mother, I'm wrong, Mother."

"Of course you're wrong. He's had hard times and you've always been down on him."

Chris was out that night on one of the interminable walks by which he tried those days to earn a night's sleep, and after Katie left, Lily went into the office and carefully examined some sample bottles. Finally she took one of sleeping tablets and shook a couple into her hand.

She slept that night. Also she had learned something in that bottle in the office lay peace and forgetfulness, a comfortable oblivion, and after that she never slept without them. She would take her pills and sit by her window in the nightgown until her head began to droop. Once or twice she overslept and Chris had to rouse her. One day he took her into the office and went over her. Her pulse was slow, but otherwise she seemed to be all right.

"I'm not getting addicted now but Dick's Dick stealing at night into that upper front room and stifling Chris's pockets, and then giving her a portion of the loot!

One night Katie, finding Chris alone in the back office, wandered in and sat down on a chair.

"I thought you needed company, Chris."

"I'm not good company for man or beast these days, Katie."

"You're always good company for me, Chris." She leaned over suddenly and put her head against his. "You know that, don't you? Never mind about me, Chris, dear."

He put his arms around her. He had no love for her; there were times when he felt a certain dislike and more when he forgot her altogether, but she was something at least she was something young and friendly to soothe his woundedness. He held her close then, and got up, she remained on the desk watching him.

"Chris, so what?" she inquired, smiling.

That had no nothing, my dear. I was low, and you have cheered me. Isn't that what you meant to do?"

"What about the rest of that?"

"You! You'll forget it and go back to your own room and your own."

"And that's all, is it?" she demanded angrily, and got off the desk. "I'm like your dog. You pet me when you're low and like to, and ignore me when you don't."

She flew out of the room. He had been foolish, and he knew it.

X X X

That winter was cold. with deep snows. His practice had picked up again, but when he made out his bills at the end of the year, he found that outside of his city work he had earned less than two thousand dollars in twelve months. But at least it was good to be busy, to drop into his bed, so that the alert censors in his brain could not torment Beverly even at his deepest dreams. Like Lily in her drugged rest, he asked only to forget, and he was never to know that the unpolished stove in the kitchen with its scrawl of the letter had been the dingy crematory of his dead life.

He went back on duty at the hospital at the beginning of the year, a serious man. He went back discouraged and heavy-hearted. Nevertheless he got through that first two months creditably. Weary as he was, the familiar sights and smells of the operating room never failed to rally him.

Now and then Grant or one of his other men would wander in to watch his work. He was a fast and sure worker, and they felt a certain pride in him.

Chris was modest, and they liked him for that, but when it was over, they would go down in the elevator to their waiting cars, feeling as if they had built up a young Prankenstein to destroy them.

"Works too fast. If they would say to themselves, "Brilliant, of course, but reckless," and resting, trouble some day."

He got into trouble during the third month of his service.

He had gone down to his usual cheerless breakfast, and there I was trembling Lily waiting for him in the doorway. Some one, she said, had put info her room during the night and stolen the rent money from her purse.

"Got in?" he said incredulously. "How?"

"By the shed roof," she said tonelessly. "I never heard a thing. Chris, that's the truth. My window was open, and you can see the marks in the snow."

She had many faults, but she was no liar. Chris, examining the roof, saw that she had told the truth; but he suspected her of guessing the identity of the thief, as he did himself. He said nothing, however, and ended by forcing her to take some coffee and stating that he would not go to the police.

"Not a chance in the world of finding him," he told her. But I'd open the other window hereafter."

It was disturbing, even serious, but he picked up his newspaper to avoid her tragic eyes and saw confronting him the announcement of Beverly's engagement to Jerry Ames, cabled from Paris. He sat quite still, holding the paper in front of him... Perhaps he had never abandoned hope until that moment. Now he knew and shaken, he realized that that particular page of his life was now turned over and the book closed.

With a sex face he picked up that everlasting cup of his, got up hat and coat, and started for the hospital. He was apparently early enough. After long strain man s'act the inevitable with the calm of the interminable walks by which he tried those days to earn a night's sleep, and after Katie left, Lily went into the office and carefully examined some sample bottles. Finally she took one of sleeping tablets and shook a couple into her hand.

She slept that night. Also she had learned something in that bottle in the office lay peace and forgetfulness, a comfortable oblivion, and after that she never slept without them. She would take her pills and sit by her window in the nightgown until her head began to droop. Once or twice she overslept and Chris had to rouse her. One day he took her into the office and went over her. Her pulse was slow, but otherwise she seemed to be all right.

"I'm not getting addicted now but Dick's Dick stealing at night into that upper front room and stifling Chris's pockets, and then giving her a portion of the loot!

One night Katie, finding Chris alone in the back office, wandered in and sat down on a chair.

"I thought you needed company, Chris."

"I'm not good company for man or beast these days, Katie."

"You're always good company for me, Chris." She leaned over suddenly and put her head against his. "You know that, don't you? Never mind about me, Chris, dear."

He put his arms around her. He had no love for her; there were times when he felt a certain dislike and more when he forgot her altogether, but she was something at least she was something young and friendly to soothe his woundedness. He held her close then, and got up, she remained on the desk watching him.

"Chris, so what?" she inquired, smiling.

That had no nothing, my dear. I was low, and you have cheered. me. Isn't that what you meant to do?"

"What about the rest of that?"

"You! You'll forget it and go back to your own room and your own."

"And that's all, is it?" she demanded angrily, and got off the desk. "I'm like your dog. You pet me when you're low and like to, and ignore me when you don't."

She flew out of the room. He had been foolish, and he knew it.

The Welcoming Light

By KARIN ASBRAND

Tilda May flipped the dishcloth on to its place on the towel rack and turned to survey the lanky little figure on the chair near the door.

She managed to veil the hostility in her eyes, and she bit her tongue to keep it from saying, "Go you're in again." Instead she said, "I s'pose you're hungry."

Beverly nodded.

"I haven't eaten anything since early this morning," she admitted.

Tilda May silently put the coffee pot on the stove, sliced cold lamb and deftly set bread and butter, marmalade and a dish of preserved peaches in a tempting array on the table, wondering all the while what this daughter of Tom's had on her mind now.

When she married Tom Taylor she had said to this daughter of his, "Remember, Beverly, there will always be a welcoming light in the window for you". Beverly, it seemed, had always remembered when she needed something.

She had been in high school then, a pretty, flighty, thoughtless-knew-it-all slip of a girl of sixteen. That was eight years ago. Time and again she had come to her stepmother for money. Large sums of it. Again and again Tilda May had painstakingly saved the money out of her budget for a vacation, for a new automobile, for a dress, only to have it wormed away from her by an appeal from Beverly. A year later Beverly had returned, a deserted wife, and had an infant daughter in Tilda May's horrified arms as just about the time they were ready to buy another bungalow.

And here she was again. Tilda May watched her out of the corner of a wary eye. She ate like a hungry little animal. She looked ill, in spite of the superfluous coat of rouge on her face, and in spite of herself, her stepmother's heart warmed towards her. After all, she was Tom's, and the welcoming light was still shining in the window.

"You quite well, Beverly?" she asked, as she sat down opposite the girl.

Beverly shook her head.

"That's what I came about, Tilda," she said. "I got a bum lung. The doctor says I got to go away. He gives me just six months unless I go to Denver."

Tilda May's heart sank. Denver! All the money she and Tom had raked together for a much-needed trip to California would have to go to Beverly now, for doctors' and a trip to Denver.

"She shan't have it!" her heart rebelled. "You deserve a vacation. You worked hard for that money. What good is she? What's she done for you? For her father? For her baby?"

"Tilda," the girl's tired voice smote her. "I'm scared to die."

"You ain't going to die, Beverly," the older woman soothed her. "I'm sure that you have the money in the morning."

Beverly hung her head.

"Can I see my baby?" she asked.

Tilda May led the way to the bedroom where—the mite lay asleep in her crib, a charming, rosy bit of humanity, one chubby hand tucked under her cheek, the other clutching a shabby rag doll.

"She's lovely!" breathed Beverly. Then, suddenly, she turned, and threw herself into Tilda May's arms.

"Don't let her be like me," she sobbed. "I'm bad. Make her—like you. Oh, if I'd listened to things you're said to me."

Tilda May drew the girl close.

"There, there", she soothed. "You go to Denver, and get well. Then you'd best come and live here with your father and me."

Tom had grudgingly given up his trip.

"You're had nothin' since we was married," he complained, "nothin' but Beverly and her troubles."

"I haven't got a bum lung," she interposed, valiantly.

And when the telegram came three months later, she was glad she had been good to Beverly. Beverly had lost her fight. She had died in Denver.

"Poor little Beverly," said Tilda May, wiping away a tear.

"She was a drag on you," put in Tom Taylor, averting his eyes. "And her kid'll be another drag".

"No, she won't, Tom," she defended her, staunchly. "She'll have her chance. I didn't have Beverly long enough. No mother for years! What chance has Beverly? Children need homes and parents. Mothers that love them, and understand. Fathers that work to keep the home intact. If God will only let me live, this child shall have Beverly's chance, Tom".

"Guess you're right, Tilda," said Tom.

And the welcoming light set in the window for Beverly shone bravely out into the night, as if to try to tell Beverly that all was well.

WALL STREET CLOSE

New York, Aug. 9 (AP)— Stocks drifted in today's market and leaders backed down fractions to more than three points before scheduled mild support.

The list slipped at the opening, but on an extremely small turnover. Rallying attempts generally did not get very far but near the final hour most quotations were above bottom levels.

Transfers were about 800,000 shares.

TORONTO STOCKS CLOSE

Toronto, Aug. 9—Trading increased a little on weakness this afternoon on the Toronto market, suggesting more urgent selling than buying. All prices were off at the close with the gold indicator showing the widest setback. Losses ranged up to 10 to 15 cents in the group. Volume was up about 75,000 shares from that of Monday with turnover of about 350,000 shares.

Toronto, Aug. 9 (CP)—Spotty selling met with a scant demand in the early hours on Toronto Exchange today and prices drifted downward. Losses were widest in the medium-price gold list while in the seniors Lake Shora was the feature, coming off to considerable volume at a fractional decline.

The market seemed to be disturbed by war threats in the Far East and also by the downward slant of the New York market. Metal prices also were heavy, living the base metals a moderately weak tone.

Steel, food, utility and paper shares held steadier positions in slow action and the senior oils held steady.

Weakness in the golds was mainly apparent in Hard Rock, Kerr-Addison, Hollinger, East Malartic, Powell-Rouyn and some of the penny issues.

Western oils sold down, including Royalite, Calgary-Edmonton and Anglo-Canadian.

FLYING PRIEST CARRIES AID

Father Shulte Starts on Journey to Ill Missionary

Churchill, Man., Aug. 9 (CP)— Father Paul Schulte, flying priest of the Arctic, set off from here yesterday on a 1,200-mile flight, carrying aid to Father Lacombe, Roman Catholic missionary seriously ill at Arctic Bay on the northern coast of Baffin Island.

Word reached here Sunday by wireless that Father Chouinard was running a temperature of 105 and suffering severe pains in his left side. He also was nothing for five days and was requesting help.

Father Schulte had just arrived by plane from Repulse Bay, 700 miles up the coast of Hudson Bay from Churchill but he immediately decided to fly the 1,200 miles to Arctic Bay. He left at daylight yesterday with his mechanic, Brother Beaudoin. Planning to stop at Chesterfield Inlet, 330 mile souteh, to pick up Dr. Robert Melling from the hospital there.

Mother's Screams Fail to Save Child

Toronto, Aug .9.—(CP)— Mrs. Robert Hall screamed from the window of her home last night as her 18-months-old son toddled into the curb and stepped onto the roadway. She ran to the street and screamed to a driver, Robert Nutter of Toronto, to stop his motor car, but it struck the infant. The child suffered two fractured hips, concussion, badly lacerated legs and body cuts. The driver was not held by police.

6 PERSONS HURT IN CAR COLLISION

Two From Toronto And Four From Belleville Injured

Kingston, Ont., Aug. 8 (CP)—Two Toronto persons and three from Belleville were seriously injured in a head-on collision near Odessa today on No. 3 highway at 10:30 this morning.

Col. Patterson and his wife of Toronto were driving west from Kingston and their car collided with an eastbound car from Belleville. All occupants of the two cars were badly hurt and rushed to the Kingston General Hospital. Mrs. Patterson was badly gashed about the head and throat and her condition was very serious, while Col. Patterson was not so badly injured and was expected to leave the hospital in a day. The condition of the Belleville people was not known as they were in the operating room of the hospital this afternoon.

Col. Patterson was Commander of the Canadian Mounted Rifles in France during the war and is said to be in the employ of the Sackville Furniture Company in Toronto.

Lieut. Col. W. R. Patterson and Mrs. Patterson, Toronto, were driving west when they collided with a car containing a Mr. Gills, Belleville, W. Youngs, Belleville, and Misses Elsie and Dorothy Youdale, sisters of W. Youngs. The cars were badly wrecked. Mrs. Patterson was badly cut about the head and throat and suffered severe nervous shock. Col. Patterson was not badly injured and was expected to leave hospital tomorrow.

It was stated at the hospital that the Misses Youdale were not seriously hurt and would likely leave hospital today. Mr. Youngs suffered the injuries of the other two in the Belleville party was not ascertained.

It was understood the two Youdale girl were on their way to Montreal to see their brother home in England.

Col. Patterson is employed by the Sackville Furniture Co. in Toronto.

'FLYERS' WIN FIRST PLAY-OFF GAME

Trenton, Aug. 9 (Special)— The R.C.A.F. "Flyers" held a distinct advantage in the Trenton and District softball league play-offs when they defeated the local Chisham Garage nine by the score of 16 to 4 in the first game. Hayoff game played here last night. "Tiny" Davis hurled superb ball for the "Flying nine" and was given equally as good support in the field. Coughlin, the Trenton mound man was hit hard as the "Flyers" pounded out 20 solid base hits. The next game in the league play-offs is scheduled for this evening.

Cheese Production Down in July

Toronto, Aug. 9. — Production of creamery butter in Ontario last month swelled in excess of 600,000 pounds to bring total increase in output for the first seven months of the current year to 2.5 million pounds, when compared with 1937, according to figures released by the Ontario Department of Agriculture yesterday afternoon. The make of cheddar cheese during July slumped 2.1 million pounds from a year ago, while for the seven-month period production showed a sharp decrease of 5.2 million pounds from the same period of last year.

Butter produced in July amounted to 10,669,437 pounds, as against 9,994,863 pounds a year ago, with total production to date at 51,918,852 pounds, compared with 49,358,231 pounds last year. July output of cheese in this province was reported at 16,891,285 pounds and compared with 17,015,533 pounds in July of 1937. For the first seven months the make reached a total of 42,201,115 pounds, which compares with 47,563,869 pounds in the same period of last year.

Prices went higher for cheese and slightly lower for butter on the local produce market yesterday.

Stronger boards over the week caused prices to rise on new makes of cheese on the wholesale market. New large was offered at 14½c to 14½c, twins at 14½c to 14¾c, and triplets at 14¾c to 15c. Average price to shipper f.o.b. country points advanced to 13⅝c for new, large and triplets.

Although receipts were not heavy on the butter market, there were sufficient supplies to fill the quiet demand. Some of the trade are apparently inclined to stay out of the market until after the report on storage holdings has been released from Ottawa Wednesday. Sales were recorded in Ontario creamery solids at 24½c for No. 1 grades and 23½c for 38 score. Prints moved at the unchanged prices of 26c to 26½c for top grades and 25½c to 25¾c for 38 score.

The egg market showed little change. Trading was quiet, but offerings were not excessive. Graded shipments traded at the former values of 26c for A-large, 25c for medium, 22c for B's and 21c for C grades. Other sections of the market were also steady.

Prices Drift Down At Montreal.

Montreal, Aug. 9.—Butter and egg prices continued to drift downward on open produce markets Monday, according to Dominion Department of Agriculture reports. Demand for cheese, however, was better and small gains were made.

Creamery butter prices in retail markets sold for 26c a pound and solids for 25½c. Western butter delivered here was offered at 24¾c. Quebec pasteurized No. 1 wholesale price to jobbers was 24½c. Receipts were 530 boxes.

Cheese was offered at 14½c a pound for No. 1 Ontario white, 14½c for Ontario colored, 13¼c to 13½c for Quebec colored, 13¼c to 13½c colored. Receipts: 15 boxes.

Graded egg shipments in carlots here were offered at 27c a dozen for A-large, 25½c for A-medium, 24c for B and 21½c for C. Receipts: 7 cases.

Why the Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen

Science Service Meteorologist

Forget about everyone feels depressed when forests are burning. The weather causes of forest fires are dry, warm, windy days which dry out the forest floor, permitting easy igniting agency greater success. These days occur mostly on warm days with temperatures above 80 degrees and relative humidities less than 50 per cent. The time of greatest hazard is in the spring when the sun, due to lack of foliage, really dries out the dead grass. Fires are often started by smokers, in fact, almost 30 per cent of the fires in New England during one five-year period were traceable to this cause.

THE WEATHER

Toronto, Aug. 10—(CP)—Moderate to fresh winds have prevailed in the Maritime Provinces and light showers in southern districts of Manitoba and Saskatchewan, and thunderstorms are occurring this morning in Western Ontario. It has been comparatively cool in Alberta and Nova Scotia, but moderately warm elsewhere. Pressure is high over the Prairie Provinces and low over certain States, also Quebec and the Southeast States. A trough of low pressure extends from Hudson Bay southward across Lake Superior.

Forecasts—Fresh winds, shifting to northwest; cloudy with thunderstorms. Thursday, fresh northwest winds; fair and comparatively cool.

Western Provinces—Fair and moderately warm today and Thursday.

Japanese War Council Discusses Border Fighting

Grappling Hooks Recover Body Where Jap Water-God Fails

New Westminster, B.C., Aug. 10—(CP)—A police grappling hook succeeded yesterday where the Japanese "water god" failed in recovering the body of 15-year-old Peter Radick from the waters of the Fraser river where he drowned Monday.

Scores of Japanese led by Mrs. Sawa Omori let loose slips of paper inscribed with Japanese characters on the river in the hope it would lead them to the body of the white boy who slipped from a log boom and disappeared.

The slips floated downstream out of sight instead of circling and sinking at the spot where the body rested.

Police concentrating near the spot where the lad was last seen, found his body just 110 feet from where he fell from the boom while paddling.

Mrs. Omori said though the "water god" failed yesterday it had aided recovery of the body of a man drowned in the Fraser river several months ago.

TORONTO REFUSES DICTATOR POWER ON CITY TRAFFIC

Control Board Will Ask Traffic Engineer For Report

STUDY OF TRAFFIC

Toronto, Aug. 10—(CP)—On opposition from Mayor Day, Board of Control today declined to give Traffic Engineer Tracy Lemay powers of a "dictator" in controlling traffic conditions in the city.

The Board, however, agreed on motion of Mayor Day, to have Mr. Lemay report his views and policies on the situation and also directed a report from W. G. Angus, Acting City Solicitor, as to powers of various advisory traffic bodies.

The Mayor suggested a board of three might be given the traffic problem, the board to include Mr. Lemay, Works Commissioner R. C. Harris and a representative of the Police Board.

"We should not seek to put too much power in the hands of one man, the Mayor said. Con. Fred Hamilton made the motion to make the appointment.

ACE IS HONORED

LIEUT.-COL. BISHOP

Now holding the position of air vice-marshal of Canada, an honorary post, Lieut.-Col. W. A. Bishop, V.C., Canada's great war ace, has been appointed air marshal, according to announcement today from Ottawa. The appointment is announced in view of the honor emphasis placed upon air defence in the Dominion and the technical assistance the former war flier has rendered the department of national defence. The rank is honorary.

WAR-TIME ACE, COL. W. A. BISHOP, MARSHAL OF AIR

Inauguration of New Policies in Defence Expected

COL. ROGERS BRIGADIER

Advisory Committee For 3 Defence Services to be Set Up

Ottawa, Aug. 10 (CP)—Believed to presage inauguration of new policies in the direction of Canada's defence affairs, with the likelihood of other appointments and promotions to follow, Defence Headquarters has announced the advancement to the honorary rank of Air Marshal of Canada, at one time flying ace, Hon. Air Vice-Marshal W. A. Bishop, V.C., now of Montreal. Along with this promotion came that of Colonel J. Sutherland Rogers, C.M.G., D.S.O., of Toronto, to the honorary rank of Brigadier, who since May, 1937, has had main planes during the Great War was among the leaders in that sphere, outranking Major-General Mannock, Barker, Collishaw and others in the famous Fraiendorf Circus. Since the war he has been engaged in commercial pursuits largely, but has continued his interest in aviation.

Consulted On Air Defences

Some time ago Defence Minister Ian Mackenzie called him into consultation on matters subject relating to Canada's aerial defences, and in connection with the recommended plan of establishing advisory committees for the various services, Marshal Bishop will likely be a member of whatever body is set up in an honorary capacity similar to that held by the Royal Canadian Air Force.

Brigadier Rogers had a distinguished war record with the 3rd (Toronto) Battalion. He joined as a subaltern officer in 1914 and wound up as Commanding Officer. He was several times wounded and was decorated four times, in addition to being three mentioned in despatches.

The advancemen of Marshal Bishop was understood to be in pursuance of a long-standing plan on the part of Defence Minister Ian Mackenzie to establish advisory committees for the three defence services.

About a year ago Air Vice-Marshal Leckie, Air Vice-Marshal was created and conferred on Canada's famous ace, Billy Bishop.

Bishop Graduate of R. M. C.

Marshall Bishop, who is 44 years old is a graduate of the Royal Military College of Canada. He was commissioned in September, 1914, to the 9th Mississaga Horse, and joined the Canadian Mounted Rifles in June, 1915. Six months later he was transferred to the Royal Flying Corps where he won a brilliant career that was to see him among the highest ranking aces of the Gre t War.

During his career he won the Victoria Cross, the Distinguished Service Order (and bar), the Military Cross with bar, the Distinguished Flying Cross. The French Government bestowed on him the Croix de Guerre, with palm, and he was made a Chevalier of the Legion of Honor.

JAPAN READY TO GRANT EQUALITY UPON COMMISSION

Report Says She Would Give Russia Equal Representation

'FRONT' QUIET TODAY

Hill Which is Disputed Territory is Scene of Clash

Tokyo, Aug. 10—(CP)— Japan's supreme war council today was called into emergency session to discuss the increasingly severe hostilities on the Siberian frontier.

As the council met to review military aspects of the dispute, a foreign office spokesman said Japan was preparing to concede to Russia equal representation on a joint commission for demarcation of the Siberian-Manchoukuo border.

Japan previously had insisted upon what in effect would have given her majority voting power in negotiations to settle the dispute, cause of intermittent border clashes since last June.

The war council heard General Seishiro Itagaki, War Minister, give a detailed report of developments in the zone around Changkufeng, where fighting between Soviet and Manchoukuoan troops has centred since July 29.

Russians Repulsed

Tuki, Korea (near the Siberian frontier) Aug. 10—(AP)—Japanese troops repelled a charge of Russian soldiers in the Changkufeng area following yesterday's heavy artillery shelling of Japanese lines, army headquarters announced today.

The four-mile Siberian border front was calm at 10 a.m., after the Soviet commander which began fighting at midnight yesterday and lasted until 8 a.m. today.

Following the preparatory barrage the Soviet infantry charged Hill 52' one-half mile south of Changkufeng during the night, but was repulsed the communique said.

Reports from the front at Changkufeng Hill is disputed territory and Japanese action to retaliate it provoked the present border crisis.

Royal Blood Exposed to War In Orient

Tokyo, Aug. 10 (AP)—Japan has not hesitated to expose royal blood to the perils of war in China.

Official lists of army and navy units in action in China are studded with names of the highest and most aristocratic families in the empire and some closely related to the imperial house.

The emperor recently sent his brother, Prince Chichibu, on a long hazardous trip over the China front.

Re-Arming by Grt. Britain Has Kept War-Dogs at Bay Says Hon. G. H. Ferguson

Former High Commissioner During Short Stay in Belleville Tells Newspaperman He is Absolutely in Favor of Permitting British Air Schools in Canada—Canada's Defence is in British Hands—Must Not Vex Conditions in Local Light, Says Mr. Ferguson—Britain Now Able to Impress World For Peace With Her Strength.

"Canada's security lies in the unity of that great force that has kept the European dogs of war chained during the past few years, the British Empire," the Hon. G. Howard Ferguson, ex-premier of Ontario and former High Commissioner for Canada in England, told the Intelligencer in an exclusive interview yesterday afternoon.

Looking the picture of health the Hon. Mr. Ferguson, with the Hon. R. C. Matthews, Dominion Minister of National Revenue and Mrs. Matthews, Toronto, paused in the afternoon where they were luncheon guests at the Hotel Quinte, while enroute to Montreal to attend the funeral of the late Right Hon. Arthur Meighen, K.C., a brother of the Hon. Mr. Matthews, and of the present Liberal-Anti-Governor of Ontario, the Hon. Albert Matthews.

Tired Woman Takes Rest in Shade, Police Sent to Scene of 'No Accident'

With sirens screaching loudly motorcycle police and city police in the police cruiser dashed madly across the lower bridge yesterday afternoon and numerous citizens stood in amazement, wondering what the apparent chase was all about.

Late yesterday afternoon Acting Chief Arthur Harman received a call to the effect that a woman was lying alongside or highway No. 2 opposite the Ontario School for the Deaf and might be dead.

Motorcycle Patrolmen Doug Elsie Sexton and Jack Caldwell boarded their motorcycles and with sirens screaming loudly roared at top speed across the city's main intersection, followed closely by city constables in the police cruiser.

Upon the arrival of the police at the scene described, a woman was found sitting nonchalantly beneath a shade tree. "What's the trouble here?" asked one of the officials on the police call.

"Why nothing that I know of, I'm having a little rest here in the shade. You see I'm going to Kingston and the hitch hiking hasn't been so good today," stated the foot-sore woman who laconically added she was a native of Toronto, where she had left early yesterday. "So long boys, thanks for the attention," added the woman as she waved a fond adieu to the departing officers.

Jumps into Water to Cool Off After Ball Game, and Drowns

Kingston, Ont., Aug. 10—(CP)—Daniel Sallitt, 26, high school teacher from Wilkesbarre, Pa., was drowned in 10-feet of water in Horseshoe Lake, five miles south of Arden yesterday when he jumped into the water to cool off after playing baseball. Arden is 85 miles north of Kingston.

Sallitt's body lay in the water for about three quarters of an hour before four companions and one of Sallitt's pupils, were able to locate it. Artificial respiration was applied for three hours by Dr. Whylock of Sharbot Lake.

FRENCH-CANADIAN LIVED LONGEST, TO AGE OF 113 YRS

Oldest of Beings Whose Cases Have Been Scientifically Tested

REPORT FURNISHED

London, Aug. 10. —(CP-Havas) — A French-Canadian who died early in the 19th century lived longer than any other person whose claims have been submitted to scientific tests, Dr. Jean Vallois, Norwegian and expert on the subject of old age, said today in a letter to the Times.

The letter was inspired by the communication by Sir Harris, secretary to the Anti-Slavery and Aborigines Protection Society of the discovery in Bechuanaland of a native believed to be at least 140 years old.

Dr. Ernest and other members of the Centenarians Club, which he founded to investigate the means "whereby health and vigor may be retained beyond the century" offered to reimburse Sir John to the sum of 100 (£20) for the purpose of bringing the native to London if scientific investigation here should show the man to be even 120 years old.

Years Spent in Study

"I have spent years," the letter of the Centenarians Club claims of alleged super-centenarians past and present, and in summarizing the result of my labors I have arrived at the opening chapter of my book, 'Vie Longue Life' dans Le Monde,' the life span of man to date is only just over 113 years, an age achieved by one Pierre Joubert, a French-Canadian who died early in the 19th century."

Parachute Jumper Fractures Spine

Windsor, Ont., Aug. 10—(CP)—Fractured vertebrae today of that James McCorkell, 33-year-old parachute jumper, sufferer a fracture spine injury yesterday when he leaped from the middle of the International Bridge into the Detroit river in an unpublished jump.

The injury came when McCorkell, who has been doing reckless daredevil stunts, hit the water with terrific force when his chute failed to open until within 20 fe-t of the end of the 160-foot drop. His condition is serious.

Ton of Marihuana Worth $250,000 Is Destroyed

Point Pelee, Ont., Aug. 10 (CP)—More than a ton of Marihuana weed, worth at least $250,000 if ground into "dope" cigarettes, has been pulled up and destroyed during the past week in Point Pelee National Park, it was announced today.

Discovered in patches during 10 days ago, the hemp plant which produces the narcotic, has been eradicated over a six mile stretch. Growing wild in the mild temperate zone the plant has evidently flourished for years.

Science Fails to Reveal Cause Why Hay Fever is Ahead of Time

New York, Aug. 10.—(CP)—Scientists are unable to agree upon the reason New York City's estimated 70,000 hay fever victims are having their sniffles, sniffs and sneezes ahead of time this year.

Communiques from both fronts have the theoretical branch of newspaperdom following a hearty luncheon. Asked for an opinion as to whether Canada should permit establishment of schools for the training of British fliers, he replied:

The official season for hay fever, according to Dr. Israel Weinstein, assistant director of the Bureau of Health Education, is Aug. 15 to Sept. 30, but hay fever apparently will not abide by the rules.

Dr. Weinstein says "hay fever" is "a very bad name," because it is not caused by hay, as recorded, in various forms, from almost everything—ragweed, grasses, certain trees, chicken feathers, cats, horses, strawberries and cucumbers.

PILOT DESCENDS ALASKAN SLOPES TO SETTLEMENT

Food And Maps For Frank Barr Dropped From Relief Plane

FLIER WAVES 'O.K.'

Fairbanks, Alaska, Aug. 10—(CP) —Pilot Frank Barr clambered today down the rugged slopes of the Middle Fork of the Coly Mile River toward the Indian settlement known as Joseph's Village.

The Canadian-born pilot who formerly operated an air service in northern British Columbia and the Yukon, was forced down last Thursday on a flight to Aqua Wade from Fairbanks, and was spotted Sunday night on an open hillside by Jimmy Dodson.

Pilot Herman Lerdahl and United States Aeronautics Inspector Charles R. Burnett returned yesterday from a relief flight on which they dropped food and maps for Barr.

The waved 'all ok' to us and two hours later we flew over him again," Lerdahl said. "He should reach the village tomorrow."

Plans were being made to pick up Barr by plane on a level area at the village.

Barr spotted late Monday, Dodson said, Barr had written the word "grub" on one wing of his plane and the words "Joseph's Village" on the fuselage, indicating his intention to hike there. The village is about 20 miles distant.

Chinese Guerrillas Form 'Regular Army'

Shanghai, Aug. 10 (AP)—Formation of a "regular army" under the banner of "Loyal and Righteous National Salvationists" was proclaimed today by Chinese guerrillas at suburban Pootung.

Discovered reports said the tough-and-go fighters, who have claimed repeated victories over Japanese units throughout China, are increasing rapidly in numbers in anticipation of an expanding guerrilla campaign.

LT. COL. LA FLECHE IS PROMOTED TO MAJOR GENERAL

Many Senior Officers of R.C.N. And R.C.A.F. Promoted

FURTHER CHANGES

Wing Commander Godfrey Becomes One of Group Captains

Ottawa, Aug. 10.—(CP)—Promotion of Lieut.-Col. L. R. LaFleche, D.S.O., Deputy Minister of National Defence, to the substantive rank of Major General, was announced from defence headquarters today.

With the advancement of the deputy to substantive rank were announced also promotions of many senior officers of the Royal Canadian Navy and the Royal Canadian Air Force. Commodore Percy W. Nelles, chief of the naval staff, is elevated to the rank of Rear-Admiral. Commander George C. Jones and Commander Leonard W. Murray become Captains.

Promotions

In the air service the substantive rank of Vice Air Marshal has been created, and two promotions made. Air Commodore W. A. Bishop, V.C., Air Officer, and Air Commodore J. Sutherland Rogers, Principal Officer commanding No. 10 Military District in Winnipeg, are advanced to the grade of Air Vice Marshal.

At the same time five other senior officers of the Royal Air Force have been promoted. Group Captain R. W. Bradnor and Group Captain L. S. Breadner have been advanced to the rank of Air Commodore. Wing Commander C. H. Kenny, A. E. Godfrey and N. R. Anderson have been moved forward a step to the rank of Group Captain.

Promotion Of Permanent Force

In the permanent force a service only one promotion was announced, that of Brigadier E. C. Renaud to be District Officer Commanding No. 4 Military District at Quebec. He succeeds Brigadier J. M. Brower who has retired.

It is understood further changes in the militia are contemplated,

STRUCK BY BUCKET MINER IS KILLED

Timmins, Ont., Aug. 10.—(CP)—Struck on the head by a heavy shaft bucket while working in the shaft at the Buffalo Ankerite Mine, Maida Brander, Timmins, died instantly killed yesterday.

Mine officials investigated and said Brander, an experienced shaft worker, had been engaged in the construction of the cage compartment in the shaft. As the cage descended with a group of men being taken down to work in the bottom of the shaft, Brander is believed to have stuck his head out through an opening in the will of the cage compartment and to have taken the full force of the descending bucket on his head. He was almost decapitated.

Indian Tidal Wave Drowns 100

Lucknow, India, Aug. 10 (AP)—Tidal waves covering 400 square miles in the united provinces drowned 100 persons and destroyed today and caused widespread property damage.

Relief operations were hampered because the floods wiped out 30 miles of the only railroad line to government headquarters.

The United Provinces are in South Central India.

City and District News

CRANES FIGHT GULLS FOR ISLAND HOME

Harley Gains, and a party of local residents returning from a brief fishing excursion in the vicinity of Massassaga at dusk last evening, reported the unusual sight of a colony of large white cranes fighting a savage battle with flocks of herring gulls, apparently disputing the possession of Snake Island. The battle waged fiercely when the more active gulls which at times settled on the backs of the larger birds, pecking savagely at their tender necks. The fight was reportedly carried on until darkness.

KINGSTON CHEESE BD. OFFERS CONDOLENCES

At the last meeting of the Kingston Cheese Board, on the motion of W. R. McCreary, buyer of this city, and seconded by Fred Crawford, Secretary H. R. Wartman of the Kingston Board was instructed to send a letter of condolence to A. W. Sirrett, agricultural representative of Prescott, recently on the death of his wife, Mrs. Elizabeth Lacey Sirrett who passed away on Saturday morning. The members of the Board also instructed the secretary to forward a floral wreath as a token of sympathy.

COLLEGIATE REPAIRS FOUND EXTENSIVE

Repair work to the walls and parapet of the local Collegiate Institute and Vocational School which has been carried on for some time past, will need about the same time before its completion, it was stated by Chairman Jas. Edmond of Education, Chas. Hyde. Following an examination by himself and workers the parapet and tapped walls were found in a dangerously weakened condition, it was reported by Mr. Hyde. "They were in a near state of collapse, and work wasn't started any too soon," it was added.

BAY LEVELS STAY FAIRLY STATIONARY

Water levels of the bay this season are comparatively stationary, it is revealed by a check of the Harbormaster's gauge at the dock. During the week-end a fluctuation of two and one half inches rise and fall in the bay was noted, due to the south winds which pushed the water up from lake levels.

PURSUED BITTERN HAS FORCED LANDING

Attacked by two small birds as it flew lazily over the park last evening, a large bittern immediately became confused through the small birds' tactics, put on a blind spurt of speed and crashed full force into the solid wall of a coal company's warehouse. The stunned bird was picked up by two youths, placed in the nearby marsh, and later was able to fly off in the dusk.

KELLAWAY BOAT REPORTED MISSING

Kenneth Kellaway, Everett Street had intended racing in the weekly Belleville Yacht Club sailing races this afternoon, but changed his mind this morning. The reason given given was the fact that Kenneth's 16-foot sailing boat was missing from its moorings at the old Allen Dock. The incident was reported to police authorities. "I don't know whether the boat drifted away or was stolen," admitted the owner, although he was certain he had firmly secured its craft last evening.

10-Year Boy Dies In Make-Believe Duel in Hungary

Budapest, Aug. 10.—(AP)—Ten-year-old Paul Vanya was dying today in a make-believe duel at Szombathely, near the Austrian border.

He was struck by a bullet from a duelling pistol in the hands of a nine-year-old companion. The boys had pretended they were army and playfully decided to settle their difference in the best Hungarian tradition on the field of honor. They found pistols in their homes.

ILLEGAL ENTRY CHARGE IS TRIED

George Clare Horne, 20, of Camnifton, was arraigned before United States Commissioner Wilbur Lamouth, at Watertown, on a warrant charging him with violating the immigration act in that he unlawfully entered the United States at Clayton on July 31. Immigration Inspector Charles Mills, of Clayton, charged that Horne told him he was entering the United States on a visit, but an investigation revealed that he was working for wages on a farm at Maitland Holler. When arraigned before Commissioner Lamouth, Horne admitted his guilt. He was ordered held for the next term of the federal district court. Bail was fixed at $1,000. In default of bail Horne was remanded to the county jail.—Brockville Recorder-Times.

Corrigan, Transatlantic Flier, Does Not Smoke Nor Drink

Picture From Dublin Shows Him Drinking Glass of Water

HIS UNCLE'S WORDS

One of the first pictures of Douglas Corrigan radioed to America and published in the metropolitan newspapers after he had finished his Atlantic in an antique 9000 plane, showed him drinking a glass of water. Immediately on his arrival at Dublin he was offered a glass of Irish whiskey. His reply was, "Thanks, I don't drink; just give me a glass of water."

His uncle, Thomas Fraser Langford, of the First Baptist Church, Long Beach, California, in whose home the young flier lives, informed the "California Voice"—"My nephew neither smokes nor drinks. I have heard him say on more than one occasion, 'Water is good enough for me. Liquor and flying do not mix.' Douglas has lived a clean life. He is a member of a Protestant church. His life's ambition is to be a good flier and he knows that to attain this end he has to have a clear head."

Like Lindbergh, who first spanned the Atlantic, he abstains from alcohol.

On a mission the world hopes will be successful, Lord Runciman, British diplomat smiles as he leaves his London home for Praha, Czechoslovakia, where is attempting to bring about a settlement between the government and Sudeten Germans. Diplomatic circles have expressed doubts as to possibility of success for his mission, but it is hoped his visit will furnish a breathing spell, at least, for harassed Europe.

TOO MUCH NOISE IS MAYOR'S VIEW

Complaints Prompt Mayor Bone to Say There Will be Bylaw Passed

Noise-numbed ear drums of Belleville residents which in the past have been subjected to an ever-increasing daily and nightly din on city streets and byways may soon be protected in the opinion of Mayor Jamieson Bone, expressed today.

A search of the Belleville bylaws in the files of city bylaws to discover if some anti-noise ordinance passed by previous city council does not regulate the amount of unnecessary sound once so enforced.

"If there isn't some ordinance or by-law, then we'll pass one that will regulate the following the numerous complaints lodged by taxpayers against the abnormal and astonishing horn blowing, steam-powered shrieking of train whistles, blasting machine gunning and blasting radios which carry their tones far into the night.

"Not only in the down town sections is this shattering noise of modern life most trying and radios apparent, but in the quieter residential sections, the noise at all hours seems to be getting worse all the time. You'd be surprised at the large number of complaints received at this office during the course of a week.

"All that is necessary, necessary and I, for one, am in favor of a quieter city. We have nuisance by-laws, and disturbance of the peace ordinances, but it seems necessary to pass another regulatory by-law which will ensure this needed quietness," added the Mayor.

Other opinions on the Fall agenda of city council business which will be presented by the Mayor include an investigation into complaints of a lack of courtesy on the part of certain city hall employees, and the matter of better conditions for the local police force, it was stated by the Mayor.

Obituary

LATE LAUNCELOT VADER

(Massanga)

The funeral of Launcelot Vader took place Tuesday afternoon, Aug. 9, from his late residence at Massanga, Prince Edward County. The service in the home and at the graveside in Albury Cemetery was conducted by the Rev. Mr. Smith, pastor of the United Church at Massanga.

The bearers were Messrs. Bailford Vader, Merle Vader, Royce Vader and Roderick Vader, all brothers of the deceased, and Messrs. Gordon and Orland Webb, a brother-in-law.

Many friends attended the funeral.

GEMLEY HOWARD CANNIFF

After a lengthy illness Gemley Howard Cannifl, 62, of Camden Wil. in, near Ill., died in Toronto on Thursday afternoon, Aug. 9.

The late Mr. Canniff was born in Belleville 78 years ago and his boyhood days were spent in this city. He was a United Empire Loyalist, and the Canniff family was prominent in the early history of Belleville and vicinity. A book entitled "Canniff," wrote "The Settlement of Upper Canada", a book containing much valuable and interesting historical information, was an uncle of the late Gemley Howard Canniff. The village of Canniffton was named after the Canniff family.

The late Mr. Canniff married Miss Isabel Palmer, daughter of Dr. Palmer, who practised in this city and associated with the Ontario School for the Deaf in this city. She passed away several years ago. They had no children. For many years Mr. Canniff was engaged in the hardware business and resided in Wilmette, Ill. In religion he was a member of the Presbyterian Church.

Surviving him is one brother, Mr. Byron M. Canniff of Los Angeles, Calif. Mrs. P. F. Canniff of Belleville is a niece of the late Mr. Canniff.

Interment will be made in Belleville Cemetery; the funeral announcement is made elsewhere in this paper.

TOMATO GROWERS BATTLE WORMS

Pest Strips Leaves And Sometimes Invades Product

Tomato growers of Prince Edward County are marshalling their forces to resist the attacks of the latest invaders to infest their fields. The enemy, a large green worm strips the plants of leaves and in many cases has made serious inroads on the vegetable itself. In some places, especially East Lake, plants with only stalks and fruit are left.

One farmer of this particular district who has five acres in his tomatoes to field stated that nearly 8,000 worms have been picked off his plants. A family who makes a trade to offer to pick off the worms at five cents the dozen, earned more than two dollars, on one day.

The favorite method of attack, however, is with a hand pair of shears with which the enemy is neatly and efficiently cut in two.

CRASH VICTIMS ARE IMPROVING

Nature of Injuries of Belleville And Toronto People Disclosed

While Mr. W. P. Youdale and the Misses Dorothy and Elsie Youdale, 306 Foster Avenue, and Mr. Isaac Sills, 778 Front Street, four of the six victims of the accident that occurred nine miles east of Napanee yesterday when their cars were involved, are still in Kingston General Hospital, their condition is reported as not serious, relatives of the Youdale family revealed today.

Miss Elsie Youdale is suffering from a broken rib while her sister, Dorothy, sustained facial bruises. Mr. Youdale received a slight concussion, cuts on the head, and Mr. Sills while Mr. Sills sustained head lacerations when he was thrown from the car riding is said to have crashed head-on with a car driven by Col. W. H. Patterson of Toronto.

Patterson was returning with his wife from a visit to Quebec and Montreal, while Youdale and Sills were driving to formers' sisters to Kentucky, where they were to embark for England.

Hospital authorities today stated that the condition of all six was considerably better, and it is believed that Col. Patterson and the Youdale sisters would be able to leave soon. Mrs. Patterson, who suffered head and throat cuts and a knee injury, was not seriously injured.

Both Youdale and Patterson cars which are of the same make and model were considerably damaged.

Mr. Youdale is a member of the staff of Belleville Collegiate Institute.

Painting Placed On Walls of Library At Court House

A splendid oil painting, taken from the original portrait done by Manly MacDonald, artist, Toronto, native of Point Anne, of the late County Judge J. F. Wills, and recently executed by Mr. MacDonald, was hung yesterday in the Hastings County Law Library. The painting, executed in larger proportions than the original, is placed on the south wall of the library, and is a decided asset to the already imposing array of legal and judicial portraits and photographs that adorn the walls of the room.

Letters to the Editor

A PLEA FOR THE YOUNG NEEDING WORK

To the Editor, Ontario Intelligencer.

Our Mayor has helped to save the taxes in this city reduced quite a bit, but how are the people going to pay taxes if there are no cogs coming in for the young people to pay their taxes?

There are lots of young people in the city wanting work with whom the business men have a vacancy it is nearly always given to someone from out of town who knows people from out of town come here and do their shopping but not the people of the town. The farmers come in for this to buy their produce and their young people get work and pay it back. Why can't they pay some on the school taxes while they are sending their young people in to learn.

Some of the business men have the cheek that if the young people have had no experience they are not qualified for the position. How can they get experience if they dont get a chance? They all had to start in the first place.

There are married women working to whose husbands have good jobs while single girls can't get work enough to pay their way. Why not the girls slack in some places it is the single girl who gets laid off and the married women are kept on.

There are societies to look after stray animals, the unappreciated and other such societies so why not look after the single unemployed of this city. Let them have a chance as they have to live the same as the others. Do the parents still have to provide for them for years to come because in lots of cases they have a friends to give them a pull?

A TAXPAYER.

Editor's Note—Parents and guardians of children outside the city, attending city public schools pay the Board of Education for the privilege. Municipalities pay for the attendance of outside students attending the collegiate.

HUGH JONES IS SLOWLY MENDING

Has Recovered Consciousness And Speaks Mostly in Monosyllables

Slowly responding to hospital and medical care, Hugh Jones, 44-year-old Marmora resident, who was rescued from the alleged arms of a Crow river bog by provincial police after being imprisoned in the treacherous swamp land for six days and nights, is showing a slight improvement in his condition, Belleville General Hospital authorities disclosed today.

Jones has recovered full consciousness, and recognizes friends and relatives readily. He is now taking plenty of liquid foods although his condition does not yet warrant solids, it was stated.

Although he has not yet spoken to any great extent, he has carried on conversation with relatives in monosyllables, and nods of the head.

FIRE IN WOODS ALARMS PEOPLE

Police Hold Man Found Near Camnifton on Vagrancy Charge

Alarmed at the presence of a fire in a nearby woods, residents and residents of that district called provincial police to investigate last night. Later a man who gave his name was Frank Wait, 53-year-old Windsor transient, was arrested by Provincial Constables McBrien and Starks and held in custody on a nominal charge of vagrancy.

Camnifton residents informed the police that Wait had been acting somewhat strangely about the village early in the evening and later kindled a fire in the nearby pine woods. "The timbers nearby were quite dry and the presence of a fire naturally alarmed the residents," stated Constable McBrien this morning as he added that a fire in that particular place was extremely dangerous. The man was remanded in custody until Friday.

2 FAWNS SEEN NEAR ROADSIDE

Young Animals With Doe Discovered by Cyclist

City and district deerhunters may not have to wait until the fall in the woods to indulge in their favorite sport in the near future if the buck and doe deer that at present are running at large in Ameliasburg Township continue the good work.

For on Friday last, Ted Branagh, Centre resident, while cycling to Redneersville, surprised the doe who now has two small fawns at her side, when the little family was grazing near the roadside.

Frightened, the animals ran down the road ahead of Branagh, almost to Redneersville village, where the doe finally leaped a low fence while her two gangling youngsters managed to crawl through a hole in the fence.

Approaching the animals, Branagh thought the two were a large dog and two goats, but closer inspection revealed the fact that they were the Ameliasburg fawn and her new family. He claims he had a guilty day and the antics of the animals while they were climbing through the fence, and stakes the fawns were ing as he added that a fine in that particular place was extremely dangerous. The man was remanded in custody until Friday.

TORONTO STOCKS CLOSE

Toronto, Aug. 10.—(CP)—Early gains in the gold shares were trimmed down in the late selling today on the Toronto exchange but the group held a margin on the up side at the close. Industrials and base metals showed little net change for the day and the western oils closed narrowly lower. Volume was the heaviest of the week with close to 700,000 shares changing hands.

Dome advanced to a new high and prices were stronger for McIntyre, Lake Shore, Uchi, Preston, MacLeod-Cockshutt, Little Long Lac and others.

Shares of Astoria Quebec Mines Limited were called for trading today and at the same time the shares of Astoria Rouyn Mines Limited were delisted. Astoria Rouyn are exchangeable for shares of Astoria Quebec.

In the base metals Waite-Amulet, Smelters and Sherritt were stronger. Higher prices marked the steels, senior oils and papers.

WALL STREET CLOSE

New York, Aug. 10 (AP)—Stocks coasted almost to a standstill today, after the market had undergone a minor setback in the forenoon. Gains of fractions to more than a point were in the majority near the final hour.

Speculation approached a deadlock as markets lacked dramatic news to reawaken lagging interest. Many traders had withdrawn to sidelines to await a more decisive trend or were away from the financial district on vacation.

Transactions were about 800,000 shares.

The minor shift to the selling side left most stocks showing losses running to about 2 points near the third hour.

A few shares held their heads above water most of the time, notably Dome Mines U. S. Rubber pfd, General Tire, Johns-Manville, Doulas Aircraft and Bendix.

Canadian issues produced a narrow course. International Nickel and Distillers lagged fractionally while Duke Shore showed a small gain.

CAN YOU DO THIS?

Here's the way President Roosevelt, en route home from an ocean holiday, greets Interior Secretary Ickes at his desk after a long Sunday smile working overtime. Do you come back from your vacation looking like this? Or do you return with the glow of a sunburn and a healthy but a stinking feeling inside at the thought of 50 weeks of work ahead, a feeling that finds expression as you smile wanly while mumbling "Boy! It's a helluva lot better to work again!" Take another look at F. D. R. and give us that smile!

Board Room Gossip

As supplied to Bigger and Crawford By Financial Service

The terrific heat of last week was a factor in the market dullness, as many traders remained away from brokerage offices. The willing humidity precluded large operations, as the average broker was more concerned with keeping cool than with the stock market. The action of the list of late warrants the expectation that higher prices are in the offing over the next few months.

Business in Canada and the United States have shown improvement of late. Whether this is due to the improved market sentiment or whether higher prices of stocks are due to better business does not matter. The fact remains that sentiment both in industrial and financial circles has improved and the public is looking towards the immediate future with more confidence than in some months.

No motor company is revealing anything that it can avoid with respect to its plans for 1939 models but it is now fairly certain that the manufacturers will go much further than they did last year in restyling of their new lines. The trend apparently is in the direction of more streamlining, wider seats and more leg room. Detroit has a phrase for it, mainly, that the industry is "going streamy," meaning that styling will veer sharply in the direction of the lines pioneered by the Lincoln Zephyr last year.

Canadian Car and Foundry is handling a good volume of business this year, and the income account should show the preferred dividend earned by a considerable margin. For the year ended September 30, last, the report showed 14.01 a share for the preferred, against dividend requirements of $1.75 a share. Just now the management is very actively engaged in furthering its aviation department plans and the prospects are not unfavorable that this department will develop into a money maker. The railway equipment business has held up well. The company's war claim, amounting to several million dollars, is still before the Canadian Mixed Claims Court and may possibly be settled before the end of this year. All in all, the immediate outlook for the company is as favorable as it has been for some time past. Considering the preferred stock it is well to bear in mind that at the end of last year there were arrears of dividends amounting to $4.50 a share.

There was a lot of gossip of foreign buying in Wall Street. Private cables from abroad, for some weeks, have been reflecting a strongly bullish sentiment toward American business and securities' market and although frequently such foreign connections have not reported much business from the other side it is understood that some heavy buying for foreigners has been done thru institutional and private sources.

Royalite Oil

Recent rise in the market for Royalite Oil Co. shares appears to be soundly based from standpoint of increased earnings, in first half of 1937 when Royalite's crude wells on the Sterling Pacific lease were just beginning to build up its crude production the company reported crude sales of approximately 128,000 bbls. in the first half of 1938, crude sales in spite of proration restrictions amounted to about 390,000 bbls. Translated into dollars and cents this means at least $300,000 more revenue for Royalite in the first half of this year than in the first half of 1937. Against this must be taken into consideration the declining output of Royalite's naphtha wells. The naphtha output was about 190,000 in first half of this year against 255,000 in first half of 1937. This means about $100,000 less revenue from this source at present estimate.

On this showing Royalite's revenue for the first half of 1938 was $200,000 more than in first half of 1937 without allowing for its share in the number of wells of other companies.

Royalite continuous drilling program promises to add substantially to the output during the balance of the year.

In the year 1937 when crude production was just beginning to be a factor in Royalite earnings not per share was $1.60 and $1.50 was paid in dividends.

The current price, approaching the $30 mark which affords a yield of 5 per cent appears to be discounting expectation of higher earning and dividends.

Canadian Car & Foundry Could Advantageously Issue Scrip in Payment of Preferred Dividend Arrears

The Canadian Car & Foundry Company Limited now owes its preferred shareholders $4.50 per share on account of dividend arrears, or $6.50 per share. Just how this obligation will be eliminated we do not know but with big business in the offing it appears as though the company could issue short-term notes as payment of the arrears on account. By consenting to do this the capital now Canadian Car could use for plant improvements to cash that would under ordinary circumstances be paid to senior security holders in payment of their arrears.

American Operator May Become Active in Canadian Mines

A well known stock market operator, whose activities on the New York Board caused the authorities at Washington to investigate his record with the result that he was barred from the floor of the Stock Exchange, is now considering the possibilities of the Canadian mines.

Big Falling Off in Cheese Exports

Toronto, Aug. 10.—On a comparable basis with last year, cheese exports from Canada continue to dwindle. Including last week's decline of 8,478 boxes, shipments for the current year to date are 86,304 boxes behind last year, or 7.3 million pounds, averaging 85 pounds to the box, for the week ended Aug. 6 number of boxes shipped totalled 19,354, which compares with 20,788 in the preceding week and 24,836 in the corresponding week of 1937. Total exports for the period May 1 to Aug. 6 aggregated 264,150 boxes, as against 351,058 boxes in the same period of last year.

Butter values were again shaded during yesterday's session of the local produce market, with eggs and cheese remaining steady.

Traders marked time on the butter market awaiting the issuing the final report on storage holdings to be released from Ottawa late this afternoon. Fresh receipts were not excessive, however, and no accumulation was reported. Small sales were recorded in Ontario solds at 24c to 24 1-4c for No. 1 grades, 22 1-4c to 23½c for 36 score and 21 1-2c to 22 3-4c for 37 score. Prints eased to 25 3-4c to 27c for top grades and 25c to 25 3-4c for 36 score.

Eggs presented a quietly steady market. Offerings were slightly in excess of demand, but prices were not changed. Graded shipments moved at 26c for grade A-large, 25c for medium, 22c for B's and 21c for C grades.

Sales were light on the wholesale cheese market. New, large parcels of fresh cheese were the unchanged prices of 14 1-4c to 14½c, twins at 14 1-2c to 14 3-4c, and triplets at 14 3-4c to 15c.

Cheese Drops Lower at Montreal

MONTREAL, August 10

Cheese prices drifted lower Tuesday, according to J. Domtien Department of Agriculture reports, as Monday's offerings to British buyers were refused. Western butter also eased slightly, but egg prices improved.

Creamery butter prints to retail dealers sold at 25c a pound, and solids for 25 1-2c Western butter delivered here was offered at 24½c. Quebec pasteurized No. 1 wholesale price to jobbers was 24c. Receipts were heavy.

Cheese was offered at 14 1-4c delivered for No. 1 Ontario White, 14 3-8c for Ontario colored, 13 3-4c for Quebec white and 13 7-8c for Quebec colored. Receipts: 1,200 boxes.

Graded egg shipments in cartons or less sold at 27c a dozen for A-large, 25 1-2c for A-medium, 24c for B and 21c to 21 1-2c for C. Receipts: 1,322 cases.

YOUTHS PADDLE FOR WATERTOWN

End First Months of Three Months' Water Trip

Two youthful, bronzed paddlers in a cedar-strip canoe, Harold Shep, aged 17, Wm. Hardy, of Watertown, New York, ending the first months of the Boy Scouts' canoeing tour of the St. Lawrence and Inland Ontario waters pushed their burdened craft to the sand strokes into a slip at the Government dock early last evening.

"What place is this? Where are we?" excitedly questioned the boy paddler of a knot of dock frequenters who had watched their arrival.

"Belleville, on the Bay of Quinte. The gateway to Central Ontario. The best inland port on the lakes", advised the local residents.

Silso, ... Belleville was Co-bourg. Down east a ways they told them. "Co-bourg and we'd be in Cobourg by next day. That was a day or two more than we've been paddling steadily."

Not equipped with either charts or compass, the youths have found themselves time after time entering strange ports when they appeared to be lengthy detours to Kitts. Believing they were on the fringe of Lake Ontario, they had paddled steadily up the Reach, wondering all the where. Then they were to come out. It is believed Belleville is the end of the trip, this port directions had become confused.

"We didn't know there was so much water on the continent," Hardy has declared.

Given directions to reach Lake Ontario through Murray Canal, the youths moved a short distance east of the dock, pitched their tent on Meyer's Point and this morning had left.

LT. COL. LA FLECHE

with Major General T. V. Anderson slated to succeed Major General E. C. Ashton, Chief of the General Staff and Brigadier C. P. H. Elliott following Major General G. P. Contentius as Inspector General.

Last night the department announced two honorary promotions that of Hon. Air Vice Marshal W. A. Bishop, V.C., to the honorary rank of Air Marshal and Col. the Hon. Bartlett Rogers, C.M.G., Toronto to be Brigadier.

Development in Defence

The promotions reflect the far-reaching developments which are in the defence forces of Canada. The military branch pronounced activity has replaced the conditions which in former years, due to lack of money and the economy drive on part of public sympathy, discouraged the military branch.

The revival of public interest in the matter of national security, dictated by events in all parts of the world, has concentrated attention on the defence and given them a prominence not hitherto enjoyed in Canada. Considerable advances have been made in the expansion of the air and naval services, the only branch neglected in the militia. These have been pushed vigorously by Defence Minister Ian Mackenzie and there is more than one occasion, has paid tribute to the work done by Major General Lafleche.

It was made clear the position of Deputy Minister of National Defence is a civil appointment and that the Chief of General Staff will shortly be posted to the reserve list, his promotion does not entail any financial salary.

From Long Line of Pioneers

The father-in-law of the late Colonel Lafleche and his wife, Ida Lussier of Sorel, Que., Major General Lafleche is descended from a long line of French-Canadian pioneers. He was born in Ottawa, Ashbury College, Sorel, General Lafleche entered the professional ranks and suits with Molsons Bank, and was manager of a branch when the war broke out. When the Great abiniers (now Fusiliers) Mont Royal and proceeded overseas. There he was posted to the 22nd (French Canadian) Battalion.

At St. Eloi

As a company commander of this unit he underwent the 2nd Ypriden's baptism of fire at St. Eloi, in March and April, 1916. He was engaged also in the bitter fighting at Hill 70 last year where he was wounded in the battles for Mont Sorrel. His injuries were so that on three occasions he was given the Extreme Unction of his Church.

On his partial recovery, he was employed at Militia Headquarters, Headquarter in Montreal and later promoted to the rank of Lieutenant-Colonel and appointed to company District Depot No. 4. He was demobilized in October, 1919.

Active in Legion

He was elected Dominion President of the Canadian Legion whose destinies he guided for several years. General Lafleche initiated the great pilgrage to Vimy Ridge, of 1936. He has served as honorary aide of the camp to Four Governors-General.

For his war services, General Lafleche was awarded the distinguished service order, was created Chevalier of the Legion of Honor and was mentioned in despatches.

His promotion to Major-General manifests recognition of work during the extensive period of the past few years in connection with the development of Canada's defence forces.

PARTS OF PLANES MADE SEPARATELY

Planes Will Be of Same Type as Fly R.A.F. Says Report

Montreal, Aug. 10 (CP)—According to present plans Canadian airplane manufacturing plants will make the same type of plane for the Royal Air Force, Sir Samuel Hardman Lewis, head of the mission to the British Air Ministry sent to Canada said today.

Individual factories will make only certain parts of the planes, which will be assembled in another plant, the British air official said in an interview here. Capital for the assembly plant and for any expenses in connection with making the plane parts in Canadian factories must be provided by the Canadian Industry, he added.

Ontario and Quebec will receive most of the contracts because their provinces had most of the type of skilled labor required.

Sir Samuel went into conference today with Frederick Handley-Page, British airplane manufacturer; A. H. Self, Undersecretary to the Air Ministry; and A. C. Boddie, Mission Secretary, on progress, they had made with Canadian airplane manufacturers in their discussion of the capabilities of airplane production in Canada. Tomorrow the mission will talk to the Canadian airplane

AIR BASE O. C. IS PROMOTED TO GROUP CAPTAIN

Wing Commander Godfrey's Promotion Among Many in Defence Forces

The announcement of the promotion of Wing Commander A. E. Godfrey, officer commanding at the Trenton R.C.A.F. base today, to the rank of Group Captain brought the exceedingly popular Air Base Commander many congratulations from his friends in Belleville and vicinity.

The announcement was received from the office of the Department of National Defence at Ottawa and also included the promotion of another well known R.C.A.F. officer, Captain Larry Breadner who was in command at the Trenton Air Base prior to Group Captain Godfrey. Captain Breadner was promoted to the office of Air Commander in the Canadian Air Force.

Before taking over his post as Officer Commanding at the Trenton R.C.A.F. base, Group Captain A. E. Godfrey has made many friends socially and in the sports field, having been a keen sportsman and in the sports endeavours of the Trenton district.

Group Captain Godfrey is an Ardent Sports Enthusiast and keen enthusiast and personally attends and supports all sporting activities conducted by the R.C.A.F. and also civic sporting events throughout the district. Group Captain Godfrey was primarily responsible for bringing the Intermediate O.H.A. championship hockey team at his base and at present is responsible for the R.C.A.F. hockey team for another campaign on the ice.

His many friends socially and in the sports world will rejoice with him in his promotion, which doubtless came through his true qualities as a soldier and airman. A born leader of men, Group Captain Godfrey commands the esteem and respect of all men and officers in his command at Trenton.

BRIG.-GEN. ELKINS

Commanding manoeuvres, which will be held starting Aug. 29 by the Canadian militia's regular army at Camp Borden, Ont., will be Brig.-Gen. W. H. Elkins. Exercises are expected to be the most extensive in years—7 militia of strength, held in Canada since the world war.

Woman, Son and Daughter are Slashed

Gloversville, N.Y., Aug. 10.—(AP)—A woman and her son and daughter were slashed to death at a tourist camp here, District Attorney Bernard Shanley said today, by a vengeful former boarder who then cut his throat in a suicide attempt.

The woman, Pauline Bia, and her children, Helen, 17, and Robert, 16, are expected to recover, the prosecutor said.

Dennis Assalant, identities as Anthony Pyhila, 43, has an arms chance of survival and will be charged with first degree murder if he lives, Kearney added. The assault occurred yesterday.

IN HARVEST FIELDS IN GERMANY

Germany is looking for a big harvest, says a Berlin report, and will require more than the available Nazis to garner the produce of the year. The article states that there are 100,000 Italians, Poles and others who will go into the harvest fields to bring in the German sheaves.

Germany and the Central European countries which are not as rich as some of their neighbors in natural wealth, must count their pennies very carefully, especially as the demands of militarism have diverted so many from the natural occupations.

A bountiful harvest is the best news which a nation can give to its people. Back to the processes of nature must ultimately come everything, for food is one of the chief needs of man under whatever political rule he lives.

A NEW LICENSING REGULATION

Under the provision of paragraphs 5 and 6 of section 439 of The Municipal Act, councils may pass by-laws to license and regulate transient traders. The fee to be paid is not to be less than $100 in any municipality, and not more than $500 in a city or town, or $300 in a village or township. Power also to be credited to the person paying it, on account of taxes thereafter payable by him.

The Municipal World points out that a new paragraph 7 has been added to the above section this year by which by-laws may be passed requiring persons not licensed as transient traders who, after the return of the assessment roll, commence to carry on business in premises in respect to which they are liable for business assessment to pay a license fee before commencing such business. The fee is to be a sum computed by reference to the tax on the business assessment which such person would have been required to pay for the current year if he had been previously assessed, and is to be either one-half of the amount of such tax for the whole year or a proportionate part of same for the balance of the year after he commences business, which ever shall be the greater.

Apparently if a municipality has by-laws in force under both the above provisions, the council may decide under which one a person commencing business may be licensed. As the one fee is to be credited on taxes payable by the person in the future while in the other case the license fee is in the nature of a straight tax. The assessment of the premises occupied would have a good deal to do with the decision as to how the person is to be licensed. If the premises are large and one-half of the business tax looks better to have a fee which is not merely a credit, the person should be licensed under the latter provision. There would undoubtedly cases also where a fee may be collected under the new law where there would be no liability under the transient traders' provisions. Examples of this would be persons such as barbers, shoe repair shops, tourist camps, etc., where only services are sold, and no goods, wares or merchandise. It will be interesting to know how the new provisions work out.

PLEASING A CIRCUS

THE BILLBOARD, leading American amusement journal, has some very fine things to say on the handling of the Robbins Circus through Canada, and a Halifax newspaper, the Evening Mail, in the column conducted by "Trigger" Power, veteran sports writer, quotes the Billboard as follows: "The Canadian National Railroad certainly knows how to move a circus without any delay. A move of 180 miles from Saint Johns, Quebec, through Montreal to the city of Quebec was made in five hours. The troupe who has made Prince Edward Island known that it is a move requiring a lot of effort and preparation. The train left Moncton on a Friday night with the circus and the train split in two sections and circled the city rail and water to arrive at Charlottetown at 8.30 a.m. the next day. The 400 mile trip from Charlottetown to Sydney by rail and water with a stop at Stellarton to feed and water, with the excellent service given by the C.N.R. was made in record time."

If a man has a right to be proud of anything, it is of a good action done as it ought to be, without any base interest lurking in the background.

THE TRACKWALKER

With head bent low and shoulders stooped
And slow, home keeping eye
Fixed on the rails, a silent shape,
The trackwalker goes by.
A five-mile strip of grimy stones,
Edged with an iron band,
Is all his world, cold snows that drift
In doisies o'er the land,
The heedless, nor red autumn flakes
That rustle down the air.
Rail, bolt, and bar to keep in place—
This is his only care.

He quits his task three steps before
The rocking train shoots past,
Then stoops while still the pebbles whirl,
To make a loose bolt fast.
The ruin hid in sudden flood,
Slow rust and drifting frost
'Tis his to fend; and men ride by
In cushioned ease at cost
Of his long march and lonely watch,
Nor give a backward thought
To the bent shoulders plodding feet
Whose toil their safety bought.

Mom is to him a sentry beat
To tread through sun and rain,
His room a place to eat and start
Back into the night again.
A ceaseless traveller all his days,
New lands he ne'er may roam-
In yonder orchard is his house,
Here twice the rails his home.
Unmourned, unmissed, he dies to find
(The last lone miles all trod)
That whoso walks a railway track
Aright has walked with God.

—William H. Woods, in the Youth's Companion.

OPTIMISM AND ENTHUSIASM GO HAND IN HAND and are admirable companions and usually precursors of glad tidings of great joy. "What's the use' 'never gets anywhere and folks who refuse to try, stay put; as a rule. There once was a guy who couldn't do a job, worked on a job badly, so he wrote to a well known magazine with a circulation in the hundreds of thousands and asked the rate on an employment adv. The magazine was Time, and here's the young man's letter and answer:

Sirs,—Would you accept a position Wanted advertisement in Time Magazine? I am very anxious to buy space—about one and one-half inches by one column—in Time for that purpose, but never having seen an advertisement in your magazine I'm curious about the possibilities. If you would accept my adv. there is one still more important question—what would be the cost of said adv. Here is the adv. I would want to run:

PRINTING ERRORS

Of course, printing errors are still with us, and De Vinne in his Art of Printing has collected many. A speaker quoted "O come, thou goddess fair and free. In heaven ycleped Euphrosyne," and the second line appeared in print as "In heaven ykg above." Another error read to "This battle-scared veteran." At a public dinner this toast was offered,—"May he live to a green old age." But it was printed "May he live to a grim old age." An orator used Tennyson's line, "Better fifty years of Europe than a cycle of Cathay," but by the time it got in print it read, "Better fifty years of Europe than a circus in Bombay." The poor editor who corrected his editorial with the words "O tempora! O mores!" discovered when he read the next edition that the compositor had thought he meant to — ½. "O tempenace! O Moses!"—From Pleasures of Publishing.

TWO SIDES

Science has solemnly asserted that the next few years will be "quiet years" on the ether waves. Static interference will be at a minimum; at least some of the static scratching and crackling which have been emerging from loudspeakers at too frequent intervals of late will disappear.

The investigators have gone all the way to the sun to explain their explanation. Mountain craters, into which a dozen earths could be hurled, have ceased erupting, the disturbances they have been creating in the atmosphere are gradually subsiding.

tion as to whether the elimination of static will be one may fly for a thrill by looking down at the clear, cold, blue sky from about $400,000 worth at a time—and much more romantic to see than a load of coal, a neat pile of building bricks, each one like three or four sash weights melted together—New York World Telegram.

Plenty of Shoe Laces

Since the depression started we've always managed to find a pair of shoes for around the house when an old lace broke unexpectedly. The transients have solved that problem. — Kitchener Record.

A seal who spent eighteen years blowing trumpets with a circus has just retired. He heard a swing band and decided that humans could do it just about as well.—Sherbrooke Record.

That Body of Yours

The Behavior Clinic at the Children's Hospital

Some years ago I was requested to make an examination of the boys of an institution who had been sent there for breaking the laws of society. In most cases were not serious—petty stealing, playing truant, trespassing—but every boy living at Aingleworth in order to be there before being sent to this institution.

Among the first things that I learned was that in more than half the cases the parents of the boys were separated by divorce or abandonment and many others had lost one or both parents. It can thus be seen that home life and environment can have much to do with the behavior of children.

There are many boys (and some girls also) who do wrong or foolish things and who are not mentally negative for sentence. Formerly these were nothing the magistrate could or but send them to institutions such as I've mentioned above. Today, people are taking other steps. It seem to be taking in our civilization, most intelligent society now have a trained psychiatrist —mental or behavior specialist—to whom, before going to the trial, confers with the magistrate and suggests in some cases that he (the child) be given over to the boy or girl and try to learn why they have been misbehaving. If it may be that the boy or girl needs some mental guidance rather than a term in reformatory.

While this is a great advance—the psychiatrist recognizing that a young law-breaker—what is even a greater step forward is to have a behavior clinic as a part of the hospital's childrens' hospital. Dr. Edwards Park, Boston (Massachusetts Medical Association Journal), in describing the work of the Behavior Clinic for Children at the Harriet Lane Home of John Hopkins Hospital says, "Behavior problems and behavior disturbances are confused. Children are sent to hospitals because of physical illness when the actual difficulty is psychological (mental; though) or partly so. Abnormal behavior may be only the outward evidence of disease; illness brings on behavior disturbances. Temper tantrums, bedwetting, vomiting without apparent physical cause, stealing, truancy, forget on with other children, disobedience, breath-holding—all belong to the child psychiatrist."

I believe this method of examining into a child's behavior by first examining him physically will not only prevent many boys and girls from committing "crimes" but will prevent them from becoming inmates of mental institutions which they are older.

Letters to the Editor

60 Dundas St., Belleville, Aug. 7th., 1938

To the Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer,
Dear Sir,

I am enclosing an article that appeared in a Toronto paper a few days ago, and hope you will be kind enough to reprint it. This article is very timely and I will be glad to see that the railway men of Great Britain are to have complete control over the operation and control of transportation.

"URGE CONTROL OF TRANSPORT

BRITISH TRANSPORTERS

"London—A resolution calling for the complete control of the privately transport system of Great Britain under public ownership and control was discussed at the annual conference of the National Union of Railwaymen at Southport.

"Mr. W. R. Vening, of Bristol, moving the resolution said: 'I have the same chaotic conditions existing in road transport as existed in the railways before the grouping. Even some of the giants of road transport began to realize that the present system of transport was wasteful and uneconomical. The resolution was carried unanimously."

I am also enclosing a few railway men and taxpayers of this country should not stand the expense of transportation as it exists today.

If all transportation was operated on the lines of the post office department there would be no trouble, everybody would be satisfied and it would be a big saving.

To my mind the quickest way to bring this about is for the owners of the Canadian National to step down and travel C.N.R. wherever possible.

Yours truly,
D. S. LaRUE.

PEACEFUL CHINESE

Somehow or other the Chinese civilians have accomplished miracles in our hearts. They work long hours, give service with a most charming smile and live in a cheerful way. That feeling of sympathy has increased during the past year by the heroic manner in which the peasant Chinese 'have stood up to the beast-ordered and ruthless Japanese mechanized army. We believe that these quiet Chinese have won over our shirts and ,ive us a good lunch for a modest price would give just as much enjoyment to themselves if they were over there in their own country. — St. Thomas Times-Journal.

Diesel the Inventor

The only inventor's name that figured in the Treaty of Versailles was that of Diesel, in a clause which prohibited the manufacture and use of Diesel engines by Germany for ten years.

Twenty-five years ago, of the eve of the Great War, Diesel disappeared mysteriously. The secret of his death has never been revealed.

The son of a working bookbinder of Augsburg who had come to France to perfect himself in his trade, Rudolf Diesel was born in Paris and spoke French before he knew a word of his father's language. When the Franco-Prussian War broke out in 1870 the bookbinder and his family insisted themselves in London, not to return to Paris until the end of the war. It was then that Diesel pere sent his son to his parents, who were still living at Augsburg, in order that he might learn German and also a trade. On the latter point the boy had already made up his mind; he wanted to be an engineer.

When his studies were concluded, Diesel returned to Paris. His first decisive discovery in the domain of oil motors dates from 1892.

Diesel received a letter from the celebrated German manufacturer, Krupp, who offered to place at his disposal, for the perfecting of his invention, a laboratory, material and workmen. Naturally the young engineer hastened to accept the flattering offer.

After a few months of trial and research, the first Diesel model emerged from the Krupp factory, all ready to function. Its demonstration was evidently satisfactory to the experts and the all-powerful Krupp promised Diesel that he would secure the patent for him.

The obtaining of an industrial patent is perhaps more complicated in Germany than anywhere else, but when Diesel had passed through all matter still remained in suspense. Diesel became impatient. Urgent inquiries, he discovered that the person who was causing most of the delay was no other than a member of the all-powerful Krupp trust. When he demanded an explanation, he was discreetly informed that all who owed the existence of their inventions to the generosity of Frederich Krupp considered it quite natural that the fruit of their research should be patented under the name of their benefactor, committing themselves with a certain percentage of the profits.

The vast factories of the German "Iron King" began to produce the new motors on a large scale. It brought countless wealth to Krupp but the inventor got nothing but the glory.

Diesel clenched his fists and began to pan his vengeance, the vengeance of a genius. He worked night and day and finally produced a new Diesel Motor, more powerful more economical and cheaper than the one put on the market by Krupp. He was able to eliminate certain imperfections in the former model. His plan of vengeance was going to be successful.

But the new motor could not be patented until the patent of the former one had expired. Ten years . . .

Diesel waited. Work made him forget his worries, success pointed him.

In 1911 the ten years had expired. At last, the presence of a company of experts sent by the Ministry of Marine, demonstrated his new model. The new Diesel motor could be used in locomotives and even on submarines. Krupp was 'sunk!'

The German Minister of War hastened to buy the new model for the manufacture of submarines.

But the arrangements dragged. Diesel then discovered that behind the slowness of the Admiralty was the all-powerful influence of his old enemy, Krupp, who feared danger from competition.

That same day he wrote London. The English naturally hastened to accept his offer. A group of financiers was formed with a view to buying the rights for the exploitation of his patent.

Fourteen days after his last unlucky interview at the German Admiralty, Diesel arrived at Antwerp. That was on the 27th. of September. On the 29th. at six o'clock in the morning, he embarked on board the Dresden for Harwich where a destroyer was to meet him and Diesel Company awaited him.

But Diesel never arrived in England. His baggage was found in his cabin, but the engineer himself had disappeared without leaving a trace.—Condensed from Paris-Soir, Paris.

From Confucius Onward

Confucius wins again. There need have been no astonishment at the conclusions, by Dr. Goodwin, Juvenile Committee on Children's Court Jurisdiction and Juvenile Delinquency which showed that the Chinese population of this city has the lowest percentage of delinquency among children of all racial or sectional groups. Indeed, the percentage of delinquency is so small as to be negligible over a period of years, and that one was questionable. It probably is true that the respect and affection which Chinese parents have for the Chinese had its bearing on the question, but perhaps the humble Chinese laundryman—and the Chinese says proverbially a good will ever produced by any people. His probity, courage and stoicism were proverbial in the past.

The average person, thinking of the Chinese, may recall the poem by Bret Harte, the tales of Sax Rohmer, ing Oriental, or the stories of Sax Rohmer, or the hatchet killings and the tongs of the Chinese quarters of such celebrities as the eminent Mock Duck, but that is about all. The truth is that the qualities of the Chinese are not generally known apparent as one comes to know them better. Here are a people whose code of ethics actually works. No juvenile delinquency? Of course not. And that is the whole story. Ask any old detective if he ever heard of a Chinese pickpocket, and watch him grope for an answer. There is no question as to the deep and well spread sympathy which the American people have for the Chinese in the present struggle; likewise we are coming to realize that the Chinese in Greater New York's own Chinatown is not a thing to be wondering and glamorous as it once was, and the dragon no longer stopped their fighting, but it is still there and is a valuable people to the city. When the city was virtually deserted over the last holidays, the restaurants of Chinatown —and there are more good eating places to the square mile than anywhere else in the city—did a thriving business, and so did the people. —New York Herald Tribune.

The Old Horse Hair Sofa

When young bloods made their first calls, upon the young ladies, ago they oiled their hair with mascassar oil. Careful housewives covered the backs of chairs with tidies which took the name of antimacassars. And in those days people inflicted with cushioned seats and sofas covered with horsehair cloth.

Sometimes that antimacassar period seems like an era to those of us who are old enough to remember sofa lasted years and years. No horsehair furniture was built for longevity, nor can youngsters slide gracefully upon it. There were no chesterfields for boy and girl friend in horsehair sofa days. The sofa was built for two, but there was a place that was reserved for visitors on social occasions. Some of these events was the visit of the minister to see if the youngsters had memorized the catechism and the 119th. chapter of St. John.

Another thing our youngsters miss is the art of demurely sitting on a horsehair sofa. Evidently if her parents were in the kitchen, where the squeaks of rocking chairs told where they were, the young lady was in it. It may be added that the old horsehair sofa was built to last and made all the more troublesome and hateful because of the tidies and antimacassars that were thrown over them to make the showroom more genteel and protected the seats from wearing out too soon.

Modern furniture may be cheap, the prickly surface was an abomination but to the very small children they were fine to slide on. The long coarse hair from the cloth and the ticking it covered got into all kinds of shapes. It was only when visitors left that the young ones began to desert horse-hair sofas and we never have given our children the opportunity, if they don't know their good fortune.—Brandon Sun.

HOME IS DANGEROUS

Home, the place where you are treated the best, and grumble the most, is one of the most dangerous institutions in the country. Insurance company reported that the risk from injury at home is about seven times greater than when riding on the railroads, street cars, trains and other public conveyances. In the United States the automobile kills only about six per cent. more people annually than death through accidents in the home slippery rubs on polished floors, burns from careless householders as electricity. Forty-four per cent. of injuries in the home are from falls such as falling from ladders, over cellar openings, chairs or tables. The average stair fall is said to cost 132 in doctor's bills, while from chairs and tables instead of eating a good meal there is $302. In the United States alone about 130,000 people are injured each year from slipping in the bath. Accidents don't happen—they are caused, and the reason because most of them are preventable, unless due to another person's blunder.

In view of the above facts, it is time to ponder that some people seek reaction in other places to escape the dangers that lurk within their own homes and a large number of 'don'ts' have been published to lessen the risk of accidents in the home, but most people don't pay much attention to don'ts. Here's a few of the most important.

Don't use gasoline in the home for cleaning purposes.

Don't take medicine in the dark.

Don't patch electric cords—get new ones.

Don't handle electric fixtures with wet hands.

Don't stand in the bath tub and turn off electric light in heater, unless you have made your will—and then don't.

Don't hold bread in your hand to cut with a knife.

Don't argue with your wife or husband when it's 99 in the shade. Wait till the mercury drops to 80.

Doctor Conn Will Study Curious Ailment of Night Blindness

Churchill, Man., Aug. 8 (CP)—Aboard the R.M.S. Nascopie when it left here yesterday on its trip to posts in the Eastern Arctic was Dr. Maxwell G. Conn of John Hopkins Hospital, Baltimore, Md., who intends to test eyes of eskimos for night blindness.

Some Eskimos with normal sight in daylight become nearly blind at night. Dr. Conn hopes to find the cause of this curious ailment and, if possible, develop a treatment which will effect a cure.

Optimism Prevails In Belleville Business Circles

Confident in Bigger and Better Business Conditions, Belleville Business Men Improve Business Places

Signs of the times feature prominently the increase of optimism and the gradual disappearance or effacement of the crop of pessimists who feel on gloom and belong to the tribe which flourished one hundred years ago and prophesied confidently then that the world was going to the demnition bow-wows p.d.q. or sooner. The optimists have the floor and signs on every hand proclaim their presence and influence. In the country the farmer is struggling with one of the biggest and best crops in history, and in the town the increase in present and prospective building and home and business place improvement is simple on every hand. Belleville is stepping along at a high and going places, evidenced by the confidence and courage of citizens in the steady and increasing activity in building and other investment projects.

Belleville business section has responded to the general noise of confidence and optimism and various business places have been improved, front and interiors, better to meet the bigger and better business which is felt to be here or on the way.

Latest business place to feel the urge to modernize is the Walker Stores Limited, directed by its optimistic and progressive manager, Mr. Harold Newby. This popular business establishment has recently been treated to a complete new interior dress which has added greatly to the appearance and to the comfort and pleasure of shoppers. On each side of the main floor have been constructed modern display cases with indirect lighting showing the various lines of goods featured in the different departments, replacing old-time shelves and so placed above the ordinary shelf line as to command instant and pleasing attention.

Modern floor display features the latest in sale display with a number of attractive tables, making inspection of the goods thereon easy and interesting.

Modern fitting rooms placed on the ground floor add to the comfort and convenience of patrons and fit into the modernistic mood of the entire ground floor plan. The color scheme harmonizes with the indirect lighting installation and the whole effect is one of progressiveness and aggressive merchandising.

Get at the Cause of Constipation!

You know that constipation often gives you that dopey, sunken, bagged-down feeling. Why not get at the cause and fix it?

If you eat what most people do —things like bread, meat and potatoes—the chances are all that's the matter with you is you don't get enough "bulk" in your "bulk" doesn't mean what you may think. It's a kind of food that isn't entirely consumed, but leaves a soft, bulky mass in the intestines that aids elimination.

If this is your trouble, what you need is a dish of crisp, crunchy Kellogg's All-Bran for breakfast every day. It contains the "bulk" you need, and Nature's intestinal tonic vitamin B, and iron.

Eat All-Bran every day, drink plenty of water, and see if the old world doesn't look a lot better! All-Bran is made by Kellogg in London, Ont. Sold by every grocer.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Forty Naughty Girls"

The murder of a press agent in a theatre dressing-room and the even more mysterious killing of the leading man of a show in full view of the entire audience, forms the dramatic setting of "Forty Naughty Girls" at the McCarthy. It is R.K.O. Radio's newest comedy thriller which again brings the popular sleuthing team of Inspector Oscar Piper and his school-marm aide, Hildegrads Withers, to the screen.

With its swift action and engrossing mystery taking place within a few short hours in its backdrop setting, the story is said to be the most puzzling of all the Piper-Withers films, James Gleason and Zasu Pitts at the beautiful inspector and the sarcastic Hildegrads respectively again head the cast of the picture and their deductive talents are hard-pressed to solve the affair.

The new "nitrate" test for determining whether a suspect has recently fired a gun plays an important role in the story and with its help the killer is finally apprehended after plenty of excitement has occurred.

Two prominent newcomers Marjorie Lord and George Shelley, head the supporting cast of "Forty Naughty Girls" in the romantic leads, and Tom Kennedy, Joan Woodbury, Franz M. Thomas, Edward Marr, Alan Edwards, Alden Chase and other well-known players have important roles.

The three stooges, rated as the screen's funniest comedians are presented in their latest and funniest comedy hit "Cash and Carry," an all technicolor musical revue that is very cleverly made up with interesting insights to recruits going into training to became future aviators, something that every youth will enjoy seeing, because of its insight on what actually takes place when a young man enters the training quarters of a school that makes him go through his paces and takes plenty of knocks before he can call himself an aviator, and a smash dramatic story entitled "Trailing Along" that comes highly recommended as splendid entertainment, will be presented at the McCarthy theatre in addition to the feature presentation "Forty Naughty Girls".

"Women of Glamour"

The gay comedy hit "Women of Glamour" featuring Melvyn Douglas and Virginia Bruce and a splendid assortment of festurettes that precede the feature is now busy shown at the theatre.

Obituary

ROBERT BERRY McMECHAN

(Melrose)

Following an illness of some four months, Robert Berry McMechan, highly respected resident of Melrose passed away at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Russell MacPherson yesterday in his 79th year.

Born in Madoc Township, the son of the late Mr. and Mrs Samuel McMechan, deceased had resided in Tyendinaga township for forty-seven years coming there from his native Madoc Township.

The late Mr. McMechan had followed the pursuit of agriculture all his life, and was a devoted member of the Melrose United Church. Left to mourn his passing, besides his widow who is the former Margaret Beatrice Miller, are three daughters, Mrs. Russell MacPherson, Melrose, Mrs. C. E. McKinney, Belleville; and Mrs. A. Newton, Peterborough; two sons, William, Melrose, and Samuel of Oshawa, three brothers, John Delorraine, Manitoba, William of the same place and Charles of Vancouver, B.C., and three sisters, Mrs. G. Nicholson, Belleville; Mrs. J. Nicholson, Madoc and Mrs. C. White, Tweed.

AT THE BELLE

"Son of the Sheik"

Romance and adventure will ride rampant over the Belle theatre screen when Rudolph Valentino returns in his last and greatest picture, "Son of the Sheik."

Brought back again by a genuine popular demand, in exactly its original form except for the addition of a modernistic musical score, and dramatic sound effects, "Son of the Sheik" is a thrilling action-packed drama of the great Arabian desert. Valentino plays both the sheik of the picturesque Sahara and the role of his strong-willed, swashbuckling son who, while keeping a rendezvous with his sweetheart, a dancing slave girl, enacted by the ever popular Vilma Banky, is kidnapped by a band of Moorish robbers.

Riding recklessly over the hot desert sands, making daring love to his sweetheart, and avenging himself single-handed against the Moors, Valentino portrays once more the romantic character that endeared him to millions. Never, since "Son of the Sheik" was last seen in its silent version, has any picture so captured and captivated the entire world.

The revival of "Son of the Sheik" will find a new audience waiting eagerly to see it, since, meanwhile, a whole generation of fans adore Rudolph Valentino has been only a myth, has joined the movie-going public of the nation. At the premiere return engagement of "Son of the Sheik" in Washington, D.C., a few weeks ago, the audiences which thronged to the theatre seemed largely to be composed of younger movie fans thrilled by one of the greatest pieces of entertainment ever to be shown on the silver screen.

"Blondes at Work"

With that sterling comedy team of Glenda Farrell and Barton MacLane as co-stars, a Warner Bros. comedy called "Blondes at Work", will be the added feature attraction at the Belle theatre.

Glenda once more plays that flippant but winsome girl reporter named "Torchy Blane" and the Barton MacLane again into the role of Police Lieutenant Steve McBride, her boy friend.

Fourth in the series of "Torchy" shows, this is said by the previewers to be the most exciting and funniest of all. Once again the skirted journalist outwits the slightly dumb copper and solves a puzzling murder mystery at the same time scoring sensational scoops over the male reporters at city hall.

In the capable cast are such familiar players as Tom Kennedy, Rosella Towne, Thomas E. Jackson, Kenneth Harlan, Jean Benedict and the one-time idol of the silent films, Betty Compson. Betty is making a splendid comeback at the Warner studio and may again be at the top or near it.

A Musical Treat

Freddie Rich and his famous orchestra in ten minutes of modern dance rhythmes will round out this outsanding program.

Now playing are two outstanding hits: "Woman Against Woman," starring Virginia Bruce, Herbert Marshall and Mary Astor and "Beloved Brat" with that popular child favorite, Bonita Granville.

SCARLET TOUCH GIVEN TO MARKET BY TOMATOES

Indications Are For Very Large Crop of Tomatoes

SWEET CORN

Furnishing a vivid dash of scarlet to an already colorful display of fruit and vegetables, home-grown tomatoes practically flooded the city market Tuesday at prices consistent with the purse of everyone.

Nearly every vendor offered the new vegetables for sale with prices quoted at twenty and forty cents for basket lots and seventy and seventy-five cents asked for bushel quantities.

Forerunners of what is said to be a banner crop, the tomatoes offered today appeared to be firm and of good quality. Vendors stated that vines were well loaded with all indications pointing to a large yield.

Sweet corn, particularly the Yellow Bantam variety was plentiful with young ears offered at fifteen cents per dozen although in some quarters, two dozen could be got for twenty-five cents.

Cucumbers were offered in varying quantities, with the small pickling variety finding favor in eyes of many shoppers. Table varieties were offered at twenty and twenty-five cents per six-quart basket.

New potatoes sold at twenty cents per peck with carrots, beets, onions and cabbage and lettuce seasonable vegetables being offered at prevailing prices.

Imported peaches were quoted at forty and fifty cents per basket according to quality, while raspberries denoting a slight increase were quoted at ten and fifteen cents per box for the red and black varieties respectively.

4 Feared Dead R.A.F. Plane Missing

Leeds, England, Aug. 10—(CP)—Havas)—Four men of the Royal Air Force were feared dead Thursday following the disappearance of a plane of 22nd squadron. It was believed to have gone down in the bay at Bridlington, Yorkshire.

Fishermen reported hearing a plane flying low and then an explosion last night. This morning a lifebelt of the type used by the Air Force was washed ashore on the beach.

The plane, which had participated in manoeuvres over the week-end, left Gosport Monday night with four men aboard. They were Pilot-Sergeant C. J. Gordon, Aircraftsmen T. C. Andrews, M. G. Cousins and A. Cost.

Coast Guard vessels and private craft searched the region without finding any trace of the missing craft.

Poems That Live

'A HARROW GRAVE IN FLANDERS

Here in the marshland, past the battered bridge,
One of a hundred grains untimed by sown,
Here, with his comrades of the hard-won ridge,
He rests, unknown.

His horoscope had seemed so plain, by drawn:
School triumphs earned space in work and play;
Friendships at will; then love's delightful dawn
And mellowing day.

Home fostering hope; some service to the State;
Benignant age; then the long sleep to keep
Where in the yew-tree shadow congregate
His fathers sleep.

Was here the one thing needful to distil
From life's alembic, through this holier fate,
The manly essential soul, the hero-will?

We ask: and wait.

—Robert Ashburton.

IN MEN WHOM MEN CONDEMN AS ILL
From "Byron"

In men whom men condemn as ill
I find so much of goodness still,
In men whom men pronounce divine
I find so much of sin and blot,
I do not dare to draw a line
Between the two, where God has not.

—Joaquin Miller (1841-1913).

Modern Bedspread Easily Laundered

Time was when the bedspread was so delicate a creation that it had to be handled with care.

Today's bedspread still serves the purpose of beautifying the bed by day, but washable fabrics have made it a useful all-round covering that can be thrown over the footboard and pulled up for service on temperamental summer nights.

Although flimsy fabrics are still used in some extent, unbleached muslins dressed up with chenille little candlewick tufts, or other simple stitches are smuckers, and sturdy rayon and cotton weaves predominate in homes where furnishings are chosen with an eye to how they wash and wear. Where the children curl up on the bed when hand creams and other bedtime cosmetics rub off, when coffee or crumbs from the breakfast tray spill, the simpler type of bedspread can be easily refreshed with soap and water even if its weekly quota of service isn't up.

Cotton bedspreads need no special treatment to come out of every washing looking like new. For washing formula consists of a continuous lather of abundant mild soapsuds, water of an even luke-warm temperature for washing and rinsing, and careful handling when wet. Many of the cotton novelty weaves, chenille, and candlewick spreads should be shaken to make the tufts fluffy before they are thoroughly dry. Rayons are best smoothed with an

About Cruises

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I would appreciate it very much if you can give me some information regarding boat trips at this time of the year.

I am contemplating a trip on the Northern Lakes in September and would like to know whether or not while clothes should still be worn or perhaps dark clothes will be more in line at that time of year.

Also whether or not one should dress for dinner at night on those smaller boats.

Also would one have to have clothes for morning, afternoon and evening, by that I mean, should you change three times a day?

I would thank you to print your answer as quickly as possible for me in "The Ontario Intelligencer."

B.N. or (E.Z.)

I am not sure which are your initials so I trust that you will see this answer. White clothes are not been worn as extensively this season so would not be popular in the fall months. And pastel frocks would be correct. At that time, however, and even during the summer, autumn knitted suits are perfect for the lake cruise. It is usually quite cool on deck and a coat is necessary, unless a knitted suit is worn. Shorts are positively out, as they are too cool. Some passengers wear slacks rather than sports dresses.

It is quite optional on smaller boats about dressing for dinner. If you have a summer evening frock take it for you are sure of being able to wear it the last night on board, which is a gala evening. Otherwise afternoon dresses are considered good taste.

The usual plan is to wear a sports frock during the day and then change into a "fussy" afternoon dress for dinner and dancing. If you were wearing slacks or obviously sporting attire on the day the boat stops for visiting a city where you will spend a few hours, it is better to change into a street dress before leaving the ship. Otherwise only two changes would be necessary.

You will be well advised to take a heavy coat with you as the weather is brisk on the lake as all times, and particularly in the autumn.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

Girl's Parents Object to His Attentions

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I have been in love with the daughter of a well-to-do family for over four years, and she with me. Her parents disapprove of me, because I'm not well-to-do, and have told me this is the only thing they have against me.

They won't let me see their daughter under any circumstances. She can't even talk to me on the telephone, because her mother listens on the upstairs extension. They won't let her out of their sight for fear she'll see me.

I've a good steady job, my car is paid for, and have no debts. I'm 22, and she's two years younger.

Can't Understand

As you've been in love with this young lady for four years, it looks as if your affection for her must be the real thing. Doubtless her parents think you're too young to marry. If it's material success they demand for their daughter's husband, I think that you have a good job and a car paid for, at 22 years of age, is doing very well.

Old Enough to Keep Company

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I keep house for our family, as my mother died three years ago. And everyone says the house is well kept. Since I'm old enough to be the house mother, don't you think I am old enough to have a good time once in a while? But my father objects to my going out evenings. I'm 19 years old and in my third year high.

I have a special interest in a certain boy a few years older than I am and have been out with him several times. He is one of my girl friends, who is very jealous of me, said she saw him with another girl.

His birthday is soon. I would like to send him a birthday greeting. Do you think it would be all right?

Kitty

By all means, send him the birthday greeting, and I agree with you that if you're old enough to keep house, you're old enough to go out for an occasional good time. Don't be jealous of her friend. She may have an interest, because another girl tells you that you have a rival.

A Wedding Invitation Problem

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am planning on getting married in the near future, and I would like to ask you a question about wedding invitations.

My mother and father are not divorced, though they have been separated for a good many years. They were incompatible, and just couldn't stand each other. Now that they do not live under the same roof, they are interested, and many of their friends don't know about their separation. Though, of course the family does — aunts, uncles, grandparents and a good many of their closest friends.

Would it be suitable to send out the wedding invitations in "both their names?

Bride-to-be

If the separation of your parents is not known to the world at large, and they are friendly, there is no reason why your wedding invitations should not be sent out in both their names.

Excuse Habit Aped by Child

(By LISA ORENELLE)

PHILIP HAD inherited his Mother's talent for writing, so it seemed a shame to make him go into business; therefore the family decided that Philip would be a writer.

But though Philip sold his first story, and the second and received a nice sum for each, he never has yet, and it's been years now, succeeded in making any kind of a living from the exercise of his very talented pen. That is rather puzzling, considering the price he gets for his stories, considering that he also sells most of what he writes.

But it's not so puzzling when you consider what a large percentage of the time Philip does not feel in a creative mood.

Too Many Excuses

This trait he also inherits from his mother; perhaps merely observed in her and followed as an example. For his mother had always been ingenious in thinking up reasons for not working, such as "I was planning a new dress this morning but I don't see how I can now with something on my mind—when I'm worried or tired, or haven't time to plan."

Mother could never write unless everything was right. And as everything isn't often right, she never has been able to get very much accomplished. Of course, in her case, it didn't matter. Mother made no plan or pretense of earning her living by pen—she'd just dash off an occasional poem to relieve her feelings.

But with Phillip, of course, it was different. Philip had planned to provide his daily bread through his talent, and could not afford to be so temperamental.

Hard to Shake Off

Temperament, however, or rather excuses and alibis for not getting to work, is a hard habit to shake off, especially when one example has been set by your own parent.

Inspiration does not come in a sudden flash of fire, but as a reward for daily mental discipline and application. It's no harder or more heroic to keep your mind on the writing of a story than on the making of a dress or a pudding. And the nurse who tries to train a child with a creative talent is to baby him—make him think he is different, that ordinary rules of work do not apply to him.

And no matter what you tell them to the contrary, if you excuse yourself, your children will all grow up to be regular little "Alibi Ikis". Once given the example, nothing can stop them. What's good enough for Mother is good enough for them, especially in such particulars.

RINGLETS REFUSE to go out of style despite all the exciting talk about high coiffures and rolls. They belong by rights to the fluffy-type girl; if she wants to hang on to them she will.

The darlings of the silver screen aren't falling over themselves in an effort to acquire quaint Edwardian effects. A look youthful is their stock in trade. The flowing, shoulder-length bob still prevails in Hollywood, but mode could be lovlier for the pretty young thing.

Practical as an air wave is the short cut with an undulation, not a sign of a singlet or roll. But it is dated, and that's that. It has been with us now for 10 or 12 years, a long time for a hair style to endure.

Does the tape measure tell you that your hips are following a policy of expansion? Once started, there's no telling how much you'll have to coddle to the "stylish stout" department for your frocks.

Lie on your back in bed, hands under the hips. Lift the legs until you are "standing" on your neck. Lower them slowly. That isn't easy.

When applying mascara tis your eyelashes, let the silky fringes rest upon your fingers. Run the brush lightly from the roots of the winkers to the curly tips. Don't darken the lashes on the lower lids. Darken a light growth there, darkenig it scarcely worthwhile and is likely

WAY RE-UNION

At Twelve O'clock Point on Wednesday Aug. 3, two hundred members of the Way family gathered for their seventh annual re-union. Several came from the States of Michigan and New York, others came from British Columbia, Saskatchewan and Manitoba as well as from many points of Ontario. As soon as dinner was over the chairman, Mr. Arnold D. Way called the people to order and after paying a fitting tribute to our former president, Mr. Blake Way, who passed away in October, 1937, announced the first item on the program which was community singing with Mr. W. R. Russell of Buffalo, presiding at the piano. Other items were instrumental music by the Fife family of Norwood, a humorous reading by Miss Shirley Menken of Buffalo and addresses by family historian, Mr. Glenn C. Way, of Niagara Falls, N.Y. and Mr. L. A. Van Skiver of Picton. Mr. Way explained a chart he had prepared showing how all different branches of the family were related. In the course of his address Mr. Van Skiver read from two historical documents one a letter written shortly after 1800 by Daniel B. Way to his daughter, Mrs. Sarah Hubbs and the other the story of the Way family. Mr. Reid family who settled where Corbyville now stands, in 1788.

Inexpensive gifts were distributed as follows:

Oldest man—Mr. Reuben McMurter, Rednersville; Mr. Reuben Yates, Bellville.

Oldest boy—Baby Billy Palmer, Belleville.

Youngest girl—Little Miss Latchford, Mountain View.

From the longest distance — Miss Edna Way, Vancouver, B.C.

Largest family present—Mrs. A. D. Way.

Newest bride—Mrs. Blue, Madoc.

Officers Elected

President—Mr. Arnold D. Way, Picton.

Vice-presidents — Mr. Chas. E. Way, Tweed; Mr. Alva Way, Selby; Mrs. Marcia Way, Mountain View; Mrs. S. G. Way, Corbyville; Mr. J. E. Thompson, Norwood; Mr. E. G. Corner, Petterlaw.

Family historian — Mr. Glen C. Way, Niagara Falls, N.Y.

Secretary—Mr. J. J. Way, Wooler.

Wellington was chosen as the next place for the meeting, Aug. 2, 1939.

After singing the National Anthem some sports were held, for the children and young people.

At the close of the day good-byes were said as the family departed for their distant homes.

Fashion Flashes

(By ALICE ALDEN)

NEW SLANTS in fur fashions include an emphasis on red fox. This fur in all its tawny beauty is used for an infinite variety of styles, as the fur worked in vertical panels.

On the move and wearing a coat of fine tweed in shades of tawny brown, shading from orange to tan in a mixture that is almost red, is a hood of red fox fur at back, is topped by a big junk collar.

Better than ever are the fur hats promised for next Winter. One French milliner has made a tiny rounded tent shape of silver fox in which nestle little pink birds.

If you like the strapless evening gown, you will be glad to know that it will be worn again this season. The strapless decolletage looks particularly lovely in stately, untrimmed frocks of velvet come on long, slim lines.

Sooner or later mother will have to go shopping for little daughter's school togs. Nice for Autumn wear is a knit bolero suit various suitings tartans. Slipovers is plain to match Scotch cap.

A good choice for smart daytime wear in town is a black silk sheer, all-over pleated, the pleats stitched to the hips and then loose. Nice with a big pink felt hat and pink suede bag.

LAD LOST FIVE DAYS IN ONTARIO BUSH IS RESCUED UNHARMED

Vanishing in the north country wilderness near Sturgeon Falls, Ontario, five-year-old Fernand Tessier was found after a five-day search by George Morrison, who sighted a colored sweater and started after it. The clothing proved to be the lost child who was so frightened that Morrison had to chase him for some distance before he could pick the boy up. Returned to his mother and father, Fernand, uninjured save for scratches received during his long ramble in the wilds, had one eager first question which was "I'm hungry, mummy. Did you bake a cake?". The wandering youth is shown, right, with his parents shortly after his return home, while left, Fernand's brother, Raymond, poses with the family dog, Fousset, which had originally gone with Fernand on the jaunt, but returned home alone. Fernand reported to his parents that he had kept himself alive with berries and swamp water.

ROOSEVELT, KING TO MEET AS INTERNATIONAL BRIDGE OPENED

President Franklin D. Roosevelt, of the United States, and Premier W. L. Mackenzie King, of Canada, are expected to meet at Kingston, Ont., on Aug. 17, when the new Thousand Island international bridge system will be officially opened. This meeting may be occasion for important discussions, including the trade treaty between the Canada and the United States and the controversial St. Lawrence river waterways scheme which President Roosevelt favors. ## BULLETS END GRIZZLIE'S REIGN OF TERROR IN PITTSBURGH

For six hours this 350-pound grizzly bear, escaping from the Pittsburgh Zoo after breaking inch-thick iron bars to win its freedom, terrorized an entire section of that city. Four bullets from the rifle of Arnold J. Schaumann, zoo superintendent, finally dropped the bear as it charged toward him when cornered in a culvert. A posse of amateur "big game" hunters and policemen armed with rifles and sub-machine guns had been formed to run it down. Schaumann and a police officer are shown examining the grizzly after its death.

HEADING FOR "HEAVEN" UP THE HUDSON

"Heaven" is not so far away and not so hard to attain for followers of Father Divine, head of the famous Negro cult. ## POLL TAX

Barrie town council has endorsed the proposal to make women who earn over $100 a year, subject to the same municipal poll tax as men. There is really no valid reason why there should be any more discrimination between the sexes in taxation than there is in giving employment. Some day the provincial legislators may have courage enough to place both upon equal terms in the matter of poll tax. # Corbys Gain Dual Victory; Ambers and Armstrong to Fight Tonight

Art Cole's Big Bat Gives Corbys Victory in City Softball Play-off, 7 to 6

Cole Gets Three Homers as National Grocers Are Eliminated

MANY ARGUMENTS

Riggs Fails to Steal Home; Cole Drives in Six Runs

With Art Cole's potent bat accounting for six of his team's seven runs the Corbys A.C. advanced to the O.A.S.A. playdowns by virtue of a 7 to 6 victory over the National Grocers in the fourth and final city league semi-final softball play-off game at Coleman Flats last evening. The Corbys will went doubly at they not only advanced to the O.A.S.A. playdowns, but elevated themselves into the semi-finals for the City Softball championship when they meet the Astors "Cementmen" commencing Thursday night at Coleman Flats.

Cole was the first man at the game getting three home runs in three official times at bat, all circuit blows being of the most assured nature. He put his team well in the lead with a homer in the initial frame, with two aboard, duplicated this feat in the third with one aboard and after Hal Kemp's National mates had rallied to knit the count in their half of the sixth, Cole stepped to the plate and cinched the game, the honors and whatever went with victory with a grandstand shot in the seventh. The next time Cole wandered toward the plate he was purposely passed on four pitched balls.

Grocers Score 5

Except in the sixth inning when the "grocer lads" rallied to score five runs, on four hits, they were hopelessly out of the picture until the eighth when Riggs the losers' shortstop reached to first and sped home with the tying run while pitcher Eddie Schrieber was standing near the mound watching the proceedings. Riggs was an easy out and there vanished any chance of the National Grocers in victory. Knott followed with a single to add insult to injury on the play, but with two out Knott died at first.

The game was not devoid of excitement as numerous arguments entered into the piece with the teams repeated questioning officials' decisions, which at times were reversed during the torrid verbal blasts.

Despite the fact that each team kicked in with five errors, the game was marked with sparkling fielding being injected into the pastime, that represented a few fielding running high as the opposing players gave vent to their personal feelings on the field. Cy Barrizge's sensational running catch of Chuck Barrizge's line drive was the feature defensive play of the game.

Play-off Earned

By virtue of last night's victory the Corbys A.C. won the right to advance into the intermediate "A" playdowns in the O.A.S.A. which do not commence until August 30th verne Kingston, in the meantime the Corbys A.C. will meet Frank Sedore's Point Anne squad in a best three in two series for the City League honors.

Besides Cole's heavy hitting Jimmie Barrizge had three hits for the winners with Ted Hearn getting a trio of safeties for the losers. Vic Hannah had a circuit blow to his credit while Knott and Riggs had two hits each, the latter getting two hits in three trips.

ODDS ARE 3 TO 1 ON ARMSTRONG AGAINST AMBERS

If Negro Wins Will be First of Race to Hold 135 lb. Title in 30 Years

By ALAN RANDAL

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

New York, Aug. 10 (CP)—Henry Armstrong, little brown wind-mill—or call him a buzz-saw because he's the fellow who pushed Barney Ross loose from the welter crown at 90 blows a round—climbs into the Polo Grounds ring tonight, aiming for lightweight champion Lou Ambers and his third title in 10 months.

The 135-pound boss enters the 15-round fray the underdog. Amers has only been in the favorite and the odds are 3 to 1 and 16 to 5 for Henry to strip the "Herkimer Hurricane" of his lightweight crown and become the first fighter to hold three championships simultaneously.

Victory for Armstrong, the featherweight ruler, would also make him the first negro lightweight king since that Joe Gans days years ago when the immortal Joe was about the only lad known by Battling Nelson. It would make Henry, on paper at least, the greatest fighting man between 118 the benlam top, and 147.

Fighters' Out

But as a box office draw the fight is ordinary. If it goes form 900 Promoter Mike Jacobs may thank his lucky stars. He even may do that if Armstrong wins with the lightweight champion title. Fifty per cent and Arm strong 22½.

Under a special clause in the fight contract Armstrong will have no claim on Armstrong's welter title, should he win. Henry's featherweight title is out of consideration of course. But there has been considerable talk of Armstrong generally recognized by the public and National Boxing Association as the welter boss should he pass Armstrong.

This Henry's 29th fight in 18 months, only three of which went the route as he scored 27 conquests via knockouts. He won the featherweight title last Oct. 31 from Petey Sarron for six rounds after trounced Ross for the crown last May.

Against th's Ambers has had 22 fights in the six years. He won 49 decisions, scored 16 knockouts, dropped five verdicts and fought seven draws.

Under a special clause in the flight contract Armstrong will have no claim on Armstrong's welter title, should he win. Henry's featherweight title is out of consideration of course. But there has been considerable talk of Armstrong generally recognized by the public and National Boxing Association as the welter boss should he pass Armstrong.

This Henry's 29th flight in 18 months, only three of which went the route as he scored 27 conquests via knockouts. He won the featherweight title last Oct. 31 from Petey Sarron for six rounds after trounced Ross for the crown last May.

Against th's Ambers has had 22 flights in the six years. He won 49 decisions, scored 16 knockouts, dropped five verdicts and fought seven draws.

Bauers Hurls Two Hit Ball As Pirates Down Cardinals; Giants Snap Losing Streak

Yankees Lost and Cleveland Split Two as Red Sox Win to Gain

VETERAN WINS

Bill Harris Puts Boston in Race With Fine Pitching; Detroit Wins

(By Hugh S. Fullerton, Jr., Associated Press Sports Writer)

The youth-must-be-served idea in baseball is a good one as far as it goes, but occasionally an old guy comes along with all the answers needed to decide the pennant question.

Right now it's 32-year-old Bill Harris, but up from Buffalo, may put the Boston Red Sox back into the middle of the American League scrap.

Harris, acquired last January to help out the young Boston hurlers, limited the Athletics to 0 hits, fanned five and came up with a 16-4 victory in his first start yesterday. The Sox batted out all their runs in the last three innings as rookie Jim Tabor soaked a homer with the bases crammed in the big seventh.

The veteran right hander had a trial with Cincinnati in 1929, and was a 30-year-old "rookie" when he came up to Pittsburgh in 1921. He served mostly as a "finisher" there, and earned his nickname, "hard luck" Harris when he managed to win seven games for the Pirates only one season in four.

Yesterday's victory came in a good spot, for the league-leading New York Yankees took a 4-2 setback from Washington when Ken Chase set them down with six hits and drove in the winning run in the ninth inning Cleveland's second place Indians split a doubleheader with the Browns, taking the first game, 4-3 when Howard Mills outlasted Bob Weiland, then winning the second 8-1 on a five-run inning marked by Bruce Campbell's four bagger.

Those results put Boston 6 1-2 games behind New York and 1 1-2 behind Cleveland.

In the National League, Chicago Cubs made the best gain when they whipped Cincinnati 9-4 in a mound duel between Larry French and Paul Derringer, and broke a tie for third place.

Pittsburgh's league leaders downed St. Louis Cardinals 1-0 when big Russ Bauers hurled a two-hit game, fating only 31 batters, and struck in himself in the third when he singled and produced the only home run Stanley's double and Lloyd Waner's base hit. The second-place New York Giants snapped their losing streak to beat Boston 5-4 with a three-run seventh and some nice relief flinging by Dick Coffman.

Carroll Yerkes, held to four hits by Jack Knott, beat Chicago White Sox 4-3 when Rudy York was on his 23rd homer with two mates on deck. Brooklyn Dodgers hammered out a 9-6 decision over the Phillies.

Yesterday's game with the Cubs sent the Reds over the 45,000 attendance mark for home games and a wing good old Bill McKechnie's 43,000 mark for road games. Paul Gaznel, now doing a swell job at St. Paul, will be managing in the majors within three years.

Golf Facts

Watch Those Hands!

In golf it is the little things that count. The pro who is concentrating in a tournament knows that the least little turn in the weather, playing conditions or events in general is apt to put him off his game. It doesn't take the beginner long to assume this attitude toward small items. And by attitude I mean the inclination to worry about the influence of little things.

But, with all of the worry over them the players seem to give them the proper attention at the right time. For example, every golfer knows that when his hands shift or change their position on the club that the shot cannot be successful. Since the player knows this you wonder, that he doesn't do something about it, for as he takes his grip and waggles the club back and forth before starting his swing it appears as though he doesn't care a bang about the shifting of his hands.

With nine out of 10 players there is little change in the position of one hand in relation to the other as the ball is being addressed. Most of the change is possible through the faulty way of placing the hands on the club. Before either hand is made firm on the club the clubhead should be placed on the ground and resting there in its natural position. And it should remain in this position until after both hands have been properly placed.

Playground Notes

The West Belleville Bantams moved well to the fore in the city playground ball league as they downed their East Belleville rivals 12 to 9 on the latter's diamond yesterday giving the West Hill youngsters undisputed title to the five games played.

Each team scored five runs in the initial frame yesterday in a game that saw plenty of lusty batting, but the visiting Bantams cling took the lead with an additional four runs in the third and cinched the battle with three more in the fifth, although the East Enders scored four in the fourth and threatened strongly in the sixth. Bernard, Jackson and Patterson swung potent bats for the West Hill while Don Locke and Gunlon Ida led the batting for the losers.

The line-ups—East Hill—Lyle, c; Don Lock, 2b; Bunton, p; Rollins, lb;* Cooper, cf; Lockyer, 2b; Doug Locke, ss; Connolly, lf; Jones, rf; and Shaddock. West Hills—Strand, p; Bernard, lb; Hawsey, 3b; Massey, 2b; Patterson, c; Watkin, rf; M. Massey, lf, and Meagner, ss. Score by innings—

West ..... 5 0 0 4 3 0—12 runs
East ..... 5 0 0 2 0 1 0— 9 "

Condition Critical

Felled by a fast ball thrown by Johnny Gee, Syracuse pitcher, Woody Abernathy, ABOVE, centre fielder with Buffalo Bisons in the International league is in a critical condition in a Syracuse hospital. An emergency operation was performed on the 21-year-old athlete and it will be some days before he is out of danger. Doctors say he will never play ball again.

BELLEVILLE WINS JUNIOR LEAGUE CHAMPIONSHIP

Defeat Napanee Kids 5 to 4 to Cinch Loop Honors

GOT TWO HITS

Kelleher Strikes Out 13 While Jocko Allows Locals Only 2 Hits

Belleville Kiwanis Juniors were crowned champions of the Quinte junior league and earned the right to advance into the junior O.B.A. provincial junior baseball playdowns by virtue of defeating Napanee kids 5 to 4 at the Fair grounds last evening, in winning last evening the local kids cinched the district junior league honors, regardless as to the results or injuries league contests.

The home victory proved rather hollow, however, as Joe Jocko Walter Gerow's one junior decoration hurled two hit ball, Guay and Doherty of the home-town team the only Kiwanis lads to find Jocko for safe hits Belleville scored two in the first on two walks, a fielder's choice with a brace of bobbles and Guay's double, added two more in the second, which were accountable to Doherty's long hit, and two in the fifth when Ronsky walked and scored on Guay's stinging single. Ronsky Guay's stinging single. Ronsky Guay's sensational catches in centre field for the homesters, while Guay kicked in with five errorless chances.

Kelleher Whiffs 13

Joe Kelleher hurled for the Kiwanis kids and although touched for seven safeties, kept the scatter them well and bear down in the pinches. Kelleher struck out 13 batters. Napanee batters during the nine innings, getting at least one safety off the local hurler. He walked three, two of which came in the second when the visitors failed to score, however. Napanees scored two in the third, which was accountable to a pair of searching triples by right-centre and added two more in the fourth on hits by Jocko and Ray Vick. Walt Gerow's charges threatened in the ninth as they got to first base in the winning runs on the bases, but could not beat Kelleher to the plate when Ray Vick, the Napanee hurler, struck out four and walked the same number. Trympush 1b and Turner rf.

Belleville Kiwanis—Mequade, 2b; Ronsky cf; Guay ss; Carroll 3b; Carson 1b; Kelleher p; Austin rf; Pepper lf; Doherty lf.

CITY TENNIS TOURNAMENT IS PLANNED

Tennis Clubs From Belleville Area to Compete For Trophies

Under the sponsorship of the Quinte Skating Club Tennis Club an "all Belleville tennis tournament, with the Point Anne Tennis Club included, will be staged at the Dufferin Park courts on Friday and Saturday evening. Six fine silver trophies will be awarded the respective tournament winners and donated by the sponsors.

The tournament is being arranged and promoted solely to create and stimulate interest in tennis and endeavour to have the various tennis clubs operating in the city to form. The public is cordially invited to witness the city doubles championships.

Ladies' mixed and mixed doubles will constitute the tournament play, with teams from the Bay of Quinte Tennis Club, Point Anne Club, the Belleville Tennis Club, St. Andrew's Church Tennis Club, St. Michael's Church Tennis Club and other such clubs throughout the city being invited to compete in the tournament.

The excellent floodlight equipment at the Dufferin Park courts make night play possible and more popular than play throughout the hot sweltering days. The "All-Belleville" tennis tournament is a new venture in tennis and should create interest and prove popular to the non-participating citizens.

WESTERN ERS IN SPOTLIGHT AT CANADIAN HENLEY

The big surprise of this year's Canadian Henley at St. Catharines, Ontario, was the great showing made by scullers and crews from western Canada. The western representatives who covered themselves with glory are shown. The two sturdy oarsmen standing are A. P. Riley and C. S. Riley, Jr., of the Winnipeg Rowing Club, who captured the Junior doubles crown. While J. Chambers, of Port William, sat in his scull, came through to take the title in the 140-pound junior single sculls event.

CALLING 'EM

Between the Lines

Ken I. Colling

Considered by many the greatest piece of fighting machinery in the world today, Henry Armstrong, one holder of the welter and featherweight boxing titles, meets Lou Ambers, lightweight champion, for the 36 pound crown tonight. As strictly a fighter Armstrong stands with Jack Dempsey and Stanley Ketchel, he throws both hands with deadly effect, but carries much more steam in them. Like Dempsey and Joe Louis, Armstrong is part Cherokee Indian. One of fourteen children, he was born "the baby of the family" in St. Louis and knows what knocks really are. A terrible and devastating puncher, Armstrong will be the favourite tonight. He had little difficulty in beating much haggismen than Lou Ambers, but the present lightweight champion has never been knocked down since he commenced his wanderings overseas that took him into the top ranks in the 135 pound division. It is safe assuming that Ambers will not relinquish his crown without a struggle, that will go down in ring history tonight.

When Corbys A.C. eliminated National Grocers from the current softball picture in both the city league finals and the O.A.S.A. playdowns last night, it would appear as though it was Art Cole versus the "grocer lads" and not altogether Corbys. Cole all his life has been boosted by clientele blows and six of his teammates seven runs. Incidentally that was too much gallivanting and squabbling during last night's game. What the local softballers really need is an umpire, or set of umpires, who will curb their present style and make them play the game for the game's sake. There are too many petty jealousies and kindred feelings outwardly exemplified to shear the game of its real objects.

Now it can be told—it seems Art Cole was in a batting slump last week and was worrying about his right. "Get me a pitcher, I want some batting practice," bewailed Cole of Skipper Chuck Barrizge with the result, that for over an hour on Tuesday night Connie Harris hurled 'em across and Cole went to bat. The prolific results of this practice was seen when Cole's big bat boomed last night.

The Belleville Beaches situated directly behind the Belleville General Hospital has been the mecca of many hundreds of sweltering citizens all through this summer's exceedingly hot spell. The Belleville Beaches fill a long-awaited need in the city and those to foster and promote the project should view with considerable satisfaction the pleasure and comfort this beach and the cooling waters of the Bay of Quinte has brought many citizens this summer. On the other hand the citizens should realize the tremendous expense under which the Beaches committee is labouring in their ground work and assist them in every degree possible.

Aside from a splendid sand beach, the committee has erected a shoot-the-chutes for the kiddies, a spring board for the swimmers and still another small pier where the beginner can jump, fall or dive into the cooling waters of the bay. Daily hundreds of swimmers frequent the Belleville Beaches, a really worthwhile project, that is deserving your support.

From the office of Bill Snyder, secretary of the O.B.A., comes word that Bert Nosker, former Belleville Kiwanis junior-senior, has been indefinitely suspended from all activities reported to the Ontario Sports Federation which will ultimately result in his suspension from all lines of amateur sport for at least one year. It seems Nosker has joined the bewhiskered House of David baseball team when they left Belleville and without permission played with this team in Peterboro. Playing with professional players is a serious misdemeanor in amateur baseball circles and usually results in the participant being professionalized. Nosker should have known better than to bike off with the House of David players, who dropped him like the proverbial hot potato, once they got through with him. Of course if Noakes remains out of active sports for one year he may be able to gain reinstatement of his former amateur status. In the meantime he stands suspended from all lines of amateur sport which is a pretty dear penalty for the privilege of playing one night game with a touring nine, the calibre of the House of David. No doubt this will be a lesson to Bert as he should be marked well by other baseball executives who have too high aspirations in their teens.

Frank Polwell's Belleville Kiwanis juniors will move into the junior O.B.A. playdowns for the third, or is it fourth, consecutive year. Last evening Walt Gerow's Napanee kids fulfilled a Quinte junior league sacrifice date in Belleville, but were forced to use two intermediates, which automatically gave the Kiwanis the league honors. The Barrett-coached boosters played nine full innings and defeated Gerow's augmented nine 5 to 4, but with the exception of Kelleher's pitching, he fanned 13, the locals failed to impress and they were held to exactly two safe hits by Joe Jocko, a junior hurler, the local juniors will have to show a little more strength offensively, if they expect to get anywhere in the junior O.B.A. hunt, it would seem.

HODGE PODGE—They tell us Frank Sedore didn't sleep any too well after Corbys won last night . . . "Goodie, goodie, I hear Art Cole is going to Bermuda and don't wish him any bad luck, but I hope he's marooned for at least a week," suggested Skipper Sedore . . . reminiscent over Cole's "Greenberg display" last night. . . . Peter Reiser-Armstrong fight goes on the air tonight, so here's where we "take the air."

commission.

When established, the commission will investigate all protests made by the British government to General Franco over ship bombings. If found to be deliberate, the question of compensation will arise.

The Late Lugano, a British merchantman of 2,110 tons, was bombed last Sunday at Palamos, near Barcelona, by two insurgent planes. After the bombardment, the attackers wheeled, swooped low and machine-gunned the decks. None of the crew was injured. The vessel became a burning wreck and Tuesday another insurgent plane sank her.

Government Anxious

London, Aug. 10—(CP Cable)—The British government today was reported to be showing concern over General Franco's silence regarding the non-intervention committee plan for the withdrawal of foreign volunteers from Spain. The Spanish government accepted it July 26, but the insurgent leader has been considering the matter for five weeks without making a decision.

Meanwhile, reports from Paris indicate a growing demand in France to throw open the Pyrenees border to supplies for the Spanish government.

The Right Idea

Cleveland fans with a sense of humor made a presentation to Jimmy Foxx that took the form of the bat Jimmy is shown holding. If they could just get the league to authorize the use of the bat, made up almost entirely of holes there would be large gobs of joy in seven American league cities where the fans would be hoping it might stop double-o' from being runs over the plate in the devastating way he has.

"The DOCTOR" by MARY ROBERTS RINEHART

Chris was mentally wretched and physically highly incomfortable, for Lily had lapsed even from her previous state of inefficiency. Her wrappers were more bedraggled, the accumulation of unwashed dishes and dust greater, where greater. The—were times, too, when she acted like a woman drugged, although an eagerly decided it.

"Drugs? What sort of drugs, and where would I get them?"

He took no backing his medicine chest then, but Lily knew a trick worth two of that. There were always the samples left in Chris's absence, and one day she got it a locksmith and had a second key made to the closet.

Now and then Chris brought home a colored woman from the alley behind the house to clean up, and for a week or two the brass plate on the front door would shine and the house be orderly. Not soon it would lapse with Lily into a disorder that was a menace to health. One day Chris saw the Lily-white car on downtown street and knew that Beverly was back from Europe. It made no appreciable impression on him, save that he began then to develop those deep lines from nose to mouth which were so characteristic a few years later. But very soon after that he had one of those mysterious but unmistakable summonses from a woman in distress. He had learned to know that when night and sleep had settled down on the city, and when he heard his name called in a certain way from the consulting room. Her first words unslightly:

"I am in trouble, Doctor. I suppose you know what that means. And I hope you will refuse to do anything about it." She smiled gravely, "I have been carefully before. There's a law against it, isn't there?"

"It's more than merely a matter-of-fact that he kept his own face impassive. "You are the best thing, of course; the only sensible thing."

But she had not finished, however. She was still calm, but he saw that her hands were clenched tight on the arms of her chair.

"What I want, and what I think is fair, is that the—the man in the case shall see me through it and support the child later. That's not being unreasonable, is it? For myself—I'm a stenographer in one of the smile—and I shall have to go somewhere else to live. Unfortunately he does not see it that way. He thinks it will give me a hold on him, be a sort of blackmail." She frushed. "In other words now it might be anybody's child; it only needs me money or shocks. It is his."

"And what else does he suggest?"

"He thinks I need not have it at all."

Chris was puzzled. Apparently she wanted nothing from him; but there was a determination in her voice, a purpose, that put him back in his chair conscious, her with level eyes.

"I see. There is no hope that he will marry you, I suppose?"

"None whatever. He is about to be married to some one else."

Suddenly she sat forward in her chair. "I don't need a doctor," she said. "Not yet, at least. But I want some one young enough to understand and be interested in helping me. Doctor Arden, and I chose you because the man is Jervis Ames, and I think you know the girl he is going to marry."

"You see," she went on, "I have two courses open, and only two, Doctor. One is to go to Miss Lewis. I don't want to do that. The other is to find some one to help me with the problem and make him take it. He has five kids. He is frightened—but he is still not frightened enough. You see, he knows me. He knows I won't tell on him, and he's banking on that." And she added, "It's just his luck that I am a woman, too, I fell in love with him and that's the—that."

Chris said nothing, and she went on. Of course Jerry was "a bad man with women." She knew that now. He would never be faithful to a wife. But he had his good points, too. He was kind. He had been both kind and generous to her until now. But he thought she was a fool for it. "If the child, and he was furiously angry with her."

"You see, he's very much in love with Miss Ames. He's never been in love with her even when—they slipped, then added calmly, "I don't think that you would rather go to him than have me go to her."

CHAPTER XXVII.

Chris sat back in his chair. The case was clear enough. He rubbed his hands, as usual gritty with dust. He was no moralist, accepting Jerry Ames' code and his own, but in a way his hands were clean. He was well dressed, and he had no suspicion of the situation that was developing right into the consulting room. Her first words enlightened him.

"I am in trouble, Doctor. I suppose you know what that means. And I hope you will refuse to do anything about it." She smiled gravely. "I have been carefully before. There's a law against it, isn't there?"

"It's more than merely a matter-of-fact that he kept his own face impassive. "You are the best thing, of course; the only sensible thing."

But she had not finished, however. She was still calm, but he saw that her hands were clenched tight on the arms of her chair.

SCOTT'S SCRAP BOOK

By R. J. SCOTT

Moment Musicale

By ADELE THANE

He was clothed in a threadbare suit of black linen, rusted with age and creased with promiscuous sleeping. The sickly light flickering through the dust-filmed globe of a gas street lamp made moving bluish circles upon his broad, bent shoulders and the worn fabric of his felt hat. He pushed forward a soiled left hand.

"Two bits, miss, jus' two bits," he whined.

I stared at that cracked, palsied hand and down at the other hanging by his side with a terrible still ness, and wondered about them. They were not proletarian hands, stained with sin, flabby with excess, wizened with rapacity. They had not been created to pander and beg. They were meant for finer, bigger things: the chisel, the brush, the ballot.

"Ah, miss. I am poor—poor." Then in a wheedling tone, "Jus' two bits."

I reached for my pocketbook. "What will you do with it?" speaking aloud a scandalous thought.

My eyes followed the shaken extended forefinger down the narrow alley to the dim end where it rose to meet the accentuated brilliancy of a myriad electric lights.

"But that is the Opera house!" I cried in astonishment.

"Yes. I go to hear—him." The thin arm lifted slightly upward. Clean-cut against the night sky in titanic letters seemingly writ with fire, a name glowed steadily for a moment, burned out, then flamed with a brighter vehemence, only to die again.

I sucked in my breath. "Malte-Brun! So swiftly did I turn the old man fell back a pace.

"Wait!" I called. I clutched at the arm nearest to me. It was chill . . . lifeless . . . paralyzed.

Fumbled in my purse. Hired. Take it! No don't thank me. I'm going with you."

All the music lovers of the city had gathered in the colossal auditorium to listen to those consummate symphonies which the fingers of only Malte-Brun could evoke from the soul of the piano, and when the tall, gaunt maestro stepped out upon the stage, they gave him tumultuous welcome.

I was aware of the old man hitching forward eagerly as the maestro seated himself before the keyboard. The sudden quiet was cloven by the majestic opening chords of Greig's "Norwegian Bridal Procession," and into the misty space, fled my interest in the distant hoary-haired musician, came a look of infinite calm, listening and making of it the face of a thirsty child whose parched lips have at last tasted the soothing cool of spring water.

Throughout the recital he sat thus, until the final number a brief composition by a Conrad Rabbek called "Disillusion." Then he stiffened. That was all.

I shall never forget Malte-Brun's rendition of that weird selection. The agony and grief of humanity since creation was packed into those limited measures the sobbing of strong men, the screams of mad men, the curses of Godless men, and the prayers of dying men. It was like some one dead, when it ended. Speech froze in my throat.

Outside the snow was falling with that undisturbed, feather-like tranquility which emanates an imaginary warmness. I threw back my head and let the downy flakes brush my throbbing temples.

Fingers plucked at my sleeve, long fingers, lingering and sensitive. I started guiltily. I had forgotten my companion.

"Now I go," he murmured in a husky voice.

"That last piece . . . it was—" I choked.

"You liked it, miss?"

"Did not you?"

His mask so ropy, but dropped his wrinkled lids over his pale blue eyes, mechanically smoothing his breastpocket.

Finally he spoke. "I—I'd like to give you something, miss," he faltered, "somethin' for t'night. It's no good to me no more. Ooo—I thought—"

He glanced over his twisted shoulder into the foyer of the Opera house. It was dark now. He swallowed noisily.

"Funny", he went on, "the dreams I've had in there. You're young. You know." He commenced to shout hoarsely. "But don't let them get you, miss. Don't—LET—THEM—GIT—YOU." He straightened. "Ah . . . forgive . . . I forget . . . Here, miss. Take it, with the blessin' of God and a beggar . . . Goodnight."

And he was gone, the snow weaving a shiny white curtain about him and blurring with a motherly tenderness the ugly outline of his warped form.

I hastened to the window of a pharmacy and unfolded the grimy manila wrapping of a package in my hand. The light streamed out upon a yellowed sheaf of lined manuscript paper.

It was the original score of "Disillusion."

GRAHAMS KNOT TRENT PLAY-OFFS WITH 'AIRMEN'

R.C.A.F. Downed in Wild Free-Hitting Softball Contest

Trenton, Aug. 9 (Special)—Staging two of the wildest inning-long rallies seen in years on local diamonds Graham's Garagemen last night evened their semi-final play-off series at one game each when they bested the R.C.A.F. team 21-16 in as wild and wooy a scramble as one could imagine. With the Airmen leading them 9-4 at the beginning of the fifth Graham's were quick to realize the gradual weakening of "Tiny" Davis on the Flyers' mound and when he walked three and filled the bases fans saw the unusual spectacle of eight runs scored without a single solid hit being registered. Almost the entire R.C.A.F. team seemed to go to pieces for a time, and the ball was booted around for several long and juicy errors. The next inning was almost as bad as the Garagemen took advantage of the offerings of Gibson and Annis for seven more tallies; and the fans by this time had reached the semi-hysterical stage when Davis' four mounddmen were trotted out by the Flyers, who actually have only Davis as full-time hurler, the others coming in as relief pitchers. Davis, who retired in the sixth, was still by far the best of the lot and Gibson, Annis and LeCompte who followed him were not at all well treated by the opposition batters.

Play Tonight

With the series evened up at one game each the two teams meet again Wednesday to decide the issue as to which club will meet the top-run Youvex club for the Ockley trophy. A tremendous amount of enthusiasm has been shown by the fans, and last night's crowd was one of the largest in several seasons. Three umpires have been used in these play-off games, and they have had plenty of work to do. Arguments have been plentiful, and the next game between the two rivals will be a torrid one.

The one unfortunate feature is that night's set-to, however, is that there were by far too many errors perpetrated by both clubs, and though fans got more than their money's worth some of the more critical ones could complain of the lack of real finished play.

The winner of the Trenton league and silverware is scheduled to go to Napanee on August 15th for the first of the playdowns, the return game to be in Trenton the following Tuesday.

TORONTO SPLITS DOUBLE-HEADER WITH NEWARK

Pitchers Are Tops Throughout Yesterday's 'int.' Loop Games

Everytime some oracle proclaims that baseball has been taken over by the hitters, the pitchers' union rebels and well-pitched ball games bounce up all over the baseball map.

The majors did it yesterday and the International kept pace last night with five games in which the pitchers were supreme.

Newark and Toronto split a doubleheader, the Leafs winning 5-2 and then bowing in young Marius Russo's 15th triumph, 4-1; while Rochester blanked the Jersey City Giants, 1-0 only to have the Glanis win the second game 2-1. Montreal took its first game with Syracuse, 3-1, but the Chiefs clubbed out an 8-5 win in the second. Buffalo and Baltimore also split, the Bisons winning 11-4 and losing to the Dock 6-5 in the nightcap.

Russo, to whom New York Yankees look to take up the slack when Vernon Gomez fades, was supreme all the way. He fanned 11 Leafs, allowed only three hits and blanked the Toronto club from the second inning on.

Rafferberger came up with the best game of the night when he blanked the Giants with two hits in the seven-inning opener. He fanned three and walked only one.

Then big Tom Baker, who is beginning to live up to his early promise, halted the Wings with six hits in the nightcap. He fanned nine.

RE-ARMING

"I am absolutely in favor of it. After all, in the event of war there is only one place to which Canada can turn, and that is to the British Empire."

"We in Canada," Mr. Ferguson declared, "are too prone to judge outside situations in a local light. As long as we are in a free country, enjoying the freedom of the Union Jack and living a tranquil sort of life, we give too little thought to the things that might happen. We are too willing to believe that we are secure, yet in the event of a war of aggression, we must realize that a valuable prize like Canada would not remain untouched, especially in view of the present conditions of European nations today."

"Is Preparedness is Peace"

"In preparedness there is peace," Mr. Ferguson stated. "That has been exemplified in the actions of Great Britain during the past few years. In the early days when she agreed to disarm to certain limits, other nations armed themselves to the point where they actually became insolent. That was exemplified in the Abyssinian episode."

"Great Britain, however," Mr. Ferguson continued, "took insults without a return. Quietly, efficiently she went about re-arming. Added strength gave her greater confidence, and as her armaments reached the point where she compared favorably with the so-called aggressor nations, she again became the bulwark of peace. For this was the ultimate aim of this greatest of the democratic nations. For years she endured the insolence and veiled insults of European dictators, quietly she armed, but all with the one purpose in mind, peace."

"Today," Mr. Ferguson concluded, "she again holds high her head. At the end of this year, at the present rate of increase of ships and aircraft, Great Britain will be able to roll up her sleeves and tell the rest of the world to 'come on'. That at least, is what I found out during my sojourn in England."

"But we in Canada must do our part, for our very security lies in the unity of that great force that has kept the European dogs of war at bay during years when war and its attendant horrors seemed inevitable, the British Empire."

NEWS ODDITIES AND BRIEFS

THOUGHT HE WAS RICH JURY DOG TAGS

Windsor, Ont., Aug. 11 (CP)—Leo Lamendeau thought he had "struck it rich" for a few moments one night. Digging in his garden, he unearthed a treasure of shiny metal disks. Leo decided they were half dollars, or maybe pieces of eight. He cleaned them of mud and read the inscriptions. Each was neatly lettered "1934 dog tax —Ford City".

TRAPS 6 HUMANS INSTEAD OF DEER

Raleigh, N.C., Aug. 11 (AP)—Game Warden J. Y. Eller of Pisgah National Forest, seeking to count the number of deer in the forest, set out traps to catch and hold the animals—without harm—until he had been counted. The traps yielded: An irate hunter, a lady's handbag, and two embarrassing women in search of apples.

PORCUPINE FINDS SECURITY IN TOWN

Waterloo, Ont., Aug. 11 (CP)—Rejoicing in its safety under Ontario game laws, a porcupine wandered into Waterloo one morning and found a comfortable perch in a spruce tree. It remained there all day, complacently ignoring the crowd which gathered around. Next morning it was gone as mysteriously as it had come.

"HORSE AND BUGGY" IS A CHEVROLET

Woodstock, Ont., Aug. 11 (CP)—A Woodstock man has a novel horse and buggy. The buggy is an old automobile chassis. Unusual features of the rig are the headlights and the battery still mounted in the chassis.

Maternal Death Rate Lowest, 3.1 per 1,000 Births in 1937

London, Aug. 11—(AP)—Waller Hilton, Minister of Health, reported today the 1937 maternal death rate of 3.4 per 1,000 births in England and Wales was the lowest the Ministry ever had recorded.

But, he declared in the annual report for the year ended March 31, "we cannot afford to be over proud" while mothers and more than 35,000 children under one year.

"We cannot view with complacency the annual death roll of nearly 30,000 persons from tuberculosis and nearly 70,000 from cancer."

17 ARE RESCUED, SIX MISSING OFF CLEVELAND

Terrific Rain And Wind Storm Lashes Lake Erie

2 COUPLES MISSING

Cleveland, Aug. 11—(AP)—Seventeen persons were rescued from their crippled yacht on storm tossed Lake Erie early today as United States coast guards launched a search for 6 others reported missing.

A rain and wind storm described as "terrific" by coast guard headquarters lashed the lake last night.

Six members of a Mansfield, O., fishing party, including three Ministers of the United Lutheran Church in America, reported missing off Sandusky, O. Four Cincinnati yachtsmen were long overdue at Toledo from the Inter-Lake Regatta at Put-In-Bay, O. Two young men were missing in an outboard motorboat in which they put out from North Shores, Mich.

The coast guard cutter Frederick Lee reported today it had picked up near Toledo four yachtsmen, a man and two young couples who had put out from North Shores, Mich. The Toledo men were returning from the Inter-Lake Yacht Regatta at Put-In-Bay. The Michigan party was in an outboard motor boat.

DEFENCE SYSTEM FOR THE DOMINION ON NEW BASIS

15 Eminent Canadians Co-operate in Advisory Capacity

CHANGE FUNDAMENTAL

Ottawa, Aug. 11—(CP)—The whole defence system of Canada will stand on a new basis today as a result of developments in connection with appointment of a civilian personnel which amount to fundamental changes in the structure of the nation's armed forces.

Normally directed by a civilian official, the Department of National Defence will henceforth have at its head an officer with the rank of Major General. Promotion to this rank came yesterday to Col. L. R. LaPierre, D.S.O., Deputy Minister who has supervised the Department's activities since 1932. General LaPierre will, in all probability, be succeeded by the present retired list but his rank and authority will stand and he will continue as Deputy Minister.

At the same time Defence Minister Mackenzie enlisted the co-operation of 15 eminent Canadians, all officers of the non-permanent active force, in the task of the creation of honorary advisory committees. There will have a committee of five for each of the services, naval, militia and air.

Commissions

From time to time, it was stated the Minister will consult with them on matters relating to the efficiency and development of the services.

Senior officers of the Royal Canadian Navy and Royal Canadian Air Force were advanced to ranks, one of which—Rear Admiral—first appeared from the active naval list shortly after the end of the war. The new rank—that of Air Vice Marshal—has been created as another rung of the promotion ladder for the two senior officers of the R.C.A.F.

Promotion of Rear Admiral Percy W. Nelles from the rank of Commodore and the subsequent step in advancement of two naval commanders, L. W. Murray and G. O. Jones, to the rank of captain.

Air Force Advances

The step up from Air Vice Marshal G. M. Choll and Air Vice Marshal Leonard Stevens next year to the way to five other R.C.A.F. officers. Two Group Captains, E. W. Stedman and L. S. Breadner, become Air Commodores; and three Wing Commanders, W. R. Kenney, N. R. Anderson and A. E. Godfrey became Group Captains.

GUARD POSTED ABOUT EX-OFFICIAL'S HOME

Detroit, Aug. 11 (AP)—A police guard was posted today at the home of Gichar Frankensteen, one of the deposed vice-presidents of the United Auto Workers of America, following the bombing last night of a garage at the rear of the home. The car was not hurt and the damage was slight.

Frankensteen said his only enemies were "persons on the outside in the U.A.W. factional dispute."

Police indicated they feared an outbreak of factional violence might develop, but a spokesman for President Homer Martin of the U.A.W. said the incident was "too unimportant" to warrant comment.

$48,400 Reynold's Painting And Valuables are Stolen

London, Aug. 11—(AP)—A paint-and quantity of jewelry also were taken.

Both Lord and Lady Winterton were away and only servants occupied the house.

Detectives said the full value of the stolen objects had not yet been estimated. The jewelry included a diamond snuff box, a gold ring, two gold cigarette cases and a number of medals and orders.

Berlin-to-New York Plane Passes Over Maritimes

RELIEF SOLUTION IS FEDERAL DUTY CLAIMS MANION

New Conservative Leader Puts Load on Federal Government

NATIONAL PLANNING

Manion Claims Time Demands Action Immediately

Barry's Bay, Ont., Aug. 11 (CP) —A solution to the problem of relief, which should be a Federal responsibility, must be found to obviate the danger of "wrecking" present-day civilization and returning to barbarism, according to Hon. R. J. Manion, National Leader of the Conservative party.

The "vicious circle" of increasing relief costs and municipal taxation "standing in the way of progress" following home building and home owning, he said in an address here yesterday, adding: "We must do away with these taxes municipality, by municipality, and by the whole nation on the Federal government."

National planning of Canada's economic life also is needed, the Conservative Leader said in his first address this eastern Ontario since the Ottawa convention July 7 when he was elected to succeed Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett. He spoke in his native Renfrew County at the annual picnic of St. Hedwig's Church in this lumbering town 25 miles south-east of Renfrew.

Poor Distribution

Past Federal governments, Liberal and Conservative, have done little in the way of National economic planning. It was time for action, he said. "Today in Canada the badly distributed," he said. "We have the rich on one side and the poor multitudes on the other. There is a fear psychology, there is a anger of revolution which we must realize."

Mr. Manion listed four things which he said were needed to unify the British democratic system today: Greater opportunities for youth; work and wages for all willing to work; security in the aged and a fair deal for all. He added: "The country owes a man a living but it owes to all the right to earn a living."

Believes in Two Party System

His belief was that the principles and practices of British democratic government could best be carried out in Canada by the two party system of government. The British way of doing things requires parliamentary institutions, freedom of press, speech and association and an economic system based on private enterprise. His hope as party leader was to unify this principle.

But the liberties that Canadians love demand and need protection, Dr. Manion, added: "Our way of life is well worth saving," he said. "I believe it is worth living it. But unless we correct the present system we may not be able to save it.

BRANDENBURG SKIRTS COAST IN FIRST FLIGHT

Flies High Over Saint John, N. B., at 12.30 P.M. E. D. T.

LEFT BERLIN 7.53 P.M.

Aim is to Show German Companies Ready to Compete in Trade

Saint John, N.B., Aug. 11—(CP)—Flying from Berlin to New York, the German plane Brandenburg passed over Saint John at 12.30 p.m., EDT; this was 45 minutes after she was seen over Moncton.

The big plane was flying high, about 8,000 feet, Visibility was good after a shower. The Brandenburg flew straight, following the coast.

Moncton, N. B., Aug. 11—(CP)—An airplane believed to be the German Atlantic-conquering plane Brandenburg was reported seen over Berlin, at 11.40 a.m. (EDT) today, flying in the general direction of Saint John, on the coast.

Berlin, Aug. 11—(AP)—German's huge Focke-Wulff land plane, "Brandenburg" took off for a non-stop flight to New York at 7.53 p.m. (Berlin time) (12.53 p.m., Moncton, EDT).

The flight is designed to demonstrate Germany is ready any day to start mail and passenger flights across the Atlantic.

Berlin, Aug. 11—(CP)—As the huge German land plane Brandenburg neared North American coast today on a non-stop flight from Berlin, officials of the German Air Ministry said the ship might land in Canada before proceeding to New York.

"All we have done is to state that the Brandenburg is going to North America," a spokesman said when asked to name the ship's specific destination.

May Make Preliminary Landing

"Whether the plans is over land again the pilots may decide for the sake of absolute security to make a preliminary landing in Canada or New England. We have left that open."

Nearly 16 hours after her sudden departure from Berlin at 7.53 p.m. EDT Wednesday). The airline distance between Berlin and New York is calculated at 3,941 miles.

Weather Fine

The 11.19 a.m. report said the plane was flying at an altitude of 2,000 metres (6,560 feet) and was experiencing fine weather.

The German Air Ministry said he expected the plane would land at Floyd Bennett Field, (about 1 p.m. EDT) If she reached New York non-stop.

The take-off occurred a day ahead of schedule and as late as today colleagues here apparently pondered knowledge of her departure. The German press was unaware of the flight until noon today.

It was explained officially later that receipt of unusually favorable weather reports over the North Atlantic was the reason for the sudden start of the flight.

Ontario Withdraws From Deliberations Over Income Tax Act

Toronto, Aug. 11.—Premier Mitchell Hepburn has notified Prime Minister Mackenzie King that Ontario will withdraw from all further deliberations in connection with the Rowell commission on Dominion-Provincial relations, the Toronto Daily Star said it was learned today. The Premier's decision is said to be taking similar action, the paper added.

Ontario's action is a direct result of amendment 22B of the Federal Income Tax Act, the paper was said to have advised Mr. King and Alex Skelton, Secretary to the Rowell Commission.

Hon. Paul Leduc, Ontario Minister of Mines, said the amendment effects a further tax on mining profits. When a syndicate sells any part of its mine holdings to a company, the money turned over is considered an income—rather than assets—and is taxed accordingly. The amount taxed is the difference between the syndicate's original investment and what it receives from the sale.

Porcupines Blamed for Damage, But No Bounty is in Sight

Toronto, Aug. 11—(CP)—Porcupines have been assailed by lumbermen for the damage caused to valuable timber but the Ontario government is not considering placing a bounty on the animals, D. J. Taylor, Deputy Minister of Game and Fisheries said today. At one time "porcies" were protected under game laws as a source of food supply to woodsmen, but the protection was rescinded.

"We know they destroy timber and are destructive to camps, but so far as the Department is concerned there is neither a bounty nor protection," Mr. Taylor said. "The animals are destructive to camps because they are so fond of salt. The dishwater attracts them to camps and they will chew up an axe handle because of the body salt on it.

"They destroy timber by gnawing a girdle around the trunk of the tree, but the damage is not so great we should consider placing a bounty on them," he said. Some municipalities place a small bounty on porcupines but there has been no formal request recently for a provincial bounty.

THREAT TO OPEN FRONTIER TO AID LOYALIST ARMS

Warning Interpreted in Message Sent by French Government

NEW ITALIAN TROOPS?

Paris, Aug. 11—(CP-Havas)—The French government has sent to London a warning interpreted by political circles here to mean that the Pyrenees frontier will be opened for the passage of supplies to government Spain unless the Insurgents reply quickly to the London proposals for withdrawing foreign troops, it was learned here today.

Since the plan was agreed upon by the London non-intervention committee a month ago and dispatched to the two Spanish governments, the extreme left of the government has been critical of the government majority here, led by Leon Blum, former premier, which has campaigned to have the frontier reopened.

No Reply From Italy Yet

London, Aug. 11—(AP)— Great Britain today formally and publicly called Italy's attention to "certain allegations" that she has sent new troops to help the Spanish insurgents despite her understanding with Great Britain and France in intervention commitments.

The matter was brought to the Italian government's attention both here and in Rome. Italy has not replied.

Great Britain said France was "placed in a very embarrassing position" by the allegations—made by opposition members of parliament before the adjournment.

Remote Prospect

France has closed her frontier to materials destined for government in Spain. French Leftists now are planning for reopening of the frontier, but the prospect of the Blum cabinet's policy to relieve the plight of the loyalist people of Spain is considered remote.

Great Britain said France was "placed in a very embarrassing position" by the allegations—made by opposition members of parliament before the adjournment.

Insurgents Use 2-Pronged Attack

Hendaye, France, Aug. 11—(AP) —A two-pronged insurgent offensive bit today at the Almaden mining country in southwestern Spain, one of the Spanish government's richest areas and the world's richest mercury-producing region.

A column driving northwest reported by captured Almodovan, giving insurgents control of a railroad from Almaden 42 miles west of Castuera and a highway from Almodovan south toward Belmez in Cordoba.

Another column operating farther north along the Guadiana river valley said it had made 7 advances to come in 12 hours and captured six small towns.

German Plane Flies Over Czech Border, Report

Praha Reports Investigation to Decide if Plane Civil or Military

30 MINUTE FLIGHT

Praha, Aug. 11.—(CP-Havas)—Czech sources today claimed a German airplane flew over Czechoslovakian territory for 30 minutes today near Cheznov. They said an investigation was being made to determine whether the plane was civil or military.

At the same time funeral services were held in Cheznov for Karl Frank, Sudeten German killed by Czechs in a frontier brawl. Karl Frank, one of the leaders of the Sudeten Germanic, made a speech, declaring "the aldreyany should know we do not fear death and are determined to fight until victory."

Viscount Runciman, unofficial British mediator in the minorities trouble continued conference with Sudeten leaders.

POLICE ENQUERY RESUMES TODAY

Inspector Says He is Unable to Find Who Rent Long House For Ball

Peterborough, Ont., Aug. 11 (CP) —The police enquiry into charges made by former Constable Joseph Wheeler against Chief Constable Samuel Newhall and other members of the police force was resumed here today before C. G. Deroche of Belleville with Cecil G. Scott as Counsel for the Crown.

Inspector James Reid reported to the Judge that since the adjournment in July he had not been able to find out who rented the Long House on the night of the ball or the police force to entertain their friends and in which bootleggers were alleged to have supplied beer.

Reid said that a search warrant was issued when he was found guilty on the previous enquiry and who later was arrested in Guelph, was released from jail by Judge Deroche, but was called upon to give evidence later. Constable Wheeler swore that after seeing Constable Joseph Wheeler and two other men placing beer in the Long home on the night of the dance and when Wheeler was called he absolutely denied it. He claimed Chief Newhall ordered the beer and this was denied by the Chief Constable.

"DOUBLE, DOUBLE TOIL AND TROUBLE'

Timmins, Ont., Aug. 11 (CP)— Timmins is to have a touch of drama in Shakespeare's Macbeth of "Double, double, toil and trouble," and multiply it a good many times.

A 200-page complaint book started 1934 and to be filled by 1942 is complete. The Department uses an average of 10 books a year.

Truck Figures in Two Accidents In 5 Minutes, No One is Hurt

Brantford, Ont., Aug. 11—(CP)— A truck driven by Harry W. Paterson of Brantford figured in two accidents last night in less than five minutes. No one was injured seriously in either accident. Miss Ethel Sinclair of Paris, Ont., suffered a head laceration.

Police said the first accident occurred when Paterson, having trouble with his head lights, stopped his truck by the side of the road. Cars driven by Ross Kelly of Paris and Stanley Brownley of Brantford, collided. Miss Sinclair was a passenger in Brownley's car.

Paterson drove his automobile into the rear of the truck.
